One of the remarkable advances in connection with education since the County Council assumed control has been in the school attendance, and it is not unusual now for rural schools to register percentages of from 90 to 100. This is evidence that teachers and officials are keener and that parents are more and more realizing their obligations, because every attendance a child fails to make represents a loss to the ratepayers. Garforth division distinguished itself for the month of December, and it is some satisfaction to know that it secured first place in the West Riding.

Greater interest is apparently being shown in horticulture in the district, and I understand lectures are to be given at Aberford, whilst it is suggested that an educational garden should be established at Halton. Our gardening article should be of the greatest assistance to horticulturists, and when they desire any information they should not hesitate to write to Mr Clarke, who is a practical man, and who will give them the guidance they desire. In order to strengthen the movement shows, restricted to residents, might be held in the various parishes, and in this way keener interest might be aroused in gardening.

A somewhat unusual scene was witnessed at a Stourton school the other day, and one of the sexes was the outstanding figure in it. It is stated that a young woman invaded the school premises and demanded that her sister should be allowed to go with her. Her ladyship declined to leave the school, and, despite the display of a revolver showing her the consequences of her action, she remained defiant. Of course, such conduct is subversive of all discipline, and the Education Committee are to ask her to apologise to the head teacher. If she fails to do so she will have to take the consequences. People must understand that they have no business to remain on school premises when they are ordered to leave.

To meet the needs of absolutely necessitous cases, a sum of between £2 and £3 will be set aside by the County Council for Garforth, Kippax, Wetherby, Sherburn, Oulton, and Rothwell school districts in connection with medical inspection. It occasionally happens that when the doctor reports that a child has defective vision the parent pleads poverty as an excuse for not providing it with spectacles, or for not taking it to Leeds Infirmary, and if it is a genuine case of poverty the Care of Children Committee will meet its necessities. People have not yet realized the enormous work that is being done among the children, and I believe that if they really knew its value they would be all very anxious to co-operate.

For another year, at anyrate, the District Councils will have the duty of maintaining and repairing the main roads of the county, but they may not be asked to do it again. It is significant that the county surveyor is gathering information relative to the highway machinery and equipment possessed by Tadcaster, Wetherby, Garforth, Rothwell, and other District Councils, and this may simply be a preliminary step towards the County Council themselves trying to take over the duty of maintaining the roads. At the present time the District Councils do the work, and the County Council pay the cost. It has been suggested that changes in the distribution of grants for road maintenance from the Exchequer may have far-reaching effects, and the Road Board are credited with giving support to the County Council in their desire to take over the roads. Of course, if this were proposed the District Councils would fight, and, unless there was a great change of opinion on the County Council, their opposition would succeed.

Farmers, in view of the experience of persons residing at Whinmoor and Robin Hood, should be very careful in regard to the removal of pigs, anew, otherwise they may discover the value of the animals flittered away in fines and costs. These men, ignorant that Templenewsam was an infected area—the restrictions have now been removed—took pigs to Whitkirk without licences, and for not knowing that they were committing an offence they were fined. In order to safeguard themselves it is advisable for farmers, before removing pigs, either to an auction mart or another parish, to inquire closely as to their responsibilities, otherwise they may land themselves in trouble. In this matter the local police-man, learned in the law, will prove their friend and guide if inquiries are made of him.

Pertinent remarks anent the length of opening ceremonies at bazaars were made at Rothwell the other day, and I'm inclined to agree with the enunciation of the lady who lamented the infliction long-suffering people had to put up with. Of course, there must be a reservation. Occasionally a person has something to say really worth listening to, and it gives "tone" to the proceedings, but where talking is indulged in for talking's sake it is simply a waste of time. It is pitiful to hear a man, with absolutely no message, repeating himself again and again, or turning out piffle in a vain attempt to be humorous. Bazaar-promoters, too, are frequently bad time-keepers. They announce the opening ceremony for a certain hour, but it usually begins thirty to forty minutes after time. They have their difficulties, however, and are perhaps more to be sympathised with than condemned.

Why should not the Garforth Working-Men's Ratepayers' Association take up the question? Mr Maitland, the Coroner, expressed surprise the other day that a nice, important place like Garforth had not a district nurse, and a local medical man stated that it ought to have one. Garforth is what one might describe as a discouraging place, because not only will the residents not help themselves, but they will not accept assistance when it is offered to them. A few years ago an effort was made to form a nursing association in the village, but the working-classes declined to support it; in fact, hostility was shown to the proposal, on the ground that a nurse would interfere with the domestic arrangements of households.

Garforth, with its 4,000 inhabitants, is hopelessly behind the times without a nursing association, and the silly idea anent interference with household arrangements, probably invented by some mischievously-inclined individual, or by some one with a tight pocket, should not be allowed to prevent such a scheme from being carried out. Rothwell has a health visitor, whom every member in the place is delighted to see, and Halton, Monk Fryston, Bramham, Swillington, Clifford, and Tadcaster—to mention only a few places in the district—have district nurses, who are doing grand work for the community. This shows the hollowness of the statement that a nurse would be a mere busybody, interfering with what she had no business. My suggestion is that the Ratepayers' Association should formulate a scheme and present it to the villagers for their support.

The district has produced one working-man Member of Parliament—the late Mr Ben Pickard, who was a native of Kippax—but there are probably a few workers to whom a seat at Westminster would satisfy a great ambition. Mr William Lunn, of Rothwell, who is the ablest of the Labour men in the district, contested the Holmfirth Division at by-election, and he has been honoured with an invitation to become the Labour candidate for Wakefield, but he may prefer Holmfirth, where he made a really good show. The "merrie city" does not seem to present a passage to Parliament for a Labourist.

The perils which men employed in mines have to face every day were again in evidence at an inquest at Garforth. Two bye-workmen at Micklefield were working together in the pit, and down came some wood and "roof." One of the men escaped scathless, and the other was injured in such a way that the accident brought forth his death. Apparently every precaution was taken, and the roof was regarded as safe, yet one poor fellow has gone to his long account owing to the mishap. This shows that no matter how careful the management of a colliery may be, the miner never knows when he is to come out of the mine alive.

Will Tadcaster, Wetherby, and Hunslet Guardians try to brighten the existence of workhouse inmates by allowing them to play at "nap" or whist? Newcastle Guardians have, I notice, instructed the workhouse master to buy a number of packs of cards for the poor who are their guests, for whom great times are in store. Instead of the Hunslet Guardians having a monthly concert at the workhouse, they might substitute a whist drive, and at Christmas, at any rate, they might, as an inducement to the inmates to patronize the tables, offer cash prizes to the winners. Tadcaster and Wetherby Guardians have not expressed any views on the card question yet, but some one might mention Newcastle's innovation to them.

A sum of £12 4s. 4d. was collected at Harewood Church for Leeds medical charities as against £8 16s. 3d. last year.

AMUSEMENTS.

LEEDS EMPIRE.

At the Empire this week the great attraction is the Sheffield Choir, and their singing is delightful. Dr. Coward has a genius for training choirs, and this one, composed as it is of specially selected voices, he seems to have trained to a pitch that must be approaching perfection. Attention has been paid to every possible detail, and as none of 50 odd singers apparently ever misses a single point the effect is indeed wonderful. Altogether the choir sang nine or ten items at each performance on Monday night. Those which required delicate treatment, such as "Sweet and Low" or "The Soldier's Farewell," were sung with rare refinement, the varying degrees of light and shade being observed with telling effect. Just as finely rendered were the numbers which called for more vigorous handling. "Hail, Smiling Morn," "The Dance" from Elgar's charming suite, "Bavarian Highlands," and Mackenzie's "A Frankjumer's Dog," the last-named given by the men, were all sung in an exhilarating way which captivated the audience. Perhaps one of the most effective items was a glee which has come to be regarded as the Sheffield Choir's showpiece, namely, "The Bells of St. Michael's Tower." One of the best of the other turns is provided by Jack Thomas, who gives the audience few dull moments whilst on the stage. "Bellefellows" is a sketch which is very funny in parts; but other parts are not in very good taste. Others who appear are Frivo Marris, Rosie Reys, Toch and Tard, Harry Herbert, Russell, and Held, and Jack McKay. "Full Inside," the latest London revue, will be the principal attraction at the Leeds Empire next week. This is being presented by Ernest C. Rolls, whose successful production "Step This Way" has been the sensation of London and every town visited. We hear that Mr Rolls has even gone one better with "Full Inside," and the brilliant triumph that it achieved at the Oxford music-hall (London) will without doubt be repeated in Leeds. The whole has been invented and produced by Ernest C. Rolls, and the seatin music by Max Darewski—the same collaboration as "Step This Way." The production in its entirety will be transferred from London. We are promised some magnificent scenery and lighting effects, and it is said that the chorus are the best ever gathered girls from London. The principals include Miss Renee Gratz, an artiste of rare charm and magnetic personality; Mr Alfred Da Costa, a revue-of-screed tenor with a phenomenal top voice; Mr Harry Brown, the well-known coloured comedian, needs no introduction to the Empire patrons, although he will be seen in a new role; Mr Sims Woodley, a comedian with a fund of spontaneous humour; Mr Bardie Russell, a dude full of eccentricities; and Mr Arthur Leslie, a character actor with a marvellous power of mimicry. The whole company comprises 65 people. Max Darewski, the celebrated young composer, has written some very tuneful and catchy numbers. Other excellent additions to the programme include the Musical Johnstons, xylophone experts; Ray Wallace, the clever mimic at the piano; Isa Wise, a charming comedienne; and the Naples, a smart comedy duo.

LEEDS HIPPODROME.

At the Hippodrome revue succeeds revue, and there are still no indications that the public taste has become satiated by this latest form of music hall entertainment. "Come Inside," which is this week's attraction, occupies the greater part of the programme. It is a brightly presented effusion of musical comedy and pantomime in which mirth and gaiety abound. There is the extended stage which now-a-days seems inseparable from pantomime and revue alike, and on which members of the company gaily dance in close proximity to the occupants of the stalls, and for close upon an hour songs and dances follow one another at breakneck speed. Much of the success of the production is due to Miss Bessie Clifford, who has a clever partner in Mr Horace Joees, whilst Miss Minnie Leslie makes a dainty Vera Fly. Others items in the programme are the Flying Fishers, who display their daring on flying trapeze; Walter Lawley and Sadie East in musical comedietta; Jack Edge, comedian; the Snellos, and Teddy Elben.

At the Hippodrome next week Arthur Prince and Jim will on the first three days of the week present "The Jockey's Dream" and on the last three days "The Sailor Boy," while Scott and Whalley, America's premier eccentric coloured comedians, will appear in "Don't you push me no more." Others who will contribute to the programme are Lamberti, the famous musical impersonator; Alice Wyatt, the popular principal boy of the Bradford Princess Theatre pantomime; Bros. Horne, in their original comedy boxing sketch; Takese, the Japanese magician; and Coquelli, entertainer. Pictures will be shown on the bioscope.

LEEDS QUEEN'S THEATRE.

At the Queen's Theatre this week "Why He Divorced Her," an adaptation of Adolph D'Ennery's novel "Martyre," is being presented by Charles Harrington. It is a highly-coloured drama illustrating Parisian life, and there are some passionate scenes and sensational episodes alternating with others that are purely humorous. The Chateau de Moray forms a suitable background for the story, and the staging is a feature of the production. Mr Ernest H. Clarke portrays the devoted husband in life-like fashion, while his misjudged wife, Gabriel, is a part well played by Miss Sidney Crowe, who has a clear and well-defined enunciation. Mr Ernest Lodge represents a dashing Admiral of the French Navy, Mr J. H. Harrison appears in the interesting character of Sir Gilbert Goore, Miss Phyllis Elton infuses plenty of realism into her conception of Claudia, a typical woman of the world, sentiment is introduced by Miss Holly Haslewood as Paulette, Gabriel's child, and a good study of Madame de la March is given by Miss Florence Lovell.

Mr Charles Lockie will present a new musical play, entitled "A Blind Girl's Love," a tale of the Alps. It is described as a decidedly novelty and should be a great attraction next week.

LEEDS CITY VARIETIES.

At the Varieties Messrs Lowenwirth and Cohen, the well-known Jewish comedians, have had a fine reception. They are better than they ever were before, and the new partner, Mr Joe Cohen, makes an admirable foil to Mr Lowenwirth. They are a capable couple, and with their new aeroplane act they give a much improved entertainment. The Edwords, vocalists, give a fine show, and Lestree and a "lady" give a smart juggling act. Nellie Nera, in a dainty instrumental act, is excellent, and Bert Coates, the ploughboy baritone, is much appreciated. Mina Bax, the artistic dancing girl, is also appearing.

Next week at the varieties a capital programme will be submitted, and the artistes billed to appear are Bernart Bros., in a comedy act; Sam Ives Trio, in an athletic singing and dancing speciality; Ninette, the Parisian novelty; Jack Clarke, Lancashire's lazy lad; Susie Marney, chorus and descriptive vocalist; and Four Garrick Clares, dancing experts, with a piano. Excellent pictures will also be shown.

LEEDS THEATRE DE LUXE.

At the Theatre de Luxe drama took a prominent position in the programme for the first half of the week. "A Queen's Love" and "The Anarchist" being two really fine productions. Another capital drama was entitled "A Royal Romance," whilst by way of a change "Peggy's Burglar" was a new comedy with an amusing plot. Some beautiful photos of the Trollhatton Falls, Sweden, and a fine collection of views of the Royal Palace, Venice, were valuable additions to the programme. "Pathe's Gazette" was also shown.

ROTHWELL EMPIRE.

The Empire, Rothwell, continues to enjoy the premier place among the local picture houses, the management sparing no pains in order to provide the latest and best of pictures. During the first three days of the present week a special feature was a gripping detective story "A fight for a fortune," featuring Detective Hayes, a popular figure to picture-house habitues. Other films included "The riddle of the tin soldier," a fascinating story, told in two reels, and a host of good comics. On Friday and Saturday the principal items in an interesting programme will be "The Sheriff and the Rustler," a stirring Western drama, and "Master Bob," a drama of the race-course. Other interesting subjects will be shown. Humour is also supplied by Fields and Lewis, comedy duo.

For the first three days of next week the chief attractions will be "Satan's Castle," an extraordinary drama in two reels, and "A leader of men," showing a phase in the struggle between capital and labour. Among other pictures will be an interesting travel scene entitled "Beautiful Brittany." On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday the programme will include another of Selig's wonderful animal pictures under the name of "In the midst of the Jungle." A good comedy is promised in "The fascination of Maud," while several other good pictures will follow. The turn will be provided by E. C. O'Brien, the Yorkshire humorist.

At Collingham Church a sum of £9 9s. 4d. was collected for Leeds medical charities as against £6 19s. 11d. last year.

The Leeds Corporation, who own the living of Gateforth, have offered the vacant incumbency to the Rev. F. A. Gumby, of Middlebrough, formerly curate of Baton Spa, and he has accepted.

CURATE LEAVING.—The Rev. G. O. C. Ramsey, who has been curate at Collingham for some time, has accepted a curacy at Beamley Parish Church, and will have charge of the Mission Church at Hough End in that parish. He will be succeeded at Collingham by the Rev. G. H. Fewster, who is leaving the vicarage of Fountaine, Huntingdonshire.

WHIST DRIVE.—The Collingham and Linton Primrose Leaguers had a whist drive and dance on Tuesday evening. The prizes were as follow: Ladies'—1, Mrs Whitelock; 2, Miss Merry; booby, Miss Bean. Gents.—1, Mr W. Christie, Linton; 2, Mr Allaun, Linton. The M.C.'s were Mr Stoker, Dr. Waddington, and Mr P. Christie. Mrs Twidale played for dancing, and a very enjoyable time was spent.

CONSERVATISM.—The following have been elected officials of the Collingham and Linton Conservative Association:—President, Sir Nevill Gunter, Bart.; Chairman, Mr J. C. Cornock; vice-chairman, Mr T. M. Twidale; vice-presidents—Messrs J. Beaumont, F. W. Dalby, J. Dennison, G. E. H. Muggs, and John Thompson; treasurer and secretary, Mr P. Christie; auditor, Mr Young; committee—Messrs Beeforth, Booker, Clark, Danby, Dawson, Goodson, Groves, Hepworth, Herridge, Kinghorn, Scheerer, Smallwood, Twidale, Waddington, Walton, and Young. A smoking concert was held on Saturday, and Mr Cornock gave an address.

MORRIS DANCING.—A display of "old folk" and Morris dances was given in the Church Fenton Schoolroom on Monday evening, the result of a series of classes, in aid of the Leeds Infirmary. The "Old Folk" dances were very prettily, jolly and entertaining, and, along with the Morris dances, which were rendered splendidly by a number of young ladies, received the applause and appreciation which they so well merited. The music was provided by Mrs Spark (Church Fenton) and Mr J. L. Lacy (Tadcaster). The display was followed by a dance, which was kept up merrily until 2.30 a.m. A silver collection was taken at the display, and with the profits derived from the classes and dance, amounted to £6, which was sent to the Infirmary. Miss Sparks and Messrs J. W. Ambler, J. Harrison, and H. Clements fulfilled the duties of M.C.'s very efficiently.

THE GOLDEN HOPE.

By J. FLETCHER

Author of "The Threshing Floor," "Denial Charge," "The Harvest Moon," "When Charles the First was King," &c.

PRINCIPAL CHARACTERS:

LAURENCE STORKMAN, the inventor of a new motor for aeroplanes.

SIR JOHN BEDFORD, a partner in the Armadale engineering firm.

L'ABBE BREMOND, a close friend of Sir John's.

LILIAN DELOMOSNE, ward of Sir Herbert Armadale.

CHARITY WRAYE, a typist in Sir John Bedford's office.

CHAPTER XXVII.

People who have spent much time in rural districts are very well aware that just as there are persons in London who could not give a name to St. Paul's or to the Bank of England if they were asked, so there are folk in Arcadia who cannot tell an inquirer the way to places with which they are familiar, or particular ... with which they have been well ... since childhood. In both these ... more must be put down to lack of curiosity. If one could but get at the state of mind of the persons concerned one would find that they neither desired nor cared to know anything or to be told anything; that, in short, the sense of curiosity was entirely lacking in their mental equipment.

There are, however, certain persons in the world in whom, if that same spirit of curiosity is roused, there immediately springs into active existence such an active desire to satisfy it that nothing but instant gratification will avail. Such a person was the little man who had acted as driver of the waggonette in which Laurence, Dickie Wraye and the skeleton airship were conveyed to the haven of refuge at the Three Travellers. It was not their journey, however, which aroused inquisitiveness in him. A few years since and he would have thrilled with excited delight at the notion of having biplane or monoplane behind him and his horse—now that these marvellous affairs had begun to fly about—the only thing approaching commonness they did not appeal to him so much. Neither was there anything very appealing in a journey by night. What did appeal to his curiosity was the fact that a man had actually paid him two golden sovereigns to hear where he had driven the waggonette and its occupants to.

It was not, however, until some hours after Penrose had left him that this feeling of inquisitiveness flowered to fulness in his mind. In consideration of the fact that he had been out all night he was awarded a holiday for the rest of that afternoon and evening, and he immediately went home and retired to bed. Rising refreshed about six o'clock, and further refreshing himself by a meal tea, he began to think over recent events, and to discuss them with his wife, to whom he had magnanimously presented one of the sovereigns.

"And, of course, I knows who the little cripplied chap what rode between me and the gentleman is," he said. "I see him many times as I been a-comin' and a-goin' out o' our yard below. Lives with his sister up staircase B, they do. I seen her too; looks like a schoolmistress or somethink o' that sort. Now, I wonder, Mria, what that there chap was so keen as to want to know where I drove 'em to that he'd spring two quid for the information? 'Cause you said it was two quid!"

"I dunno," said his wife. "The money's good, any way."

"I see to that, you bet," said the driver. "But what's he want to know for—what business was it of his?"

Then, thinking that it would be very much his own business if he went out and had an hour or so at the Jacob and Donkey, and afterwards bought something tasty for supper, he left his rooms—which were in the same dwelling where Charity and her brother lived—and set out. But he was not destined to reach his favourite house of call just then. At the corner of the street was the police-station of the district, and in accordance with custom he paused in passing to look at the board on which were exhibited the various notices, grim and gruesome, about people who were missing, or had been found, or had run away from wives and children, or were wanted. And he had scarcely looked at it when he gave a sharp whistle and elbowed his way through some small boys and girls until he was nearer—near enough to read the smaller type which lay beneath two heavy black lines in great capitals, "Wanted: Edward Penrose."

But it was not the reading—other than the amount of the reward—which interested him so much as a portrait beneath the big capitals. He gazed at this as if fascinated. Then, pushing his way to the door of the police-station, he entered and asked for an inspector.

Five minutes later the driver came out again, a man who was obviously a policeman, but in plain clothes, with him. They were in earnest conversation, and they turned in the direction of the dwellings which the driver had just left. There they entered the staircase which led to Charity's flat, and in due course knocked at her door.

Charity had only just come in from the office, and was getting her evening meal ready. The little flat felt strangely lonely without Dickie, and the sharp tap at her outer door made her start. She was more startled when she opened it and saw two men standing there.

"Beg pardon, miss—it's all right, miss," said the driver, who noticed her perturbation. "You'll remember me, miss, as how as drove your poor brother and the tall gentleman in the waggonette last night."

"Oh, yes, I remember you," replied Charity. "There's nothing wrong, is there?"

"Not as I knows of, miss; I hope not, I'm sure enough. But, you see, miss, when I got back to-day this here happened," and he went on to tell her of the paragraph on the police-station yard. "You don't happen to know why that there gent should be so very partikler about findin' out where the waggonette had gone as to give me two sov'rins for tellin' him, miss?"

"If No—oh, no!" replied Charity.

"And you don't know what this man as he has described to you?" said the detective.

"No, certainly not," she answered.

The detective drew out a copy of the bill which had attracted the driver's attention. "You don't know this man?" he asked, pointing to the portrait.

Charity looked, wondered, and shook her head.

"Well, miss," said the driver, "I'll take my solemn oath an' 'davy that's the bloke what came to me in the stable yard at one o'clock this afternoon, and give me two quid for tellin' him where I drove your poor brother and the other gent; and I'm glad I seen' as he's wanted, and there's a reward out for him, I hope, mister, as you'll see as how it gets it."

Charity was reading the bill with wondering eyes. The information which it contained—her thoughts immediately turned to Dickie. "Why should this man want to know where they had gone?" she exclaimed. "Do you think my brother will be in danger?"

"I wouldn't be frightened yet," said the detective. "It may have been a case of extraordinary resemblance—or you may have made a mistake," he added, turning to the driver, who immediately protested vehemently and made another reference to the reward.

"Well, never mind," he went on. "If you use bothering this young lady further. You come back with me, and see if you can tell us more."

"May I keep this bill?" asked Charity.

"Why, certainly, if you like," answered the detective, regarding her curiously.

"I see that this man was employed at Armadale's," she said. "I'm employed there too. This must have happened just before I went there."

"Well, if you should ever hear anything, let us know," said the detective, and went off with the driver, who seemed to be labouring under a delusion that he ought to lay hands on the reward there and then.

Charity had small appetite for her supper. What could this man—any man—mean by paying two pounds to be informed of the precise destination of the waggonette? Of course, it was part of the conspiracy against Mr. Workman; that it would involve Dickie, had been seen there of Penrose, but without arousing suspicion, and then to come to her at her leisure to question her. Charity hurried away to the Star with news. Charity hurried away on her mission, and within an hour was with Miss Delomosne at the appointed place.

"He's been there!" she said. "He was there for lunch—had lunch in the coffee-room with Mr. Workman and Dickie. And Dickie knew him! But he's gone again."

Miss Delomosne, who had engaged a private room, signalled Charity to speak in a low voice. She went near to her.

"Listen!" she said. "He's here—and so is Sir John Bedford! But they don't know I'm here, and they mustn't. Go back—and stay there until you hear from me or see me. And if you see Mr. Workman or your brother, bid them look out to-night."

HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES.

To mend broken glass and china, melt some resin in an old iron spoon over the fire, then apply to the pieces of china or glass. When dry, the article can be washed in hot water and the cement will not melt.

Venetian blinds which require varnishing can be made to look quite fresh if sponged over with a solution of glue size. The size should be allowed to dry on, and the blinds washed and dried before it is applied.

To remove grease spots from a carpet place a tablespoonful of ammonia in a pint of hot water; scrub the spots with this, using a hard brush. Then cover with a paste made of fuller's earth and cold water. Leave till dry, then brush off, and the spots will disappear.

Directly a chilblain appears apply the following ointment: Take a piece of camphor and a piece of lard about the same size, scrape the camphor, and put it in a pot with the lard. Melt the two ingredients together, and apply cold. This treatment would not suit broken chilblains.

To clean coffee-stained linen soak in cold water to which has been added a little borax.

But the found Miss Delomosne at home, and in a few minutes was in her room.

Miss Delomosne heard Charity's story in silence—looking hard all the while at the bill which the girl put into her hand. She did not speak for some time after Charity had told her everything.

"Did you think the driver of the waggonette really thought that the man who bribed him was identical with—this man?" she asked, pointing to the portrait.

"He declared himself positive," replied Charity. "He said there was not a doubt of it. Why should this man, this escaped convict, want to know where they had gone to be right before last? He must have meant harm."

Miss Delomosne nodded her head. "It is some new departure on Sir John Bedford's part," she said. "I can't guess what, nor think what. Has your uncle a telephone?"

"No—he hates anything like that," answered Charity. "He dislikes anyone to send him a telegram."

Miss Delomosne glanced at the clock. "Sir Herbert has gone to Maidstone for the afternoon," she said. "Come and have some lunch, and then we will go into Canterbury—I will order a motor to be ready. That will set your mind at rest, and I think—I hope we shall be able to do some good."

Two hours later they drove into Canterbury. At the outskirts of the city Miss Delomosne set Charity down. She had already given her instructions to go straight to the Three Travellers, to find out if anything had been seen there of Penrose, but without arousing suspicion, and then to come to her at her leisure in the quiet old cathedral place.

Charity hurried away on her errand, and within an hour was with Miss Delomosne and Dickie. And Dickie knew him! But he's gone again."

"Here—and so ... But they don't know I'm here, and they mustn't. Go back—and stay there until you hear from me or see me. And if you see Mr. Workman or your brother, bid them look out to-night."

THE LADIES' COLUMN.

HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES.

To mend broken glass and china, melt some resin in an old iron spoon over the fire, then apply to the pieces of china or glass. When dry, the article can be washed in hot water and the cement will not melt.

Venetian blinds which require varnishing can be made to look quite fresh if sponged over with a solution of glue size. The size should be allowed to dry on, and the blinds washed and dried before it is applied.

To remove grease spots from a carpet place a tablespoonful of ammonia in a pint of hot water; scrub the spots with this, using a hard brush. Then cover with a paste made of fuller's earth and cold water. Leave till dry, then brush off, and the spots will disappear.

Directly a chilblain appears apply the following ointment: Take a piece of camphor and a piece of lard about the same size, scrape the camphor, and put it in a pot with the lard. Melt the two ingredients together, and apply cold. This treatment would not suit broken chilblains.

To clean coffee-stained linen soak in cold water to which has been added a little borax.

Written manuscripts and letters which are undecipherable, or part so, owing to the fading ... of the ink, may be made readable if the characters are brushed over with a feather or a camel's hair brush, dipped in tincture of nutgalls. This easy process will bring out the writing as clear as if newly penned.

LIBERALISM AT CROSSGATES.

MR E. H. FOSTER AND BYE-ELECTIONS.

The Liberals of Crossgates had a very enjoyable social gathering in the Wesleyan School-room, Crossgates, on Friday evening, and there was a large attendance. Mr W. G. Smithson (President of the Men's Association) was chairman during the first part of the proceedings, and Mrs L. Dewhirst (President of the Women's Association) presided during the second part. Among those present were Mr E. H. Foster (prospective Liberal candidate for the Division), and Mrs Foster, Mr Martin Harvey (President of the Barkston Ash Liberal Unionist Association) and Mrs Harvey, Mr F. W. Sutcliffe (Chairman of the Association), Captain Glover (vice-chairman of the Association), Mrs and Miss Glover, Miss Billson (London), etc.

Mr Smithson, in the course of a short address, dealt with what he described as the injustice of plural voting. Men of means bought cottages or land in different constituencies, and in this way secured votes, so that they could canvass the resid ents. Plural voting ... have now coming to an end, but he did not see why the Plural Voting Bill should not apply to bye-elections as well as to General Elections. The great and burning question had been successfully launched, and he believed that it would have great results in the interests of those whom it was intended to benefit. (Applause.)

Miss Billson gave an address on Home Rule and Welsh disestablishment. Speaking of education, she said that everyone felt that the nation would have to be better educated, because of the ... in recognising the great value of education in all departments of life, and if Britain did not make steady progress in this direction she would be out-stripped by competing nations. To attain this desired end more money would have to be spent on education, but, as the local burdens were heavy enough already, the State would have to find the funds. There was a dearth of teachers, and they must do something to induce young people to enter the profession. Considering the great work the teachers had to do in training the young, good salaries should be ...paid them; in fact, if they were to get good men and women to undertake the work more money would have to be paid. She also dealt with the land question and women's suffrage.

Mrs Dewhirst, referring to the defeat of Mr Masterman at Bethnal Green, said that it showed the need for a second ballot, so that the first two candidates could go to the poll again. (Applause).

Mr Foster, who had rousing reception, said he noticed the Tory friends were rather plumming themselves on the results of the elections in South Bucks and Bethnal Green, but they must be very thankful for small mercies if they could get any comfort from them. (Laughter). The only significance the elections had was as a fair reflection of the opinion of the country on Home Rule. The Opposition in Parliament was demanding an election on the ground that the country was opposed to Home Rule, and that if an election were held they would throw out the Government and frustrate any attempt to pass Home Rule. They should be able to show that in the by-elections there was a great revulsion of feeling on the part of the electorate, but in Southts Bucks, as essentially Conservative as any constituency, several interests were enormously strong—stronger even than they were in Barkston Ash, and they were strong enough here—and where there was a large agricultural population, and London, the Liberals increased their vote and the majority was reduced. (Applause). The Tories could not possibly get any consolation out of that. In regard to the Bethnal Green election, the inconvenience that would be caused to Mr Masterman, who had rendered great service in connection with the Insurance Act, and who was the most brilliant of all the younger men in the House of Commons, but let them consider the result in relation to Home Rule. The Liberal and Socialist vote—both candidates were in favour of Home Rule and Welsh disestablishment—must be added, and there was a substantial majority for both these Bills. (Applause). The more valuable of the by-elections were those ... regaining that position. Tories were asking for a referendum, and under it there would be no plural vote. Subject to placing their Bills on the Statute Book and the abolition of plural voting, the sooner the Government gave them an election the better. He wanted to say that they should be prepared for an election. They were hoping in the ordinary course of things that the Government would stay in power until a year next June, and carry through the Plural Voting Bill, but events might so shape themselves that they might have to ... election as an earlier date. They must, therefore, be prepared for it when it came, and secure a victory in the Barkston Ash Division. (Applause).

During the evening the following musical programme was gone through. Songs were given by Miss Glover (Collingham), Mrs J. Tattersall (Crossgates), and Mr John Atkin (Crossgates), and they were received with thorough appreciation. Mr V. Harvey, of Peckfield Lodge, caused great amusement with a clever ventriloquial sketch, and he was no less successful in a humorous recitation. Mr John Bennett sang in character. Mr J. H. Walker, A.R.C.O., was an efficient accompanist.

In the course of the evening tea and coffee were served by the ladies.

Mr Batty (President of the Crossgates League of Young Liberals) proposed a vote of thanks to Miss Billson, the artistes, and the ladies who had charge of the refreshment department.

Mr F. W. Sutcliffe seconded, and it was cordially passed.

A similar compliment was paid to Mrs Dewhirst and Mr Smithson, on the call of Mr Martin Harvey.

The proceedings terminated with the singing of the National Anthem and cheers for Mr and Mrs Foster.

DON'T SEW AT NIGHT.

Except for the business girl who will not recognise them, or who has plenty of dress money, there are always some little pieces of needlework that she thinks must be done during the leisure hours of the week. But for the sake of wearing something special or having more clothes than are absolutely necessary for her, business girls should always be urged against sitting up late at night after a hard day's work to make, alter, or finish some dress or hat. Though the worker may think so, this is not a saving, since it reduces her health and strength, and lowering her ability to do her work well during the day which is her ability to earn. No one should burn the candle at both ends.

TO MAKE STOCKINGS WEAR LONGER.

Before new stockings or socks are worn darn heels and toes one way with soft, yarn or silk to match. This will prevent them from wearing out too quickly and save a good deal of trouble. The knees of children's stockings should always be treated in this way.

WHEN WORKING ON HEAVY CLOTH.

Before working on heavy serge or cloth run the thread once through a cake of soap, unless a piece of the entire piece is near. This will enable you to work buttonholes much more easily, and the thread will not ruck up and tangle. Remember to thread the needle with the end that has been nearest to you, not the end that is broken off from the reel. This makes a good deal of difference, as thread will often knot when this precaution is not taken.

THE CLEVER HOSTESS.

When the hostess has a supervision over the entire affair without showing that she is doing so, is generally means that harmony permeates every phase of the entire proceedings, and the guests are assured of a most delightful time. At a dinner party a garrulous man will be put beside a quiet little woman who is content to listen quietly nor talk in a dreamy way and without interest on the subject, and to keep up with the current events of the times, so as to be able to discuss them intelligently. With this there must be a flow of good spirits and the feeling of ease which comes from a knowledge of society. The best way to learn how to talk is to learn how to think. Even small talk cannot be a success without much thought.

BOOTS AND SHOES

which will not polish easily should be rubbed with raw potato before applying the polish. They will then shine beautifully.

A room that is warm, with a fire at one end and a blocked chimney at the other end, will become cold and draughty as soon as you light a fire at the other end, and most probably one chimney will smoke when both fires are lighted, although neither chimney smokes when the fire is only lighted in that grate which it serves.

DISTRICT BREVITIES.

Will the proposed electric lighting scheme for Beeston Spa come off?

* * *

Garforth and Rothwell must be preparing for the Urban Council elections.

* * *

Of the course of cricketist between at Garforth only one more remains to be given.

* * *

Templenewsam has had another fire. How did the fire brigade acquit themselves?

* * *

Another record! The late Mr Richard Brown spent 50 years on the Grimston Park estate.

* * *

The residents of Whinmoor should be happy now. They have been given a letter-box all to themselves.

* * *

A family in the district have gone into a house which has been unoccupied for two years. They are all ill.

* * *

In connection with the lecture at Garforth, it may be stated that flint arrow heads have been discovered at Adel.

* * *

Nothing has been heard of the housing question at Tadcaster for some time. Are houses to be built by private enterprise?

* * *

Tedious! A lady at a Rothwell bazaar said she had heard people talk for over an hour at an opening, and it was very tedious.

* * *

Monk Fryston has already begun work for its agricultural show. It has a handsome balance of £43 to begin the year with.

* * *

East Keswick was at one time a stronghold of Wesleyan Methodism, and at one period a good many Quakers resided in the parish.

* * *

Aberford School having been extended, the school at Bramham is now to be enlarged. When is Barwick School to be made larger?

* * *

With their "smokers" and meetings, the Swillington and Great Preston Conservatives are among the most active of all local politicians.

* * *

Well done! South Milford had the highest attendance of all the schools in Garforth division last month. Sherburn must look to its laurels.

* * *

In view of the figures recently got out, will the Corporation erect workmen's dwellings at Seacroft and Shadwell. Better build them "in the country.

* * *

The Rev. E. C Illingworth, the curate at Selby Abbey for the past two years, has received a curacy at Malton, and removes on his new duties in May.

* * *

Has Barwick obtained its new parish pump? That does not look like wanting water from Leeds. Will the old pump be preserved as a relic of bye-gone days?

* * *

Will Barwick farmers determine on the destruction of rooks? It is suggested that a concerted "shoot" should be held. Why not call in the services of Halton Gun Club?

* * *

The woman who told Garforth educationists she would send her child regularly to school because "she had not money to pay for a sanatorium" was an unconscious humorist.

* * *

Miss Ford, of Adel, says that women used to "be educated merely to be agreeable and pleasant to the sex." Now some of them want the vote and won't be happy until they get it.'

* * *

Adel Church, according to announcements, had the largest collection outside the city for Leeds medical charities. It was £13 7s. 2d., but it shows a decrease on last year of no less than £6 3s. 3d.

* * *

It was stated at a meeting in Barkston Ash that the women who want the vote have not the support of their sex. Will the suffragettes now take a postcard vote of the local women? It would be interesting.

* * *

In front of a house straw had been laid on the road, and a little girl, inquiring the reason, was told a baby had come to the occupier of the house. "My, it must have been well packed," she declared, after contemplating the straw.

* * *

The Chairman of the Skyrack magistrates told a Rothwell bench that the receipts by Mr Theaker's ... had been sufficient to put a stop to men following his "profession." It has its attractions, and so long as men are foolish enough to back "greyhounds" the "bookie" will flourish.

* * *

The Marguerite House for invalid children at Thorparch was presented a few years ago by Mr and Mrs A. L. Hepper, of Leeds, as a thanksoffering for the recovery of their daughter, from a severe illness. Many will regret to learn of Mrs Hepton's death at Harrogate.

* * *

When the Roundhay golfers had their annual dinner the other night ladies were present, and Mrs W. H. Jones pleaded for the presence of ladies sometimes as members at the annual dinners and other functions of the club. The lady members of the club had proved that they could play golf in the true sporting spirit, and a dinner without the ladies was a shade worse than when they were present.

The Rev. John Napper Worsnop, rector of Hoddlesy, left £4,826.

Al rford is now lighted from Garforth but the lighting could easily be improved.

* * *

Silent no more! Rothwell Church bells, for it he known, are making music again.

* * *

Congratulations! Crossgates church folks did splendidly with their sale of work.

* * *

Wonderful! At a dance held recently in Halton district there were more gentlemen than ladies!

* * *

Sherburn magistrates had comparatively little to do at last Court. Only one case came before them.

* * *

When are the Kippax "fishers" to call a parish meeting anent the acquisition of a recreation ground?

* * *

Why are the collections for Leeds Infirmary at many of the local churches reduced? It is not a good sign.

* * *

Tadcaster is up-to-date. It has a Literary society, choral society, institute, golf, cricket, and football clubs.

* * *

At a meeting at Whitkirk Mr R. H. Foster praised the value of debating societies. Yet there are very few in the district.

* * *

The long-looked-for improvement at Sherburn Cross has a chance of being carried out. All depends on getting a bit of land.

* * *

The Lune Fox, M.P., told the Harewood Conservatives the other day that "the chances of an early election are undoubtedly great."

* * *

Over the dinner plates! Mr A. E. Brotherton, of Roundhay, Lord Mayor of Leeds, has been appointed president of Leeds Luncheon Club.

* * *

In a late at East Keswick a scarce species of willow is to be seen, and it is said to have grown from a slip from the tree of Napoleon's tomb at St. Helena.

* * *

Mr E. H. Foster, the Liberal candidate for Barkston Ash, is now urging his supporters to be ready for an election. Will it come before June next year?

* * *

Tadcaster East Council are persistent. Twice they have asked the District Council to pave a crossing and twice have the latter refused. What will they do now?

* * *

Building in the Tadcaster rural area is not brisk. A dozen houses in South Milford are "to be put up, yet in most of the villages there is a demand for good cottages.

* * *

It has been suggested that a public library should be started in Garforth. What say the residents? The only place in the district with a library rate is Bolton Percy.

* * *

On Saturday afternoon Mr Lune Fox, M.P., opened a bazaar at Garforth, and in the evening he addressed a Conservative meeting at Great Preston. No idle days for the M.P. now.

* * *

The police force has its attractions! After 26 years' service the inspector at Sherburn has retired with a substantial pension. How many artisans could retire after that period of work?

* * *

No man need apply! At Selby Guardians' meeting on Monday Miss M. Cattley, of Multon, was appointed registrar of births and deaths for the Riccall Sub-District in the place of her sister, deceased.

* * *

At Brandsby, Shadwell, there is a spill—Holy well Lane is said to take its name from it—and, says a writer, the people of the district look on the holy well with great reverence and pay tribute to its virtues.

* * *

Mr Ben Brisham, who was honoured by Garforth Oddfellows the other night, probably holds a record for Yorkshire. He has been foreman of the jury at nearly every inquest held in Garforth for over thirty years.

* * *

Why not provide a recreation ground? Sherburn magistrates fined three pit lads for playing football in the street. The Crossgates boys, who have no recreation field, have taken to playing football in the streets.

* * *

Now that there is Sunday golf at Roundhay, Crossgates, and Wetherby, and angling at Roundhay, will there be Sunday cricket in Barkston Ash this summer? Then will follow football, bowling, pigeon flying, etc. We're getting on and no mistake.

* * *

In Rothwell district During the year 1913 the Attendance Shield was won as follows:—January, Carlton Mixed; February, Rothwell Wood Lane Infants; March, Carlton Mixed; April, Robin Hood Mixed; May, Robin Hood Mixed; June, Carlton Mixed; July, Carlton Mixed; August, Robin Hood mixed; September, Carlton Infants; October, Middleton Mixed; November, Middleton Mixed; December, Robin Hood Mixed.

STOURTON

A FATAL DRAUGHT.—A verdict to the effect that deceased died from "shock, following an accidental fall into the bath-room," and also from Eminent poisoning by misadventure," was returned at the inquest at Leeds on Monday on Squire Tallase (63), steel works labourer, of 32, Pepper Place, Hunslet. It ceased fell against the fireplace at his home and hurt his ribs. Later he was attended by Dr. Rosenberg, who supplied him with some ointment with which to rub his back. He afterwards started to had taken the ointment as medicine. He died shortly after.

Mr. PAUL BLANCHARD,

GILCHRIST LECTURE AT GARFORTH

PROFESSOR SOLLAS AND ANCIENT MAN.

MR E. H. FOSTER, J.P., AND AN INSTITUTE FOR GARFORTH.

On Friday evening at the Garforth Council School the fourth of the Gilchrist Educational Trust lectures was delivered by Professor W. J. Sollas, LL.D., D.Sc., F.R.S., who is professor of geology and palæontology in Oxford University, his subject being "Ancient Hunters." Mr E. H. Foster, J.P., C.A., presided, and there was a large attendance.

The chairman said that it was very gratifying to see such a magnificent audience. It showed that in Garforth there was a strong desire for well-timed recreation, such as was afforded by the Gilchrist Trust Lectures. He was bound to say that each evening that while there were lectures there was a singular absence of facts given for us along it in the ordinary course. In Garforth there was no public library, no institute such as could stand in large villages, and no opportunities for lectures. The large gathering provided showed that the people would willingly attend high-class lectures, and that would welcome more facilities in this country. He hoped that one of the effects of the Gilchrist lectures would be the awakening in Garforth and district of a desire for such facilities for intellectual recreation. They had living amongst them public-spirited men who would be only too glad to give what assistance they could in that direction, he thought.

Professor Sollas said that the present age had been well-called the age of coal, which was used for energy, lighting, and heat. When they went back to the time of Elizabeth they left the coal age behind, because coal was only burned here and there on the doorsteps of hearths. Going back other 2000 years they came to the beginning of the English nation, and in another thousand years they reached the most important event in the history of the world—the birth of Christ. Three thousand years ago the Roman Empire was left behind, and they had the great kingdoms of Egypt and Babylonia, and going back 3000 years they came to Stone Age men. Then they had the shepherd and the farmer. Seven thousand years ago there were no farmers and shepherds, and man had to depend on the fruits of the earth—roots and berries and wild fruit and on the flesh of an occasional animal which had fallen to him in the chase. From that time backwards man was a hunter and nothing else. At one time Northern Europe was under snow and ice, and it was when the temperature became warmer that man made his appearance in this country. H- described a number of these ancient men, and said the jaw was that of an ape. What distinguished man from all other animals was his intelligence, and he soon furnished himself with a spear and flint, and his fighting jaw and fighting teeth were no longer necessary. Gradually the ape jaw disappeared, and the human countenance as it was now known came into existence. He described how each period had its own animals, and stated that with the invention of the spear man also found how to kindle a fire by means of flint. A race of men called Mousterian came into Europe, and as it became colder again they took refuge in caves, and he stated that in a cave in Wales discoveries of flint implements, charcoal, bones of animals, etc., had been made. In some of the caves in Germany the bones of man himself had been found, showing that in times of distress those people had been obliged to eat each other. In the graves of ancient men the bones of animals were seen, and it was evidence that animals had been buried along with them to provide them with food on their journey to the spiritual world. That might be taken to show that a belief then existed that the soul was not buried with the body. Another race of hunters came, and they invented the bow and arrow—an important event in the history of mankind, because they could kill animals more easily, and they were thus given a great deal more leisure. Along with this invention, they had the birth of the fine arts, and the arrow heads with their ornamentations were evidence of this. Paintings and drawings by ancient hunters in caves and on the sides of weapons were exhibited, and some of the drawings were very fine. How did these come about? Man, he said, had a desire to express himself, and the simplest way was by painting and sculpture. In caves in all parts of the world they found paintings of a red hand, and it was suggested that this had a common origin, and that the customs were taken from the old world into the new. Another strange custom was the mutilation of fingers, as shown by paintings, and it was practised by Bushmen and in India, etc. The Bushmen, who were supposed at one time to have lived in Europe, painted in caves like the ancient hunters, and he exhibited drawings of residents and sledges made in the old days, and thus he said the first carriage was invented. In conclusion, he stated that probably one party of those ancient folks went through Asia and they were now represented by the natives of Australia; another stream went through Africa, and these were the Bushmen, and a third stream went through North America, and these were the Esquimaux.

Councillor J. W. Dobson, in proposing a vote of thanks to the lecturer, referred to the discovery of skeletons at East Garforth and Garforth Cliff, and said they should have had some learned men to examine the graves and give them information about them. H- stated that an institute was established in Garforth about 40 years ago, and it did a great work. Interest, however, died out, and now the premises were used for another purpose. Afterwards another institute was formed, and they had a series of Gilchrist lectures, but interest in the movement again fizzled out.

Mr Denby, who seconded, said that the lecture had been of the greatest interest. He also proposed a vote of thanks to Mr Foster, who was an old friend of his. He did not know how he managed to find time to do so much public work. He was a County Councillor and a magistrate, and he attended many meetings in connection with other bodies, yet he found time to come and preside over that gathering.

The resolution was passed, and Professor Sollas expressed his gratitude to the audience for the keen and appreciative manner in which they had followed his remarks.

ROUNDHAY

THE LATE MR A. L. BURROW.—The funeral of the late Mr Alfred Lindley Burrow, of Lyngarth, Roundhay, head of the firm of Messrs Davis, Burrow and Sons, Whitehouse Street, Hunslet, took place at Lawnswood Cemetery on Thursday. The burial was in a newly made vault near the cemetery chapels. The service was conducted by the Rev. Ernest Jenkins, of the Roundhay Congregational Church. The family mourners comprised Mr. Davis Burrow, Miss Mary Burrow, Miss Janet Burrow, Mr and Mrs H. G. Taylor, Mr Harry Taylor (Southport), Mrs Davis Burrow, Mr C. E. Burrow, and Mr and Mrs Morrish.

A GARFORTH MAN'S DEATH.

SEQUEL TO A MICKLEFIELD ACCIDENT.

CORONER AND A DISTRICT NURSE FOR GARFORTH.

On Tuesday morning at the Conservative Club, Garforth, an inquest was held by Mr P. P. Maitland (Coroner) on the body of Robert Henry Nevins (54), colliery bye-workman, residing at Coupland Road, Garforth, who died on Sunday. He met with an accident at Micklefield Colliery about six weeks ago and had not worked since. Mr B. Braham was foreman of the jury. Mr Lancaster represented the Micklefield Coal Co.

Thomas William Shooter, Coupland Road, Garforth, said the deceased was his uncle, and prior to the accident he was a healthy man. About six weeks ago Nevins met with an accident at Peckfield Colliery, and he saw him when he was removed in an ambulance to his own home. Deceased was in a helpless condition, and when he asked him how the accident occurred he said that a "Parrish" had run out. He complained of pain across his body and at his ankles. He afterwards went into lodgings and was nursed by a widow. He was in bed about six weeks, then he got up, and walked about by the aid of a stick. He then became ill and he was in bed about a month. He saw him the day before he died, and he was then unconscious.

Mr Shooter: Did he say he had been well looked after?

Witness: Yes, he said he had been looked after all right.

Benjamin William Evans, West View, Micklefield, who is a bye-workmen at Peckfield Colliery, said that the accident occurred at 8.30 on the morning of January 6th, which he and deceased were getting some down ready for filling.

The Coroner: There had been a fall and you were clearing it away?—Yes, sir.

What happened?—The stretcher came out and some stone came down.

Had the stretcher been put up after the "fall?"—Yes.

When did the fall take place?—A long time since.

You were opening out an old road?—Yes.

How long had the roof been supported by this stretcher?—It was there before the previous afternoon.

What struck deceased?—The stretcher, wood covering, and some roof. He was knocked down, but he got up again, and came down himself.

When he came down where did he complain he was hur.?—He complained that he was hurt all over.

Was he bleeding anywhere?—No, sir.

He came down after the fall?—Yes, and then he fainted, and I sent for help.

When he came out of the fainting condition was he able to walk?—No, he was taken out on a stretcher.

You did not see any signs of danger before the accident?—No.

Dr. Sykes, I examined the stretcher and found it all right.

Dr. Sykes, of Garforth, stated he was called to deceased on January 6th, and he was then in bed. He complained that he was hurt by a fall of roof, and he complained of injury to his shoulders, abdomen, right knee, and left ankle. There were bruises on the shoulders, arms, and abdomen, but no fracture nor internal hæmorrhage. He remained in bed for a week, and then he was able to go out, although lame in consequence of the injury to the ankle. He was last attended to him he found examine him. He then informed him he found that deceased was suffering from septic pneumonia. Afterwards he complained of his left ankle, and it was swollen and inflamed, and he operated on it. There was pus present, an abscess. Later the left leg became very much swollen. The pneumonia was clearing, but he gradually became exhausted, and died from exhaustion.

The Coroner: Is there a district nurse here?

Dr. Sykes: No, but there ought to be one.

Witness stated that he made a post-mortem examination of the body, and he stated that death was due to exhaustion from septic pneumonia set up by the injuries to the shoulders and ankles.

In consequence of some remarks by the foreman, the Coroner said that in an important place like Garforth, and it was a nice place, too, they ought to have a district nurse. He asked if the man was properly nursed.

Dr. Sykes said he was nursed as well as could be under the circumstances. He did not complain of any neglect.

In regard to a district nurse, Dr. Sykes said that one would have been useful over and over again.

The Coroner: Places of less importance I go to have district nurses.

Edward Lloyd, of Micklefield, a deputy at the Peckfield Colliery, said that he examined the place on the morning on January 6th, and he considered it safe.

The Coroner asked how he accounted for the accident.

Witness: It must have been a sudden bump.

The jury returned a verdict of "Accidental death" in accordance with the medical and other evidence.

A ROTHWELL YOUNG WOMAN'S SAD END

THE INQUEST.

An inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the death of Eliza Tiffany (21), a young Rothwell woman, was conducted by Mr J. C. Malcolm (the Leeds City Coroner) at the Leeds Town Hall on Monday afternoon.

The deceased lived with her parents at 15, Cross Street, Rothwell, and about a month ago she was removed from her home to the Leeds Infirmary suffering from severe burns. Death took place in the institution on Friday.

The father of the deceased identified the body, and told the Coroner that the accident occurred shortly after mid-day on Friday, January 23rd. She had gone into the kitchen to see to the fire when her clothing was ignited. Witness said he saw his daughter in the Infirmary on the night of the accident, and she had told him that she had tried to put the flames out herself before calling her mother, who had only got up that day from an illness, as she (deceased) was afraid that it might give her mother a shock. However, the young woman failed to extinguish the flames, and her screams brought the neighbours. He could not say anything as to the deceased's clothing, but he believed that her apron caught fire.

Maud Abbishaw, wife of Thomas Abbishaw, 17, Cross Street, Rothwell, said she was in her house, which is next to the deceased's home, when she heard someone scream. She went to the door and saw smoke issuing from Mrs Tiffany's house. On running in she saw the deceased with her clothing in flames, and she cried out for help. Other neighbours came, and together they extinguished the flames.

The evidence of Dr. Flint, of the Leeds Infirmary, showed that the girl had been badly burnt about the face, neck, arms and chest. Death was due to septic pneumonia following on the injury to the face.

The jury returned a verdict of "Accidental death."

CORRESPONDENCE.

LIEUT. BOUGHEY, R.N., AND MR E. H. FOSTER, J.P.

(To the Editor).

SIR,—I have read with interest the correspondence between Lieut. Boughey and Mr Alderman Harvey. The latter gives us a useful object-lesson on the way in which a hide-bound and not over scrupulous partisan can conduct a political controversy. He has been calling on his opponent in a most dictatorial manner to produce evidence in support of his statements. Lieut. Boughey has given him a long list of facts and instances in reply. How does Mr Harvey deal with them? Take the Sligo boycotting resolution. He says:—

"With a knowledge of the local circumstances I am not altogether surpris d that such a resolution should be passed."

Take the Kingston case, which Lieut. Boughey mentioned (Mr Kingston, by the way, is a personal friend of my own). Of this case the "Star" said:—

"Mr Redmond has a superb opportunity of showing that he and the Irish Nationalist Party are able not only to talk fair play to Protestants, but also to enforce it. The case of Mr Kingston ought to be a godsend to Home Rule and Home Rulers. It is a magnificent test case. Hitherto we have had to write about it, for we are waiting to hear the other side of the case. Today in the "Daily News," the Rev. J. O. Hannay makes it plain that there is no other side.

"There is another farmer in the parish who holds land from which a former tenant was evicted. His name is Regan. But Regan is not boycotted. Why? Because he is a Roman Catholic. That is to say, Kingston would probably not be boycotted if he were a Roman Catholic and has a "pull" in the League. . . .

What does Mr Harvey say to this case? His comment on this vile boycott is:—"Had I been a resident in the district I rather feel I should have joined in the boycott." Truly a pleasant sort of person! No wonder Lieut. Boughey declines to continue the correspondence! He is more Radical than the "Star," more Hibernian than the Ancient Order. For the sake of the Unionists of the Barkston Ash Division I trust he is not likely to introduce Nationalist methods into their midst. For his own sake if he does, I hope he will draw the line at the more violent methods of his Irish allies.—Yours, etc.,

H. S. NEALE.

PRESENTATION TO MR B. BRAHAM, GARFORTH

ODDFELLOWS HONOUR AN ESTEEMED MEMBER.

On Saturday night the members of the Providential Lodge of Oddfellows at Garforth did honour to Mr Ben Braham, one of the best-known residents of the district. Mr Braham has been an active worker in connection with the Lodge for many years, and it was most appropriate that a number of public work, being at the present time one of the overseers of the parish, and a member of the Tadcaster Board of Guardians. The presentation took the form of a marble timepiece, as a slight recognition of Bro. Braham's long and faithful services as treasurer of the Lodge.

Bro. J. W. Westerman, who made the presentation, said he thanked the members of the Lodge for giving him the pleasure of presenting Bro. Braham with the clock, as he had been connected with him for a period of over 50 years in friendly society work. He remembered the time when the Lodge funds were at a very low ebb. A fever broke out in the village and robbed them of a number of their members and depleted the funds considerably. They, however, set to work and enrolled a lot of new members, and the Lodge prospered, the funds increasing from £400 to close on £1,400. He believed the Lodge was one of the best in Garforth, and he urged young members to attend the Lodge meetings, and take an interest in the work, and try and induce others to join. They should take Bro. Braham as an example, for he had been over 30 years in office and had only been absent on one occasion during that time. He hoped that Bro. Braham would be spared a good many years and be able to listen to the clock's tick, and when he looked on it, it would remind him of his fellow members, and the pleasant times he had spent amongst them.

Bro. Braham, in responding, said he thanked all members of the Lodge for the kindness that had been shown towards him during his long term of office. Especially did he thank the officers of the Lodge, who had always been on good terms with him and willing to do anything required of them in connection with their duties. When he joined the Lodge it was a branch of the Leeds United Order of Oddfellows, and he was appointed to one of the minor offices of the Grand Lodge and was afterwards elected to the high position of Grand Master of the Order, being presented with a beautiful gold medal. He was, he said, pleased to see the friendly spirit which existed among the members towards him on his retirement, and he again thanked them for the beautiful present. Three cheers were given for Bro. Braham.

The members of the Garforth Glee Party contributed very much to the evening's enjoyment by singing a selection of glees, etc. Messrs Goddard, Wallis, and H. C. Braham sang songs, which were well received, and Mr Arthur Burnley very ably presided at the piano.

A vote of thanks was accorded the members of the Glee Party and their friends for kindly coming forward and contributing so much towards the evening's enjoyment.

The singing of the National Anthem brought the evening's proceedings to a close.

A WELL-KNOWN KIRKBY WHARFE MAN.

SIXTY YEARS ON GRIMSTON PARK ESTATE.

On Saturday afternoon the funeral took place of the late Mr Richard Brown, a well-known and highly esteemed representative of agricultural work on the Grimston Park estate. Mr Brown was probably the oldest remaining link on the Home Farm at Grimston, with the time of the first Lord Londesborough as owner of the Grimston estate. So far back as the year 1857 he began his work as farm labourer, and in a very short time became foreman on the Home Farm, a position he retained with marked success under various changes, until his retirement from active work a few years ago.

He was a man of strong religious character, and while a regular attendant at the Church of England, he was a lover of the Methodist form of worship. He was also a staunch Liberal in politics, and was ever ready with a kindly sympathy to help forward the workers, young and old, under his charge. He died at the age of 84 years, having spent the whole of his life on the Grimston estate, and leaving behind a family of five daughters and two sons—all in comfortable circumstances. His wife died some years ago.

A GARFORTH MAN AND A PONY.

CHARGE OF CRUELTY.

At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Stanley Wall (15), no trade boy, of Garforth, was summoned for cruelty to a mare, and his father, George Wall, gamekeeper, of Garforth, was summoned for causing the cruelty. Mr Percy Hodgson of Cruelty to Animals, prosecuted.

Evidence was given by P.C. Bevers, who said that about 7.30 p.m. on Friday, February 13th, he was in Main Street, Garforth, when he saw the younger defendant in charge of a five-year-old pony, the property of the elder defendant. He noticed that the animal cringed, as if to stop it. On moving the saddle he noticed an old sore which was suppurating. He asked him how long he had had the animal out, and he replied that it had been to Micklefield. The officer told him to take it home, and ten minutes later when with Inspector Ramsey, he saw the youth coming from the stable. The animal was again examined, and the wound was discharging blood and matter. The saddle was covered with the matter.

Mr Claud Kemp, who defended: Did you get to know how long the pony had been out?

Witness: He said it had been to Micklefield.

Inspector Ramsay gave corroborative evidence.

Inspector Stanbridge stated that on Monday, February 16th, he examined the pony and found an open sore about two inches long by one and a half across. The elder defendant said he had put some ointment upon it.

In reply to Mr Claud Kemp, witness said the sore must have been, seen when the saddle was put on by the son. It would have been gross cruelty to have had a sack under the saddle.

Mr Kemp said that so far as the boy was concerned he was ignorant that the animal was in an unfit state. If there was a guilty party it was an elder brother who had been with the pony to Micklefield, and on his return had asked the younger defendant to take the pony to the stable as he was tired. The wound in question had been caused by an accident and not by any cruelty.

The elder defendant was called, and stated that the pony met with an accident about a month ago, and in consequence of the injury he told his elder son, William Henry, that the pony must be fastened up and not allowed out. On the following day the officer examined it, a scab had formed, and he had given orders that when taken out a sack should be put under the saddle. On the day in question the pony had been to Micklefield with the lower part and a half hundredweight of greengroceries.

Mr Wharam, veterinary surgeon, said that the wound had now healed up according to his instructions. He did not, he said, consider the wound a very serious one.

At this stage the Bench decided to dismiss the case against the younger defendant.

Inspector Henry Ward stated that after the accident his father had given him instructions not to take the pony out unless a sack was placed beneath the saddle. On the day in question he had neglected to do this, and the scab had evidently been knocked off.

The Bench inflicted a fine of 5s. and costs.

MISSIONARY SALE OF WORK.—A sale of work on behalf of the Church Missionary Society and the Church Pastoral Aid Society was held on Thursday in the Standering Hall, Selby. The effort was organised by the workers of St. James's Church. The display, though on a small scale, was a very pleasing one. The stalls were superintended by Mrs Goulden, Mrs Gener, Mrs Burdett, Miss Walker, Miss M. Jackson, Mrs Voase, Mrs Wright, Mrs Reed, Mrs Jackson, Mrs Kilburn, Mrs Lodge, etc. The sale was opened by the Vicar of St. James's, the Rev. A. Conway Goulden, who made a few appropriate remarks. The attendance included Mr J. E. Ruesbeck (churchwarden), Mr R. Lodge, Mr D. Young, and Mr Harold Jackson. Afternoon teas were served. In the evening an enjoyable entertainmnt was given by members of the St. James's Senior Girls' Club.

OLD-TIME WEDDING AT HALTON.

LADIES' NOVEL ENTERTAINMENT.

What was described as "Ye Old Village Wedding" attracted a large audience to the Wesleyan Schoolroom, Halton, on Monday evening, when an interesting entertainment was given by ladies of the congregation. Prior to the arrival of the marriage party there was a pretty scene, children playing games, but the appearance of "gossips" put an end to the fun.

The wedding party marched in procession down the hall, and at one of the vestries a hymn was sung, and then they formed in procession again and paraded the hall to the platform, where the festivities were held. All the ladies were attired in keeping with the characters they represented, and they were as follows:—

Bride, Mrs J. A. Popplewell; bridegroom, Mrs Booth; bridesmaids, Misses Batty, Bennett, A. Taylor and Heathcote; best man, Miss Culverley; Russon, and G. Taylor; best man, Mrs Wright; bridesmaid, Miss Bell; bride's mother, Mrs A. E. Crostwaite; bride's grandma, Mrs Gaunt; bride's sister, Mrs C. A. Palmer; bridegroom's father, Mrs Holmes; bridegroom's mother, Mrs Holgate; bridegroom's grandma, Mrs Wm. Bell; sailor, Mrs W. Crosthwaite; minister, Mrs C. Bell; minister's lady, Mrs Scott; schoolmistress, Mrs Garner; pupil, Mrs H. Bell; professor, Mrs Butterskill; soldier, Mrs H. Bell; sailor boy, Miss Beaudley; country boy, Miss D. Crosthwaite; suffrag tte, Miss H. M. Fleming; policeman, Mrs J. Batty; maid, Miss Ibeson; gossips, Mesdames Holding, Kilburn, Robinson, Jewel, and Miss Townend; wedding guests, Mrs Carr, Mrs Hudson, Miss Barton; schoolgirls, M. Kilburn, M. Robinson, C. Bardekie, and O. Scarfe.

The entertainment was of a very pleasing and enjoyable character, and humour was lent to the proceedings by the antics of the suffragette, who had no receive the unwelcome attentions of the "policeman." The squire, admirably represented by Mrs W. G. Crosthwaite, was director of the festivities, and "he" gave the toast of "the bride and bridegroom" in excellent style. Of course, the bridegroom had to respond, and, in turn proposed "The bridesmaids," and the best "man" had the duty of replying for them. After the bride's father had made a speech there was music and recitations, and the programme was as follows:—Chorus, "The bells," wedding party; song, "Johnny Sands," bride's father; duet, "Noontide hurt," schoolmistress and pupil; recitation, "A day too late," Mrs Kelly; song with chorus, "Maggie," Molly (Mrs Hotham); duet, "A storm in a tea-cup," bride and bridegroom; song, "Sombre Woods," pupil; round, "Three blind mice," wedding party; glee, "Some folks," wedding party; song, "Annie Laurie," schoolmistress; duet, "You shan't play in our yard," schoolgirls; recitation, "Weshin' blankets," Molly; song, "Booher the men," Susan (Miss Ibeson); trio, "Three old maids of Lee," bridesmaids; song and chorus, "Old folks at home," groomsman; song, "Tommy Atkins," soldier; chorus, "Auld lang syne," wedding party. Several of the items were encored, and altogether the party was a very merry one. The proceeds were for the chapel organ fund.

SOCIETY THEATRICALS AT COLTON

Theatrical performances arranged by Mrs F. Sweetnham, of Colton Lodge, near Tadcaster, were given on Friday afternoon and evening at Colton in aid of the District Nurse Fund. There were large attendances at the performances.

The audience in the afternoon included Mr and Mrs Sweetnham appeared in the comedy "Rats," and both acted delightfully. The Earl of St. Germans, assisted by the Hon. H. Talbot Rice and Mr E. Compton, of the Scots Greys, appeared in a very funny motoring sketch, the Earl as Mrs 'Opper creating roars of laughter. Miss Locke Elliott and Lord Rodney danced the Tango, and were warmly applauded.

The second part of the programme was opened by Mr E. Compton singing the song "Little Girl," from "The Sunshine Girl," his "chorus" assistants being Mrs E. Lane Fox, Miss Locke Elliott, and Mrs F. Sweetenham. The item was deservedly encored.

After excellently played violin solos by Miss Olivia Burrell, the entertainment was brought to a close by the performance of Nita Fayden's one-act play "The Great Love," in which Miss Locke Elliott, the Earl of St. Germans, Mrs Sweetenham, and the Hon. H. Talbot Rice displayed their high histrionic abilities to great advantage. Major Sweetenham's stage management throughout the entertainment was most praiseworthy. At the interval Captain Graham gave some Border Ballads with fine effect.

THORPARCH DIVORCE CASE.

A WIFE'S PETITION

In the Divorce Court on Monday, before Mr Justice Bargrave Deane, Mrs. Gladys Nelly Cooper, of Thorparch, Boston Spa, was granted a decree nisi on her petition for the dissolution of her marriage with Captain Percy Cooper, on the ground of his desertion and misconduct with a young woman named Miss Florrie Brown.

Mrs Cooper, on the witness-box, stated that she was married at St. Mary's Church, Boston Spa, on the 4th of March, 1905. Her husband had treated her very cruelly. He came home drunk frequently late at night, and struck her. On one occasion he threw a bottle of beer over her. Owing to his conduct she once ran away from him and went to her parents' home.

Mr Charles White, of Tarn Road, Fulham, stated that the respondent stayed at his house with a young woman, not the petitioner. Afterwards he found out that his wife's name was Florrie Brown. A child was born to the couple.

Mr John W. Hargrave, a solicitor's assistant, of Bruce Street, Leeds, said when he served the petition upon Cooper he admitted that he "had not done right," and that he "was a bit wild" and "had to pay dearly for it." He said he had no defence.

His Lordship granted a decree nisi as stated, with costs.

ROTHWELL WORKING MAN'S CLUB.

The annual meeting of the Rothwell Working Men's Club, Oulton Lane, was held in the large room of the club on Friday night—the Rev. H. E. Wilcocke (vicar) presiding. There was a good attendance of members.

The secretary (Mr Cyril Batty) presented the annual report and balance sheet, which showed that the total receipts for the year amounted to £58 13s. 7d., and the expenditure £62 2s. 1d.—an excess over the income of £3 8s. 6d. Billiard takings showed an increase of £3 3s. 6d. over last year. The subscriptions showed an increase of £2 7s. 10d., and, thanks to the generosity of members and friends in giving refreshments and prizes, the sum of £3 3s. 3d. was realised over the result of a whist drive and dance in the Church Schools on November 1st. The items of expenditure varied very little from last year's accounts with the exception of the heavy expenses which included the sum of £6 10s. for the recovering of the full-size billiard table. A sum of £4 10s. in shares in the billiard table was still outstanding. In addition to the ordinary expenses which occur the committee must soon consider the question of the recovering of the small billiard table, the repainted painting and decorating of the old part of the club, and the provision of new linoleum for the small billiard room. To meet this extra expense and to reduce the debt, the committee and committee would have to do all in their power towards the progress and welfare of the club. A very pleasing feature was that during the year more than thirty new members were enrolled, and there was at the end of the term a membership of about 85. During the year Mr and Mrs Cromack resigned their positions as caretakers of the club after 12 years' service, and Mr and Mrs T. W. Gibson were appointed to the vacancy. In the Oulton and District Billiard League seven matches were played out of the twelve games, only one of which had been won. Games with Hopetown Reading Room and Carlton Temperance Hall (away) and Rippax (home) were still to be played. The senior team had played three matches and lost four, and had yet to play Hopetown Reading Room and Carlton Temperance Hall (away), and Oulton Institute (home).

The report and balance sheet were adopted on the motion of the Rev. H. E. Wilcocke, seconded by Mr W. Wormald.

The following were elected on the committee:—Messrs L. Asquith, H. Bennett, G. Cripps, R. Fidler, F. Gibson, E. Goodall, G. A. Scholey, Sidney Stringer, and W. Wormald.

Votes of thanks were accorded the auditors (Messrs G. A. Scholey and W. Cousins), on the call of Messrs C. Batty and S. Wormald, and to the Chairman on the proposition of Mr W. Wormald and Mr A. Evans.

MEET AT HOPE HALL.

The Bramham Moor pack on Saturday met at Hope Hall. The night before had been wild and stormy, which perhaps accounted for a scarcity of foxes. Those found were entirely without enterprise, and provided little or no sport. Woodhouse Woods was the first draw, and a fox found there broke covert on the north side, but almost at once doubled back and was lost to view. The following coverts were in succession drawn blank:—Lindrick Hills, Stubbin Moor, Barker's Plantation, and Star Wood. A fox from Belcher's Quarry, which lies midway between Compton and Collingham, cross d the Leeds and Wetherby Road, and gaining the river bank got to ground opposite Linton. The Wetherby Harge covverts were now drawn blank. Hounds put in an hour and a half's woodland hunting in Black Fen, and stuck well to their fox while he dodged about in this almost impenetrable covert, and finally he was marked to ground.

LORD MORLEY AND FEDERALISM.

Lord Morley, presiding on Tuesday night at a Rhodes Lecture on federal government at the University of London, said that political theorising was often as dull as ditch water. Every crisis had its own conjuring word. "Federalism" was now the word, and it was causing a great deal of current political controversy to become a jungle of confusion. Ready made terms led to implications, implications to inferences, inferences to dogmas, and finally to abstract logic as likely to be as impossible and irrelevant as algebra or euclid, and it had to be shown how the system of federation could be adjusted to a system in which the supremacy of Parliament was the cornerstone. The question to be decided was whether machinery could be devised for the purpose of common action between Britain with her dominions in a federal union, or whether inconvenience and embarrassments unsuspected in the hour of ideal enthusiasm, would not in time turn formal into practical union into disunion. It would be a fatal gap if, in the educational curriculum, politics were the only field in the whole expanse of thought and knowledge and intellectual contact which did not talk of moral conscience. That was either neglected or left out.

ESTABLISHED 1871
Ison's Eye & Ear Dispensary
LIMITED.
71, GREAT GEORGE ST., LEEDS
MR. THOS. ISON,
OCULIST and AURIST.
THIS INSTITUTION was ESTABLISHED in 1871. The system of working is the provident one, each patient paying a small periodical fee whilst under treatment, and they may, therefore, justly expect to receive the prompt care and attention which in many instances in charitable institutions is too often omitted. The treatment is of a mild and safe character, without operation or the use of Ear Drums, Ear Cornets or other mechanical or painful appliances. Another advantage appertaining to this dispensary is its system of treatment by correspondence, by which sufferers at long distances, and in isolated positions can have the advantage of MR ISON'S advice and remedies forwarded through the post. No case is undertaken unless there be a reasonable hope of cure, or benefit to the patient.
Attendance at Leeds every Tuesday, from 10 to 7 on Alternate Saturdays, March 7th and 21st. Hours 10 to 7. Other days by appointment.
TREATMENT WITHOUT OPERATION.
ARTIFICIAL HUMAN EYES fitted from 1/- SPECTACLES and EYE PRESERVERS, 3/6 to 10/6. Gold Frames from 20s.
SPECIAL NOTICE.—There are many cases of failing eyesight which can be speedily remedied by mild local treatment, thus dispensing with the use of glasses.

Many people complain bitterly about the increased cost of the maintenance of highways and charge administrators with extravagance, but if they would consider the changes that have taken place in locomotion during the last decade they would undoubtedly be more tolerant in their judgment. At the present time over 400,000 motors are in use in the British Isles, nearly half of them being motor cycles, and the passage of so many of these machines over the roads must make an enormous difference in tear and wear. Of course, for the heavy cost of the highways there is a compensating advantage. A vast industry has been built up, and it is growing rapidly; in fact, 1,700 new motor vehicles come into use every week. As usual, the British manufacturer was slow in waking up to the possibilities of the trade, and the foreigner had a fine market all to himself, but eventually the British manufacturer had his eyes opened, and now the home maker is meeting foreign competition successfully in many directions, and so far as motor-cycles are concerned he can beat all comers. On the balance of imports and exports this country is over half-a-million to the good. The worth of the cars and cycles at present running in this country is £55,000,000. Last year nearly 20 millions were spent on the purchase of new motors. "Spares" and accessories cost well on to six millions; the annual tyre bill is put at 14½ millions, and the cost of fuel and lubricating oil is put at nearly 8½ millions per annum. Repairs, renewals, and "overhauls" absorb over six millions, and registration fees, licences, and insurance amount to something like three millions. Another important item is the rent of garage accommodation, which is estimated to amount yearly to 2½ millions. There are said to be about 150,000 motor-car drivers in the country, and their wages, along with the wages of other labour employed about a car are put at a little over 13½ millions. Even yet the bill is not complete, for allowance has to be made for subsidiary expenditure on motoring clothes and for travelling expenses which amount to at least several millions. A writer comes to the conclusion that taking all of the heads of the expenditure of owners of motor-cars, the benefit, directly and indirectly, to British labour aggregates £37,550,000 a year, which means that something like one million of the population are supported by the industry of motoring. Taking everything into account, it is calculated that at the present rate of increase, the gross expenditure upon all branches of motoring will, before the present year is out, reach the enormous figure of £100,000,000. Many of the motor vehicles are used for business, but it may be assumed that the great majority are for pleasure purposes, and this is another evidence of the prosperity that exists in the country.

Is the emigration of children to Canada desirable? The Hunslet Guardians had an interesting discussion on this question at their last meeting, and the concensus of opinion, gained by experience, seemed to be that the Board were justified in pursuing their policy of sending children who come into their care to the Dominion. In their cottage homes at Rothwell Haigh, let it be admitted, the Guardians have done a great work on behalf of the poor children of the Union, and the comparatively few failures apparently prove that the system of training and supervision adopted by them has been very effective, indeed. A good many of the children have been rescued from a life of vice into which dissolute parents would inevitably have led them, and they have, to their lasting good, come under the influence of the homes' system. To send these little folks, after their training was over, into situations where they could easily be found by undesirable relatives, would be very unwise, because they might become associated with the very people from whose homes they were removed, and the result would probably be disastrous. The children do not want to return to bad parents, or to relatives who would speedily utilize them for their own purposes, and they know that the best way to escape all these baneful influences is by beginning life in a land among strangers. Emigration in these cases is very desirable, and it should be encouraged, because it is obvious that children of this class have an infinitely better chance in life in Canada, far removed from home evils, than they would have were they put to work in Leeds, where relatives could get at them. Many of the children trained in the homes have done well in Canada, and in their letters they express their gratitude to the Guardians for sending them across the sea. There is, however, another class of children who do not labour under the same disabilities. Orphan boys could be apprenticed to trades at home, and girls could be fitted for domestic service, and they would find ample employment in the old country. It is frequently stated that the colonies are draining the country of its best blood and muscle—that the industrious tradesmen, inflamed by the ambition of becoming independent, are leaving these shores in increasing numbers year by year, and their places must be filled. The Leeds Board, under the scattered homes system, are doing a great work for children in the Union, and they are so trained that they can readily take their places in the great army of industrial workers—a credit to those responsible for their upbringing. These children, be it said, have a better chance than the families of many working men; they are well-fed, properly clothed, and admirably housed; they are kindly treated in every way, yet they are under discipline; and when they are sent to learn a trade they are encouraged to persevere. Everything is done to make them good citizens, and they rarely disappoint the Guardians. Would it not be a misfortune were all these children shipped out of the country? Discretion must be used by Guardians. It is not enough to say that children have done well in Canada; they might have done much better in England, which, if all tales are true, is as good as any place in the world for working-men. The national aspect of the question, too, should be considered. Would it not be better for the nation that this young life should be retained? The colonies demand our "best," and so long as it is voluntarily given no one can complain, but the old country has just as much need of the "best" for the new countries.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT NEWS.

ROTHWELL

LEEDS WEST RIDING PETTY SESSIONS.—The magistrates on the Bench at the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday were Mr J. W. Morkill (in the chair), Col. Sugar-Musgrave, Mr R.D. Kitson, Mr S. Hudson, Mr H. Lupton, and Mr E. Parkin.

G.F.S.—On Monday eight the younger girls of the Rothwell branch of the G.F.S. entertained the elder members to a "social," which was held in the Church Schools. The function was a very enjoyable one, those present indulging in games and dancing until about midnight.

BAZAAR.—As the result of the two days' bazaar held in the Wesleyan Schoolroom during the past week-end, £50 was raised for circuit funds. On Saturday afternoon there was a large gathering at the opening ceremony, which was performed by a number of young ladies associated with the "Busy Bee." In addition to the stalls there were other attractions.

SALVATION ARMY.—The officers and soldiers of the local corps of the Salvation Army are working hard in collecting funds for the "Self-Denial." The corps has a "target" of £34 to get, and in aid of the effort a concert and supper were held on Saturday night in the Primitive Methodist Schoolroom. An enjoyable programme arranged by the Temperance Band was gone through.

A CHANCE.—On the 18th inst. a sub-postman at the Rothwell post office named Clinton, suddenly disappeared, and later it was found that a sum of money was missing from the safe, together with a bunch of keys, including a safe key. The police were called in to investigate, with the result that Clinton was arrested and brought up before a special court at the Leeds office of the West Riding Constabulary and remanded until Tuesday next, when he will be charged at the Skyrack Petty Sessions.

DRINK.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Mrs Farrar, miner, of Rothwell, was summoned for being drunk and disorderly. P.C. Bosomworth stated that about 9.15 p.m. on Thursday last he saw the defendant in Church Street, Rothwell, in a very drunken condition. He had no cap, and when asked where it was he said that the licensee of the Hare and Hounds had got it. Inquiry was made at the Hare and Hounds, the officer learned that defendant had been turned out five times. A fine of 5s. and costs was imposed.

INVITATION TO MR LUNN.—There is to be a three-cornered fight at the next Parliamentary election in Wakefield. At a meeting of the Wakefield Labour party on Monday night the names of candidates submitted by the local Trades Union branches were voted upon, and Mr W. Lunn, of Rothwell, a member of the Yorkshire Miners' Association, was asked to stand as Labour candidate at the next election. Mr Lunn is an active member of the Rothwell Urban Council, and he was the Labour candidate in the Holmfirth Division at the last election.

PATENT LAW, compiled by John E. Walsh, Chartered Patent Agent, of 25, Royal Exchange, Boar Lane, Leeds, and at Crossley Street, Halifax.—Applications—William J. Baynes, Harrogate, improvements in spring carriages; Edward Court, Wakefield, improvements in postal letter boxes, and Herbert Akroyd, Sowerby Bridge, opening envelopes. Application completed—Joseph Rafferty, Doncaster, communication and emergency escape apparatus on railway trains.

ANNIVERSARY.—Special services to commemorate the thirtieth anniversary were held in the Primitive Methodist Chapel on Sunday. Sermons were preached in the morning and evening by the Rev. A. Naylor, who was brought up as a member of the Rothwell Sunday School. In the afternoon the choir rendered the service of song "The best of life" before a large congregation. Mr J. C. Harrison presided at the organ, and the connected readings were given by Miss Jopling. The choir acquitted themselves well, and solos were rendered by Mr Jesse Kilburn and Mr George Brown. On Tuesday night a public meeting was held in the chapel, and Mr H. J. Martin presided. In his address he spoke of parental control of children, and contrasted the present opportunities of to-day with those of earlier days. Addresses were given by the Rev. A. Naylor and the Rev. W. G. Sofley (resident minister). The annual report, which was presented by the Rev. W. G. Sofley, showed that during the year the existing debt on the chapel had been reduced by £53. The tea which preceded the meeting was well attended, and the officials are to be congratulated upon the fact that the effort has proved a success from all standpoints.

CHURCH BELLS.—On Saturday evening the bells of the church rang out merrily at intervals for over two hours. It is about two years since the bells were last heard, but during the last few months they have been both tuned and turned. The ringers of Saturday were, with the exception of one, the party who acted in that capacity two years ago. On Sunday the bells were rung for the morning and evening services.

WHIST DRIVE AND DANCE.—A very successful whist drive and dance were held in the Carlton Lane Schools on Saturday night, in connection with the Rothwell section of the St. John Ambulance Association. Over one hundred sat down to whist, and the winners were:—Ladies—1 Miss Goodall, 2 Mrs Barnes. Gents.—1 Mr L. Stringer, 2 Mr Barnes. The prizes were presented by Mr J. W. Ridyard, commandant of the Rothwell section. Mr B. Cromack acted as M.C. for whist, and Mr N. Elliot for the dancing, which was merrily engaged in to music supplied by Miss Annie Blackburn.

ROTHWELL RAILWAY.—Presiding at the general meeting of the East and West Yorkshire Union Railway Company, held at the Hotel Metropole, Leeds, on Thursday afternoon, Mr Zech. Yewdall (Chairman) said the result of the year's working was disappointing owing to the greatly diminished output of the pits served by the company's lines. But the traffic they had received would have paid better had the company received its equitable share of through rates. The total receipts, whereas in the case of the Great Northern and the Midland Companies they amounted to only 2.81 and 3.40 respectively. He had made comparisons with a dozen other companies, and their little company had the unfortunate distinction of paying a long way the heaviest percentage. They were hoping to effect some reduction in the future.

ALLERTON BYWATER

Sir Joseph Compton-Rickett, M.P., has left 100, Lancaster Gate, London, and taken Wingfield, Bournemouth.

At Allerton Bywater Wesleyan Church £1 4s. was collected for Leeds medical charities as compared with £1 4s. 0d. last year.

BOWERS ALLERTON

SALE OF WORK AND SOCIAL.—At a sale of work held in the Day School on Tuesday afternoon the stalls were well-supplied with a variety of useful articles. The following ladies presided at the stalls:—Mrs Lowther, Mrs Milnes, Mrs Firth, Mrs Cooper, Mrs Owbridge, Mrs Maunders, Mrs Milner, and Mrs Hollyhead. The proceeds from the sale were opened by the singing of a very good action song, which was highly appreciated. A social was attended by a large number in the evening, and it was thought that Mr Powell, Mr Nowell was M.C. and Mr A. Dyer officiated at the piano. The proceeds were for the Day School Fund.

"YE OLDE VILLAGE WEDDING."—In their effort to raise the necessary funds for the building of a new church the workers of the Mission Hall have again created a friendly rivalry between the ladies and gentlemen. The ladies, who are having the first turn, gave the result of weeks of their unique organising ability and strenuous work on Monday evening, the older ladies providing a substantial tea, to which upwards of 200 sat down, while the younger ladies provided a concert. Almost 300 adults crowded themselves into the Mission Hall, and, judging by their favourable comments, to improve upon the ladies' efforts one men have a more difficult task before them than ever they have attempted. The concert consisted of a very good imitation of an "Old time village wedding, performed by 43 members of the Ladies' Bible Class. The ladies representing the necessary men personalities of the wedding appeared very smart, being faultlessly dressed in tall hats, lined and had white waistcoats, gold chains, etc., and had developed a remarkable masculine appearance and manner. Judging by the gorgeous display by the lady members of the party of large flowery straw bonnets, crinolines, highly coloured shawls, with a large amount of beads, lace and other trimming, it is natural to surmise that the old ladies of the district have calmly allowed their boxes of ancient treasured garments to be freely ransacked. The bride (Mrs T. W. Longbottom) was dressed in white muslin profusely trimmed with coloured flowers and lace, while Miss B. Robinson, as "bridegroom," performed her part very creditably. The portly form of Miss Parker, with her three-cornered soft felt hat and large lace collar, made an admirable "squire," and the vicar very properly appointed chairman of the party, an office which she filled with much dignity. Miss M. Penn, in the role of best "man," exhibited a cheerful gentlemanly manner and proposed a toast to the bridesmaids in great style. Miss Fawcett, in her surplice, made an excellent "parson." The part of "Sally the housemaid" was taken by Miss Blackburn, whose excessive curtsying, love-making to Miss B. Milnes (the robust policeman), and general wittiness created much laughter. A great deal of merriment was caused by Mrs Kelly, Mary, Emma, Rachael, and Nancy, who were gossipers, each dressed in excessively trimmed dresses and bonnets. The glees, "Which is the properest bonnets. The glees, "Which is the properest day to Wed" and "The Shamrock, Thistle, and the Rose" were very well sung by the party. The song "Supposing," by Susan, was well received. Then gossiper, Mary, gave the recitation "In the usual way," and the Squire and Susan made the usual way," and the Squire and Susan made a great impression by their singing of "The Gipsy Countese." Emma, the gossiper, sang "To-morrow will do," and Nancy contributed "The rustic bridge." The bridegroom and Mrs Kelly delighted the audience by singing "Too-ra-loo-a-loo," and Miss Nora Meason, the bride's grandmother, sang "The dear home songs."

CARLTON

BAZAAR.—A bazaar in aid of the building fund of the Society's Hall was held in the Carlton Temperance Hall on Saturday and Monday. The Temperance Hall on Saturday was performed opening ceremony on Saturday was performed by Mr R. A. Murtland (Carlton Hall). Mr J. Keighley presided over the proceedings, and a vote of thanks to the opener was heartily carried on the proposition of Mr Walter Speake, seconded by Mr Richard Ellis. On Monday the bazaar was re-opened by Mrs Simon Priestley, of Carlton. Mr J. Keighley again presided, and the vote of thanks to Mrs Priestley was moved by Mr A Young, and seconded by Mr J Walker. The stall-holders were as follows:—Fancy stall—Mrs J. Dodson, Mrs R. Ellis, Mrs C. Thompson, and Mrs. H. Speake. Drapery stall—Mrs A. Newton, Mrs W. Brook, Mrs W. Speake, and Mrs J. Illingsworth. Refreshment stall—Mrs J. Field, Mrs J. Ward, Mrs A. Wright, Mrs A. Thackrah, Miss A. Ward, and Miss J. Beeton. Toy stall—Messrs M. Swift and J. Silmond. Fishing Pond—Messrs G. Turner and A. Brown. House—Miss Thompson, Miss W. Brook, and Mr G. W. Ellis. Shooting Gallery—Messrs J. W. Speight and A. Ward. Doormen—Messrs J. Brown, W. Brown, J. Speake, H. Speake, and S. Pickersgill. Doormen for concert—Messrs J. W. Speight, J. Walker, and J. Dixon. The tea room was in charge of the following ladies—Mrs J. Brown, Mrs H. Speake, Mrs A. Thackrah, Mrs J. Field, Mrs R. Ellis, and Mrs Ward. Misses Beeton, Swift, Parkin, and Brown looked after the trays. Enjoyable concerts were given each evening, and after the programme of songs, etc., had been gone through on Monday a conjuring performance was given by Mr. Ward, of Outwood. The decorations in the building were carried out by Messrs. J. Walker, R. Ellis, and S. Speake.

CROSSGATES

Mr Alf Goodall, of Crossgates, has been reappointed hon. sec. of the West Riding Centre of the N.C.U.

In connection with Crossgates Literary Society on Monday evening Mr F. R. Carlton, of Crossgates, will deliver a lecture on "Charlotte Bronte." See advt.

On Tuesday evening at the Baptist Church Fellowship a paper on "Ratos, taxes, and labour as they affect the small trader" will be given by Mr W. Clayton, of Leeds. See advt.

LIBERALISM.—On Wednesday evening a well-attended meeting of the Crossgates League of Young Liberals was held at the residence of the President, Mr J. Batty, of Halton. Mr Arthur Bennett presided, and Mr Batty read a paper on "Armaments." An interesting discussion followed. A report of a social gathering at Crossgates on Friday night is given elsewhere.

MEDICAL CHARITIES.—At Crossgates Wesleyan Church the collection for the medical charities amounted to £4 2s. 3d. against £4 18s. 11d. last year, while at Crossgates Baptist Church the collection was £2 10s. 6d. At Manston Church the sum collected was £4 6s. 3d. against £2 8s. 7d., and the Sunday School infants sent 18s. 6d. Stanley Primitive Methodist Church sent 17s. against 12s. 6d. last year.

THE LATE MR J. E. WATKINS.—We regret to record the death of Mr J. E. Watkins, of Ash Villas, Stanks, one of the best-known residents of the district. Deceased, who died in a nursing home on Saturday at the age of 57 years, was a box-maker in Leeds, and he had made his home in the district for many years. He did not take any part in public life of the district, but he was interested in Guardians' work and stood as a candidate for Leeds Board for one of the city districts last election.

WHIST DRIVE.—On Monday evening a whist drive promoted by Court Crossgates of the I.O.F. was held in the Recreation Hall, and it was attended by 160 ladies and gentlemen. The M.C.'s were Bros. J. W. Powell and A. H. Whitfield. The prize-winners were:—Ladies—1 Mrs Jennings, 2 Mrs Cobb, 3 Mrs Burnley (after a tie with Mrs Sayes), 4 Mrs Sayes. Gentlemen—1 Bro. Peate, 2 Bro. Jubb, 3 Mr Viny, 4 Mr J. M. Wade. Four players had 172, and they had 10 cut for the prizes, Mr Wade having to cut with Bro. Withy five times for fourth place.

MUSICAL EVENING.—In connection with the Wesley Guild a concert was given in the Lecture Hall on Wednesday evening, and it was well-attended. The programme, which had been arranged by Mr J. H. Walker, M.C., was as follows:—Pianoforte solo, "Capricante," Miss Chadwick; song, "Because," Mr Norman Tennant; violin solo, "Finale in D" (Haydn), Mr Mitchell; recital, "Sary Emma's photo graph," Miss Green; clarionet solo, "Serenade beneath thy window," Mr F. Dickinson; song, "Somewhere a voice is calling," Miss Chadwick; song, "Minuetto" (Beethoven) and wick; violin solos, "Minuetto" (Beethoven) and "Gavotte" (first movement), Mr Mitchell; recital, "The bride's visit to the butcher," Miss Green; song, "My little grey house in the west," Mr Norman Tennant; song, "Daddy's sweetheart," Miss Chadwick; and clarionet solo, "Air Varie," Mr F. Dickinson.

BAPTIST CHURCH FELLOWSHIP.—At the weekly meeting of the Baptist Church Fellowship, held in the Café Chantant, Halton, on Tuesday evening there was a good attendance, and an interesting discussion took place on "Should a living wage be the first charge on a business?" Mr Greenwood presided. Mr Thomas Cox, of The Avenue, Halton, introduced the subject, and argued in favour of a living wage being a first charge. His suggestion was that wages should be fixed by Wages Board, on which employers and employees would be equally represented, and if they failed to agree the Board of Trade would step in and appoint an arbitrator, whose award would be binding on both parties. Failure to obey it would bring punishment—fine or imprisonment—on the offending party. In the discussion which followed Messrs A. Chadwick, T. K. Diggle, F. Hartop, MacFarlane, J. E. Walker, T. H. Whittaker, I. Webb, and others took part, and the principal question seemed to be the amount of the minimum wage, which Mr Cox was invited to suggest. Mr Cox said that it would be idle for him to do so, and while he mentioned 26s., the cost and conditions of living varied so much throughout the country that every case would have to be considered on its merits by the Wages Board. A vote of thanks was passed to Mr Cox at the close.

FARNHAM

At Garforth Wesleyan Church £1 14s. 7d. was collected for Leeds medical charities as against £1 9s. 0d. last year.

DANCE.—On Friday evening the members of the Garforth Tennis Club had a dance in the Conservative Club, and it was attended by between 40 and 50 ladies and gentlemen. A very enjoyable time was spent.

PRIZE DISTRIBUTION.—On Sunday afternoon a scholars' service was held in the United Methodist Free Church, and Mr J. Spurr, of Leeds, presided. Prizes were distributed to about fifty children by Mr Spurr, who gave a suitable address. Solos were sung by two scholars.

INSUFFICIENT NO EXCUSE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Robert Henry Long, watchmaker, of Garforth, was summoned for riding a motor-cycle with side car attached without a rear reflector. P.C. Hogg stated that about 10.20 p.m. on Friday night the defendant rode past on a motor-cycle. There was no rear light behind the side car. When stopped defendant admitted that he knew a rear light should be attached. Defendant now denied this latter statement, and said it was done in ignorance. The side car was new to him and had been borrowed for a week. In fining him 5s. and costs, the Chairman said ignorance was no excuse.

DISMISSED.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Richard Firth, a draper, of Leeds, was summoned for driving a motor-car without a rear red light attached. P.C. Bevoor stated that about 8 p.m. on February 1st he was on the Leeds and Selby road, near to Garforth Bridge, when the defendant passed him in a motor-car which had no red rear light. He stopped him and asked him if he knew he had no such light, and defendant replied that he had broken it in turning round at Kippax. Witness examined the lamp and found pieces of broken red glass in the lamp. Witness told him he would be reported. Mr Willey, who defended: I think you went so far as to say that he would hear no more about it?—Witness said he did not think so. There was a light at the rear of the car.—Mr Willey contended it was not a case of deliberately evading the law, and the case was dismissed.

NARROW ESCAPE.—A child had a narrow escape at Garforth Station on Friday afternoon. It is supposed that the little girl had been playing with whip and top on the platform, and that the top had gone on to the railway, whither the child went in search of it. The signal was off for an express from Leeds, and a platform man was startled by a child crying. Then he saw the little one trying calmly to climb on to the platform, and he at once went to its assistance and lifted it clear of danger. Half-a-minute afterwards the express passed through the station.

PICTURE HOUSE.—Excellent programmes have been highly appreciated by the numerous visitors to this comfortable little hall this week, the films displayed during the first half of the week being of exceptional interest. "The Black Ball," a three-reel picture, leads up to an exciting and tragic finish. "The Redemption of a Soul," is a somewhat pathetic story told in a beautiful colored picture, while the humorous element was supplied in three clever little pictures. For the current half of the week the features are "The Blind Sculptor," "The Gallop of Death," and "Mixed in the Lighter," subjects of different types but all high quality. The humorous items are especially clever. Next week's bill promises to be a first-class entertainment, the first half including "Re-incarnation of Karma," an Indian story of mystery and tragedy, "The Broken Oath," a thrilling domestic story, and other good subjects, whilst on the last half are two fine pictures "Power o' Conscience" and "Lieut. Daring in Room 41."

MR T. B. SMITH AND SUNDAY TRADING.—Mr T. B. Smith, of Garforth, Chairman of the Leeds and District Grocers' Association, presided at the opening ceremony of the Grocers' Exhibition in Leeds on Tuesday, and expressed gratitude to the Leeds Corporation for their arrangements for giving technical instruction to young men in the grocery trade. He also referred to Sunday trading, which, he said, was increasing not only in Leeds, but in all the cities of the country, and in many small towns and villages. Grocers, bakers, and confectioners felt this was a blot on the fair name of their trades; they were doing all they could to put down the abominable practice, and in these efforts they hoped they would have the sympathy and help of the Corporation. He did not think it was very extensive among provincial grocers, but it was done by small traders who might not be grocers in the true sense of the word, but who might perhaps be best described as shopkeepers. He was afraid the practice gave an opening for unfair and dishonest trading when inspectors were not on the alert. It might be that unless this Sunday trading was stopped the Corporation would have to appoint additional inspectors. Alderman C. H. Wilson declared the exhibition open. Alluding to Sunday trading, he said that while he had no sympathy with the practice, the difficulty was to a large extent one of law. It was unfortunate that the Christian Sunday and the Jewish Sabbath did not coincide, and until the law altered conditions were afraid there would always be a certain amount of Sunday trading. If there was any Sunday trading on the part of Christians the Corporation would keep an eye on it, and if the law was broken the offenders would suffer.

GREAT PRESTON

At Great Preston School last month the percentage of attendance was 88.55 against 68.85 for the previous year, and at Bowers Allerton School 93.82 against 87.69.

CONSERVATIVE SMOKING CONCERT.—Over 70 men spent a very enjoyable evening on Saturday in the New Inn on the invitation of the Garforth and District Conservative Unionist Association. Mr H. E. Lowe presided, and briefly introduced the singers, who had come from Leeds on the invitation of Mr L. R. Brunton. The first item was "Bobby Joe," "Oh can't your hear the steamer," and "Toddling home in the morning" were sung by Mr Rankin, who at the end of each song gave a clever exhibition of step-dancing. A number very tastefully rendered "All Nuts," "Songs in Ragtime," and "Ragtime Coon," while Mr R. Dickson, humorist, delighted the audience by singing "Save a little bit for me," "Dancing round Matilda," and "Ten little fingers." A duet, "In my harem," was given by Messrs Harker and Dickson, and Mr Brunton contributed "Oh what a day I'm having" and "I'm the doctor," while Mr W. Hunter sang "The Rose of Tralee." On the motion of Mr J. Watson, seconded by Mr J. W. Diggle, F. Hartop, G. Sweeny, S. Whitehead, and R. Wrigglesworth; tenors—Messrs P. C. Higgins, T. Hurdus, and W. Parkinson; alto—Mr J. J. Pringle; basses—Messrs J. Brown, E. Preston, E. Hallas, and R. V. Higgins; bones—Mr A. Maundrill; tambourine—Mr J. W. Morley. The latter two were especially good in their respective parts. The concert commenced with the chorus "De ole banjo." The other items were as follows:—Song, "Uncle Jube," Miss G. Storey; song, "Piccaninny mine, good night," Mr W. Parkinson; song, "Fie! Fie! Sombo" (a song dealing with local topics), Mr A. Sharpe; song, "De nervous nigger," Mr J. W. Morley; song, "Down by dat ribber," Mr A. Hollish; song, "De watermelon," Mr A. Maundrill; troupe songs, "Far away ober dere" and "Darkies aint yo' coming"; song, "De child's dream," Mr A. Palfreeman; song, "Molly O'Morgan," Mr A. Maundrill; song, "When de angels," Miss E. Jones; troupe song, "Nelly was a lady"; song, "Massa's wedding day," Mr J. J. Pringle; song, "Good Night," Mr Walker. Poole was the accompanist. Mr A. Sharp acted as interlocutor. Miss Robinson, who is a clever elocutionist, recited "The gift of Tiffereta," and "The Knight and the Lady." During the interval the vicar (the Rev. W. R. Capel-Cure) gave an address, in which he referred to the coming to the parish of the Rev. Ferred to the coming to the parish of the Rev. ferred to the coming to the parish of the Rev. as curate, whom he considered was a right choice. He also called attention to the Arenibishop's finance scheme, and thanked all the churchmen and others for their loyalty to him in his illness. A vote of thanks to the workers who had helped towards the success of the evening was proposed by the Rev. H. T. Patrick son, and was heartily carried.

SPORT.—On Saturday afternoon Roundhay hockey players were well beaten by Halifax by seven goals to nil. Roundhay lacrosse players overcame Heckmondwike Old Boys by eighteen goals to ten.

At St. Edmund's Church, Roundhay, the collection for Leeds medical charities was £12 3s. 1d. against £11 9s. 2d., and at Roundhay Congregational Church £11 9s. 1d. against £12 15s. 9d.

AMBULANCE BRIGADE.—The members of this brigade were the promoters of a very successful social, which was held in the Council School on Saturday evening. The mothers and wives of the members were asked as in previous years kindly rendered assistance by preparing food and refreshments at their homes, and these were served to the company by the members of the brigade. Upwards of 200 people were present, and they spent a very pleasant evening in dancing. The music was supplied by Mr W. Bellerby and Mr J. Prince. Mr C. Lowe was Mr H. Eastwood and Mr W. McKone. The proceeds were for the Brigade Fund.

PRIMITIVE METHODIST CHURCH.—At this church the choir anniversary was celebrated on Sunday, when Mr R. R. Thomas, of Leeds, was the preacher. In the afternoon the choir gave a creditable rendering of the service of song "Crossing the Bar," under the direction of Mr N. Wheatley. The narrative was read by Mr W. Cripwell, and Mr G. W. Firth played the organ accompaniments. The solo parts were sung by Mrs W. Firth (soprano) and Mr R. Firth. There were good congregations at the services. The annual public tea and social, which were held in the schoolroom on the Monday, also attracted a large number of members and friends. The usual games and amusements were engaged in, and a very pleasant time was spent. The proceeds are to be devoted to the Choir Fund.

A KIPPAX CASE.—In the Chancery Division on Wednesday, Mr Justice Warrington commenced the hearing of a special case, in which the plaintiffs were the Rev. E. Broughton Smith and the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and the defendants Arthur Francis Hastings Medhurst, and others. Mr Smith is the vicar of Kippax, and the defendants are persons now entitled to the Manor of Kippax. Mr H. Terrell, K.C., M.P., for the plaintiffs, said the special case was for the determination of the question whether on the true construction of an Enclosure Act of 1791, and an award made under it, the mines and minerals under the land which was awarded to the Vicar of the parish of Kippax, and the ecclesiastical commissioners, were vested in one Miles Atkinson and his successors, the vicars of the parish, whereas the defendants contended that they passed to one Granville Wm. Wheler Medhurst, his heirs and assigns, the lords for the time being of the Manor of Kippax. On Thursday his Lordship, in giving judgment, held that the minerals under the lands allotted to the Vicar, which were now glebe, passed to and were the property of the Vicar for the time being. His Lordship made a declaration to that effect, and ordered the defendants to pay the costs.

WOMEN'S SERVICE TEA AND ENTERTAINMENT.—In connection with the Parish Church on Tuesday evening a tea was provided in the Church School, about 180 attended. All the food had been supplied by the members. At the subsequent entertainment songs were given by Vincent Beeston, Elizabeth Adams, Jane Adams, and Mr E. Bickerdike, recitations by Edith Goodall and Hilda Prince, and a humorous sketch, "The Lester," was excellently given by Miss Sylvia Wright and Miss Alice Cawood. Miss Smith was an efficient accompanist. The Vicar gave a short address of welcome, and spoke of the usefulness of the fortnightly women's service in church. During the past 23 services held during the year, with an average attendance of 40, in spite of much unpropitious weather. He tendered his heartfelt thanks to all those who had helped in the success of the tea and entertainment. He urged them to become missionaries to their sisters, and so increase the work amongst the women of Kippax. The Vicar, by the aid of limelight lantern, showed a number of slides of Kippax and Kippax people as they appeared some twelve or fourteen years ago, causing much amusement. The entertainment closed with the game "The Family Coach." The women's fortnightly service was held in the church on Sunday afternoon, and the Vicar gave an address on "Retirement." There was a good attendance.

LEDSHAM

At Ledsham School last month there were 45 scholars on the register, and the average attendance was 42, giving a percentage of 93-33 against 81.48 for January last year.

OULTON

PARISH TEA.—The annual parish tea was held in the Harold Hall on Tuesday, when about 220 of the parishioners sat down to the tables, which were superintended by Miss Bell, who had the assistance of several ladies. Tea over, the tables were cleared away, and the room was prepared for the entertainment, which is always a feature of such gatherings. The programme was provided by the local minstrel troupe, and was thoroughly enjoyed. Those taking part were:—Treble—Misses E. Jones, J. Mitchell, A. Palfreeman, G. Storey, S. Whitehead, and M. Wrigglesworth; tenors—Messrs P. C. Higgins, T. Hurdus, and W. Parkinson; alto—Mr J. J. Pringle; basses—Messrs J. Brown, E. Preston, E. Hallas, and R. V. Higgins; bones—Mr A. Maundrill; tambourine—Mr J. W. Morley. The latter two were especially good in their respective parts. The concert commenced with the chorus "De ole banjo." The other items were as follows:—Song, "Uncle Jube," Miss G. Storey; song, "Piccaninny mine, good night," Mr W. Parkinson; song, "Fie! Fie! Sombo" (a song dealing with local topics), Mr A. Sharpe; song, "De nervous nigger," Mr J. W. Morley; song, "Down by dat ribber," Mr A. Hollish; song, "De watermelon," Mr A. Maundrill; troupe songs, "Far away ober dere" and "Darkies aint yo' coming"; song, "De child's dream," Mr A. Palfreeman; song, "Molly O'Morgan," Mr A. Maundrill; song, "When de angels," Miss E. Jones; troupe song, "Nelly was a lady"; song, "Massa's wedding day," Mr J. J. Pringle; song, "Good Night," Mr Walker. Poole was the accompanist. Mr A. Sharp acted as interlocutor. Miss Robinson, who is a clever elocutionist, recited "The gift of Tiffereta," and "The Knight and the Lady." During the interval the vicar (the Rev. W. R. Capel-Cure) gave an address, in which he referred to the coming to the parish of the Rev. ferred to the coming to the parish of the Rev. as curate, whom he considered was a right choice. He also called attention to the Arenibishop's finance scheme, and thanked all the churchmen and others for their loyalty to him in his illness. A vote of thanks to the workers who had helped towards the success of the evening was proposed by the Rev. H. T. Patrickson, and was heartily carried.

SPORT.—On Saturday afternoon Roundhay hockey players were well beaten by Halifax by seven goals to nil. Roundhay lacrosse players overcame Heckmondwike Old Boys by eighteen goals to ten.

At St. Edmund's Church, Roundhay, the collection for Leeds medical charities was £12 3s. 1d. against £11 9s. 2d., and at Roundhay Congregational Church £11 9s. 1d. against £12

ROBIN HOOD

P.S.A.—There was a good attendance at the P.S.A. meeting at the United Methodist Church on Sunday afternoon, when an interesting address was given by Mr W. H. Blackburn, on "Wakefield, or A peep into Wakefield Prison." Miss Keech, of Outwood, sang the solos "Rock of ages" and "A Farewell." Mr J. Keighley presided.

MOTOR ACCIDENT.—During the early hours of Wednesday morning a motor-car driven by Mr Harris, of Wakefield, was travelling from Leeds to Wakefield, when it collided with a tram standard at Robin Hood. So severe was the impact that the car was wrecked and the driver and three other occupants were badly shaken.

STOURTON

BILLIARDS.—In the Non-Political Clubs' League, Stourton scored an easy victory over Highbury, the result being 1,092—930. The Stourton players were represented by Mr J. F. Smith, Mr H. Coggill, and Mr J. Horsfield made respective breaks of 43, 31, and 30.

CHOIR ANNIVERSARY.—On Sunday the choir of the Primitive Methodist Church held their anniversary. In the afternoon a cantata was given by the Hunslet (Wilson Street) Free Church choir. There was a good congregation, presided over by Mr J. Wilkinson. At the evening service the Stourton choir gave the service of song "An old man's comfort," and solos were sung by Miss Bosomworth, Mrs Wheeler, Mrs Bryson (Rothwell), and Mr Crossley. The connective readings were given by Mr H. Collinson. Mr Metcalf conducted, and Mr Waterton was the organist.

SCHOLES

The collection at Scholes Church for Leeds medical charities realized 14s. 3d. compared with £1 14s. 7d. last year. At Scholes Wesleyan Church the collection was £1 11s. 7d. against £1 14s. 7d.

SEACROFT

At Seacroft the collection for Leeds medical charities realized £4 11s. 6d. as against £4 12s. 4d. last year.

SHADWELL

On Saturday afternoon Shadwell boys, playing in the Schools Football League, were defeated by Cowper Street Boys by a goal to nil.

MEDICAL CHARITIES.—The church collections at Shadwell for the medical charities have gone down. At St. Paul's Church the amount received was £2 0s. 9d. against £3 14s. 7d., and at the Wesleyan Church 15s. against £1 7s.

SWILLINGTON

At Swillington Church the collection for Leeds medical charities realized £3 0s. 7d., compared with £5 9s. 3d. last year.

PRIMROSE LEAGUE AT SWILLINGTON.—On Monday night a tree concert, under the auspices of the Warren House Habitation of the Primrose League, was given in the Swillington School before a crowded audience. Mr H. G. Young, Hollinthorpe Farm, presided. The Garforth Glee Party, under the leadership of Mr. W. Bumley, gave delightful renderings of "Here's life and health to England's King," "Robin Adair," "As the moments roll," etc. Messrs Nobis and Pool, Swillington, sang "Watchman, what of the night?" in capital style, and the songs of the following ladies and gentlemen were highly appreciated:—Miss Harrison, Halton; Miss Ellis, Swillington; Messrs. Braham and Wallis, Garforth, and Shipton. By refusing to give to the electorate their undoubted right "to vote on Home Rule, any conflict with the people of Ulster, who were only asking to be allowed to remain peaceable citizens under the British flag, would rest entirely upon the shoulders of the Liberal Government. One of the first duties of the Unionist Party when returned to power, ought to be to amend the Insurance Act that it would cease to cripple friendly societies and give fairer treatment to agricultural labourers." A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Lieut. Boughey, the performers, and Mrs Hutton, the accompanist. The singing of the National Anthem concluded the proceedings.

WOODLESFORD

On Saturday afternoon Woodlesford All Saints, playing in the Church Football League, defeated Emmanuel Church by four goals to nil.

CONCERT.—The annual concert of the Woodlesford Wesleyan Sunday School was held on Saturday evening in the Council Schools. "The Hollings Quartette Party," of Middleton, were responsible for the programme, and a very enjoyable time was spent. The party consisted of Miss H. Hollings (soprano), Miss E. Hollings (contralto and elocutionist), Mr T. Hollings (tenor and violinist), and Mr T. Robinson (bass). The accompanists were Miss E. Hollings and Mr H. Lumb. The following quartettes were rendered in a very effective manner:—"Sweet is the evening hour," "Softly sleeps the moon," "Sleep, baby, sleep," and "Good Evening." The encore being "Bingo," Miss E. Hollings and Mr T. Hollings rendered the trio "Memory," which was also much appreciated.

WHITKIRK

The collection for Leeds medical charities at Whitkirk Church realized £7 8s 2d as against £7 6s 9d. last year. At Colton Wesleyan Chapel the collection was £1 5s. against 17s. 9d.

HOCKEY.—On Saturday afternoon Whitkirk hockey players had an engagement with Ripon's second eleven cancelled, managed to arrange a game with the 5th Battery Royal Field Artillery, located at the Barracks, Leeds, and resulted, for although Whitkirk won by eleven goals to three, the soldiers were triers to the finish. Whitkirk's second goal made their hundredth this season, a feat never before accomplished in the history of the club.

HON. E. L. WOOD'S VIEWS.—The Hon. E. L. Wood, M.P., in reply to the resolution passed by the Ripon Agricultural Association last Thursday on the subject of foot-and-mouth disease in Ireland, and the suggested joint control by the English Board of Agriculture, writes to Mr B. North, secretary of the association, under date February 23rd:—"I entirely agree with the views expressed in the resolution, and, indeed, when the Home Rule Bill was under discussion, I, amongst others, endeavoured to press the same upon the Government, but without success."

BARKSTON ASH AMATEUR BOWLING ASSOCIATION.

The annual general meeting of the Barkston Ash Amateur Bowling Association was held on Tuesday night at Crossgates.

The treasurer's statement showed a slight loss on the year's working, accounted for by the falling off of entries in the Individual Merit competition.

The Halton Travellers' Club was admitted to membership, making the number of clubs affiliated nine.

The Individual Merit Competition was fixed for Saturday, July 4th, divided into two sections, to be played on the Tadcaster and Garforth Working Men's Club's greens, the finals to be played on the following Monday evening on the Garforth (Grascigne Arms) Green.

Inter-Association matches were arranged with the Wakefield and District and Airedale Associations, whilst the inability of the Leeds and District Association to satisfactorily arrange dates was regretted.

Mr F. Hutchinson (Thorner) was re-elected President; and Mr Walter Green (Halton) was elected secretary in place of Mr Wilcock, who resigned.

In appreciation of the work done for the Association from its inception, Mr Wilcock was elected a life member of the Association.

Mr J. Conner (Crossgates), Mr F. Hutchinson (President), and Mr A. Morris (Halton) were thanked for gifts of medals to be allocated as prizes.

South Milford Wesleyan Church sent £2 6s. to Leeds medical charities as compared with £1 1s. 6d. last year.

Mr J. E. Cawthorn, of Sherburn, has been re-elected a vice-president of the West Riding Centre Council of the National Cyclists' Union.

RETIRES.—Mr Colley, of Shipton, retires from the West Riding Constabulary on March 31st, after 26 years' service. He joined the force in 1888, and has served at Wadworth (Doncaster), Cleckheaton, Ripley, Castleford, Pontefract, Goole, coming to the last-named place on his promotion to the rank of inspector. Before going to Skipton four years ago he was stationed at Wetherby.

WETHERBY GOLF CLUB.—The annual general meeting of the Wetherby Golf Club was held on Saturday, Dr. Hargreaves being voted to the chair. The accounts showed a reduction of the bank balance and a substantial increase in visitors' fees. The committee had also been enabled to reduce the amount owing to creditors. Since the last general meeting seven new greens had been made, and the change of five holes to the north side of the railway had given universal satisfaction. Lord Leconfield as patron, and Mr T. G. Myddelton as president, were re-elected Dr. Hargreaves was appointed captain for the ensuing year, and other officers were re-elected.

SELBY CONSERVATIVE WHIST DRIVE.—The weekly whist drive, held at the Conservative Rooms on Monday evening, was a great success. Mr R. Lodge officiated as M.C. The following were the prize-winners for the month:—Ladies—1, Mrs Wetherell, 665; 2, Mrs R. Lodge, 659; 3, Miss Riley, 652; sealed, Miss Collinson, 628; consolation, Mrs Perkins, 583. Gentlemen—1, Mr G. Brown, 662; 2, Mr Sanderson, 656; 3, Mr A. Woodliffe, 621; sealed, Mr F. Skinner, 622; consolation, Mr E. Connell, 579. Prize-winners for the week:—Ladies—1, Mrs Wetherell; 2, Mrs Kilburn; sealed, Mrs O'Neill; consolation, Miss Kay. Gentlemen—1, Mr W. Field; 2, Mr J. Sanderson; sealed, Mr H. Hill; consolation, Mr A. Chapman. Light refreshments were handed round during the interval.

SOCIETY AT SELBY.—Mr F. O. Stanford, A.M.I.C.E., Inspector of the Local Government Board, held an inquiry at Selby Town Hall on Wednesday, with reference to the application of the Selby Urban Council to borrow £370 for the erection of a workman's cottage at the Selby waterworks at Brayton. Councillor T. S. Ullathorne (Chairman of the Urban Council) and Councillor Wood (Chairman of the Waterworks Committee) were present at the inquiry. The Urban Council's new waterworks at Brayton, in the Selby rural district, were opened in 1906, and they propose to preserve known as Brayton Barf, adjacent to the works, was recently purchased by the Urban Council from Lord Londesborough, and the only existing rights they had on it were the Brambam Moor Hunt Committee. Mr J. H. Bartoft (Clerk to the Urban Council) stated that the rates were 2s. 8d. district rate, and 9s. 3d. poor rate, total rate 7s. 2d., compared with 7s. 8d. the previous year. The outstanding loans under the Sanitary Acts totalled £11,000, and, under the Waterworks Act, £29,338. The loans for gas, which were entirely paid out of the gas works revenue, were less than £10,000. The estimated population of the urban district is 10,000. A loan of £630 had been sanctioned for the purchase of Brayton Barff, an area of 75 acres. The repayment period asked for for the present loan was 30 years. The inspector was informed that in Selby the Council are building 104 workmen's dwellings. The Selby waterworks, besides giving a supply to Selby, serve also four neighbouring villages, and it is proposed to give a supply to Barlby, in the East Riding. The inspector paid a visit to view the site.

BARKSTON ASH CONSERVATISM

HAREWOOD DISTRICT—MR LANE FOX AND AN ELECTION.

SPEECHES BY VISCOUNT LASCELLES AND MR BROOKSBANK.

The annual dinner of the Harewood Polling District Conservative and Unionist Association was held on Saturday evening at the Harewood Arms. The chair was taken by Viscount Lascelles, and others present were Mr E. C. Brooksbank (Chairman of the Barkston Ash Conservative Association), Mr J. W. Morkill, Mr Digby Lawson, the Rev. M. G. Lascelles, Mr C. Sheriston (Chairman of the Harewood Conservative Association), Mr John Thompson (Chairman of the East Keswick Conservative Association), Mr J. Parker Norfolk, etc.

Mr G. R. Lane Fox, M.P., in a letter apologising for his inability to be present, said "The chances of an early election are undoubtedly great, from what has happened since Parliament met. The Government have realised the impossibility of forcing their Home Rule Bill through without the sanction of the electors behind them, and they must now either prefoundly alter or drop the Bill or appeal to the country, and the results of the by-elections leave little doubt what the outcome would be. I hope the electors of Harewood will not allow their attention to be diverted from what is happening by vague schemes of Liberal land reform, but will be ready when the election is sprung upon them to give their opinion on all the Government have done since they came into office eight years ago."

Viscount Lascelles, in the course of a speech on the Home Rule question, remarked that a great deal had been heard about the safeguards in the Home Rule Bill, but what were those safeguards? They consisted of the power of veto which the Imperial Government would possess over Mr Redmond's Government in Ireland. Mr Harcourt—and he thought they were entitled to convict the Government out of their own mouths—Mr Harcourt had said that it was perfectly impossible to exercise that veto as soon as there was representative Government in the country which one wished to exercise it. The power of veto was, therefore, a dead letter, and was not worth the paper it was written on. Could they imagine to themselves a position in Ireland such as had occurred in South Africa, for instance, a strike of great magnitude in Belfast? Mr Redmond, governing Ireland from Dublin, and possessing very little sympathy for the people of Belfast, could exercise the same powers that General Botha had exercised in South Africa, and England would be powerless. It was not right that any portion of Ireland should be placed in the hands of a man such as Mr Redmond was. (Hear, hear). The immediate crisis before the country was the fact that the Government had at last realised that they could not force their Home Rule Bill into law in its present form, but at the present moment the House of Commons was powerless to amend the Bill. The amendments must come from the House of Lords, and it was interesting to note the position of the Upper Chamber. One course open to them was to propose an amendment excluding Ulster, thereby handing the South and West of Ireland over, not to people who sympathised with those provinces, but to the secret societies behind Mr Redmond, those secret societies which had controlled the Irish section in Parliament for many years. The other alternative was that the Government would say that if the House of Lords refused to accept their amendments the Bill would go through as it stood. On the one hand there would be civil war in the North of Ireland; and on the other hand the people of the South and West of Ireland would be handed over to men who had never shown signs of tenderness in their lives. Having put that position to the House of Lords, what would be the next move of the Government? Whatever they did the House of Lords would be told that they were responsible for the situation, and the consequences all over Great Britain would be flooded with orators telling the electors that the House of Lords was responsible for the whole of the trouble, which was in reality created by nothing but the miserable of the Government that was now in office. (Hear, hear).

Mr J. W. Morkill, who proposed "Success to Barkston Ash Conservative Association," expressed his disgust and alarm at the aims and attitude of the present Government. After pandering to every section of the community which they thought had a few votes to sell, they were now playing another card. They knew perfectly well that one great stronghold of the Tory party was connected with the land, and they were going to make a great bid for the land vote. There was also the diabolical way in which Mr Lloyd George had made it his business to try and set class against class, and it behoved all good citizens to lose no opportunity of exposing the inwardness of his methods and the true meaning of his tactics.

Mr E. C. Brooksbank, who responded, pointed out that when the Parliament Act was passed Mr Asquith said that no controversial measure the House of Lords disagreed with could become law for two years after it had passed the House of Commons. That was to enable the country to voice its feelings. What was the position to-day? The Home Rule Bill had been before the country nearly two years, and there were 100,000 men drilled and armed in Ulster ready to fight and give their lives rather than that the Bill should become law. That was the answer to Mr Asquith. The position of the Church in Wales was rather overshadowed at present by the Irish question, but in that remarkable petition signed by 15,000 Welsh Nonconformists Mr Asquith had had his answer on that point also. (Hear, hear). He asked the Nonconformists of the country to come forward and help a sister Church in its need, so that the religious life of the people should not be damaged by the disestablishment law of the Welsh Church Bill.

Mr Digby Lawson proposed the toast of "The Navy and Army." Quartermaster-Sergt. Wray responding, and a vote of thanks to the speakers was accorded on the proposition of the Rev. M. G. Lascelles.

BARKSTON ASH AND THE NATIONAL SERVICE LEAGUE.

SELBY'S RESOLUTION.

In furtherance of the objects of the National Service League a meeting was held on Monday night at the Selby Olympia Institute. Dr. G. D Todd presided, and an address was delivered by Major Stansfield, York. A good number of the public attended, notwithstanding an inclement night. The company included members of the local Territorial Company, and also many employees at the Olympia Mills, who are ex-soldiers.

Dr. Todd thought that the failure of the Territorial scheme to secure adequate numbers was in a great measure due to the fact that the Territorials were looked upon more or less as a sham and not a reality. The force was not armed as it ought to be, and there was a shortage of horses. Without horses an army might be likened to a man without legs. He urged that the Territorials ought to be supplied with good guns, and armed with the latest rifle. (Applause).

Major Stansfeld delivered an address explaining the objects and proposals of the League, showing that the object in the main was to form a large body of pubiot opinion in this country which would result in an Act of Parliament being passed to make military training for home defence in the Territorial Army compulsory for every able-bodied young man in this country, without distinction of class or wealth. It was proposed that promotion should be by personal merit alone.

Replying to a question, Major Stansfeld said that the period of four to six months' training could be so arranged as not to interfere with work or business. The League did not advocate compulsory service on Continental lines, such as conscription in barracks or camp.

On the motion of Lieut. J. W. Oldfield, seconded by the Rev. E. C. Illingworth, a resolution was unanimously adopted in favour of the proposals of the League.

The meeting was followed by an instructive lantern lecture on the Balkan War.

SUBSCRIPTION BALL AT SELBY.

A subscription ball was held in the Assembly Rooms, Selby, on Friday night, when there was a large and fashionable company assembled from various parts of the county. Some very beautiful dresses were in evidence, there being a tasteful blending of colours in many instances. The ball-room and supper-room were effectively decorated. The arrangements were in the hands of Mr C. R. Jones, who was highly complimented and thanked for the able manner in which he has pioneered these dances for the past two winters. One of the most pleasing features of the evening was when Mrs L. W. V. Buscke, on behalf of the lady members, presented to Mrs Jones a handsome silver salver and a silver bon-bon dish.

The cotillion, which lasted upwards of an hour, was a delightful spectacle, and proved a great success, under the direction of Mr L. W. V. Buscke, who also generously presented favours to everyone present. Dancing commenced at 8.30, and was kept up with spirit until the early hours of Saturday morning. The ball stewards were:—Mr C. R. Jones, Mr F. Sanderson, Mr Bruce Gray, Mr West-Symes, and Mr W. T. Everatt.

Amongst those who accepted invitations were: Mr H. and Miss Anson, Mr A. and Mr C. E. Anson (Hambleton), Mr Atlay, Mr W. and Miss Armstrong (Brayton Manor), Miss Armstrong (Botany Bay), Rev. W. C. and Mrs Carter (Rythe Rectory), Mr and Mrs S. Cooke (Thorpe-Hall), Mr and Mrs P. Cheesman, Mr F. Cheesman, Miss Cheesman, Rev. W. B. Cranleshaw, Mr Alec. Mr H., and Miss Foston (Road Whaton), Mr H. Fell, Mr W. D. Foster, Mr Frank Foster, Mr and Mrs J. D. Finchett, Mrs F. Liversidge (Raskell), Mr and Mrs Bruce Gray, Mr Gardiner-Struthers, Miss Gilbertson, Mr and Mrs Mark Scott, Mr and Mrs E. Sanderson, Mr J. Sampson, Miss F. and Miss N. Solloway, Mrs and Miss Wormald (Cawood Castle), Mr R. West-Symes, Mrs Whitfield, Mr T. Wainwright, Mr C. Woods, Miss Waterhouse (Ulleskelf), Mrs Wetherell, Mr E. A. White, Mr C. Welburn (Huddleston Hall).

BOXING.—In Leeds on Monday night Young Newton, Halton, and Young McGrath, Leeds, were scheduled for ten rounds. McGrath was the better boxer, but Newton was stronger and heavier, and forcing the work repeatedly had his opponent in difficulties, and McGrath retired in the fifth round.

A CHURCH BAZAAR AT GARFORTH

MR AND MRS LANE FOX PRESENT.

In connection with Garforth United Methodist Church a three days' bazaar was opened in the schoolroom on Thursday afternoon. The ceremony was described as a "unique thanksgiving opening" by the converts in the recent mission, and considerable interest was evinced in it. Mr Kilburn presided, in the absence of Mr Smales, of Kippax, who was prevented by illness from fulfilling the engagement. He said he hoped the bazaar would be a success both spiritually and financially.

The Rev. Mr Needham said he was there as a representative character to declare the bazaar open for the new converts. He had been in all sorts of positions, but had never opened a bazaar before; in fact, he had never been asked, simply because his pocket was not long enough. He was delighted with the young people who were on the platform with him, and also in the open declaration of their faith. The success of a bazaar was not always in the getting of money, but in bringing the young people to the knowledge of Christ. He had very great pleasure on behalf of the new converts in declaring the bazaar open.

A vote of thanks was proposed to the Chairman by Mr Young, and seconded by Mr Bedford, while a vote of thanks to Mr Needham was proposed by Mr Simpson, seconded by Mr Sugden, and cordially passed.

The stall-holders were as follows:—Refreshment Stall—Mrs Chadwick, Mrs Helsby, Mrs T. H. Rhodes, and Mrs Sugden. Ladies' Drapery Stall (1)—Mrs Browning, Mrs Herbert Browning, and Mrs Joseph Herrington. Ladies' Drapery Stall (2)—Mrs Ballance and Mrs Thompson. Gentlemen's Stall—Mr W. H. Simpson, Mr W. Thompson, and Mr Joseph Herrington. Sunday School Stall—Misses Thompson. Flower Stall—Misses C. Young, C. Westerman, Goodall, Ballance, E. Thompson, E. Riley, and Wilson. Toy Stall—Messrs P. Gent, W. Ballance, and T. Thompson. Entertainments—Messrs Kilburn, J. Kilburn, A. Simpson, and W. Kilburn. Doorkeepers—Messrs Bedford, Holmes, Chadwick, and Jno. Herrington. The duties of secretary were carried out by Mr W. H. Sugden.

Much amusement was created by a nail driving competition for ladies and hat trimming and shuttle and battledore competitions for gentlemen, as well as weight guessing of cakes.

On Saturday afternoon the opening ceremony was performed by Mr G. R. Lane Fox, M.P., and Councillor J. W. Dobson, of Garforth, who was introduced by the Rev. Mr Wakefield, presided.

The Chairman said that they should all try and make others happy. Charity did not always mean the giving of money; it also meant the giving of a helping hand or the speaking of a kind word.

Mr Lane Fox, who was accompanied by Mrs Lane Fox, said they both had great pleasure in being present, and he thought it was his duty to be there. In these days the Government provided nearly everything, but there was one thing they could not provide and that was individual usefulness. He hoped the bazaar would be a success.

The usual vote of thanks was passed to the Chairman and Mr Lane Fox.

On Monday the bazaar was re-opened by Mrs A. Longfellow, of Gledhow, and Sister Sykes, of Leeds, who was introduced by the Rev. W. H. Saturley, presided.

Sister Sykes said she was glad to come home again and see so many old faces, and she was pleased to hear of the success of the revival.

Mrs Longfellow said that whenever she met Sister Sykes she was always on an errand of mercy. She (Mrs Longfellow) was very pleased to be present; it was a very common-place expression, but it was just what she felt. It was a pleasure to be in a place so familiar, and it was a joy to be with them, and to help them even if it was only in a little way. She and Mr Longfellow wished them every success in the bazaar.

Mrs Kilburn proposed a vote of thanks to the ladies, and this was seconded by Mrs Thompson, and agreed to.

The bazaar realized a sum of £82.

WHY YOUR STOMACH HURTS

A DOCTOR'S COMMON-SENSE ADVICE.

Pain in the stomach, variously called indigestion, dyspepsia, flatulence, heartburn, stomach ache, etc., is usually attributed to some unnatural, abnormal, or diseased condition of the stomach itself. Nothing, however, could be further from the truth. Nineteen times out of twenty the stomach is absolutely healthy and normal, the pain and discomfort being entirely due to the acidity and fermentation of the food, which irritates and distends the stomach; although if this condition is allowed to run on, in time the constant irritation of the acid is likely to eat into the stomach walls and produce ulcers and sometimes cancer of the stomach. Medicine is useless in such a case. The acid and fermenting food must be removed by a stomach pump or an emetic, or you must neutralise the acid and stop the fermentation by taking half-a-teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia in a little water. This latter is by far the simpler and safer method. Nothing, however, could immediately neutralises the dangerous acid, and by correcting the food contents enables even a tired, weak stomach to digest almost any food without any difficulty. Physicians advise that bisurated magnesia should be kept in every home, and a little taken after each meal whenever the slightest tendency to food fermentation is shown. Be sure to obtain bisurated magnesia; as other forms of magnesia are valuable as tooth and mouth washes, but they do not give satisfactory results in stomach disorders.

ADEL LADY AND EDUCATION.—A successful conversazione in connection with the Women's Educational Guild was held on Friday evening at the Leeds Arts Club. During an interval in the proceedings an interesting address on "Women and Education" was given by Miss Isabella G. Ford, of Adel. She observed that the movement towards education among women commenced, roughly speaking, a hundred years years ago, but was not very evident. Happily this gulf is being bridged over, but only just within years later. During this comparatively short period, however, there had been, in the words of the late Mark Twain, "a most wonderful evolution." Formerly women were educated merely to be pleasant and agreeable to the opposite sex, not to be efficient human beings independently of men. Happily that state of things had passed away, and to-day women were regarded as human beings on an equality with men and possessing the same rights as men, because rights were founded on the fulfilment of duties, and few would now say that woman's duties were not as important as those of men. (Applause). Miss Ford was heartily thanked at the close of her address.

BRAMHAM MOOR HUNT.

EXCITING ESCAPADES.

The Bramham Moor Hunt met at Thorparch on Friday, and there was not a large field. Scent was never really good, but the pack were busy all day, and were seldom without a fox before them. Thorparch Whin was first drawn and held a fox. One was killed, and the other provided a slow hunt of an hour and 40 minutes. After running about Horn Bank, the fox crossed the Wetherby and Walton Road, and going through Barnett's Wood, crossed the railway. After running over the Wetherby Racecourse, he ran past Hall Orchards and over the York Road. Turning right-handed the pack crossed Sachmore Park, and again going over the York Road took their fox through Champagne Gorse and across to Hall Parks, going through that covert nearest Walton Village. Hounds hunted the fox down to Rudgate, and there swinging back to the left, ran through both the Hall Parks coverts, and he was slowly taken past Walton and with many checks worked over the railway at Spell Bank, to Thorparch Hall, where the fox got to ground, but being evicted was killed after a slow and twisting hunt. Hounds had a line from Wighill Ings, but no fox was seen to leave them. After crossing the Wigxill and Walton Road, the pack were stopped while heading for Wighill Park. As hounds were going down to draw Shire Oaks, a fox was seen in a Willow Tree near Brook Hall. Being dislodged, he ran up to Wighill Village, but doubling back he past Brook Hall, crossing the Wighill and Tadcaster Road, and was hunted over the Ings towards Thorparch. Bending to the right, he was taken over the Walton Road straight to the now demolished Walton Wood. Without entering it the fox turned to the right and pointed for Wighill Church, but swinging back was very slowly hunted, with Walton Wood on the right, across Rudgate, through Hall Parks, and was abandoned while heading for Champagne Gorse, after a dragging hunt of an hour. Walton Whin was blank. Another fox was found at Thorparch Whin, but scent, most indifferent all day, was now almost useless, and little or nothing more was done.

There were some exciting escapes from serious injury at Wighill by occupants of traps and lady cyclists on the road. Hounds had found their second fox in Wighill Ings, and horsmen were galloping down the road from Wighill Church into the village, which was filled with motor-cars and a traction engine. In the excitement a horse in a trap took fright at the traction engine and bolted. It collided with a buggy driven by Miss Smith, daughter of Mr Tom Smith, the auctioneer, and in which were also seated Mrs Busby, wife of the Vicar of Walton, Boston Spa, and another lady. This trap then collided with a trap driven by Mr Charles Farnell, Harewood village, when Farrelly was the result that the occupants of both vehicles were thrown into the road. Mr Smith's horse jumped clear of the trap, but Mr Farndale's horse fell. Several lady cyclists had narrow escapes, the runaway horse just missing them. Mrs Busby complained of slight injury, and the others who had come in the two traps were shaken.

HUNTSMAN HAS A FALL.

The Bramham Moor hounds met on Monday at Stainburn village. Drawing across the moors towards Little Almscliffe, hounds picked up a fox which was run sharply to Hawley Wood, and crossing the Washburn, was lost near Mick Gill. Just at the beginning of this hunt, Farrelly, the huntsman, had a fall on the moors, and it was some time before he could join the hounds. In the meantime, A. Hoare, the first whipper-in, had drawn Mick Gill and the Lake Plantation at Farnley, and had just found a fox which ran

OUR GARDENS.

A Weekly Article specially Written for

Amateur Gardeners, Allotment Holders, &c.

By ALBERT CLARKE, Birkenshaw.

THE FLOWER GARDEN.

Trees, shrubs, roses, climbers, and hardy plants generally may be planted this month providing the soil is in suitable condition. Naturally wet, heavy land may be in an unfit state for working upon, and in that case planting should be deferred until March.

The mild weather experienced during January and early February has caused roses to break into unnaturally early growth. We would warn readers against being tempted to prune the trees as present. To do this would result in the young buds lower down the stems to break into growth also, and if a late severe frost occurred this would prove disastrous.

Lawns are looking fresh and green, and should be rolled regularly to consolidate the turf. It is rather too early to commence mowing at present.

RASPBERRIES.

Under good cultivation there are few better paying crops than raspberries. The present is a good time to plant the canes, and they should be accommodated on a piece of ground that has been trenched and manured heavily some time previous to planting. Deep planting is a common error. The roots should be spread out evenly and at the same depth as they were before being lifted. No fruit should be expected the first year, in fact, it is advisable to cut last year's growth back to the ground level. This will cause the plants to grow stronger and thus form the foundation of a healthy plot. The rows may be five feet apart and the plants about three feet. Plant firmly and finish off with a mulch of half rotten manure. A few good varieties are Superlative, Hornet, and Balmforth's Seedling. Established rows should also be mulched, as this keeps the roots cool and moist in summer.

ONIONS.

Ailsa Craig, Cranston's Excelsior, and other large onions may now be sown in boxes. A temperature of about 60 degrees will cause the seed to germinate freely, and as soon as they are nicely through the soil, the boxes may be transferred to cold frames. It is advisable to sow the seed thinly and if more seedlings than are required appear, they should be thinned to the requisite number. This will be found to prove more satisfactory than pricking the seedlings into other boxes. We have often noticed that young onions are a long time recovering after once being disturbed. Onions "sets" are now largely used in preference to raising the young plants from seed. We have not tried this system but have heard it highly spoken of.

CUCUMBERS.

The first batch of plants should now be growing freely providing the necessary amount of heat is being provided. From about 70 to 75 degrees is about right at this time of the year, and a light position is essential. When the plants are about a foot high they may be planted on mounds of soil about 9 inches high and 15 inches across. Turfy loam, with a little sand and wood ashes added, will be quite rich enough for the plants at first. Roots soon make their appearance at the base of the mounds and it then becomes necessary to add a little fresh compost of a richer nature. Rotted manure, leaf mould in small quantities, and a reliable chemical manure may be added to the previous compost, and this topdressing should be repeated as often as the roots reach the sides of the mounds.

TOMATOES.

Early sown seedlings always show a tendency to make weak long-jointed growth. This, of course, is bound to weaken the constitution of the plants, and the crop suffers in consequence. To encourage the plants to make strong, firm growth, they should be grown as near the roof glass as possible, and great care should be exercised in giving water. Excessive watering at this time of the year will be found to cause the first two cells. Either the plants will die or they will get drawn and spindley. A warm, but buoyant atmosphere is good for them, but excessive atmospheric moisture will cause them to "bolt." More seed should be sown for successional crops. Really good varieties are Sunrise, Ailsa Craig, Moneymaker, Premier, Sceptre, and Sutton's Sunbeam. The latter is a free-seeding yellow variety.

SEEDLING PLANTS.

There is no more interesting way of raising young plants than the natural one, that is, from seed. Perusal of an up-to-date catalogue will discover hundreds of varieties suitable for all requirements. Flower garden, kitchen garden, hot or cool greenhouse may all be stocked with plants from seed. The present month, March, and April, are the three most important ones for seed sowing under glass. Heat and moisture must be sown at present unless a temperature ranging in the vicinity of 70 degrees can be maintained. Cooler house subjects may be sown in a temperature of 55 to 60, whilst hardy annuals may be sown where the thermometer registers 50 to 55.

ABUTILONS.

The abutilons are hard wooded perennials and are largely used for conservatory decoration. In sheltered gardens they are used during the summer months in sub-tropical bedding arrangements. Wellgrown specimens often reach a height of six feet, and bear a wealth of charming bell shaped flowers varying in colour from pure white to deep orange-scarlet. The leaves of many varieties are beautifully marbled with a deeper tint than the groundwork of the flower. The flowering period extends over six to nine months under glass, and the flowers prove useful for a considerable time when cut. Seed may be sown now in a warm house, and the seedlings should be grown in a temperature of 60 to 65 until they are a foot high. They may then be removed to a cool greenhouse and should be potted on as required. A rich compost should be used and firm potting is essential. If dwarf, bushy plants are wanted the tops should be pinched out when the plants are about nine inches high. They will then develop three or four side growths and these may be stopped again when about six inches long. Grow the plants in a light position from the first, and when they are strong enough to stand it syringe them twice a day.

ACHIMENES.

The achimenes are profuse blooming warm house plants, and are deserving of more general cultivation than they receive. They are closely allied to the popular gloxinia, but may be successfully grown in a rather lower temperature. The flowers vary considerably in size and colour. Many of them are of rich purple shades, and are exceptionally effective when grown in hanging baskets. Sow the seed now on fine loam and give a bare covering of fine sand. They will germinate rapidly if placed in a propagating frame having a bottom heat of about 70 to 75 degrees. The soil should be well soaked with tepid water before sowing the seed, and a covering of glass and paper should be given to prevent rapid evaporation. This is done to avoid the necessity of giving water before the seedlings appear. The seeds are very fine, and if it becomes necessary to give water before germination takes place many of them will get washed away. As soon as the seedlings appear the glass and paper should be gradually removed and the tiny plants must be carefully treated, or they will shrivel away and die. They must be protected from bright sun and from draughts. In the early stages of growth they may be planted about two inches apart in boxes filled with equal parts loam, peat, and leaf-mould, all of which should be passed through a fine riddle. Add sufficient sand to make the whole porous. When they are two inches high they may be potted singly into small pots, and their after treatment is simple. A temperature of 60 will grow them well, and they should be kept moist and free from insect pests. Pot on as required, and for the second and subsequent repottings a little rotten manure may be added and the compost may be used in a rougher state. After flowering the bulbs should be left and stored away for the winter. There are numerous named varieties which may be bought at about sixpence each. These are very fine and include scarlet, white, and bicoloured varieties.

GESNERAS.

The gesneras are somewhat similar in habit to the achimenes and may be treated in the same manner. The main difference is in the flower stems. These are produced in long sprays and are exceptionally beautiful. In the case of the achimenes the flowers are produced on single stems. The colours also vary, including yellow, salmon-pink, orange, crimson and rose-carmine.

CLERODENDRON FALLAX.

Clerodendron fallax is an imposing flowering stove plant easily grown from seed. The large, extremely brilliant heads of scarlet flowers are so striking as to make the popular salvias and pointsettias look foolish. The cultivation is very simple. Sow the seed now in a propagating frame and pot them singly into small pots as soon as the seedlings are large enough to handle. The warm moist atmosphere of a stove suits them to perfection, and by growing them on a shelf fairly near to the roof glass they may be kept comparatively dwarf. Pot on as the roots reach the pot sides and use a fairly rich compost. They may be flowered the first year in seven inch pots. The seed should be ripened in autumn.

NATURAL MANURES.

The best of natural manures for garden use is probably old cow-manure. It keeps its strength for years if stored under shelter, and its food elements become more and more available yearly. It also mixes with soil and leaf-mould to the best lasting action and plants seem to be able to use it readily.

Horse manure easily becomes over-heated and loses its strength, and it is too loose and dry for many purposes.

Sheep manure is excellent for the garden, and can be used either in solid or liquid form.

Pig manure is too rich and cold to use unless first composted with soil or some other suitable substances.

Manure intended for garden use should be well rotted by storing it to decay in piles three or more feet high. All decaying vegetables and refuse may also be composted with soil; and fertility can be added to the heap by throwing household slops over it. Practically anything that will decay will provide plant food, and can be added to the compost heap which should be turned often to thoroughly mix the components.

Zam-Buk

Cured Her ECZEMA.

"AFTER washing some new curtains, little pimples appeared on my arms," says Mrs. A. E. Bachrach, of 130a, St. Thomas' Road, Finsbury Park, London, N. "The skin then broke into nasty sores which covered my arms from wrists to elbows.

"The itching was so bad I couldn't sleep day or night. I tried doctor's and ordinary ointments, but they were all disappointing.

"A friend then advised Zam-Buk, so I bought a box from the chemist.

"Zam-Buk soothed the terrible irritation, and the sore places healed up with new skin. I am now quite cured, thanks entirely to this wonderful Zam-Buk."

SELBY

The Selby hotel boxes during the past year have raised a record sum of £14 on behalf of the Selby Cottage Hospital.

The Drax Charity, near Selby, had an adverse balance of £2,923 at the end of the year, and £137 has been paid for bankers' charges on overdrafts.

ROUNDHAY

"SUNDAY ENJOYMENT."—Mr Leslie Owen, speaking at a public meeting in Leeds on Friday, said something had been done in the way of increasing the facilities for enjoyment on Sunday, but demand would be forward for boating at Roundhay on Sunday. Personally he had come to the conclusion that for those who were members of public authorities it was going against the legislative grain to stand against facilities for recreation on Sundays. (Hear, hear). That was his own conclusion, but if they tried to realise the position of those who were working so hard in an industrial city like Leeds, it was impossible to resist the demand of the people for reasonable recreation on Sundays. It was therefore wise for them as municipal legislators to provide for that demand.

EVENING MEAL.

The evening meal should always be given at least an hour before sundown. I recommend the use of grain for this meal, which should be well scattered so as to give plenty of exercise to the birds before finally retiring. Please remember there is a great difference between retiring to roost and retiring. It is advisable to feed an hour before the former.

The grains generally employed in this country are wheat, barley, oats, and maize. Books have been written on the question as to which is best, but after long years of experiment I incline to using wheat as the staple food, varied occasionally by barley and oats, simply to stimulate the appetite, and in extra cold and inclement weather the substitution of maize.

This information may be gained theoretically by simply studying the analyses of the various grains; results also endorse the theory.

The principal constituents of food may for general purposes be divided into three parts—albuminoids, fats or oils, and carbohydrates. The two latter constituents are similar in effect, but are utilised by the bird's system in a different manner, their principal duties being heat-production, fat-forming, and mechanical work; but inasmuch as 1 unit of fat or oils is the equivalent of 2.29 of carbo-hydrates, in the following table of analysis I have combined them as heat and fat-formers, whilst albuminoids I have designated flesh and egg-formers.

	Flesh and Egg-producers	Heat and Fat-formers.
Wheat	13.0	69.8
Barley	10.0	72.3
Oats	12.0	69.4
Maize	10.0	73.0

Thus it is readily seen that wheat is the richest in egg-formers and practically as low as any in fat-formers, oats being a close second; but unless they are of excellent quality they should be sparingly fed, as otherwise they are liable to produce crop-bind. Barley and maize are equal in egg-forming material; both are more fat-forming than either wheat or oats, but maize is undoubtedly the worst offender in this respect.

Hence the original argument—wheat as the staple food, for variation the occasional use of barley and oats, and in very cold weather the substitution of maize on account of its richness in heat-producing material.

I have heard it remarked that oats are but little inferior in point of analysis to wheat, and even barley did not differ greatly, and as they were so much cheaper than wheat it was false economy to use the latter. Permit me to point out that the difference is nearly 8 per cent. in favour of wheat over oats, and over 20 per cent. in preference to barley as egg-formers, and, roughly, the economy is non-existent.

Because you are quoted a higher price per bushel or quarter for wheat than for oats or barley, it does not follow that it is costing you more per pen; it is the weight of the bushel of each of these grains varies. Wheat is sold at from 56lb. to 64lb. per bushel, oats fluctuate between 38lb. and 44lb., whilst barley is usually sold at 50lb. to 52lb., 60lb. to the bushel being the accepted standard for maize.

Regarding quantity, I must refer you to the remarks on that subject as applied to the morning meal. A rough guide is a handful per bird, back of the hand up for light breeds and palm of the hand upwards for heavy breeds (exceptions to the latter). Please

Rothwell Church Gathering.

ADDRESS BY THE VICAR.

MINERS AND CHURCH-GOING.

On Tuesday evening the annual parish tea for Rothwell was held in the Church Schools, and it was largely attended. The tray holders were Mrs Scurr, Mrs Stevenson, Mrs J. Dobson, Mrs Squire Dobson, Mrs Wilson, Mrs G. Armitage, and Miss A. Armitage. The tables had been prettily decorated with flowers, and the trays were Mrs Wilson, Mrs G. Armitage, Mrs H. Wormald, Mrs Stevenson, Mrs Thompson, Mrs Buck, Mrs K. Batty, Mrs J. Dobson, Mrs Hirst, Mrs Kilburn, Mrs Scurr, Miss Webster, Mrs Cocker, Mrs Richardson, and Mr Walter Wormald.

Following the tea a concert was given by the Priestly Players, and it was greatly enjoyed. The members of the troupe possess good voices, but the singing of Mr S. T. Tasker (bass) was especially pleasing. The following items were given:—"A madrigal," quartette; "A banjo tragedy," Mr J. W. Daft; "Plum-tones," Miss D. Smith (contralto); "All the girls are lovely," Mr W. Bennett; "A laughing chorus (concerted); "Bombardier," Mr S. Tasker; "Four adroitie men," Miss D. Wilson; "Hi-hi! Who's your lady friend," Mr J. W. Daft; "Floral dance," Mr S. Tasker; "I hear you calling me," Miss D. Smith; "My dusky maid," Mr W. Bennett; "Goodbye summer," Miss D. Wilson. Second part—"Muddled Riddles," Messrs Daft, Tasker, and Bennett; "Lazy old moon," Miss D. Smith; "Songs and sperns in ragtime," Mr W. Bennett; "So you want to be a soldier," Mr S. Tasker; "The beautiful sea" (concerted); "Singers and Talkers," Mr J. W. Daft; "Land of I dunno' where," Miss D. Wilson; "Water scenes" (mock ballet), Mr J. W. Daft; and "Barley Mow" (finale). Great credit is due to Mr J. Young for the admirable way he accompanied the songs on the piano.

During the interval the Vicar (the Rev. G. W. Bence), gave an address. He well remembered, he said, the day of the last parish tea. It was a day which, he thought, took the most unhappy in his life, for he was very far away from them and from his work, and he could not help thinking over and over again of what was going on at Rothwell. So it was with great pleasure, and with a great sense of thankfulness, that he stood amongst them once again. It was his custom on such occasions to say a few words about the important events both of the past year and of the future. One of the most remarkable things that had occurred, and one on which they had to congratulate themselves very much, was the phenomenal success which had attended the seaside bazaar. Over £250 of the proceeds of the bazaar had been devoted to the church day schools building fund, and he had been told by Mr Harrison, the collector, that if the amount of the voluntary rates was paid off they would be able to claim the large and generous offer of £70 from Major Galbraith and Mr Charles Smith jointly, and so the school would be out of debt. The schools were very important, and if it had not been for the extensive alteration they would never have had the room that night. He had been congratulated by high diocesan authorities upon the splendid way in which everyone had worked. Another important thing was the repairing of the bells. They were all delighted on Saturday to hear once again the bells ring out, and it was a great satisfaction in being called to church on Sunday morning by them. The repairing of the bells had meant a considerable sum to be raised in the parish, but the response had been generous, and they were clear of debt. Another matter of finance was the church expenses.

had been anxious because there were expenses on the working of the church, and that being the case, they had always had debt. The collections in the church had averaged very well on the whole, as he found out in going carefully through them and comparing them with former years. A large number of people were in the habit of attending the church with great regularity—three times a day. Such people subscribed through the collections in a very satisfactory manner towards the church expenses. However, there might be some who, if they considered the question of church expenses, such as heating, lighting, and salaries, might subscribe more liberally. He felt that very satisfactory work had been done in the parish during the past year, and good work had also been maintained in the Day and Sunday schools. He felt with satisfaction that there was a deepness and earnestness in the spiritual life of the place. They had during the last year lost Mr Bishop. He had worked with them four and a half years, and there were many of them, like himself, who would miss Mr Bishop very much. He would all no doubt wish him every success and God speed in the new work where he had gone —his (Mr Bence's) old place, Kettering. He (Mr Bence) was going to work up the parish with one assistant curate instead of two. A certain rumour had been going round the parish that there were going to be certain changes made both in regard to the organization of the parish and the time and character of the service. That was only a rumour, and he welcomed the opportunity to be able to state that it was entirely and absolutely without foundation. The organization and character of the service would be continued as they had been in the past, and he was glad to be able to allay the doubt and anxiety that had been caused. They had Mr Wiencke with them—he had settled down in their midst and become one of them. With his help everything would go on well, as his heart and soul were in his work. He was looking forward to the time when they would find the miners of Rothwell coming in greater numbers to the church. There were large numbers of men whom he knew by name and sight and even spoke to as he walked along, and he regretted that they saw so few of them in church. They had a free and open church, and so they could welcome them into the church to go wherever they pleased. He hoped the time would come when they could do so of that welcome. Not only did they want them in the church, but they wanted them to take an interest in church work and church life.

CHURCH FENTON FOOTBALL CLUB DANCE.—There was a large gathering in the school on Friday evening, when the Church Fenton United Football Club promoted their first whist drive and dance. The school was tastefully decorated, and those present spent a most enjoyable evening. Mr S. Wade kindly presented the prizes for the whist drive, and these were won by Mrs Harrison and Mr J. White. Afterwards dancing went merrily on until 3 in the morning to music supplied by Mr J. W. Hague, of Ulleskelf (piano). An unusual feature was the fact that the gentlemen predominated. It is very gratifying to the club's energetic secretary (Mr A. Thompson) and the members who assisted so enthusiastically that this, their first effort, proved an unqualified success.

CROSSGATES AND DISTRICT FARMERS CLUB.

MEETING AT WHITKIRK.

On Wednesday night a meeting of farmers was held at the Brown Cow Inn, Whitkirk, to consider the advisability of forming a Farmers' Club for Templenewsam, Crossgates, Swillington, Austhorpe, Barwick, and Roundhay districts. Mr J. M. Rayner, of Whinmoor, presided, and over thirty representative farmers attended. Among those present were Mr John Thompson, East Rigton, Bardsey, and Mr C. Eshelby, secretary of the Sherburn Agricultural Club.

Mr Wright, of Halton, said that he was responsible for calling the meeting. He had been connected with the Sherburn Club since its inception, and great benefits had accrued to the members in many ways, and he desired to see such an organization in that district. A letter recently appeared in the "Courier" on the subject, and he thought it was an opportune time for calling the farmers together. Agriculture was growing a more important industry, and it was very necessary that it should be organized. His idea in forming a club was that it should not be aggressive but defensive.

The Chairman said that a Farmers' Club conducted on proper lines would no doubt be a great benefit to farmers, and if they could do anything to improve their position it was their duty to do so. A club could be used for purchasing commodities for the members, and in that way a saving would be effected to them.

Mr C. Eshelby then explained the working of the club at Sherburn-in-Elmet. At the outset he emphasized the necessity of all members taking an active interest in such an organization, because if the work was left to a few the same measure of prosperity would not be obtained. Farmers, they knew, bought mixed manures and mixed foodstuffs, and they never troubled to get them analysed, but a club had an analyst, and that was a great advantage, because it practically assured these commodities being up to a recognised standard. The Sherburn Club was affiliated with the Yorkshire Union of Clubs, which was in membership with the National Union, and in that way they could bring their influence to bear on legislation affecting agriculture. They, however, did not profess to have any politics, and this was advisable, because the introduction of politics might cause friction. The Government had brought out a scheme for the improvement of live stock, and, although at Sherburn they did not think it would benefit them, in that district they might gain some advantage from milk records. When Sherburn Club was formed the turn-over in the first year was £352. In the second year £1,780, and last year £3,000. The Escrick Club, however, had a turn-over of over £12,000 a year. The club charged 3d. on the £ on all money passing through it, and 1½d. went to the secretary and 1½d. towards the club expenses. They purchased cake, manures, coal, and twine, and they carried out insurance, on which the farmers received a reduction of ten per cent. The members of a club could buy commodities on a cheaper scale, and they got full value for their money, and he gave instances of this.

Mr Appleyard (Austhorpe) asked where the money for the first goods bought would come from?

Mr Eshelby said that at Sherburn they had thirteen guarantors who had paid £5 each into the bank, and by that means the secretary was enabled to make his first payments. Of course, on the money deposited these gentlemen received 1½ per cent.

Mr Wright said that if members paid 10s. subscription it would make a club easily worked, but he thought they could manage on a subscription of 5s.

Mr Thompson said that at Wetherby they had a Chamber of Agriculture, and it had been very successful in its own way. Years ago they started a trading association, but this was entirely apart from the Chamber. Members were supplied with feeding stuffs and manures at as cheap a rate as possible, and the profits were divided among the purchasers according to the amount of goods they had purchased. To the man who bought large quantities of goods the advantage of purchasing through a club might be little, but if all combined the smaller man would receive very considerable benefit. He was satisfied if the English farmer was to hold his own he must organize, in order to protect himself from any forces that might be against him, and it was only through Farmers' Clubs and Chambers of Agriculture that farmers could express their views to have any weight. Of course, they barred politics, and they were perfectly right in barring politics generally, but whenever legislation to the detriment of farmers was proposed they must take politics into consideration, and they must do their utmost to educate the public. Farmers were looked upon as an exceedingly ignorant and antediluvian class, but he did not believe farmers required educating as much as the general mass of the public, who should be given better opportunities of knowing the difficulties under which the farmer carried on his business. In most of the associations in connection with the Yorkshire Union landowners, agents, and farmers were members, and that, to his mind, was a very great power for good, and he had never seen any harm come from it. The remark that farmers dare not open their mouths because landlords or agents were present was absolutely untrue. Five-sixths of the population lived in towns, and had no knowledge whatever of agricultural conditions. They knew that an agitation had been set on foot with a view to entirely altering the conditions that prevail in agriculture, but he did not think the proposers of the changes realized that England was possibly the best farmed country, considering its climate, under the sun. He said that the Small Holdings Act was allowed to pass through the House of Commons with very little opposition, and he was satisfied that if the views of the farmers been heard it would not have been placed on the Statute Book without considerable amendment. Men whose only crime was that they farmed too well had been thrust out of their holdings to make room for others. When they were doing that they must remember they were disturbing labourers who would be provided under the new conditions. He did not think they would get a larger number of people on the land by that Act. He urged the value of combination in order to help on legislation which was for the benefit of farmers, and to fight measures which would be to their detriment. (Applause).

The Chairman said that two-thirds of those present were members of the Leeds Cowkeepers' Association, and they wanted something distinct from that. He suggested that a club on the lines of a purchasing society should be formed.—

Mr. W. Verity (Halton) asked if it would not be better to form a Farmers' Club, and leave the question of a purchasing society until after.

The Chairman said that a purchasing society would induce men to join.

Mr Wright proposed that a Farmers' Club be formed for the district. When they got into working order they could buy or sell, or do whatever they thought was in the benefit of the members.

Mr R. Bickerdyke seconded, and the resolution was carried by an overwhelming majority, only one or two voting against it.

Mr Wright was appointed secretary pro. tem., and the annual subscription was fixed at 5s.

Mr Brown (Bradbury Farm, Halton) proposed that the name of the club be "Crossgates and District Farmers' Club."

Mr Seal (Colton) seconded, and this was adopted.

The following gentlemen were appointed officials subject to their consenting to stand:—President, Hon. E. L. Wood, M.P.; vice-presidents, Sir C. B. Lowther (Swillington Park), Mr D. B. Wilson, J.P. (Seacroft Hall), Mr J. C. Bartle (Garforth), Mr T. P. Fawcett (Barrowclough Hall), Mr C. F. Ryder (Scarcroft), Mr T. G. Mylchreest (Eltofts), Col. Gascoigne (Lotherton), Mr P. S. Marsden (Whitkirk), and Mr John Thompson (East Rigton); chairman, Mr J. Rayner (Whinmoor); committee—Messrs J. W. Pollard (Moor Allerton), Bickerdyke (Osmondthorpe), Young (Swillington), Elam (Osmondthorpe), A. Booth (Crossgates), Baxter (Newsamgreen), J. Appleyard (Austhorpe), Barraclough (Colton), W. Townend (Seacroft), M. Helm (Barwick), J. W. Carter (Whinmoor), and G. Taylor (Halton).

On the call of the Chairman, a hearty vote of thanks was passed to Mr Eshelby, Mr Thompson, and Mr Wright.

CORRESPONDENCE

MR E. H. FOSTER'S SPEECH AT ABERFORD.

(To the Editor).

Sir,—Mr E. H. Foster at a meeting at Aberford read a circular appealing to officers in the Army not to take part in the coercion of Ulster. He did not state by whom the circular was issued nor even that it was issued by any Unionist organization, yet he goes on to make a most unworthy insinuation by saying "it did not fit in with the party who called themselves the party of law and order to take up such a stand when a Bill was to be passed that did not please them." What on the other hand, has been the attitude of the Nationalist party towards the British Army?

In Dublin on October 1st, 1899, Mr Patrick O'Brien, M.P., now one of the Nationalist party's whips, said:—

"He hoped the soldiers in Irish regiments in the service of England would, before they lined up against the Boers, remember that they were first of all Irishmen, and instead of fighting in favour of England would turn their arms in favour of the Boers."—"Freeman's Journal," Oct. 2nd, 1899.

In Tralee, on October 20th, 1901, Mr John Dillon, M.P., said:—

"He regretted to say that there were a great many Irishmen amongst the British troops, and that led him to say that there was a gentleman over there looking for recruits for the Irish guards. He hoped they would put him out of Kerry if he came. There was no use in cheering De Wet and Botha if they were not prepared to follow their example."—"Irish Daily Independent," Oct. 21st, 1901.

"England has never fought her own battles, Irish traitors have ever been the backbone of her Army and Navy.

"Stand aside and have your revenge. While out Ireland's help England will go down before Germany, as she would have gone down before the Boers had not the Irish fought her battles in South Africa."—"Irish Freedom," August, 1913.

When it is proposed to use the British Army to coerce Ulster at the bidding of gentlemen whose speeches I have quoted, it is not surprising that a good many individuals are moved to express their indignation in various ways. Mr Foster had no right to endeavour to saddle the Unionist Party with responsibilities for the circular in question.—Yours etc.,

ROBERT N. THOMPSON.

PUBLIC DEBATE AT WHITKIRK.

(To the Editor).

Sir,—Reading the speech made by the Rev. J. Miller Hamilton, and as coming from a gentleman occupying his position, one is struck by the extreme partizanship it reveals. With regard to the statement of Home Rule for Ireland being a principal question at all elections since 1885, I would remind him of the "Ulster state" policy of Lord Hugh Cecil, Mr Asquith, etc., Home Rule being one of the principal items which was then wiped off the Radical slate.

Was Home Rule even mentioned by the Radicals during the 1906 Chinese Slavery election? I don't think so. Coming to more recent time the first election of 1910, the cry one remembers was not Home Rule but "Peers v. People."

With reference to the statement that Home Rule would be the death blow of religious bigotry, this needs some explanation. Does he refer to his fellow Free Churchmen or to the Roman Catholics?

As regards the position of the Protestants of Ireland on the question of religious equality, this surely is a question upon which they are best able to judge. To prove this I give you a list of Free Church ministers in the whole of Ireland and their attitude to Home Rule. This list I have got from a business friend in Belfast and is thoroughly reliable:—Presbyterian, opposed to Home rule, 150; Home Rulers, 12; Methodists, opposed to Home Rule, 250; Home Rulers, 6. Of Baptists and Congregationalists, of whom there are under 50, almost all are opposed. This list does not include Episcopal ministers, who are practically all opposed to Home Rule.

Would Mr Hamilton willingly hand over the reins of government in England, both executive and administrative, to those of a Roman Catholic persuasion. If not, how can he thus easily throw overboard his fellow Free Churchmen in Ireland?

Mr Hamilton's next statement is "That if Home Rule is not granted to Ulster along with the rest of Ireland, Belfast would suffer enormously from the upheaval in commercial matters."

Belfast business men know their business, and can be trusted to look after it, and when one remembers that practically the whole of business Belfast is opposed to Home Rule, £150,000,000 being represented at the last meeting in Ulster Hall, we may take it that they have weighed up the whole aspect of the case from that point of view.—Yours, etc.,

HUNTSMAN INJURED.—Peter Farrelly, huntsman to the Bramham Moor Hounds, had a nasty fall in a bog on the Moors near Stainburn on Monday, and for a time the pack were left in charge of A. Hoare, the first whip. Farrelly eventually resumed command, but the hunt was brought to a premature conclusion, he being obviously unfit to continue. His chief injury was to the face, he having some teeth knocked out.

A CYCLING STORY.—A youth was cycling along the principal street at Wetherby when a collie dog whisked his bushy tail, and had it caught in the rear wheel of the bicycle. The youth was thrown over the handle bars, but fortunately was very little hurt. The dog tried to run away, but pulled the bicycle with him, and the back wheel had to be taken out before the dog's tail could be released.

CONCERT.—An excellent concert was held in the Grand Hall, Cawood, under the auspices of the Cawood and District Conservative and Unionist Association, when the following artistes took part:—Miss Teresa Barraclough (soprano), Leeds; Miss Nellie Atkin, A.L.C.M. (contralto), Bradford; Mr Hugh Dawson (tenor), Horton; Mr George L. Stephenson (baritone), Baildon; Mr Jack Leslie (humorist), Bradford, and Miss Ethel Topham (accompanist), Bradford. The programme was excellently arranged and highly appreciated by a large audience, the part songs especially were well rendered, and came in for much applause. Miss Barraclough was heard to great advantage in "Spring's Awakening." Mr Hugh Dawson's "Mary" with much feeling, this song being highly appreciated. Miss Atkin rendered "When you come home" in good style, and also played "Home, Sweet Home" (Thalberg), with much charm. Mr Stephenson sang "The Floral Dance" in quite an effective way. Mr Leslie was very well received in "Beauty of the Guards" and "P.C. No. 9." Miss Topham proved an able accompanist. Most of the success of the concert was due to the capable work of Miss Atkin, who had arranged the programme in very efficient style.

TADCASTER.—On Monday evening the members of the G.F.S. gave an entertainment in the Girls' Sunday Schoolroom, and there was a large audience. The programme was as follows:—Pianoforte solo, Miss Hilda Dyson; song, "Poor old Joe," Miss Doris Weaver; song, "Won't you buy my pretty flowers," Miss Priscilla Middleton; folk songs, "German peasant dance" and "Polish National dance," pianoforte duet; song, Miss Dymmy; Spanish song and dance, twelve members; song, Miss Scholefield; dialogue, "Aunt Matilda's collar"; caste—Miss Matilda Dimity, Miss Owen; Cicely (her niece), Miss Gosling; Hudson's Berths, Miss Florence Rumbold; Mary and Jane (servants), Miss Carrie Couch and Miss Elsie Bollard; and Mrs Grump (charwoman), Miss Smith; pianoforte solo, Miss Doris Weaver; song, "Meet me by moonlight alone," Miss Hilda Dyson; recitation, "Prayer and potatoes," Miss Ada Smith; rounds, "All matture smiles" and "Come, follow me," the choir; song, Miss Scholefield; part song, "Away, away, at break of day," the choir; song, Miss Gypson; dialogue, "Rooms to let"; caste—Miss Priscilla, Miss Annie Pratt; Miss Mattie (her sister), Miss Edith Freer; Sophia (their maid), Miss Ada Smith; Mrs Stokes, Miss Edith Jennings.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT JOTTINGS.

Within recent years a wonderful change has come over the great mining community in conduct, manners, and dress, and, as a well-known Garforthian said recently, "the miner of to-day is a gentleman compared with the 'collier of fifty years ago." Somehow a number of people, owing to ignorance no doubt, affect to despise the mining class, but prejudice dies hard. Every section has its black sheep, but I warrant the miners will compare favourably with the artisans of any community. Not many years ago I met a Rippax man in a public institution, and he told me that in the '70s he earned £5 and £6 a week. "What have you done with your money, then?" I asked. "More than half of it went in 'booze' on pay-day," he said, "but I had my fun, and I don't regret it." That spirit belongs to a bye-gone generation, and one cannot condemn the young miners of to-day adopting such an attitude. Of course, in the old days there were prudent men, and I know one a few old miners who have drawn a considerable amount, house-property, and they are now enjoying the fruits of their toil.

With all his improvement, the miner does not appear to be particularly enamoured of church-going, and in the Rothwell district the Vicar laments the apathy of the men who wins the coal. Mr Bence said that "he was looking forward to the time when they would find the miners of Rothwell coming in greater numbers to the church. There were large numbers of men whom he knew by name and sight and even spoke to as he walked along, and he regretted that they saw so few of them in church. They had a free and open church, and so they could welcome them into the church to go wherever they pleased. He hoped the time would come when they would make use of that welcome. Not only did they want them in the church, but they wanted them to take an interest in church work and church life." Why don't the miners go to church? It is advisable to find that out first. And having solved that, the Vicar could set to work to achieve his purpose. The old supposition about "compelling them to come in" still stands, doesn't it?

The miners, however, are not the only sinners—if it is a sin to give the church door a wide berth. In the old days the colliers spent Sunday in pigeon flying, cock-fighting, boxing—the Primrose Valley, Halton, was a rend zvous for pugilists—and drinking, but since they have, to a very large extent, turned from their wicked ways, other classes, who ought to be an example to the despised miner, have degenerated. Motorists and golfers—miners have not adopted these aristocratic recreations yet—are greatly in evidence on Sunday, despite the fact that they have, as a rule, plenty of leisure during the week, and it seems to me that a missionary to these men and women might do some good. It must not, however, be supposed that miners as a class have completely forsaken the church. In some villages the congregations are almost exclusively composed of miners and their families, and I know at least one village where the parson can always get a good congregation of men.

The protest by Mr T. B. Smith, of Garforth, who has the honour of being chairman of the Leeds and District Grocers' Association, against Sunday trading was opportune, and his condemnation of it as an "abominable practice" left no doubt as to his opinion about it. Apart from its unfairness—its infringement on legitimate trading—it opens out a wide field for abuse. The practice is probably not common in the villages of the district, but I know places where small shopkeepers keep an open door on Sunday, and the residents are to blame for encouraging these people. In the matter of Sunday trading, many people would like to see all pubs closed on that day, and not a few licence-holders would, I know, welcome the rest which such a concession would provide.

Country people are not always as careful as they might be with regard to their children. In different parts of the country outrages have been committed on little ones by scoundrels, and a child who is sent along a dark road a mile or two from home is always running a risk. In this district there have, fortunately, been very few attacks on children and girls—at anyrate, cases have not come before the magistrates—but it occurred to me the other night, when walking outside one of our villages, that parents were not as careful as they might be. Several toddlers, not in company, were met on this dark road, probably making their way home after going an errand, and had any evil-minded person made an attack on any one of them help would not have been at hand. The child's "Good night," in order to get an assurance that all was well, was pathetic.

The formation of a Farmers' Club for Templesexton, Crossgates, Austherpe, Oxtonthorpe, Seacroft, Barwick, Scholes, Shadwell, Swillington, and Roundhay provides an unique opportunity for farmers, by organization and co-operation, to help themselves, and if the members act as missionaries to their fellows, it should have a membership of a hundred before the year is out. Chambers of Agriculture exist at Tadcaster and Wetherby, and while these are of value for ventilating the opinions of the members, an institution like the Sherburn Farmers' Club, with its trading facilities, seems to appeal more forcibly to practical men. Farmers, like other folks, want to buy in the cheapest market and sell in the best, and the Crossgates and District Farmers' Club, if properly managed, could save a considerable sum of money in the pockets of its members every year.

The Crossgates and District Farmers' Club could be made to fulfil the dual purpose of a Chamber of Agriculture and a trading association, but to be of real value to the farmers the trading should receive prime consideration. An experienced Tadcaster farmer recently stated that to make agriculture a success farmers must depend on themselves, and there is truth in this. Farmers are not particularly fond of attending debates on agricultural subjects, as evidenced by the attendances at Chambers of Agriculture, but give them a monetary interest in a concern, and it will have a wonderful influence on them. In buying commodities they may effect a considerable saving to themselves, and members of Crossgates and District Club will be wise to work this side of the institution for all that it is worth.

Why not have a Farmers' Club for Garforth district, too? In such a combination agriculturists in Kippax, Ledston, Ledsham, Aberford, and Garforth might be expected to participate, and if a club were formed there the whole of the district on the Selby Railway side would be organised. As showing how farmers can save by combination, it was stated a club purchased twine for its members at 5s. per cwt. less than the individual could buy it for, and other things a farmer requires could be got in the same way. Merchants or manufacturers would be tumbling over each other to get orders, because they would know that they could have their money within a reasonable time, and they could afford to cut profits.

It will be remembered that at Halton the performance of "H.M.S. Pinafore," by the Whitkirk amateurs, was preceded by a smart little play, with a very simple story. It related to the disappointment of a couple at the failure of friends to attend a party, with the ultimate discovery that the husband had forgotten to post the invitations. Was the play founded on an unusual experience in Canada of Lord and Lady Minto, who had arranged a garden party. The appointed day arrived; the band came out to play; the sun shone; and Lord and Lady Minto awaited their guests. But no guests arrived. The mystery was unveiled when it occurred to the memory of a startled aide-de-camp that he had prepared the invitations, but had forgotten to post them!

The passing of the Chairman of Hunslet Board of Guardians (Mr Edward Green) will be regretted by every member. For months he had been ill, and his genial personality was missed at the meetings. He was a wonderful old man, and his vigorous energy in his seventy odd years, and he did an enormous amount of voluntary work in Hunslet. Poor law administration was, however, his special hobby, and his long years of service gave him an experience equalled only by few of the members. He was one of the men whose death is a distinct loss to the community.

Kippax is threatened with a sewage scheme which will cost about £6,000 if arrangements cannot be made with Mr Bland to reduce the amount by selling a certain piece of land, which would do away with the necessity for pumping. The Kippax members of the District Council have stoved off the evil day as long as possible, but the scheme must come, and their efforts are now directed at making it as cheap and efficient as possible. The squire, by making the concession alluded to, would confer a great advantage on his tenants, because it would mean a smaller rate, and farmers frequently complain that their burdens are a serious handicap to them in their business.

A solution will, I understand, be found for the housing problem at Tadcaster. The directors of John Smith's Brewery, who have already built a considerable amount of working-class property, are engaged in preparing a scheme which will meet present demands, and the houses will be erected on the East Tadcaster side. Many ratepayers object to public money being expended on housing schemes, owing to a fear that they will involve a rate, and it is satisfactory that in this instance private enterprise will meet the necessities of the case. The scheme has not been before the District Council yet, but I believe the plans are being prepared.

Following the refusal of the N.E.R. Co. to light the Church Fenton railway bridge, where a deplorable accident occurred recently, it now rests with the Parish Council to take action. Everybody admits that the bridge is dangerous on dark nights, and lights placed at the approaches to the road are advocated as a means of minimising risks. It seems that if anything is to be done, the Church Fenton parish meeting will have to adopt the Lighting Act, and arrange with the Railway Co. for the erection and maintenance of lamps on or near the bridge. The Act must be adopted before they incur any expense, otherwise the Parish Council would be surcharged. A few years ago Garforth Parish Council, by arrangement with the N.E.R. Co., paid for the lighting of a lamp at the approach to the station, but, as the parish had not adopted the Lighting Act, the payments were illegal, and when the Local Government Board auditor heard this out he soon put an end to the practice.

A number of parishes in Tadcaster Union—and I believe it is the number—have not paid their calls, and the overseers are to be prosecuted if the money is not forthcoming in a fortnight. At the Guardians' meeting on Monday some comment was created by a demand for the names of the parishes concerned, but they were not given. When the District Council business came up, however, the demand was repeated, and the names were made public. But what good did it do? Stronger measures are necessary. Overseers of parishes who manage to pay promptly think it is unfair to them that other overseers should be allowed to pay when they please—at anyrate, to withhold payment until they are threatened with prosecution, and I should not be surprised if they don't mend their ways, were a resolution passed to take proceedings against them at once.

The heavy cost of the roads in Tadcaster has been a cause of anxiety to the District Council for years, and their failure to obtain a grant from the County Council towards the maintenance of Station Road shows that the only practical remedy must be undertaken jointly by the N.E.R. Co., the brewery companies, and the District Council. Tadcaster is a heavy charge on the rural district. The annual cost of Station Road is put by members at between £400 and £500 a year, and it is patent that the only way to save the rates is by removing the heavy brewery traffic from the roads altogether. The N.E.R. Co. have promised a scheme for a long time, but their policy of shuffle does not bring the matter any nearer a solution, and the District Council should pester them until they take some action. If it were possible to carry the traffic direct from the breweries to the railway sidings an immense saving would be effected in road repair, and it would pay the District Council to make a substantial contribution towards the cost of the scheme.

Tadcaster District Council have compelled owners of traction engines and motor waggons for extraordinary traffic on the local roads, but they should be consistent, and charge all alike. Heavy motor lurries are now running regularly on the roads, and these do quite as much damage as other heavy vehicles. The cost of maintaining roads has grown very considerably in recent years, and it is very largely owing to the use of heavy motor vehicles. Traction engines and motor waggon owners have introduced a new class of traffic, and it is unfair of them to expect the ratepayers to pay in order that they may make more money.

GARFORTH URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL.

MEMBERS AND SANITARY CONDITION OF THE AREA.

REDUCTION IN DISTRICT RATE.

The monthly meeting of Garforth Urban District Council was held at the offices at Garforth on Wednesday evening—Mr J. B. Breed (Chairman) presiding. The other members present were Messrs J. W. Dobson, R. Routledge, jun., H. Gascoigne, H. Chappel, T. S. Slater, W. W. Hartley, and Goodall, with the Clerk (Mr A. E. Corp), and the surveyor (Mr T. Abbott).

Two of the Council's employes, whose wages were 18s., were granted an increase of 2s. per week.

Notices were ordered to be served on certain owners of property with regard to the conversion of privies into water closets.

On the motion of Mr Chappel, seconded by Mr Gascoigne, it was agreed that the owners of Garforth Colliery be written to and asked to put in a water meter as early as possible.

HIGHWAYS AND SANITARY.

At a meeting of the Highways, Sanitary, and General Purposes Committee the Clerk reported that he had received a list of sanatoria approved by the Local Government Board under the National Insurance Act, 1911.

The Clerk reported that he had received a notice from the West Riding County Council respecting the maintenance of the main roads within the district for the year 1914.

The Clerk read a letter he had received from the Local Government Board asking what steps the Council were taking or proposed to take to secure the provision of more satisfactory closet accommodation, and it was decided to inform him that the Council were gradually introducing water closets.

It was agreed that a sub-committee consisting of Messrs R. Routledge, sen., and H. Gascoigne, with the Chairman and vice-chairman be appointed to meet the surveyor, and go over the works proposed to be done on the district roads for the year.

Mr Chappel moved that the minutes be passed with the exception of the recommendation to send a letter to the Local Government Board.

In the course of the discussion, it was suggested that it was inadvisable for the Local Government Board to know about it.

Mr Chappel said it was time the Local Government Board knew. The sanitary affairs of the village were in a disgraceful condition. Men attended the meetings and spent hour after hour there. They directed a man to put property in a sanitary condition, and six months after nothing had been done. It was a waste of time.

Mr Slater: That has nothing to do with the minutes. Pass them, and then something could be said as to having things done.

Mr Gascoigne said it was a question of telling the Local Government Board they were doing a certain thing, and they were doing nothing.

Mr Chappel: It is bluffing the Local Government Board.

Mr Slater: Plenty of people try a game of bluff.

Mr Chappel: Is it business?

Mr Slater: We are doing our best to get things on.

Mr Routledge: This matter has never been raised before. If you had asked the Clerk to give the owner 14 days notice to do the work he would have done it.

Mr Chappel said it was the business of the sanitary inspector, and not of a member of the Council, to see that work was done.

The Chairman: We seem to be getting no further.

Mr Gascoigne seconded the resolution.

Mr Slater proposed that the minutes be signed, and Mr Gascoigne seconded.

Mr Gascoigne: I don't want us to send a letter until we can send something reasonable. I don't believe in bluffing anybody.

Mr Chappel's resolution was then carried.

WATER COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Water Committee the water inspector reported that for the month ending 23rd February, there had been a consumption of 1,201,000 gallons, an average of 43,893 gallons per day.

A letter was read from Mr Prater asking the charge the Council would make for water supplied to the Weigh House on the Aberford and Garforth road, and it was agreed that the Clerk write Mr Prater stating they were willing to supply the water at 3s. 3d. per quarter, subject to his being responsible and obtaining the consent of the Tadcaster Rural District Council.

TENDERS FOR STONE.

As a meeting of a sub-committee the tender of Wm Minett, Ltd., for road-rolling for one year for the sum of £1 per day was recommended to the Council for acceptance, as well as the tender of the Leeds Blind Institution for brushes, etc. The tender of Edwin Verity to supply shovels and picks was accepted, and the tender of Messrs Clayton and Speight to supply sanitary pipes and gullies.

The tender of Messrs Johnson Bros, of London, to do the surface tarring on both main and district roads, and the tender of Thomas Feather, of Mirfield, to supply concrete flags were recommended to the Council for acceptance.

The tender of P. Murray and Co., of Leeds, to supply 2½ to 3 inch slag, of Messrs W. H. Newton and Co., of Leeds, to supply whinstone, and Messrs John Green and Son, of Silsden, to supply tar macadam, and of John Farrer and Son, of Thornton, to supply knotted kerbs, and 6 inch belts, were recommended to the Council for acceptance.

These were approved.

HEALTH OF THE DISTRICT.

The medical officer of health, whose report was read, stated that during the month there had been nine births and three deaths. A case of tuberculosis was reported, and it was stated that several cases of mumps had occurred in the village.

Dr Pickersgill wrote that he considered there was a great improvement in the scavenging department. An inspection at East Garforth was very satisfactory.

Mr Gascoigne said that he had had to complain about the condition of certain ashpits.

RATES DECREASED.

Mr Dobson submitted the estimate of expenditure, which was put as £1,425, being equal to a rate of 1s. 8d. on the area. There were, however, certain items to come in, and he thought they could reduce the rate.

Mr Hartley: That is very satisfactory.

The Clerk said that a penny rate produced £71.

Mr Chappel: What is the present rate?

The Clerk: It is 1s. 9d.

Mr Dobson then moved that a rate of 1s. 7d. for the half-year be laid on.

Mr Gascoigne seconded, and this was adopted.

ROADS—SEWAGE WORKS.

A committee went into the question of expenditure on district roads, etc., and their report was submitted. It showed an estimated expenditure of £625 15s. for a year, and it was adopted.

Mr Gascoigne said the committee went to the sewage works, and they were convinced that something would have to be done with the land. It was "sick," and would not do as works.

Mr Dobson: It is over-fed. (Laughter).

Mr Gascoigne said the land could not be ploughed, and it would take some time to dig it.

Mr Routledge said the land had nothing to do with the treatment of the sewage. It had never been laid out for that purpose.

The Chairman: It has been turned over several times, and it is part of the process.

Mr Routledge: It goes through the septic tanks.

The Chairman: Yes, and then on to the land. We must have the land turned over.

Mr Routledge: How much land is there?

Mr Abbott: Perhaps about 3 acres.

It was agreed to advertise in the "Courier" for tenders for digging and cleaning the land.

On Saturday afternoon a football match was played between Wetherby Corr. and Stockeld Park, and the latter won by three goals to two. At Wike School Church a sum of £1 9s. 7d. was collected for the medical charities against £2 7s. 3d. last year.

VARIETY ENTERTAINMENT.—An excellent entertainment was given in the Mill Garth Rooms, Sherburn, the proceeds being devoted to the Church Hall. The first part of the programme was of a miscellaneous character, and included a sketch entitled "Washing Day," given by a party of ladies from Barkston. The second half of the entertainment was a musical sketch, entitled "Mistresses and Maids," given by the girls of the Band of Hope, to whom great praise is due for the clever manner in which the different characters were impersonated. Mrs Thompson, the Grammar School, who was responsible for the training of the girls, presided at the piano for the sketch. The concert was under the management of the Rev. C. H. Rowntree. The room was crowded, and the various items were loudly applauded.

OUR GARDENS.

A Weekly Article specially Written for

Amateur Gardeners, Allotment Holders, &c.

By ALBERT CLARKE, Birkenshaw.

THE FLOWER GARDEN

LAWNS

Surface dressings such as old potting soil, charcoal, ashes, sifted, should be swept in and brushed well down into the grass. Rolling must be attended to as weather permits. The mild weather does not encourage the moss or growth of any other plant much, but the mowing machine should not be overhauled and got into working order. Lawn-mowing, when done at a late date, is decidedly more than a light matter. It is one of the most essential tasks in a garden, and must not be entrusted to a young boy. Many lawns are terribly ruined annually when the machines do not run smoothly. The work should be carefully performed to a young man. If the machine is out of order, the cutting blades are not set true, it is impossible to cut the grass evenly. The point is a small matter, but one that requires care and attention. In the case of our irregular lawns on the hillside, we can only a few days pleasure repairing filling up, it will be sufficient to cut molds in the turf, loosen them underneath, and roll them back into position. Bad patches, where the grass is practically dead, should be cut out and replaced by new turves. In every case where the soils have been disturbed the roller must be freely used to secure a firm surface. Large weeds are difficult to remove with a hand-fork whilst the soil is moist.

VEGETABLES UNDER GLASS

FRENCH BEANS

Early sowings should now be getting pods, and whilst the plants are in bloom, syringing should be discontinued. It must be resumed again when sufficient pods are set, and a spider will soon attack the plants. If possible the plants should be given a position where the tops will be about a foot or 18 inches from the roof glass. This allows them the maximum amount of light without running the risk of them getting chilled. Keep the growth erect by placing small supports amongst them. Should be other sowing of Sharpe's Queen should be made, and this may be followed by Ne Plus Ultra.

CAULIFLOWERS, CABBAGE, ETC.

If not already done a sowing of these should be made at once. The seed may be sown in boxes, either in a slightly heated greenhouse or a cold frame. If sown in the greenhouse they should be moved to the frame as soon as they are had an inch high. Prick them out as soon as they are large enough to handle. They require a six-inch bed of soil, and should be put four or four inches apart in the rows. The frame may be kept fairly close for a few days after pricking them out, but after that free ventilation should be given. Vegetables of this class should be grown as hardy as possible. If a portable frame is used the hardening off process may be much simplified.

PLANTS UNDER GLASS

Many occupants of the greenhouse will now require repotting. To the beginner it is often a difficult matter to decide when his plants require repotting. There is no hard and fast rule, but it is safe to assume that evergreen plants such as ferns, Aspidistras, Ficus, Palms, Crotons, Dracenas, etc., will require attention when they show signs of commencing free-growth in the early months of the year. Root action commences about the same time as top growth, and it is obvious that if new material is to be provided it should be given when the roots are in active growth in search for food. Such plants as Zonal Pelargoniums, or Geraniums as they are commonly called, require special treatment. They assume a very leggy appearance during the winter months and should be cut back to within a few inches of the base early in the year. Prior to cutting them back they should be kept perfectly dry at the roots for a few weeks. If this is not done they will bleed badly and suffer in consequence. If they are cut back whilst quite dry the wound soon heals, and they break into new growth almost immediately. The old tops may be utilised as cuttings, and provide nice plants for autumn flowering. They should be rooted in sandy soil in pots, on a greenhouse shelf. When the old plants have made about an inch of new growth they should be shaken out of the pots and a quantity of the old soil may be removed. Repot into fresh compost and water carefully until they re-establish themselves. Geraniums require very little manure, and no leaf-mould. Grow in a cool, light position, and never over-water.

NEMESIA STRUMOSI SUTTONI

This is one of the most beautiful annuals in existence. Introduced by Messrs Sutton about twenty years ago it immediately became very popular, and during recent years the introducers have made many improvements upon the original strain. Several varieties have been selected and fixed and may be relied upon to come true to colour. Blue Gem might be described as a glorified Forget-me-not, and when grown in large masses is extremely beautiful. A bed of this variety, broken up with white Nocturnus gives a splendid effect. White Gem and Fire King are exactly complimentary varieties, whilst the mixed hybrids include a wonderful range of colour, including the above and yellow, rose-pink, orange, etc. Seed may be sown about the third week in March and should not be subjected to very warm treatment. A temperature of about 60 is suitable to germinate the seed and the after-treatment should be a few degrees lower. Prick the seedlings into frames when they are about an inch high and grow on in a cool, light position, hardening them off in the usual way. To obtain a really effective display the beds the plants must be placed fairly close together, six inches apart is about right, and the surface of the soil should be kept loose until the plants are established. They are not a deep rooting subject, and are important of dryness to the root. For this season it will be found advantageous to mulch the beds with cocoa-fibre, decayed manure, or even lawn mowings or leaf-mould, any of which will prevent rapid evaporation. They are also very effective when grown as pot plants for conservatory decoration. If they are stopped, or pinched back a few times, they may be grown into nice bushy specimens. For this purpose three plants should be grown in each pot. For the final potting a six-inch pot will accommodate three plants.

ISOLEPIS GRACILIS

This is an elegant little plant easily raised from seed. It is chiefly used as a pot plant for the edges of greenhouse and conservatory staging. It has long slender, bright green foliage which droops over and completely hides the pot. Sow now in a warm house and allow the seedlings to remain in the seed pan until they com-

QUESTIONS

TOMATOES

I have a small cold greenhouse. Sir, in fill, on two sides, instead of staging, it is walled, filled in with broken stone and about six inches of soil. It is built against a wall, a south aspect. I thought of buying a few tomato plants and trying to grow them. Is it necessary to purchase pots, or will it do to grow on the permanent staging? Of course I would get suitable soil for the purpose. If it is necessary to buy pots what size must I procure?—Novice (Horbury).

Tomatoes usually give more satisfactory returns grown in beds of soil than they do in pots. Pot plants are apt to get very dry during the warmest part of summer, and many failures occur in this way. You do not require shelves of soil. Your best plan will be to cover the present bed with old slates or flags, and provide a resting media about 12 inches wide and 12 inches deep. When the roots have too free a run, the top growth is often gross and sappy, and does not fruit freely. If the roof is a leaky one you will not get very good results against the back wall. As you have no fire heat you will not be able to make a start before the middle of May.

HYACINTH

Will you please inform me (through your paper) what method to adopt to induce the flower stems on hyacinths to grow. I have some hyacinths and tulips in vases for the forced flowers in glasses. I wish to grow them on for next year and also the tulips are in fibre. The hyacinths in the glasses are bursting into bloom but the flower stems are very short. Trusting you will kindly oblige.—"First Attempt." (Farnsworth).

Your hyacinth bulbs may have been defective when you obtained them. If so, no amount of care and attention would bring success. They should be kept away from bright sunlight until they have made a few inches of growth. As yours are commencing to bloom, it is too late to do anything with them this time. Are you quite sure you have kept them well supplied with water? The base of the bulb should be just resting on the water. Only the roots are used, showing colour they will improve as time goes on. The stem continues to grow while the flowers are opening.

TADCASTER PETTY SESSIONS.

A SQUABBLE AT TADCASTER.

At Tadcaster Petty Sessions on Monday the magisterial powers present were: Mr. E. C. Brooksbank (Chairman), Col. Gascoigne, Mr J. H. Ingleby, and Mr S. Brooksbank.

Mr Bramley Milnes, of the Shoulder o' Mutton Inn, Appleton Roebuck, was granted an occasional licence for a sale at Woolas Farm.

TADCASTER SQUABBLE—NEIGHBOURS DISAGREE

Frank Freer, labourer, of Tadcaster, appeared in answer to a charge of having assaulted Mrs Marion Brown on February 25th, and he pleaded not guilty.

Mrs Brown said that she lived next door to defendant. On the previous Wednesday she was in the yard talking to Mrs Cook, and defendant came out and started making trouble. She told him she would see Mr Green about the matter, and then he used bad language to her and called her a liar. She thereupon called him a bastard, and he struck her twice on the face.

Freer: Did I come to you and say my wife had told me you had been making inquiries as to who gave orders that the w.c.'s should be locked?—I never asked your wife.

Did I tell you my brother had told me you had been making inquiries as to who gave orders that the w.c.'s should be locked?—I never asked your wife.

RATES FOR COMING HALF YEAR.

LIGHTING OF CHURCH FENTON BRIDGE

KIPPAX, ALLERTON, PRESTON, AND SHERBURN AFFAIRS.

The fortnightly meeting of Tadcaster Board of Guardians was held on Monday at the workhouse—Mr. E. O. Hardcastle, J.P. (Chairman), presiding. Other members present were Miss Bethell (Newton Kyme), Col. Gaskell (Huthwaite), Messrs J. W. Dobson (Newthorpe), W. Simpson (Lead), J. Pick (Bilsdell), W. Y. K. Young (Aberford), J. Harding and E. Parkin, J.P. (Kippax), J. Nettleton, W. Sykes, J. H. Lupby, J.P., and H. P. Clough (Tadcaster), J. School field (Ryton), W. P. Nicholson (Stutton-in-the-Ings), J. E. Cawthorn, T. Hey, and J. J. Foster (Sherburn), J. J. Wheatley (Appleton Roebuck), R. Bright (Barkston), T. Midgley (Hillam), F. Myers (Hillbrough), R. H. Horner (Askham Bryan), F. Phillips, H. Sandy, W. Pearson, and W. Robinson (Allerton Bywater), E. Parkin (Aberford), W. Crossland, J.P., Councillor Mitford), J. Bailey (Kirkby Wharfe), A. Chippendale (Scholes), G. Webster (Huddlestone-cum-Lumby), T. P. Fawcett (Austhorpe), H. M. Stancer (Towton), and H. Lowe and J. Wood, jun. (Preston), with the Clerk (Mr G. A. Bennett), the surveyor (Mr Scott), and the assistant inspectors (Messrs Driver and Wood).

The following was reported to have a baliness or £3,241 in hand.

The master's report showed that during the fortnight there had been one admission to the workhouse and two discharges. The number in the workhouse was 91, and in the Children's Home 18—too against 118 at the corresponding date of last year.

The tramps relieved during the two weeks were 14 and 20 against 13 and 18 for the corresponding weeks of last year.

The minutes of the Workhouse Committee showed that Miss Annie Allen (Bromley Union) had been appointed to the post of assistant nurse. The thanks of the Board were given to Mrs G. A. Bennet for gifts of tickets for a concert and books for the inmates. The usual half-yearly and yearly tenders for supplies are to be advertised for.

The Assessment Committee recommended that £75 be paid to the Clerk for his services during the year, and this was adopted.

The Hillbrough Cottage Home Committee recommended that tenders for supplies be advertised for. Thanks were given to Mrs Riley Smith for gifts of toys to the children and also to Mrs Rickaby for gifts.

FINANCE COMMITTEE

Mr Dobson stated that the Finance Committee recommended that if the calls outstanding are not paid by next meeting the overseers be summoned.

Mr Wright: Will Mr Dobson give us the names of the parishes?

Mr Parkin: Better not have them. (Laughter).

It was reported that Mr Illingworth, of Tadcaster, the treasurer to the Board, had resigned, and the Clerk was instructed to interview the bank managers in the town and ascertain their terms.

Mr Dobson reported that the Committee had gone through the figures of expenditure, and they recommended that a rate of 9d. £d.—a reduction of a farthing as compared with the corresponding half of last year—be laid for Guardians' purposes.

The minutes were adopted.

DISTRICT COUNCIL

At a meeting of the Highways Committee it was resolved that the footpath in Great Preston Road, Allerton Bywater, be kicked and asphalted at a cost of £38, and that work be done on the footpath in the main street, and that the street by the Council offices be drained.

Permission was given to the post office authorities to erect poles in South Milford and Lumby. Permission was given to open a road at South Milford for sewerage purposes.

The estimate of expenditure on the highways was approved subject to the rate being reduced to 9d.

In regard to Station Road, Tadcaster, certain documents were submitted as to a portion of the road being a county highway, and a letter prepared by the Clerk is to be sent to the County Council.

The names of the successful contractors for stones and stores were read.

It was decided to admit a fence and gate in Station Road, Tadcaster, and the surveyor was asked to inspect and report.

It was decided that contractors be required to put roads, after opening them, in good condition, and if they fail to do so the surveyor will do the work and charge the cost to them.

LIGHTING OF CHURCH FENTON BRIDGE.

The Highways Committee wrote asking the N.E.R. Co. to light the road approaches to the bridge over the railway at Church Fenton, and they replied that it was for the Parish Council to do the lighting. They recommended that the matter be referred to the Parish Council.

Mr Foster said it would be well to point out to them the danger caused by the alterations. He thought that if the Railway Co. put a light at the bottom of the approach to the bridge it would be cheaper than the Parish Council doing the lighting.

The Clerk then read the letter from the N.E.R. Co., as follows:—

"The road which crosses the Company's railway at the point in question is a public road, and any question of lighting the same is one to be dealt with by the lighting authority for the parish, and not by the Company. If such authority desires to erect and maintain lamps upon or adjoining the road in question I have no doubt the Company would be prepared to arrange terms with regard to this."

The recommendation of the Highways Committee was approved.

HIGHWAY RATE.

Mr Dobson said that the Finance Committee had had the two books, Sherburn and Ryther, and they recommended that a highway rate of 8½d. and a general sanitary rate of 3d. be passed.

Mr Parker proposed that the highway rate be 8d.

Mr Cleland, who seconded, said that they had already adopted the recommendation of the Highways Committee that the rate be 9d.

Mr Hey supported, and the amendment that the rate be 8d. was carried by a large majority.

Some amusement was caused by a demand for the names of the parishioners in arrears with calls to be given, and Mr Dobson gave the names, then being nine parishes.

SANITARY AND BUILDING

At a meeting of the Sanitary and Building Committee plans for a room at Wood-yan Chapel at Aberford Bowgate were approved.

It was decided that a new manhole cover be put down in Wetherby Road, Tadcaster.

In regard to Sherburn sewage works, tenders by Mr Thompson were accepted for removing old rails and putting down new ones, etc.

It was decided that a sewer dyke at Barkston be cleansed.

Plans by Mr S. Smith, Tadcaster, for stables at the Howden Arms, Tadcaster, were approved.

Notice was received from Leeds Corporation of intention to apply to the Local Government Board for permission to carry out a town-planning scheme which would include a part of Stutton and a part of Austhorpe.

Plans and estimates of new sewage works at Kippax, to cost £6,000, were submitted, and they were adjourned.

Mr C. F. Lightley was appointed water rate collector for Allerton Bywater and Lock Lane districts.

Tenders for supplies to Garforth Hospital are to be advertised for.

The meeting was then adjourned.

TOWN-PLANNING.

When the proposal to send the two building surveyors on a Town Planning Exhibition and Conference at Liverpool came up, Mr Midgley proposed that they do not send anybody. It would be sent be a waste of the ratepayers' money, and a waste of the inspectors' time.

Mr J. H. Ingleby said he did not agree with Mr Midgley. If they did not know what was going on in regard to these matters they never knew where they were. In the colliery districts and at Tadcaster houses would be built, and it was advisable that the Chairman of the Sanitary Committee and the inspectors should know what laws to go on in future.

The amendment was not seconded, and it was agreed that Mr Priestley, and the two building inspectors should attend the conference.

BARKSTON ASH FARM HANDS' WAGES.

ADDRESS AND DISCUSSION AT CROSSGATES

Mr Marriott Morley, J.P., who has addressed gatherings of Liberals at Wetherby and Crossgates on the land programme of the Government, spoke at a meeting at Crossgates on Friday night on the question of the minimum wage. Mr W. G. Smithson (President of the Crossgates Liberal Association) presided. Mr Morley said that it had been suggested wages might be raised by means of combination, but trades unionism, which was easily applicable in towns, was not workable in the rural districts. The farm labourer was not a free enough man to take part in trades union agitation, and it would be disastrous for him if he attempted to take a prominent part in advocating the organisation of his class. (Applause). He would raise his work and be turned out of his cottage. In Lancashire, he admitted, combination had produced some results for the farm labourers, but, generally speaking, trades unionism was not a success in the country districts. The only way, then, to give the labourer a minimum wage was to assure it to him by legal enactment, and then they put him in a position to help himself. It was important that he should have a living wage, but one of the best things would be that they would be putting him in a position of independence. They could make a man of him just as they had made a man of the town-dweller under trades unionism. Where was the minimum wage to come from? If Mr Turner said that he was unable to pay it he could appeal to the Judicial Commissioners, and they would have power to make a readjustment in the rent of his holding. The first charge on agriculture, and on any industry, must be for the worker; the second charge was for the farmer, and the landlord could have what was left by way of rent. If they proposals were carried out they would be in a position to look forward to a resuscitation in the conditions of rural life. It would not only affect the agricultural labourers, but it would be an advantage to the town-workers. (Applause).

Mr E. H. Foster also gave a short address, and a discussion was participated in by the Chairman, Messrs W. Thompson, Morgan, Batty, and others.

EXCUSES.

Excuses—Fifteen lads were charged at Selby Petty Sessions on Monday with non-playing. The defendants were seen playing at "shorker," but on the approach of the police they ran away. On being seen afterwards they gave a number of amusing replies to the police. One declared that he was only playing for sweets, and another said "I did not run because I couldn't much to lose." A third said he was standing by persuading the others to go to Sunday school. Defendants were let out with the payment of the costs, 4s. each.

SEQUEL TO A CROSSGATES FIGHT

WELL-KNOWN RESIDENTS IN COURT.

There was a sequel to a difference between two Crossgates men at the Leeds City Police Court on Monday afternoon—before the Stipendiary Magistrate (Mr C. M. Atkinson)—when John Henry Moss was summoned by Henry Glover for assault.

Mr A. Willey appeared for Glover, and Moss, who was present in court with his forehead bandaged, was represented by Mr Newell.

In opening the case, Mr Willey said his client was the son-in-law of the proprietor living at Grange Road, Crossgates, and the defendant was a milk dealer. On February 21st Glover was asked by Mrs Thomas, whose husband had a business in Leeds, to drive a pony and trap. After the journey he took the pony and trap back to the stable yard, in which the defendant had a milk float. In order to put the trap into the shed, complainant had to move the defendant's milk float, which ran into a boarding, but did no damage. Suddenly defendant came out, and seized hold of his client, striking him with his fist. He also picked up a hay-fork, and ran at Glover, who had no desire to fight. In the scuffle defendant's head came in contact with the milk float, and was cut.

Glover said that the defendant then came out and, using obscene language, asked him what he was doing. He picked up a hay-fork, and ran at him and he (Glover) tried to get it from him, and eventually Moss ran off into a barber's shop.

Answering a question put by Mr Willey, witness said he "let go at him" (meaning at Moss).

Mr Newell: Did the floss, go with a bang?

Witness: No.

Did he suggest you ought to have been more careful?—No.

Witness said he could not remember defendant saying that if he did so again there would be trouble. He could not say how defendant got the wound on his head.

Asked if he noticed the blood on Moss's face, witness said he had not seen him since until that afternoon. In the barber's shop a woman asked him to leave the defendant alone.

Harry Thomas, son of the owner of the pony and trap, and who saw the affair, gave evidence. When Glover had moved the float Moss came out and said he had better be careful or if he did it again there would be trouble. Glover then took his coat off and invited Moss to his, him. Moss went into a part of the shed. Glover following, and a fight commenced. Moss got hold of Glover by the collar and brought him outside and told him he had better be going. Glover, he said, hit Moss over the eye with his fist, and the latter ran away.

The Stipendiary asked witness if he saw anything of the fork-fight, and he replied, No."

Mr Atkinson asked who appeared to get the worst of it, and witness said that Moss did. He saw nothing of the affair in the barber's shop. Richard Hudson, a boy, said he saw Moss in Marshall Street, he was holding his hand to his eye, and blood was dripping.

Mr Atkinson said the men seemed to have had the affair in a rather old-fashioned way.

Mr Newell said that his client had been badly hurt, and had to have three stitches inserted in the wound.

Mr Atkinson remarked that, according to the boy, it was Glover who made the challenge, and he had done the damage, while, on the other hand, the challenge was taken up.

Mr Newell said if it had not been for the hairdresser the fight would have gone on.

The Stipendiary elected to hear the evidence of the hairdresser, Richard Hudson. The latter said Moss ran into his shop and Glover followed. Moss had his face covered with blood, and he seemed to be badly cut. Glover tried to strike him while in the doorway, but he (witness) got hold of him and got him outside. Witness added that one man in the shop fainted.

Mr Atkinson said he would like to write off the case in the circumstances, withdraws, and he would leave it to the solicitors to arrange about Moss getting the doctor's fee. This was agreed to.

A BOY'S DEATH.

A Boy's Death.—It was stated at an inquest in Leeds on Monday, on George Harold Harper, six, son of a gardener, of Osgodby, near Selby, that whilst trespassing in a field in order to take a "near cut" home to dinner, he was kicked on the head by a foal. He sustained concussion of the brain, and died in the Leeds Infirmary. The usual verdict was returned.

DEDICATION AT MOOR ALLERTON

A NEW LYCH-GATE

On Sunday morning the Vicar of Leeds (Dr Bickersteth) dedicated at St. John's Church, Moortown, a lych-gate which has been placed at the entrance to the churchyard by the executors of Miss Eliza Baxter, in memory of her parents, her brother, and her sister, all buried there. Miss Booker, who had lived at Chapeltown up to the time of her death a few weeks ago, had planted this memorial gift, which finds a picturesque feature to the churchyard.

The Vicar, in preaching from St. Luke vii. 14, "And He came nigh and touched the bier, and the bearers stood still," said that the purpose in a lych-gate was not only picturesque, but practical. The word lych meant dead body, and was probably the same as in Lichfield, and the lych-gate was the place where the bearers placed the body on its way to burial, after it had been possibly carried for a long distance, and before with repeated stops and slow, they placed it before God's altar, and then carried it him with his feet. He also picked up a hay-fork, and ran at Glover, who had no desire to

SATURDAY, MARCH 7th, 1914.

Every good employer recognises that loyal service deserves an adequate reward, and, whatever the labour, he would scorn to pay less than a living wage. Others buy labour as cheaply as possible, and having fulfilled the terms of their bargain, they absolve themselves from further responsibility, even should the wage—a wage, it may be, fixed by the necessities of the case—be insufficient to meet the bare wants of the worker. Judging by discussions in various parts of the country, there seems to be an identification on the part of all classes to revolt from this conception of the claims of labour upon capital, and the talk about a living wage probably foreshadows an advance in our industrial relations. Trades Unions, which have many deficiences, have managed, after years of agitation, to place the workers in many trades in a commanding position, and they are on more convincing ground for a living wage than a minimum, which becomes higher as employers make concessions. The Trade Unions may very well be left to look after their own, and employers, by the application of the principles of combination, should not be above learning something from them. What we are dealing with, bear well in mind, is a living wage-a wage which will permit of an industrious man and his family living in decency. A living wage may, of course, be a minimum wage, but, on the other hand, a minimum wage may be more than a living wage, and it is undesirable that, in applying the terms generally, care should be taken to avoid confusion. If an employer pays less than a living wage he is "sweating," and he should be dealt with as a "sweater," but, unfortunately, there is an irrational in this country to take what a living wage is. In certain industries, it is true, the State has interfered, and fixed rates of remuneration for workers, and tribunals have quite recently, in accordance with the demands of Parliament, stated what the minimum wages of miners are to be. But this is not a living wage. In New Zealand all wages are fixed by law, and it is not unlikely that in this country an effort will be made to set a certain value upon labour, so that every man who works will be assured of receiving as much as he can live upon. State interference, as we have pointed out, would not be an innovation, and, used in the interests of under-paid and sweated labour, it would be received in a righteous cause. How indignant people become on reading of the depressing conditions under which the sweated workers labour, yet not far away instances of oppressive employment exist, but they are ignorant concerning them, and they are not troubled. The "sweater" does not exist in the big cities only; he will be found in every part of the land. When the railway men came out on "strike" and paralysed the trade of the country, public sympathy was, to some extent, with them, because it was recognised, when the facts and figures were published, that certain grades of the servants were paid at rates which not considered a living wage. Since then advances have been given, and in our own district porters have had an increase of 3s. per week—a sum, however small, that makes considerable difference in the weekly family budget. More than that, it is an admission by the Railway Company that the men were inadequately paid. The railway men achieved their purpose by combination, but this principle cannot, for various reasons, be applied to all classes of workers. The worst-paid man is the least able to defend himself, let alone adopt aggressive measures for his own betterment, and, just as a blab is recently said at Manchester in regard to working women they need guidance and protection. Some employers may argue that their undertaking will not afford a higher wages bill, but that statement may be swept aside, because in the very same trade it will generally be found that men are being paid wages on which they can live. The members of a local building society decided, to their own satisfaction, that wages should be the first charge on a business, and if everybody agreed with this no worker would have less than a living wage. A voluntary movement, however, will never give satisfaction, because, whilst the just master would do his duty manfully, the selfish employer would not pay a minimum unless he were forced. Thus the good employer would be penalized in his business, because he would not compete on fair terms with the "sweater." It can only be done by compulsion. Many people are greatly concerned as to the meaning and amount of a living wage, but if the principle were adopted, no difficulty would be experienced in settling the amount. Minimum rates paid in combined trades might not have much bearing on the question, because these might provide for something more than a mere living wage, and it would be foolish to assume that because a combined trade has a certain minimum rate a living standard would be the result. This problem affects the nation in various ways, and the continuance of present conditions will be injurious both to employers and men. It could easily be proved that well-paid men bring better returns to the employer than ill-paid labour, and a Mark Tydeus farmer might probably illustrate the point he declared that one Yorkshireman was equal to three southern labourers. Better living tends to greater efficiency, and vice-versa. The question, too, affects all labour, because the supply comes from the base, as it were, and if conditions at the bottom were improved the effect would be felt throughout the whole labour market. Towndwellers would be benefically affected in that they and they would benefit physically, while the agricultural labourer, in the enjoyment of better conditions, would probably prefer to remain on the land, instead of migrating to the towns and running the risk of being unemployed. It would be impossible for any one to sell labour under a living wage, and competition among the unskilled would, to some extent, be removed. Moreover, it would have a marked effect on the rates. The great majority of paupers are drawn from two classes—the aged-poor and the under-paid, and if it were possible, owing to higher wages, to raise a better type of men and women, both classes would be affected. A living wage would not give people a chance of getting much in hand, but their position would be improved, and they would not so readily avail themselves of the help of the poor law. It is only by enabling people to help themselves that progress can be made, and it would be worth while giving the necessary helping hand.

ROTHWELL.

At Oulton All Saints' Day School Sunday School Concert on Tuesday last, Leeds medical charities agitated up, and, last year's.

DRUNKARD.—At the Leeds West Riding Quarter Sessions on Tuesday Dixon Todd, labourer, of Rothwell, was summoned for having been drunk and disorderly in Rothwell on Tuesday last. P.C. Bennett proved the case, and a fine of 7s. 6d. and costs was imposed.

DOMINOES.—In connection with the Rothwell Working Men's Club (Limited), Hyde Terrace, a handsome cup was held on Saturday night. There was a large entry of members, and the first and second prize was won by Mr. A. Cromack, and the third prize by Mr. W. Good.

FOOTBALL.—Rothwell Wednesday played Hedingley Cycling Club at Rothwell on Wednesday. Headingley attacked, and Graham scored within five minutes, but both equalled before the interval. The second half started with Rothwell on the attack, and Taylor and Hary were each for Rothwell, while Hird got through his own goal. Graham and Hopton each scored, making the score 5—2 in favour of Rothwell. Rothwell Constitution's goal, Headingley Cycling Club 3 goals.

A WOMAN'S PLUCK.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Jane Bennett, widow, living in Hunslet, was summoned for having been drunk in Rothwell. P.C. Leaky said that about 12.50 a.m. one morning last week he found the defendant lying in the roadway in Carlton Lane, Rothwell, and strongly dismissed. Mr Allison was attended to by Dr. Stevenson, and was able to resume his duties on Thursday.

TEMPERANCE.—The last fortnightly meeting of the Rothwell branch of the Women's Total Abstinence League, held on Thursday night in the Wesleyan Schoolroom, took the form of a musical evening, given by the Capt. and Lass. of the Rothwell Corps of the Salvation Army. There was a good attendance, and the items were much appreciated. Solos and recitations were given by the Lass., who posed in their Salvation Army uniform, and by Capt. Whitehead, Capt. Morton Kay, dearly beloved husband of Jane Annie Kay, and eldest son of the late Henry and Mary Kay, of North Street and Roundhay Road.

POTTER.—February 26th, at Ladywash, Lidget Park Road, Roundhay, in her 74th year, Harriet, widow of Robert Potter.

ROBINSON.—On February 26th, at 14, Hudson's Buildings, Allerton Bywater, Elizabeth Robinson, widow of the late Benjamin Robinson, aged 77 years.

STUART.—On February 27th, at School Lane, Kippax, aged 36, Minnie, beloved wife of Tom Stuart.

STUART.—On March 1st, at Laurel Grove, Selby, late of 143, Ladypit Lane, Nancy, the wife of George Sherwood.

TAYLOR.—March 3, 1914, at 14, Church Street, Woodlesford, aged 18, John Deakin, youngest son of Bryce and Elizabeth Taylor.

WATHWRIGHT.—February 27th, at Haigh Road, Rothwell, Elizabeth, beloved wife of Joseph Walsewright.

LEEDS WEST RIDING PETTY SESSIONS.—The magistrates on the Bench at the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday were Mr. J. W. Morkill (in the chair), Col. Stagoe Musgrave, Mr R. D. Kitson, Mr H. Lupton, Mr J. R. Cross, and Mr E. Parkin.

DEATH OF CHAIRMAN OF HUNSLET GUARDIANS.—After an illness extending over several months Mr Edward Green, Chairman of the Hunslet Board of Guardians, died on Sunday, in his seventy-fifth year. Up to about twenty years ago he carried on business as a cabinet-maker, and since he retired he had been much interested in Poor Law work, representing the West Hunslet Ward for seventeen years. He has been twice Chairman of the Board. For nearly half a century he was a well-known member of the Liberal party in Hunslet, being generally looked upon as a man of moderate views. He was twice married, and leaves a grown-up family of two sons and three daughters. One of the sons is Councillor B. Green, who is a Liberal member of the Leeds City Council, representing the West Hunslet Ward. The funeral took place on Wednesday morning at Woodhouse Hill Cemetery, and the service was conducted by the cemetery chaplain. The chief mourners were Mrs Edward Green, widow; Councillor B. Green and Mrs B. Green, son and daughter-in-law; Mr Clifford Green, son; Miss Lucy and Miss Maud Green, daughters; Mr and Mrs Hoyle, son-in-law and daughter; Misses Elsie and Annie Green, granddaughters; Messrs J. E., J. W., and Robert Green, grandsons; Mrs Fred Green, sister-in-law. Included:—Aldermen Pickersgill, Councillors Hollings and Eddison, and the following members of the Hunslet Board of Guardians:—Messrs T. Thomas (vice-chairman), J. Gyvins, J. Butterick, E. B. Pickersgill, T. Bennett, J. R. Chapple, T. G. Conyers, W. Schofield, and Father T. Cody; ex-Guardians Armistead, Barrett, Bulmer, Dr. A. Hayward, Lawson, Nield, and Park; Mr F. W. Mee, Clerk to the Hunslet Board; Miss Dagnall, Mrs Rowe, Mr F. W. Spence, secretary, Mr Alfred Hunslet Clough, Mr T. Sowden, workhouse master, Rooth well Haigh; Mr James Tetley and Mr E. B Lawson, overseers; Doctors Wainman, Smith and Mason. Apart from floral emblems of membership, family wreaths were sent by members of the Hunslet Board of Guardians, the Hunslet Overseers, the Children's Home, the Clerk and assistants (on behalf of the Staff), the Master and Matron Hunslet Workhouse, and the West Hunslet Liberal Association.

ALLERTON BYWATER

At St. Mary's Church, Allerton Bywater, a sum of £1 14s. was collected for Leeds medical charities.

READY FOR ULSTER.—On Friday evening, speaking at Rawcliffe, near Goole, Mr Campbell Johnston, the Unionist candidate for the Osgoldcross Division, made reference to Home Rule, stating that the extent of his keenness should be measured by his action. At the present time his name was on the list of those who were prepared to fight for Ulster whenever their services were required. Technically, he might be legally guilty of high treason, but he considered it his moral duty, and he was prepared to do it, and pay any penalty which his action might bring upon him.

BOWERS ALLERTON

On Saturday afternoon, the Bowers Allerton had a match with St. Anthony's in the Leeds and District Football League, and Bowers Allerton was easily by five goals to nothing.

CROSSGATES

"Does the Christian Church demonstrate Christianity?" This is the title of a debate that will take place at the meeting of the Baptist Fellowship at Whitkirk on Tuesday evening. See advert.

The Leeds Corporation have given notice of their intention to apply to the Local Government Board for authority to prepare two town-planning schemes, one at Bramhope Moor, and one in the Harehills, Roundhay, and Crossgates district.

MR NELSON'S COLLECTION OF SHELLS.—A very many of more than usual interest took place at the Leeds University on Saturday afternoon, when Mr A. G. Lupton, Pro-Chancellor of the University, formally received, on behalf of the University, the cabinets of shells and a selection of the scientific books of the late William Nelson, of Crossgates, along with a portrait of the collector. Mr Nelson, who was a native of Leeds, was a working man, but the fact that he had no struggle hard for his livelihood did not prevent him taking an ardent interest in the study of shells. For fifty years he pursued his hobby and his collection of freshwater mollusks is regarded as the finest in England. The collection has been acquired by a committee, the chairman of which, Mr J. W. Taylor, made the formal presentation on Saturday. To the University Museum Mr Nelson's wife also presented a collection of Mr Nelson's books; and on behalf of the Conchological Society of Great Britain and Ireland the vice-president, Mr Collier, accepted some rare shells and a replica of the portrait.

A SUCCESSFUL AVIATOR.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday John Stuart White, commercial traveller, of Crossgates, was summoned for riding a motor cycle and side-car without a red-rear light. P.C. Stothard stated that on Saturday, February 22nd, he was on duty in Whitkirk, when the defendant came along on a motor cycle with side-car attached, and there was no red rear light, the light having gone out. Witness stopped defendant, who took off the lamp at the back and lighted it. The lamp was an ordinary bicycle lamp, the glass of which had been covered with red paper. The officer admitted that it showed distinctly when lighted. Defendant said he had formerly used an electric lamp for the rear red light, but the globe had been smashed, and he had the night used a bicycle lamp. He asked the Bench to let him off on payment of costs, or by putting something to the poor-box, as a fine, however small, would mean the endorsement of his license, which he had possessed for ten years, and of which he was rather proud. The Chairman said that as defendant had made such a good defence, the case would be dismissed on payment of costs.

LITERARY SOCIETY.—At the fortnightly meeting of the Crossgates Literary Society in the Wesleyan Lecture Hall on Monday evening Mr F. R. Gaunt, the hon. sec., read a paper on "Charlotte Bronte." Mr E. Hawkesworth (the President) was in the chair, and there was a good attendance of members. Mr Gaunt's paper was admirably written, and it was marked by discretion and judgment. In an excellent manner he related the familiar story of the Brontes—a story which never seems to lose the interest of those who admire the talented family, and then he made a critical survey of Charlotte Bronte's works—"The Professor," "Jane Eyre," and "Villette," pointing out the characteristics of each, in conclusion reading excellent love-letters of the authoress, published not so long ago. At the close the Rev. J. Miller Hamilton, in an interesting little speech on the Brontes and books written about them, proposed a vote of thanks to Mr Carlton, and he raised the question as to whether or not Charlotte Bronte had exhausted her powers. Mr Morgan seconded, the Rev. B. Guyer (vicar of Whitkirk) supported, and the resolution was cordially passed.

BAPTIST CHURCH FELLOWSHIP.—At the weekly meeting of the Baptist Church Fellowship at Whitkirk on Tuesday evening Mr W. Clayton, incorporated accountant, of Leeds, read a paper on "Rates, taxes, and labour as they affect the small trader." Mr F. T. Hyde, of Potter Hill, presided. Mr Clayton showed how assessments for schedule D income tax were made and collected, and discussed the question of depreciation. He suggested that the Income-tax Act should, if possible, be codified, and that a wife helped her husband continuously in his business two abatements ought to be allowed—one for the husband and one for the wife. With regard to the use of books, he stated that in his opinion many business men did not make the best use of their books, pointing out that the primary value of books was not to show the financial position but to tell a man whether his costings, etc., were correct. Mr Clayton also dealt with the credit system, and pointed out that the small trader, if he did not protect himself by combination, would ultimately be compelled to close in consequence of the competition of multiple shops and co-operative stores. With regard to co-operative stores, he said that such societies could not be made to pay Schedule D Income Tax, and he thought this, this was rather unfair seeing that they helped to relieve the rates and the State on just the same proportion as the private traders. In his opinion, if co-operative stores were to pay income tax the cost of dealing with the re-claims would be small, members would absorb considerably more than the tax collected. An interesting discussion, which followed, was taken part in by Mr Whitlow, Mr Wm. Diggle Hartop, Mr Morgan, Hardcastle, Whitaker, and others. A cordial vote of thanks was passed to Mr Clayton on the motion of Mr. E. W. Beaumont, seconded by Mr J. E. Baker.

GARFORTH

Mr Robert Jarrad wishes to thank the four forth Prize Band, all collectors, and subscribers for the magnificent sum they responded on his behalf.—Advt.

GOLF CLUB.—In the competition for the monthly medal at Garforth Golf Links on Saturday the results were:—H. F. Smithson, 82 - 23 - 59; Wm. Smith, 104 - 44 - 60; J. Tate, 104 - 44 - 60; Smith, 106 - 22 - 84; J. Prince, 112 - 28 - 84; M. Wark, 104 - 18 - 86; J. Simpson, 116 - 28 - 88.

PIGEON'S NEST.—On Wednesday evening Garforth Silver Prize Band and Sons of the instructions of the executors of the late Mr George Bailey, offered for sale by public auction dwelling-house, at Main Street, Garforth. The property was purchased by Messrs. G. B. Marshall and Sons, of Garforth, for £245. Mr J. W. Wilson, Harrogate, was the auctioneer.

BILLIARD MATCH.—Garforth Working Men's Club played their return match with Garforth Conservative Club on Friday night, and the former won by 1,322 to 1,030. Details (Working Men's names first):—H. Hodgson 250, 1; Floyd 150, 0; Kitson 150, 1; F. Simpson 72, 1; Rockhouse (capt.) 150, 1; Jno. Bowker 150, 1; Birch 150, 1; N. Scrimshaw 78, 0; Hill (capt.) 1; Allison 142, 0; Simpson 150, 1; Tetley 115, 1; Simpson 150, 1; J. Brabon 150, 1; Wm. Yeomth 144, 0; W. Simpson 150, 1; Scrimshaw 1; E. W. Ogden 0.

DRINK.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday William Kershaw, miner, of Garforth, was charged with having been drunk and disorderly at Garforth on Saturday night last. Police-constable Atkinson stated that on the night in question he came across Kershaw, who was making use of obscene language. He spoke to him and asked him for his name and address, but Kershaw refused to give either, and then the officer would have to lock him up if he wanted his name. He was taken into custody and on the way to the lock-up became very violent, necessitating the putting on of the handcuffs. A fine of 10s. and costs was imposed.

PICTURE HOUSE.—The pictures shown last week included a well-acted and interesting story of a soldier's love entitled "The Broken Oath." A remarkable picture was "The reincarnation of Karma." An Indian legend of years ago introducing us to the strange views and customs of the people of that land of mystery, showing a train actually on the "Iron steed," a smart American story, and "His enemy," the enemy being the man's own wife. This week comes a change in the selected programmes. See advert for times and prices.

HALTON

Halton Institute, playing in the Non-Political Clubs Billiard League, have been elected by Hedley's to play in the League.

ALLOWED TO GO.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Walter Cartwright Holmes, a labourer, of no fixed abode, was charged with begging at Halton on Sunday. P.C. Wetherall gave evidence of arrest, and the Bench taking into consideration the fact that Holmes had been locked up since Sunday, allowed him to go, and warned him to settle down to some work.

B.W.T.A.—The second monthly meeting for women, arranged by the Halton Branch of the B.W.T.A., was held in the Guild Room at the Wesleyan Chapel on Monday. Mrs W. S. Crosthwaite presided, and Mrs Rennard, of Shipley, gave a most interesting account of her trip to Canada and the United States in connection with the Women's Temperance Union, in Brooklyn last autumn. Miss Garner's solo "My treasure" was much appreciated. Refreshments were served at the close.

HIS EXCUSE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday there were a number of cases brought up by the Waterloo Main Colliery Company for absence from employment, to show cause why they should not pay a sum of 5s. a dam for damages for absenting themselves from their work without having given notice. One excuse given was that the defendant "overslept himself." The Chairman: That seems to be a reasonable excuse (Laughter). Mr. W. Wright (for the Colliery Co.): But hardly legal. The Chairman: I said reasonable, not legal (Laughter). In all the cases brought up a fine of 5s. and costs was imposed.

KIPPAX

C.E.M.S.—A meeting in connection with the C.E.M.S. was held on Tuesday evening, when a paper was given by Mr Oxbridge, of Bowers Allerton, on "Church history." An interesting discussion followed.

GOUGH'S OFFENCE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday George Arthur Gough, miner, of Kippax, was summoned for indecent conduct in Chapel Road, Kippax, on Saturday, February 21st. On the evidence of P.C. Davies, he was fined 2s. 6d. and costs.

DRINK.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Thomas Dixon, engine-driver, and John Simpson, miner, both of Kippax, were summoned for having been drunk and disorderly at Garforth on Sunday last. P.C. Hogg proved the case, and each defendant was fined 5s. and costs.

DOGGY CASE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Harry Bentley, grocer, of Kippax, was summoned for allowing his dog to stray in the street without the name of its owner appearing on the collar. P.C. Taylor proved the case, and a fine of 1s. and costs was imposed.

EDUCATION COMMITTEE.—The monthly meeting of Kippax Education Committee was held on Wednesday.—Mr E. Parker, J.P., presiding. The other members present were Mr. J. Cripaeli, Mr J. Harding, Mr A. Atack, Mr J. Farrell, and Mrs Lowther, with the clerk (Mr J. Farrell). Mr H. Radcliffe sent in a communication about the discontinuation of the dancing class at Kippax, and he asked for the use of the Council School for a social on Monday last. The application was granted. Mr Howell applied for the use of the Council School for a social, the probable date being March 20th, for the students connected with the evening classes. The application was granted. Mr B. Ledbury's application for an increase of salary for his work as caretaker of the Great Preston School, which was deferred at the last meeting, was considered, and the committee recommended an increase of £5. Mr Webb wrote asking that the recommendation of the committee be given to the application for her salary during the time she acted as matron, obtaining on the West Riding, viz., £145, and Miss Silcock also applied for her salaries to be raised to the minimum, viz., £120. It was decided to recommend an £8 advance in each case. Increase of salary to the following teachers were approved:—Miss Goodall £80 to £85; Miss Handley, £60 to £70; Miss Fox, Scott, £75 to £80; Mr Howell, £100 to £105; Miss Hudson, £70 to £75; Miss Gough £80 to £85, and Miss Gill, £40 to £45. The committee appointed Miss Rhodes and Miss Duffy as assistant teachers in the Kippax Council School.

UNITED METHODIST CHURCH.—The church anniversary was celebrated on Sunday when Mr S. Holloway, of Leeds, was the preacher. In the afternoon a meeting was held, and Mr Holloway delivered an address on "Temptation." The choir rendered special music under the direction of Mr J. Radcliffe. The solo parts were sung by Miss Halliday (soprano), Miss A. Goodall (contralto), Mr D. Smith (tenor), and Mr J. Farrant (bass). Mr J. Radcliffe conducted the choir. Item, anthem (Handel) and "Soldiers of the cross." Mr W. Haddon officiated at the organ and Mr C. Peters presided. The proceeds were £8 10s. The evening meeting of the anniversary was held on Monday, when addresses were given by the Rev. Isaac Hunt, of Methley, Rev. Hodgson, of Castleford, Rev. Hodgson, of Pontefract, and the Rev. Wm. Hall, of Normanton.

LIBERALISM AT BARWICK-IN-ELMET.

MR E. H. FOSTER AND INSURANCE BENEFITS

FARM LABOURERS' WAGES—COTTAGES TO BE BUILT.

MR MARTIN HARVEY AND THE VOTE.

Under the auspices of the Barkston Ash Liberal Association a meeting was held in the Church School at Barwick on Friday evening, and there was a good attendance of electors. Mr F. W. Sutcliffe (Chairman of the Association) presided, and he was supported by Mr E. H. Foster, J.P. (prospective Liberal candidate for the Division), Mr Martin Harvey, of Peckfield Lodge, South Milford; Captain and Mrs Glover, of Collingham, etc.

"THERE IS NO PLEASING THEM."

Mr Foster, who had a capital reception, said that during the week there had been several interesting debates in the House of Commons. The first was in regard to the modifying proposals on Home Rule which Mr Asquith intended to lay before the House, but they did not manage to draw him; in fact, they never managed to draw Mr Asquith. (Laughter). The duty of the Government was to deal with the Estimates first, and the Prime Minister told the Opposition that if they helped him in that he would at the earliest date place before the House the proposals referred to. But the Tories were difficult to deal with. If Mr Asquith, or any Liberal Minister, said that he regarded the Home Rule Bill as requiring no modification they said "We are incapable of seeing the gulf's side, and you are provoking civil war." If Mr Asquith said he was willing to modify the Bill in order to get it passed by common sense, the Tories said "He is running away, and afraid to carry the Bill through." (Laughter). There was no pleasing them.

INSURANCE—AMOUNTS PAID.

In regard to the Insurance Act, a large number of Tory speakers had been saying they objected to the Insurance Act because it was compulsory. They were in favour of insurance on a voluntary basis. By that they understood they intended the employers' contribution should be voluntary. They realised that that was not good tactics, and the other night Mr Bonar Law said that they intended it should be compulsory on the employer but that it should be voluntary for the insured person. (Laughter). He went so far as to say that if an employer gave work to a thousand hands and got two insured and got sure that he would still have to continue to pay for the one who were not insured. They could not devise any system into which that would fit at all. He pointed out that in the first year of the Insurance Act there were 26 million attendances by workers at a cost of 5½ millions; there were 14 millions of orders to benefit payments at a cost of 2½ millions, and nearly a million maternity benefits at a cost of 1½ and of 1½ millions. Applause.) It was preposterous for any one to say that the working classes had not benefited, and benefited very largely, from the Insurance Act. Tories were now urging the payment of all in work for insurance and payment of Members of Parliament, as if the all had anything to give to the Party. If anything was said about it in Berkshire Ash he asked them to question Mr Lane Fox, because he was receiving £4000 a year. (Laughter).

ELECTIONEERING AND HOME RULE.

In regard to the Irish question contest in the Leith Burghs, which was fought largely upon answering to "Home Rule," but the real significance of elections was in changing the feeling in the country in regard to Home Rule, and in Leith there was a 5% large majority in favour of the Government to get home Rule. It was rather singular to add, that in the Leith Burghs the Government had paid the penalty of recent legislation. In Scotland there was an old system of house letting from May to May, and the House Letting Act was passed, bringing the Scottish system more into line with the English system. The effect was in the greater number of removals, and it was estimated that since the present register was made up there had been 2,000 removals. If it had not been for that Act which they passed in the interests of the working classes they should easily have won by a substantial majority. (Hear, hear).

FARM HANDS' WAGES

Referring to the land proposals, he said the Government proposed to set up Wages Boards throughout the country to fix a minimum wage for agricultural labourers. (Hear, hear). Why was that necessary? For the simple reason that in many parts of the country the agricultural labourer was not getting a stage upon which he could live. (Hear, hear). In Norfolk and Oxford, where there was no alternative employment as there was, more or less, in the North, their wages were 12s. and 14s. A great majority were paid under 18s., and a large percentage under 16s. He asked anyone present if a man could keep a wife and bring up a family on such a wage. (Cries of "No."). It was a singular thing that in the days when the farmers were doing well the agricultural labourers were not well paid. In England and Wales there were fourteen agricultural labourers, and whilst doing important work—work which was by no means unskilled—surely they ought to have a wage upon which to keep body and soul together. (Loud applause). The Government intended that they should have it.

COTTAGES FOR LABOURERS

He had seen it announced that Mr Lane Fox was to build model cottages on his estate, and he was glad of it, for it showed that the Liberal campaign was bearing fruit. (Applause). He did not, however, think that the building of cottages by individual landlords would meet the case. Throughout England there was a tremendous scarcity of cottages, and they were told by agriculturists that cottages could not be built that could let at a figure to pay reasonable interest on the outlay. If they said that, they might take it that a sufficient number of cottages to meet the needs would not be erected. Then it was for the State to step in. Often were, in some cases, living miles from their work, and others were living in unsuitable and insanitary houses. In Ireland they had erected 40,000 cottages, and Sir Walter Nugent recently told him that the scheme had been a boon to the whole community. (Applause). The Government intended to bring that immense boon to England. They were going to acquire land at a reasonable price—that was one of the benefits they were to get out of the valuation—and they were to build four cottages to the acre, so that the labourer would have a piece of land to cultivate (—hear, hear)—so that he would not be living in a house belonging to his employer, and so that if he lost his work he would not be turned out of his house. His land would be something to fall back upon if he lost his job, and he would have time to look round for employment. They would, therefore, get conditions under which men would have more independence, and be what politics and religion they liked (Applause). Under the land scheme, they were to give the farmer security of tenure, and greater protection in regard to game.

THE LORDS—NEXT ELECTION

Having dealt with the reconstruction of the Second Chamber, he said the Lords were trying to make capital out of the Marconi affair, but when they tried to be vindictive they were sooner found out, and the Englishman was fair-minded and did not like it. (Applause). Lord Lansdowne would probably have preferred to have left the matter alone, but his followers insisted on the appointment of a Select Committee. For it to be one good thing more than they had selected a committee of fair men, but, unfortunately for them, fair men would not sit. (Laughter). They tried to get the Law Lords, but they were not having it—(laughter)—and even some of the fairer men in the Unionist Party were not eager to take part in this solemn inquiry. Although he did not think they were to have an election in the immediate future, yet it might be so. One could never tell what the election might cause, and he wanted them to be prepared and make up their minds as to how they were to vote. Next election was to be one of tremendous importance. In order to complete the work of the previous elections they must win again. The battle was between the aristocracy and the democracy—whether, when the people returned a Liberal majority, the House of Lords would be a responsible House or a House of Lords. All the talk about Home Rule was not the real thing that troubled the Unionist Party. The real thing was the Parliament Act, and they did not intend that the Government should pass legislation against the will of the House of Lords. It would rest with them to say whether the land programme, which meant so much for the people of Barwick, should be carried. (Loud applause).

VOLUNTARY INSURANCE A FAILURE

Mr Martin Harvey (President of the Barkston Ash Division Liberal Association) said, in reference to Mr Bonar Law and insurance, that he was under the impression that they had had voluntary insurance and that all parties had agreed that it was a failure. They did not manage to get the people insured, and many poor people were left out, and did not get any benefit. The Liberals not only agreed to do something, but they found the money to do it with without increasing the taxes of the poor. (Applause). When it was found necessary to put a little on tobacco the working-men paid up in a noble manner, but the Lords and Dukes squealed when they were called on to pay their share. If they could read the minds of their Tory friends he thought they would find that they would like the voluntary system applied to the minimum wage. They said they agreed the agricultural labourer should have more money, but they would not do anything to help him to get it. (Applause). He had attended a Tory meeting in Scotland, and he heard a Tory speaker actually say that the Government had increased the taxation without giving the people a fraction for it. What about old age pensions? (Applause). He did not think there were ten men in that room who would have had the vote had it not been for the Liberals. (Voice: Do you think they would be living?—(laughter). He did not know about that, but they would not be living under such comfortable conditions. (Applause). He proposed a vote of thanks to Mr Foster for his address.

"AFRAID TO SHOW THEIR COLOURS."

Captain Glover, in seconding, said the Liberal Party gave them the only vote but the ballot. There were men in Barkston Ash, however, who were afraid to show their colours lest it should injure them. Labourers might have a difficulty in some cases in paying the insurance, but if they had a reasonable wage, such as it was proposed to fix, the insurance money would be very easily found. (Applause).

The resolution was cordially passed, and Mr Foster, in reply, said that there was no doubt a change was coming over the Division, especially in the agricultural parts, and if they had placed a voting stockshed before the next election they would no longer be represented by a Tory in the House of Commons. (Applause).

On the exit of Mr Foster, a similar compliment was paid to the Chairman.

GARFORTH AND SOUTH MILFORD FOOTBALL DISPUTE.

APPEAL BY GARFORTH—A DECISION UPSET

On Tuesday night at the Station Hotel, Crossgates, the West Riding Football Appeals Board gave a decision which is to have some effect in the granting of transfers in Barkston Ash area. It will be remembered that Garforth W.R. lodged an objection to their match with South Milford standing on the ground that H. Chilton was not eligible to play for Milford, but the Barkston Ash Executive over-ruled the objection and forfeited the deposit. Against this ruling Garforth appealed, contending that the decision was contrary to the League rules, and also that the objection was on a frivolous one. Mr T. S. Slater appeared for Garforth, and Mr W. A. Osborne represented the Barkston Ash Executive. Mr Fred Waterhouse, of Leeds, presided.

Mr Slater stated that at an Executive meeting, held on January 6th, Mr Johnson (South Milford) asked Mr Osborne if he had received notice as to the transfer of H. Chilton from Monk Fryston, and Mr Osborne replied in the negative. Mr Johnson said the man had applied for his transfer and it had not been granted. He (Mr Slater) asked if he had communicated with the hon. sec., and he said he had not, whereupon he said they were out of order. The rule distinctly stated that no transfer could be granted after January 1st. Garforth W.R. went to South Milford, and Chilton played against them. It being stated the transfer had been granted, and confirmed by Mr Osborne. Garforth lodged an objection, and they wrote to Monk Fryston for information. They were told the transfer was not applied for until December 31st, and the secretary of the club could not grant it until it had gone before the committee. Mr Johnson said the application was made before December 31st, but it was delivered on that date to the secretary of Monk Fryston Club. The paper was dated December 29th, and why was it not sent until December 31st. It was also alleged that the application was not in Chilton's writing.

Mr Waterhouse: Did you contest that point before the Barkston Ash Executive?.

Mr Slater: I did not know then.

Mr Waterhouse said that they could not take that into consideration, as it had not been raised before.

Mr Osborne said that when the question was raised at the Executive meeting on January 6th he said he would write and see what he could make of it.

Mr Waterhouse: Did you take it that on January 6th the transfer was not completed?

Mr Osborne said he was told to ask whether the application had been made in time. Mr Johnson said it had been made before the end of December.

In answer to the Chairman, Mr Osborne said that, acting on precedent, he confirmed the transfer, dating it from the date application was made. On other occasions he had had it to do, not as regarded the end of the year, and he cited a case in the Templenewsam Cup Competition, where a club refused transfers to two men. He granted them on Friday, and the men played for the club they desired on Saturday. After Mr Johnson brought the matter up at the Executive meeting he wrote to the Monk Fryston secretary, and the latter went to see him at Sherburn. He brought the application with him, and that was how he knew it was dated December 29th. He told him (Mr Osborne) that the transfer was applied for on December 31st, and he thought that date was as good as the 29th.

The Board having considered the matter in private, the Chairman said they were of opinion that there was no doubt about the application being made in time for the transfer to be completed in order, and they had decided to uphold Garforth's appeal. The precedent which had been followed in granting transfers was, he said, a dangerous one. All transfers should be applied for in time so that they could without doubt come within the rules. If a club was guilty of withholding a transfer, they should hunt it up and punish it. They, of course, held that it was not a frivolous objection, and the Barkston Ash Executive's decision was over-ruled.

Mr Osborne asked if the player was eligible to play for South Milford.

The Chairman said he was not. His transfer was not properly effected.

THEFT OF COAL AT MIDDLETON.

MAGISTRATES' WARNING

At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions a married woman named Amy Smith, of Hunslet, was summoned by the managers of the Middleton Colliery Company for stealing coal to the value of 1s.6pence.

Evidence was given that about 7-30 a.m. on Wednesday, February 18th, the defendant was seen coming from the direction of the New Pit on the Old Wood, Middleton, carrying a sack. She was stopped, and the sack was found to contain coal. When asked where she had got it from she replied that it had been picked up on the waggon rails. The officer pointed out that the coal was dry, and the night had been wet.

The manager of the New Pit, said the coal appeared to have been picked up under the screen. Witness added that they had a number of people from Hunslet continually coming to the pit, and though they had been warned, they still came, and the Company thought the only way to stop them would be by bringing a case as an example.

The magistrates said they agreed with the action of the Company, but as the costs were heavy the case would be dismissed.

The Chairman gave warning that if others came before the court on a similar charge they would not have to expect the same treatment.

MATCHES FOR NEXT SATURDAY

LEEDS SENIOR LEAGUE.

Rothwell White Rose v. Allerton Bywater (A. Hedley).

New Worsley Gas Works v. Rothwell Parish Church (W. J. Poynter).

Methley Perseverance v. Great Preston White Rose (J. T. Lewsley).

LEEDS AND DISTRICT LEAGUE.

St. Anthony's v. Allerton Church Institute (G. H. Beight).

Kippax Woodville v. Oulton St. John's (T. Murray).

Glass Houghton Colliery v. Rothwell White Rose (G. Walker).

While hunting with the Bramham Moor Hounds on Monday Lieutenant F. P. Wye, of the 3rd Battery Royal Field Artillery, Leeds, had a nasty fall owing to his horse coming down at a ditch. As he lay on the ground he was kicked, and received injuries to his face and head. He was conveyed back to the Chapeltown Barracks in a motor car.

BRAMHAM MOOR HUNT.

MEET AT BICKERTON BAR.

The Bramham Moor Hounds met on Friday at Bickerton Bar, and a "cap" was taken for the Hunt Servants' Benevolent Fund. Owing to his accident on Monday Farrelly was still unable to carry the horn, and Hoare hunted hounds. By request, they went down to the Cowthorpe Covers to draw, and they found a brace in Hewlock Field Rush. They took one of them along by Goose Moor and Gallows Wood to Armytage Plantation, and then they ran parallel with the road to Walshford Bridge, and he appeared to have got to ground by the Nidd side.

Afterwards they went on to Wilstrop, and found in the Rush. The fox came away over the Sandy Lane, and with frequent checks they ran to Cattal Brickworks, and Cattal Bridge, going on the banks of the Nidd, and he got to ground. Another fox was halloed at Minster Haggs, and Hoare took hounds, but the fox had been gone too long. They went back to Wilstrop, which was blank, as was Marston Whin. Then they tried Hutton Thorn, where they found, and had a very nice gallop of an hour and a quarter, hounds running well.

They first went to Rufforth village, pointing for Grange Wood, and to the back of Hessay village. Then they went along the Big Drain, and turning left headed for Moreton Station on the right, over the Afterwith Lane close to the Fox Cover, pointing for Hutton Thorn. Being headed on the road he turned away left-handed, again pointing for Marston Station, which was left on the right, over the railway, and the Red House drain. Then turning to the right he was given up on the Boroughbridge Road close to Hessay Station. This concluded the day's sport.

The "cap" realised £48.

MEET AT HOOK MOOR.

On Saturday the Bramham Moor hounds met at Hook Moor. Farrelly was not out, and the first whipper-in hunted hounds. The whole of the Parlington coverts were drawn blank.

Mr C. F. Ryder's whin did not hold, but a fox was picked up close by in the plantation adjoining Wood House Farm, and running through Ryder's Whin pointed for Saw Woods, but doubled back to the whin. After some delay he was hunted towards Potterton, but entering the Becca coverts, the pack changed foxes, and after a turn of the coverts, crossed the Leeds and Tadcaster Road, close to White Well Farm.

Running sharply through Black Fen, the fox turned back at the Bramham Cross Roads end of the woodland, and was hot-after a rather unsatisfactory hunt of an hour and twenty minutes.

Mr Darcy B. Wilson's coverts on Whinmoor were next drawn, and a fox found in the new plantation provided a good gallop of 50 minutes, part of it within the boundaries of the city of Leeds.

After running through the Whinmoor coverts, the fox left on the Seacroft side, and, taking the pack past Limekiln Gate, bent left-handed, and, running to the west of Seacroft Green, went through Fox Wood, and turning to the right across the Leeds and Wetherby Road, near the foot of the Wellington Hill, and while heading for Roundhay Park, was marked to ground in a drain near Beechwood, the residence of Mr Rowland Barran, M.P. The day would have been altogether bad had it not been redeemed by the pleasant suburban hunt of the afternoon.

MEET AT SICKLINGHALL.

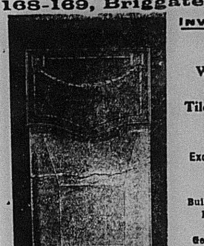
The day was gloriously fine, but scent far from good when the Bramham Moor hounds met on Monday at Sicklinghall. The New Gorse was blank. A fox was away from the Punch Bowls at once, and breasting Barrowby Hill, was hunted with frequent checks, with Ingham's Gorse on the left, pointing for the Haggs.

The pack were coming to a standstill when a "holloa" near Cocked Hat Whin put them going again, and ran slowly dragging on to Stockeld Park nothing more was done, Devonshire Wood and the coverts at Woodhall were blank. A fox from the West Plantations crossed to the Flamelate at Woodhall, and was abandoned. Carlston Whin and Woolah Head were next drawn without a fox. From Swindon Wood the pack ran slowly past Swindon Bowls, and were headed near Kerby. A hunt of 45 minutes, which only lacked pace to make it good began at Weston New Gorse.

Reynard was headed through Weston, and with it on the right, to Weston Hill, now ran parallel with the road to Riffa, and such was perhaps his intention, but being headed on Westrose Hill he doubled back across the railway, and was lost sight of near Church, with it now on the left, past Rougemont, and was abandoned while heading for Harewood Bridge.

HUNTING IN COLTON AND ASKHAM DISTRICT.

It was a typical March day, with a high wind and driving dust clouds, when the York and Ainsty Hounds met on Tuesday at Streethouses, midway between York and Tadcaster. It appeared possible that there was a scent when a fox from Steeton Whin jumped slowly down to the railway, but it was soon headed on the pen, as scenting conditions were bad the whole day proved to be most indifferent. At the railway the pack were delayed by a passing train, and hunted slowly and with frequent checks towards Cowthorpe Wood. Without entering it the fox bent away to the left and reached Colton Hagg, and from it was taken past Colton Lodge, and coming round to the left ran hounds out of scent at Colton village.



Colton Hagg was now drawn, and finding there hounds ran out towards the York high road, but turning left-handed hunted across the railway at Colton Crossroads, and through Copmanthorpe Wood back over the railway to Colton Hagg, where the fox was killed. It seemed possible that the never failing Askham Bogs were to be drawn blank, but Tadgower Road to Askham Fields, and was abandoned while pointing for Askham Richard. The spinneys at Askham Grange did not provide a fox, and hounds returned to kennels after a very moderate day's sport.

People are now debating the advisability of having Sunday boating at Roundhay, but the Corporation, to be consistent, cannot refuse to allow it, since they permit Sunday golfing. And when the footballers want a little sport their claim will have to be considered. This comes of allowing a few leisured people to do as they please on Sunday.

BARKSTON ASH CUP—SEMI-FINALS.

At a meeting the Barkston Ash Cup Committee on Tuesday night at Crossgates—Mr Duffy (President) in the chair—the draw for the semi-finals of the Barkston Ash Cup was made as follows :—

Cawood v. Selby Olympia—At Selby on March 21st. Referee, Mr H. Metcalfe (Tadcaster). Linesmen, Messrs Walton (Micklefield) and Hayton (Aberford).

Garforth W.R. v. Aberford.—At Barwick on March 14th. Referee, Mr J. H. Townend (Micklefield); linesmen, Messrs Burnett (Barwick) and Meakin (Micklefield).

In the event of the latter match being drawn it will be replayed at Micklefield on March 21st.

The Selby match ends in a draw it will be re-played on the following Saturday.

DEIGHTON SHIELD COMPETITION.

Two matches were played in the Deighton Shield Competition on Saturday afternoon, Garforth White Rose, playing at home, defeated Whitkirk by five goals to nil, and Tadcaster, who had choice of ground, overcame Boston Spa by eight goals to nil.

On Saturday afternoon Harewood will play Wetherby Cor., and Monk Fryston will entertain Barwick United.

ALLERTON BYWATER WIN.

Allerton Bywater had a Senior League match with Wortley United on the Mill Green ground, Holbeck, and the honours went to the visitors. Lewis kicked off for Allerton, who at once took up the aggressive, and were put ahead by Hudson in the first five minutes. Allerton kept up the pressure, and shortly after Alexander scored a splendid goal from a fine centre by Holmes. This seemed to rouse the Wortley men, but they did not make much impression on the visitors, who seemed to take things easily up to half-time, and, although they did not score again, they had much the better of the game. Half-time score :—Allerton Bywater, 2 goals; Wortley, United, nil. In the second half Bleach and Hudson scored goals for Allerton, and Mason for Wortley. Allerton won by six goals to one.

RUGBY NOTES.

METHLEY DEFEATED.

Methley were at home to Hunslet A. in a Leeds and District League match, and the latter won easily. Hunslet started before a moderate gate. Asbell getting over in the early stages, and Bowen converting. Methley pressed but Toft brought play into the home half, and Hopwood added a second try, Bowen again converting. The Methley forwards worked well, but all to no purpose, Asbell again scoring, and Bowen converting. Methley tackled well, but lacked speed. Smith scored for Methley after a fine run. Hunslet were leading at half-time by fifteen points to two, and they won by 21 points to 5.

HALTON LADS BEATEN.

Halton Council played a League match with Bramley National at Halton. In the opening stages of the game Killerby dropped a goal from a penalty for Halton, but she points were disallowed as the player had over-stepped the mark. The visitors were able to cross over with a six points' lead, both tries being individual efforts of Fletcher. In the second half Bramley were seen at their best, running and passing being up to their usual standard. Worsnop on his hand a trio of tries to his credit. Further tries were scored by Binks and Baxter. The latter placed two goals. Bramley thus completed their fixture list without sacrificing a League point. Halton—Bramley National, 2 goals, 9 tries (31 points), Halton Council, nil.

ROTHWELL WIN.

At Rothwell on Saturday Normanton were beaten by two points in their match with Rothwell. The homesters started with four of their first team men missing, but after five minutes' play they had notched their first points. Stone scored a try, which Bulmer converted. After play in the Rothwell area Morgan added the extra points for the visitors. Later Bulmer put Rothwell again ahead, and before the interval Best had scored another try, which Bulmer converted. This gave Rothwell a lead of ten points. On the restart Normanton pressed, and one of their players was unsuccessful with a drop at goal. Obtaining possession for the homesters Wise ran down the field and Bulmer helped to put the oval beyond the visitors. Cox scoring. Bulmer's kick at goal failed. Normanton still were game, and Watson scored near to the corner flag, but Morgan made a poor display with the goal kick. Onwards to the end the visitors played strongly, but they could not get on terms. The result was:—Rothwell, 3 goals, 4 tries (18 points), Normanton, 2 goals, 4 tries (16 points).

Dear Mr Crosswaite,—

My indications in sending you this UNSOLICITED TESTIMONIAL are as express my gratitude to you, and to testify to your marked ability to cure. Before I placed myself under your WONDERFUL HERBAL TREATMENT my skin used to itch and burn so severely that it was impossible to obtain any rest whatever. After being under your treatment for four weeks, I AM COMPLETELY CURED, and my skin is as clear and as good as ever. The cheapness of your treatment is very commendable, being well within the reach of all. Hoping you will continue to meet with the success you so highly deserve.—I remain, yours faithfully, (Signed) JOHN ROSS.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

When Sir John Bedford met Penrose down at the roadside station a few miles out of Canterbury he had the whole afternoon before him. He had brought his motor-car out himself, not wishing even his chauffeur to know where he was going that day, and when Penrose had gone he let his hands rest idly on the steering-wheel, and sat for some minutes considering various matters. Suddenly he set the machinery in motion.

"I'll run down as far as Dover, have some lunch there, and get into touch with Sabatier," he said to himself. "He ought to have some news by this time that should be useful to us."

Having no desire to be seen in Canterbury at that time of day, Sir John turned his car round and set off for Dover by way of Ashford and Folkestone, proceeding towards his destination in a leisurely and deliberate manner as if he had never a care in the world. Arrived at the Lord Warden, he put the car up, and, strolling off to the telegraph-office sent a lengthy message to Sabatier, asking him to reply to the hotel. Then he lunched, with good appetite and great satisfaction, and subsequently strolled on the pier outside, until a servant came after him and expected reply. He sat down on the nearest seat, and opened the flimsy envelope as coolly as if it had been a circular. He read Sabatier's message half-aloud.

"Have made such excellent progress that am in position to suggest that you come this afternoon. Bremond is here, and all is ready. Shall I go ahead, or shall we await your arrival? If you proceed at once we can give first demonstration to-morrow, when representative will arrive. Reply at once."

Sir John read and re-read this communication, folded the telegram deliberately, and as deliberately placed it in his pocket-book. After a moment's thought he lighted a cigar, and strolling back to the hotel paid his bill, then, getting into his car, went off once more to the post-office, where he despatched two wires. The first, addressed to Sabatier, ran:—

"Congratulations. Go ahead at once, and immediately wire me charge is successfully made this afternoon or evening at Star Hotel, Canterbury. Is shall come over during night and be with you as early as possible to-morrow."

The second, addressed to Edwards, Post Office, Canterbury, was as follows:

"Meet me about four-thirty to five, Star Hotel."

He hesitated over the wording of the last message, as if wishing to add some further words; then, remembering that Penrose was unknown in Canterbury, and that there was small risk of his detection there, he handed the forms and the fee over and drove off again, this time straight ahead for the old city. But coming to its outskirts, his cunning and foresight asserted themselves. He left the car at a roadside inn, and choosing some devious and little-frequented by-paths and alleys came to the hotel by a back entrance, and was safely bestowed in a private sitting-room before anyone but the landlord, who knew him well, was aware that he was in the house. Yet it was by the merest chance that he and Miss Delomosne did not meet; for she had left the hotel as he passed through the garden, and she saw him, though he did not see her, and she took her measures accordingly. First she had her motor-car safely locked up in a vacant coach-house, and put the key in her pocket; then she sent her chauffeur off to another hotel with strict injunctions to remain there until sober; then, with a firm step, she walked by way of the kitchens, and, after a word to a much-interested waiter, was as quickly hidden in a private room as Sir John was. Both delivered similar strict injunctions to this same waiter—viz., that they were not to be disturbed; that, in one case, a gentleman was expected; in the other, a lady; that, in both, the callers were to be immediately conducted to the private rooms. The waiter wondered what game of hide-and-seek this was, or if it were mere coincidence.

The room in which Miss Delomosne found herself looked out on the street, and she quickly arranged the curtains of the windows so that she could keep an eye on the people who came to the hotel by the principal entrance. She had not been watching long before she saw Penrose emerge from a side street and cross over in the direction of the hotel. She knew him at once, though she had not set eyes on him for years, and she was surprised to see how smartly attired he was, how jauntily he carried himself, how carelessly he glanced about him as he trod the street with a firm step. Could it be possible that this was the man who was a fugitive from justice, and who was even then plotting with another—more villainous even than himself—to commit some crime, at the nature of which she could only guess? He looked like a man of culture and leisure, idly strolling at his will about the streets of the old city.

"But I suppose that's all part of the game," she said, bitterly. "I wonder what it is that they are concocting!"

If she could by any chance have been present in a room a few doors away in which Sir John and Penrose were then closeted in privacy, and could have heard the conversation which they carried on in undertones, Miss Delomosne would have been speedily enlightened as to the fact that the particular concoction brewing was of some particularly deadly nature, though she would not have grasped all its detailed wickedness.

"Well?" said Sir John, when the door was closed.

Penrose drew off his gloves with great deliberation, sat down, and drew his chair nearer to Sir John's. "I don't see how it's going to be done," he said. "I've looked carefully round, and to me it seems impossible."

Sir John's straight, thin lips sneered. "Impossible's a word I don't know much of, Mr. Edwards," he said. "Make yourself clearer."

Penrose went to a writing-table, and picking up pen, ink, and paper returned to the table at which Sir John sat, and began to sketch out a rough plan. "Perhaps little will make things clear," he said. "And perhaps you'll be able to tell me, after seeing for how the thing's to be done. Now, here's the Three Travellers—an old building stretching round three sides of a quadrangle. This is the paddock, with the fourth open side of the quadrangle. In the paddock stands the barn in which they're at work."

"Well, looks easy enough to get at," said Sir John, inspecting the diagram.

"Easy enough," said Penrose, "if it were not for the fact that it's being patrolled day and night by police."

"Police! A thorough patrol!"

"Thorough."

Sir John knitted his brows and fingered his chin. "Can't be here," he said, after a pause. "What's the size of this paddock?"

"About sixty yards by forty."

"And the size of the barn?"

"Forty yards by thirty."

"That means that the hedges, or railings—which are they?—are at all points within ten yards of the walls of the barn?"

"Yes. And they're hedgerow. Hawthorn—fairly thick," answered Penrose.

"Then we've got 'em," said Sir John, triumphantly. "Is there any cover, wood, coppice, thicket about from which you could steal out when it's dark and crawl down behind the hedge? Because that you could lay the steel globe in the hedgerow bottom after timing it."

"There's a coppice at that corner," answered Penrose, indicating a certain point. "And it can be reached from a lane which passes here."

"Then that's all right," said Sir John. "You, with your knowledge of taking cover, can easily get into that coppice after dark to-night and work your way down to within ten yards of the barn. I told you I didn't believe in impossibilities."

"You didn't tell me the thing would be effective at ten yards' distance," said Penrose.

"It would be sufficiently effective at twenty yards' distance," said Sir John, drily. "By the bye, where is the thing?"

"In the bag, at the station."

"Don't fetch it until twilight," said Sir John. "There, that's all. Sit down—I'm going to order some tea. We must stay here."

It was then that the two were together that Charity visited Miss Delomosne, delivered her message, and went away again. When she had gone Miss Delomosne once more began to puzzle her brains as to what she could do to put the unscrupulous people whom she instinctively felt was coming. After some thought she rang the bell, and writing out a telegram asked the waiter to send it to the post-office by a trustworthy messenger.

This telegram was addressed to Miss Delomosne's own solicitor in London—a man whom she could trust to follow her instructions quickly and implicitly. What she said in it would have aroused some perturbation in the minds of the two men in the adjacent room.

"Please go immediately to New Scotland Yard and ask them to send experienced and skilful detective to me here at once on most urgent business. — LILIAN DELOMOSNE, Star Hotel, Canterbury."

She realised when that was done that there was now nothing for it but to await the further development of whatever it was that was going on. She sat there alone, keeping strict watch from the window upon the street beneath, anxious to know if either Penrose or Sir John left the hotel; but at the end of an hour she had seen nothing of either of them. As the afternoon drew to a close she rang the bell and ordered tea; when it came she drank it standing at the window. The twilight came on, and the dusk after it, so far nothing had happened. A thought occurred to her; she gently opened her door, and after listening for a moment in the well-lighted corridor, listening at each door as she passed it. At the fourth she heard voices; listening more intently, she recognised them as those of the two men as to whose movements she was so anxiously curious. From a certain jingle of plate and glass she judged that they were dining, and, fearful lest the waiter should suddenly emerge and find her there, she went back to her own room. But now that she had ascertained their whereabouts she knew that she could keep them under observation by leaving her own slightly open, and she took up her post there and watched steadily.

It was almost dark when the door of that other room opened and Penrose emerged, closely followed by Sir John, and went away in the direction of the stairs. She hurried to the window to see if she could see anything of them in the street below, but even the street lamps had not been lit in the street below, and she fancied she saw him, a tall figure striding away at the opposite side. And again she was nothing to do but wait.

It was with a sense of great relief that at last she heard Penrose's footsteps in the corridor, and then the old waiter's voice bidding somebody to come that way. She hurriedly turned up the light, which she had purposely kept down; another moment and a tall, keen-eyed, hard-featured man, who might have been a professional cricketer or a gymnastic tutor in mufti, was bowing before her and inspecting her with curiosity.

"Inspector Skarratt, from New Scotland Yard, madam," he said. "I came by the first express I could get after Mr. Dawson called on us."

"I am much obliged to you," said Miss Delomosne. "Please sit down. I am in great perplexity. Inspector Skarratt—perhaps I had better tell you everything as clearly as I can. If I do not make myself clear, stop me and question me."

Inspector Skarratt was noted as a first-rate listener. He sat watching Miss Delomosne intently, and it was only once or twice that he interrupted her to put a short, pointed question.

Miss Delomosne told him all she knew, and if Sir John Bedford had only overheard her he would have left the hotel and gone for his car with as little delay as possible.

But Sir John, all alone now that Penrose had departed on his nefarious mission, was smoking a cigar and awaiting the expected telegram from Sabatier. He was beginning to grow impatient about it, when the waiter appeared with the familiar buff envelope.

"Bring some whisky and soda up here, will you?" said Sir John, as he took the telegram. He sat down and opened it in his usual leisurely way when the man had gone out of the room, and his eye glanced its first words over half-carelessly. Then he sprang to his feet with an oath, and holding the message to the light read it through:

"Regret report terrible accident. Charge of engine immediately succeeded by terrific explosion, probably by mistake in mixing chemicals. Sabatier killed on spot; Bremond fatally injured, but still alive; laboratory blown to pieces. Will wire later or early tomorrow.—LEPEL, Secretary."

Sir John folded the telegram up, placed it in his pocket-book, and, sitting down again, stared hard at the fire. Whether he heard him or not he took no notice of the waiter when he came in with the whisky and the syphon of soda, nor did he help himself to a drink when the waiter had departed. He sat there chewing an unlighted cigar, and still staring at the flames, for a long time—so long that the hands of the clock had marked an hour and a half's advance since Penrose left the room. He was so motionless that he might have been dead or asleep but for the light in his eyes. And he neither moved nor spoke when a light tap came at the door, which presently opened gently, and was as gently closed again.

"Good evening, Sir John!"

Sir John turned up and round—slowly. For all his seeming inattention to the things of the moment he had heard that tap at the door. He expected to see Penrose; instead he found himself looking at Inspector Skarratt. He looked—and said nothing.

"You'll excuse my unceremonious entrance, Sir John," said the inspector. "I just want a few words with you."

"Well, say them," said Sir John.

"You came to our place lately with reference to the escape of Edward Penrose, Sir John?"

"Well, what then?"

"I've come to believe that you have some knowledge of his present whereabouts," continued inspector Skarratt. "In fact, I know that he has been in your company in this hotel and in this very room this evening.

Sir John turned to the table and poured out a glass of whisky. He helped himself to soda, and drank before he replied. "You seem to have good eyesight, Inspector," he said.

Inspector Skarratt made no immediate answer. He allowed a moment to elapse, then he said, quietly: "You're making a great mistake, Sir John. From what I can learn—and see—you're helping Penrose to escape, you know——"

"I know that you red-tape fellows imagine a good deal," exclaimed Sir John. "If you want Penrose, find him for yourselves—take him for yourselves—and be hanged to him and you!"

A quick, hurried step in the corridor outside—nearer—still nearer. Inspector Skarratt sprang—leaped backward beyond the further side of the door. Another instant and Penrose was in the room, facing Sir John. His face was grey, and he panted for breath as if he had been running.

"It's done! It's done!" he cried. "I managed it——"

He saw Sir John's eyes looking over his shoulder, and he slewed round like a streak of lightning to see Inspector Skarratt; and as he saw him he uttered one sharp exclamation—half scream, half yell—"Treason!" and his hand went round to his hip and the revolver was out. In that brief second he had but one thought—one belief—that Sir John had betrayed him, and Sir John threw up a hand and then fell heavily across the hearthrug.

"Put that revolver down!" said Inspector Skarratt.

But Penrose was backing towards the window, covering the detective with his revolver. Suddenly he uttered a curious sound—half laughter—and before Inspector Skarratt could realise what he was about to do he turned the revolver upon himself, and a second later fell across a sofa which stood behind Him.

And then came hurrying feet, and the sound of many voices in fear and astonishment, and the room filled with people, and foremost amongst them was Miss Delomosne

His Fix—At Selby on Monday. Fred Lobley, labourer, Thorpe, was fined 2s. 6d. and costs for having been drunk and disorderly in Brook Street, Selby, early on Sunday morning. It was stated that the man knocked at doors and opened yard gates.

Mr. PAUL BLANCHARD,

THE LADIES' COLUMN.

Steam is an excellent thing for removing creases from gowns or coats that have been pocked away. Fix up a fire in the bathroom, hang the crused clothes on it close to the window, then let the hot-water tap run until the room is full of steam; leave for an hour or two, then dry the clothes in the open air and press on the wrong side with a warm iron.

Fruit tarts have a nasty habit of bubbling over and making a mess in the oven, even though a small hole be made in the top of the crust. This is no doubt due to the hole closing, as it frequently does when the pastry puffs up and the steam cannot escape. To obviate this difficulty, insert a short piece of uncooked macaroni in the hole, and the juice will not boil over. Of course, the macaroni should be withdrawn before the tart is served.

Women and Clothes.

Most people will agree that when dressed at their best they feel at their best, and certainly no woman will deny that clothes have an effect upon the mind of their wearer. There are many who go so far as to aver that colour in clothes has also a good deal to do with the peace of mind (or otherwise) of their wearer, and I think we all agree that it is far more pleasant to have around us people who spend a little time and thought over the cult of their clothes.

Uses for Remnants.

After the summer sales we often find ourselves in the possession of odd remnants, in the way of short lengths of ribbon, lace, silk, and muslin, which should be made up in spare moments into some of those many dainty little accessories which were the more fashionable than they are this season. If we are fortunate enough to have any small pieces of real lace among our cherished possessions, we shall find them very useful on these occasions, as they can always be introduced on scarves, collars, and jabots, and they will give an air of distinction to the simplest kind of evekwear in net or muslin.

A Cough Hint.

Everyone who is afflicted with a bad cough is sure to get a paroxysm of coughing when going from a warm room into a colder atmosphere. A simple means of prevention when changing the air is to close the mouth firmly, and for some minutes breathe entirely through the nostrils. This warms the air before it enters the lungs, and at least decreases discomfort when eventually cold air enters the mouth. The next best precautionary measure is to wear a respirator; but some persons feel a sense of suffocation when the respirator is worn over the mouth, and not a few think it unsightly, and discard it for that reason.

Washing Better Than Darning.

It may seem extravagance of cleanliness to rinse out a pair of stockings, whenever they are taken off, but, after all, washing stockings is less work than darning them. A pair of stockings kept clean will last a long time without a hole or a break, even if of cheap quality, while if worn till dirty and sent to the laundry, they come back with holes that necessitate much long and trying needlework again and life is too short to waste one's eyesight making foot coverings by hand. This applies to most clothes, though in a less degree. Keep them clean—avoid the hard scrubbing that wears out the cloth, and you save much of the bother of mending.

The Mouth Tells Tales.

The most telltale feature of the face is the mouth. Eyes and noses and heads are part of our hereditary; mouths are our own. The lips are exceedingly mobile, and retains in their constant expression the one which remains long-set and comes most frequently to their owner. A short, narrow mouth shows coldness, littleness, and meanness. A short, full mouth shows fondness for pleasure and luxury. A large, loose mouth shows silliness and sensuality. A large mouth with firm lips shows generosity and sincerity. Thin lips, particularly a thin upper lip, shows morbidity, and pessimism. If the upper lip curls a little and is thin, the subject is cynical. A pendulous upper lip shows morbidity and pessimism. Lightly held lips show self-consciousness and bad temper.

Women.

Women are adaptable enough when it comes to clothes. They will let themselves out or pinch themselves in, be boned as for a straitjacket or take to girdles, be concave or convex, hipless or hipped, befrilled or slinky, shuffle their flesh and their organs from one point of anatomy to another, plaster the hair or wear transparencies—do, does or does not meet the latest flicker of fashion. So why not turn this adaptability to account temperamentally? It will make life easier to live not only for yourself, but for those who must live with you. The girl who thinks nothing too much trouble to keep in fashion, will often not take time to adjust herself to family rules, dispositions, or views. Half the family troubles are due to lack of adaptability. There are varied tastes and natures among brothers and sisters, parents and children. Does the average girl recognise these differences and adjust herself to them?

A TERRIBLE DILEMMA.

SHORT STORY.

By T. Kennedy.

It was my intention night to be giving a show at Gravesend. The "theatre" was full to overflowing, and everything had gone off in the grand delight of a huge audience. My manager had gone on ahead to catch the last train to London, as will as my secretary. Something stronger than my own reason prompted me to stop that night in the little shipping town—one of those promptings that all human beings are prone to, those promptings that are unasked and unanswerable; and so it was that when the hall was empty and all the people had gone away, I found myself emerging from the stage door into the darkness on my way to the telegraph office to send my wife a wire to say I'd put up at the Old Ship Hotel for the night.

It was dark as pitch, and a drizzling rain came down as I buttoned up my coat and trudged through the darkness. Sounds of revelry came from little public-houses as I passed them, and weird figures shadowed themselves on the blinds. The river was black, and the swaying headlights of the vessels in the "roads" cast a lurid, ghastly reflection on the oily looking water. A sharp gust of wind caught me broadside on as I turned the corner of a road, while the lamp under which I stood struggled fitfully against the breeze. Where was I? I had lost my way. There was no one about to ask it; all was murky, misty, and mysterious. I had fallen to pondering as one does when walking, and got mixed up in the alleys and byeways that intersect a seafaring town.

I paused a moment what to do, when I heard the splash of oars near me. I was within a few paces of a wharfe. A voice said—

"Here, Bess, make her fast. That's it. Bear a hand, Sam."

"Aye, aye," came the reply, and a head oil-skinned, appeared, followed by the form of a strong, ruffianly-looking man.

Mechanically I crept into the shadow, and then a brawny sailor-looking woman clambered on the quay, followed by a man, evidently the first speaker, bearing over his shoulder the limp form of a fair-haired young man, dripping with water. They came towards me.

"Bomb, Jack," said the woman, "Let's see if the cross is clear." And looking round, she quickly lifted a trap near the little house where I was standing and which looked like a shop.

In an instant the sailor stepped down and man after man followed, bearing the body as he would a baby in his arms.

As he descended, Sam followed, and, striking a match, he threw the light on the boy's face.

"By God, old man, you fetched him a hard knock with the boat hook that time."

"Yes," answered the man addressed. "You don't know these swells as I do. They're fight bulli, and fight like the devil. Out goes his light to-night and by to-morrow morning he'll be sweeping round Sheerness on his way to the briny."

The trap closed with a bang, and once more I was alone. I lay down on the trap with my ear to a chink and listened. The conversation was far from edifying. Climbing of glasses told they were about to carouse. Then followed a conversation which ran in this strain—

"Nice handful, Jack, Bess. How would you like him for a loving mate, eh? Now then, don't look at Him like that. Keep those soft glances for me, you she devil.

"All right, Jack," responded the woman, "You are so confounded jealous. Spare your blows," then followed the sound of a conciliatory kiss on the woman's part and a satisfactorily grunt from the brute on whom she bestowed her endearments.

"Stow that," said Sam. "While I run my hands over the 'toff' and see what swag he has on him. Here, Bess, take this."

"Crikey," she said, "taint it a good 'un; still ticks, worth a hundred guineas. What a bunter."

Then followed a pause. They were evidently stripping the youth, for Bess said—

"There's his clothes with the others. Here, Jack, you take the watch. Shan't have to cut his fingers off as we did the others to get the rings; they come off easy enough; and blood's ugly; it tells. Are you ready, Sam."

"Yes," came the answer.

"Then gee the boat ready. See the coast is clear. Get him aboard, well into the middle of the stream. Then overboard with him to Kingdom Come."

The trap lifted and I walked away a few steps, and as the man came up and closed it, I walked up to him and asked him the way to the hotel. His eye lit up as he saw my diamond pin, which I use for show purposes and is worth £300, and as he was fascinated by the diamond, so he was by my eye, and in less time than it takes to tell, he was my property.

I took him over to the corner, and said—

"Now, don't move or open your mouth, for you can't do either."

I had retraced my steps when the trap lifted and Jack came up. He saw a stranger and went for me, the trap falling with a bang. He caught me by the right shoulder. I am a powerful man and a wrestler, though I don't look it. I lifted him off his feet with the ease of a baby and laid him on his back, at the same time bringing all the force of mesmerism in my system to bear on him, making him lie where he was at my will.

Then I had to deal with the woman, and I am ashamed to say I used force, in this way. I quickly took my coat off and as she came up I crept behind her and in an instant I had it over her head, and tightly bound, so she could not scream. Then I took the belt off the prostrate man on the ground and buckled her arms to her side. In a voice of command I said—

"Move one step and I'll throw you into the river." Lessing over the water's edge I called "Police," and rejoiced I was I can tell you to hear the splash of the Thames river policemen's oars.

I got my prisoners in the boat, they yielding to my will and taking their places like lambs. The woman we had some difficulty with, but she soon cuved in.

Their victim, who was so near his doom, was a young English per who had gone ashore on a "spree!" from an outward bound vessel sailing with the early tide, and had fallen in with the woman, who was a decoy.

The terrible trio had been at this work for years, and in their den was found valuable clothes, and documents relating to many who had been missing and sorrowed for by their friends. These lovely members of criminal society are now undergoing life terms of penal servitude, while their victim of the last trip often sends me invitations to shoot and fish with him. But, bless you, my time is precious, and the gift that God has given I am bound to Him to utilise in doing good to others with.

• • •

Still another new church! For several years the Allerton Bywater Wesleyans have been working hard to raise funds for the building of a new church. They have now so much in hand that they feel themselves justified in going on with the scheme, and the plans for the building have been approved.

• • •

Tommy Atkins on evil days! A man who had served 16 years in the army, and had two or three medals had to seek the shelter of the vagrant wards at Tadcaster. Despite the discipline to which he had been accustomed, he resolutely declined to perform his task work, and the magistrates had the unwelcome duty of sending him down for seven days.

The breaking of this law is only an indication of the mind of man, and it will break others, only let him have the opportunity, until the whole of God's laws be ignores, and he becomes an outlaw unto God—a rebel."

ROTHWELL URBAN COUNCIL.

The monthly meeting of the Rothwell Urban District Council was held at the Council Offices, Rothwell, on Monday night, the Chairman (Mr J. Hirst) presiding. Other members present were Messrs G. W. Blakey (vice-chairman), S. R. Chadwick, T. P. Wade, S. Dobson, J. B. Hindle, T. Kirkby, J. Armitage, W. Lunn, R. McCullough, T. Ellis, and J. Horner, with the Clerk (Mr W. Dodgson), the medical officer (Dr H. Stevenson), the surveyor (Mr Southwart), and the sanitary inspector (Mr E. F. Moorhouse).

A letter was read from Mr J. W. Vollans, who has represented the Stourton Ward for several years, tendering his resignation as a member of the Council, owing to the illhealth of his wife and members of the family.

The resignation was accepted with regret, the Chairman, Mr Chadwick, Mr Lunn, and Mr Wade each voicing tributes to the work of Mr Vollans.

HIGHWAYS COMMITTEE

The minutes of the Highways Committee showed that Saturday, the 14th March, at 2 o'clock, was provisionally fixed for inspection of roads. It was resolved that plans, estimates, specifications and apportionments together with the printed resolution and notices be submitted by the Surveyor on Monday night for private street works in seven streets on the south of Carlton Lane. It was also resolved that tar-spraying and calcium chloride be used on the by-roads to the same extent as last year, and that Wadsworth's tender for water cart (£38) be accepted if flushing attachment be included. The surveyor was instructed to forward to the County Council an application for tar-spraying of the Leeds and Wakefield Roads from the top of Lofthouse Hill to Middleton Lane, and on the Pontefract Road from Thwaite Gate through Stourton. It was resolved, that application be made to the County Council for flagging the footpath from Town End, Lofthouse, to Milner Lane, and from Haigh Park Road to the Midland Railway Bridge. The labour contracts were let as follows:—Day work—Bulmer, Nos. 1 and 4; John Cooper, 7; Joseph Cooper, 3; R. Fox and Sons, 2 and 5; R. Marshall, 6; Clayton Ogden, 8; E. Smith, 5 and 9. Stone leading—Bulmer, 1, 10, 3, and 32; R. Fox and Sons, 2, 20, 4, 40, 8, 80, and 10; R. Marshall, 7, and 70. H. Smith, 5, and 50. The surveyor was instructed to get a tender for 11 and 110.

The minutes were passed.

The minutes of the Finance Committee showed that the estimates for the year were considered, and it was decided to give notice for a rate to be laid at the last meeting of the Council in March. It was resolved that cheques be drawn on the treasurer amounting to £471 13s. 7d.

In moving the adoption of the minutes, Mr Wade said he was pleased to report that the income exceeded the expenditure.

Mr Lunn seconded, and said he did not believe the Council were in a state of bankruptcy, as some people would have it.

The Chairman said he would like to suggest that all the members be supplied with copies of the estimates at the next meeting, so that they could see what they were discussing.

The minutes were passed.

SANITARY COMMITTEE

The minutes of the Sanitary Committee showed that a letter from the Local Government Board of 12th December re joint cemetery was considered, and it was resolved that an independent Joint Board be constituted. The Committee considered the report of the sanitary inspector of the 2nd February on the closet accommodation in the district, and on the conversion of privies into water closets with the list of the owners who have not complied with the statutory notices for further closet accommodation. The inspector was instructed to bring up the outstanding cases where closet accommodation was more than two houses to one closet for consideration at the next meeting. The solicitor reported on the draft agreement for sewage works and easements and the committee took objection to alterations in the draft made on behalf of the owners.

It was resolved that the owners who have not complied with notices under section 15 of the Housing and Town Planning Act be served with 28 days peremptory notice. It was also resolved that the Local Government Board be asked to schedule the manufacture and distillation of fat oleine and stearine as an offensive trade. Mr Hartley attended the Committee objecting to some paving to Mrs Fearnside's property at Lofthouse, and the inspector was asked to visit the property again and report.

The nightsoil contracts were let as follows:—District No. 1, Fox; 2, Barraclough; 3 and 4, Bulmer; 5, Smith; 6, Cook; 8, J. Dobson; 9, Cook; 10, Hartley; 11, F. Horner; 12, Grainger. Cesspool emptying—District Nos. 1 and 4, Bulmer; 3 and 5, Smith.

It was resolved that a closing order be made by the Council in respect of dwelling house at High Park Farm occupied by Chas. Charlesworth and the final and statutory notices be served in accordance with the list signed by the inspector, and dated 30th January, 1914. The inspector was instructed to prepare a list of yards and back streets that required paving for the next meeting. The sanitary expenditure of the present year and estimates for the coming year were presented.

HEALTH VISITOR

In moving the minutes, Mr Chadwick referred to a recent conference held in Wakefield. He said he had learned from the Chairman of that conference that they were willing to pay half the Health visitor's fee up to £50, and no beyond. He had, he said, asked who was to pay the second of the nurses, and a member replied that so far as schools were concerned the Education Committee would have evaded it.

Mr Lunn said if school children were to come under the health visitor then another nurse ought to be appointed to assist, and the district be so divided that each have an equal portion to cover.

Mr Chadwick said he had carefully inquired into the matter, and the nurse had been questioned, and she had said that she felt she could be able to look after the whole of the district. If, however, the work was found to be too hard then an additional nurse would be obtained. He was against both nurses being in the employ of one district, and he proposed—that if another nurse be required, to get on inferior one. If they had anyone at all they wanted a fully-qualified nurse. (Hear, hear).

A COMPLAINT

Mr Kirkby raised a point in reference to the cleaning out of ashpits in the district, and suggested that where ashpits had to be emptied on to the footpath they should put the refuse straight into carts instead of leaving it on the footpath until the following day. He instanced how where he lived, on the last occasion of the cleaning out of the ashpits the men had come round about eleven o'clock at night and left the refuse on the footpath until about eight or nine o'clock the following morning. In the meantime the miners leaving the early morning shift had stumbled over the heaps.

Mr Chadwick said he thought it was a long standing arrangement that under such circumstances lights be left lighted throughout the night.

Mr Moorhouse (the sanitary inspector) explained that in the case referred to by Mr Kirkby a fresh man had gone round.

The minutes were approved.

HEALTH OF THE DISTRICT

The medical officer presented his report which showed that during the four weeks from Jan. 27th to February 23, there had been twenty-four cases of scarlet fever notified and four cases of diphtheria. Of these twenty-eight, twenty had been removed to the hospital. During the same period there had been twenty-one births registered—ten males and eleven females. Of twenty-one deaths, nine had occurred in the workhouse.

The Chairman asked if there had been any fresh cases of infectious disease, and Dr Stevenson replied that there had been none for the past eight or nine days until that day.

Mr Lunn asked the doctor if he had had any complaint of nasty smells from the Carlton district, arising from drains and manholes.

The medical officer said it was some seven months ago since he had had any complaint from Carlton.

Mr Lunn said he had had a complaint brought to him only as recently as Sunday, and it was said Commercial Street was as bad as ever.

The Chairman asked, as they had had so much dry weather, if it would not be advisable to flush the drains.

Mr Horner asked if people were not liable to catch infectious diseases from open manholes.

Dr Stevenson said it would be very difficult to trace a case of infectious disease due to open manholes.

WATER COMMITTEE

The minutes of the Water Committee showed that the consumption of water in the district for the month ending February 6th was as follows:—Rothwell 172,000 gallons as against 184,000 gallons in the same period of last year; Thorpe, 91,000 gallons as against 70,000 gallons; and Stourton 50,000 gallons as compared with 51,000 gallons. During the month the Midland Railway Co. had consumed 101,000 as against 112,000 last year.

The inspector reported that the water pressure at Spilley Lane junction with West Lane was 58lbs. It was also resolved that the water charges be amended to enable the Council to charge Almond's consumers either according to the revised scale or by meter if the Council so elect.

The minutes were passed.

VARIOUS

The minutes of the Lamps and Gas Committee showed that during the month the consumption of gas was as follows:—Rothwell gas 290,200 cubic feet, and Leeds gas 50,600 cubic feet.

The Clerk read a letter from the Board of Trade in reference to the Wakefield Light Railway Co, stating that the time for completing the lines had been extended until March 19th, 1915.

A letter was read from the Leeds Town Clerk stating that the Watch Committee of Leeds do not charge an annual retaining fee for the service of the fire brigade in the outlying districts, but the Committee reserved the right to decline to attend any such fires.

CHARITIES.—The collection at the church for the medical charities is down. At St. John's Church, Roundhay, the sum sent was £18 11s. 4d., as compared with £28 5s. last year, and at Roundhay Ladywood Wesleyan Chapel £4 12s. against £3 19s.

BOXING.—On Monday at Leeds, a ten rounds contest for £5 a side, and the club purse was entered upon by Young Miller, Leeds, and Jack Myers, Roundhay. The lads were well matched, and a really good bout went all the distance, but at the close Myers, who had forced the work all through, had a comfortable margin of points in his favour, and received the verdict.

COLLISION.—While the tug Lancelot was towing boats up the river Ouse to the Olympia Mills, Selby, on Saturday, the rear vessel, a billy-boy, came into collision with the Selby toll bridge. The bowsprit struck the swing portion of the bridge, knocking away two rails and a post of the parapet. The gap made in the parapet had to be protected by the fixing up of temporary rails. The vessel itself was not damaged.

HOCKEY.—On Saturday afternoon the Sherburn team had an engagement with the Leeds Y.M.C.A. second eleven at Leeds, and, after a one-sided game, the visitors were soundly beaten by 9 goals to nil. Unfortunately for Sherburn only seven men put in an appearance, and had it not been for the sturdy defence of C. Cawthorne, who played a sterling game, the score would have been much higher. It is hoped that in future away matches the members will turn up better or soon the fine record already established this season will be spoilt.

DEATH.—We regret to record the death of Mr Thos. Speer, of Ashfield Terrace, a well-known and highly respected inhabitant of Sherburn-in-Elmet. Mr Speer, who was in his 80th year, was for many years the Chairman of the Parish Council, and took a deep interest in everything pertaining to the village. The deceased gentleman was a grocer by trade, and he was also postmaster. On Saturday the remains were interred at All Saints' Church, and there was a very large attendance at the funeral. Mr Speer was twice married, and he leaves a widow to mourn his loss.

NEW BOATS LAUNCHED.—Two steam fishing boats were launched by Messrs Cochrane and Sons, Ltd., at the Selby Shipyard on Saturday. A steel screw drifter, 115ft. by 21ft. 6in. by 11ft. moulded, built for Mr R. Sutton, of Great Yarmouth, was the first launched, and was named "English Rose" by Mrs R. Sutton. The second vessel put over was a steel screw trawler, measuring 131ft. 4in. by 22ft. 6in. by 13ft. moulded, and constructed for the Cargill Steam Trawling Co., Ltd., Hull. This boat was named "Prince Palatine" by Miss K. E. Cargill, of Hull. The usual toasts were given at the builders' offices.

CORRESPONDENCE

PUBLIC DEBATE AT WHITKIRK

To the Editor.

SIR,—The recent public debate at Whitkirk on the King's Speech was purely educational in spirit and purpose. My own part in it was the giving of a clear, definite statement on the aspects of Home Rule which had been left out by the speakers preceding me. It was, therefore, a surprise to me to read in the letter of Mr Arthur Lee in the current issue of the "Skyrack Courier" that my remarks revealed "extreme partizanship." As the debate was educational, and not merely political, I think it should have been left with the meeting. But Mr Lee's letter is a challenge and an appeal to a wider constituency.

That every election (General or bye-election) since 1885 has been a Home Rule election is now matter of history. The Unionist Party, as such, came into being in 1886. Every Unionist voting since that has understood and always considered that his vote has been one against Home Rule. Every Liberal may be credited with equal intelligence when he considered that his vote was in favour of Home Rule.

As I have lived and have been a keen observer of the issues before the country since 1885, I could easily name many side-track issues which have influenced elections. But the great issues have been dominant through all these years. It is, indeed, too absurd to speak of the "clean slate" policy which was limited to Lord Rosebery himself, for which no vote was ever cast in a polling booth or at Parliament, and whose only effect was to wipe off Lord Rosebery from the slate of political power. He indeed remains as the great creator of the Empire, the joy and delight of all men who love fine speech, but his "clean slate" policy began and died with himself.

The figures given by Mr Lee are interesting. I will supplement them, and always from official sources. Ireland has 103 members in the British Parliament, 85 are Home Rulers and 18 are Unionists. Home Rule has thus an unparalleled majority in the history of world-wide politics, as more than four-fifths of the representation of Ireland are pledged to it.

Coming to Ulster and treating that province by itself, we find that of its 33 representatives 17 are Home Rulers and 16 Unionists—again a clear majority for Home Rule.

Lacking a little more closely at the history of these 33 Ulster constituencies, we find that 14 have always voted for Home Rule, 10 have always voted for Unionism, and 9 have wavered from time to time in their allegiance to either cause.

The census of Ireland gives the religions of its people. There are only two counties in Ireland where the population is predominantly Protestant, viz., Antrim and Down. In two other counties there is as follows:—Armagh 54.7 and Londonderry 54.2 percentage Protestants.

It has escaped the notice of Mr Lee that Clause III. of the Home Rule Bill of 1912 prohibits the Irish Parliament from making laws to establish or endow any religion, prohibit the free exercise thereof, or give a preference, privilege or advantage, or impose any disability or disadvantage, on account of religious belief or religious status, or religious belief or religious ceremony a condition of the validity of any marriage.

It has also escaped the notice of Mr Lee that the taxable value of the four provinces is as follows:—Leinster, £4 8s. 9d. per head of the population; Ulster, £3 9s. 8d.; Munster, £3 4s. 8d.; Connaught, £2 5s. 1d.

I think that it has further escaped the notice of Mr Lee that Ireland has 39 counties and county boroughs, and that in the order of rateable valuation per head Belfast stands twelfth, Down fifteenth, Antrim twentieth, and Armagh twenty-first.

There are certain factors in historic development which students of history, like myself, delight in understanding as the true forecast of the future. One is that a people become less bigoted both in religion and in politics as they realise the interests they possess in common. Home Rule in Ireland will have this effect. I could give personal evidence of this tendency received by myself in visits to Ireland in recent years, and in every case the evidence was of Protestants and men in business and in public life.

The Ulster problem is a difficult one but is not incapable of solution. We have Statesmen who understand it from personal knowledge, and who are animated by the sentiment of justice and possess the historic outlook. Some of us who know Irishmen and Ireland, and love the land and the people, believe a way out will be found which will ultimately lead to the well-being of Ireland as a whole, and the strengthening of our Empire.—Yours, etc.

J. MILLER HAMILTON.

Letters by Mr Martin Harvey and Mr F. W. Sutcliffe are published on another page.—Ed., S.C.

The Selby Flower Show and Gala involved a loss last year of £13. Another exhibition will be held on July 18th.

Mr Wansboro Poles, F.R.C.O., of Selby, organist of the Wesleyan Church, Selby, left on Wednesday, for South Africa to take up an appointment at East London.

PROPERTY SALE.—Messrs Bentley and Sons, Knottingley, held a sale of Selby cottage property at the George Hotel, Selby, on Tuesday afternoon. Four freehold cottages, with gardens, in Millgate, with a gross annual rental of £46, were purchased for £385 by Mr Henry Foster, butcher, Gowthorpe Street, Selby.

NATIONAL RESERVISTS.—A meeting to organise the Selby Company of the National Reserve, which is commanded by Dr G. D. Todd, was held at Selby Drill Hall on Monday night. The Company numbers about 70, but additional men are being enrolled. The local organisers are Sergeant Greenhand and Mr W. Farley.

SEACROFT WESLEYAN CHAPEL.—A coffee supper and entertainment were held in the Wesleyan Schoolroom on Tuesday evening, when a company of over a hundred assembled. The proceeds, about £2 5s., were in aid of the fund which is being raised to clear the debt on the Beckett Street Wesleyan Chapel. An enjoyable programme was sustained by Misses Ruston and Goodall, Mrs Shillito (Leeds), and Messrs G. Roberts and N. Benson. Misses R. Roberts and E. A. Dawson were efficient accompanists. Mr Dawson gave a short address on the object of the evening's gathering. On the motion of Mr E. Hunter a hearty vote of thanks was accorded the artistes for their services.

SELBY CONSERVATIVES WEEKLY WHIST DRIVE.—Another very successful whist drive took place at the Conservative Club on Tuesday evening, So ladies and gentlemen taking part. Mr R. Sledman, of Selby, resigned. The new medical officer is at present assistant medical officer for Greenwich.

NEW MEDICAL OFFICER.—The Joint Committee of the Tadcaster, Selby, Riccall, and Goole Rural Councils and Selby Urban District Council on Tuesday appointed, at a salary of £500 per annum, Dr. W. B. Hill, of Greenwich, medical officer of health in succession to Dr Stedman, of Selby, resigned. The new medical officer is at present assistant medical officer for Greenwich.

Mrs Jane Gertrude Muscro't, of Sholebroke View, Leeds, widow of the Rev. J. W. Muscroft, formerly vicar of Thorner, left £2,561.

Through the kindness of Mr Wynn-Miller and the directors of the Leeds Grand Theatre, the girls of the Thorparch Industrial School had an opportunity of seeing the very successful pantomime at the Grand Theatre on Tuesday afternoon. Councillor Stockdill provided the girls with refreshments.

FOOTBALL.—On Saturday afternoon Sherburn footballers were at home to Selby Y.M. Institute, a promising junior team. The visitors had much the better of the play, and ran out winners by three goals to one. The match was set apart for the benefit of G. Palfreeman, one of Sherburn's best forwards, who was injured in January whilst playing against Cawood in the Barkston Ash Cup Competition.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT JOTTINGS.

Awkward situations sometimes arise when two gentlemen of the same name and belonging to different political parties are returned to the House of Commons. Mr Fred Hall, M.P. for Normanton Division—the gentleman who represents Rothwell, Stourton, Oulton, and Woodlesford folks—has been giving his experiences of Parliamentary life, and the fact that there is a Conservative M.P. named Mr Fred Hall apparently causes him not a little anxiety. One of the difficulties is that they sometimes get each other's letters, and one for the Normanton M.P. containing money was once received by his namesake. The Conservative Mr Fred Hall, however, appears to be something of a humorist, for the Normanton Division representative says that he once delivered a speech which appeared in Hansard as having been made by his namesake, who had passed the proof! Surely there should be some difference between the speeches of Labour and Conservative representatives.

Before Garforth got urban powers certain of the public men persuaded themselves that they would save a considerable sum of money on the roads, but they made a very serious miscalculation. The cost of the roads has been very much greater than they anticipated, and it is causing them some anxiety. To keep the roads in a thoroughly efficient state money must be spent, and the Council must make up their minds to do it. Their system of supervision has, in my opinion, been wrong from the first, and the "penny-wise" policy was never known to do the ratepayers good. Of course, the district rate is not a very high one—for the next half-year it will be 1s. 7d.—and the Rothwell Urban Council, who have a much greater experience, do their work on a rate of 3s. per annum.

In sending men to public bodies ratepayers should consider their fitness for the work. Frequently popular residents are returned without any regard to their general ability, and when they are full-blown Councillors they must wonder what title they have to the honour. Every class should be represented, because the interests of matters being considered from all points of view, but the essential thing is to return men who are really capable of doing the administrative work.

Ratepayers occasionally wonder where the money they contribute by way of rates goes, and they do not always get enlightenment. In every local Union there is a considerable number of pauper lunatics, housed in one or other of the county asylums, and the ratepayers have to pay for their maintenance. These people are not like paupers in a workhouse, because the majority of them have little enjoyment of life, and the number who return to the world cured is comparatively small, yet each of them costs 11s. 8d. per week. The maintenance rate for lunatics has steadily risen in recent years, and ratepayers may well ask if a cheaper system of keeping these unfortunate people could not be devised.

An improved train service is to be given Boston Spa residents, consequent, I suppose, on the appeal to the N.E.R. Co. for improved travelling facilities. The alterations will come into operation on April 1st. The 9.13 a.m. Thursdays only train, and the 12.18 and 5.20 p.m. trains, from Leeds to Wetherby will be continued to Thorpearch, filling intervals in the service between the 8.0 and 9.50 a.m. trains, the 9.50 a.m. and 1.28 p.m. trains, and the 4.35 and 5.30 p.m. trains from Leeds, the 5.20 p.m. giving an express service to Thorparch. In the opposite direction the 10.10 a.m., 1.23 and 6.20 p.m. trains from Wetherby to Leeds will be started at Thorparch at 10.3 a.m., 1.15 and 6.13 p.m. respectively, filling intervals in the service between the 8.18 a.m. and 12.16 p.m. trains, the 12.16 and 4.28 p.m. trains, and the 4.4 and 7.7 p.m. trains from Thorparch.

Hitherto the County Council have been opposed to the imposition of speed regulations on motor-cars in the area, although pressed by many local authorities, including Tadcaster District Council, to make a speed limit, but they are now reconsidering their position. Many of our local villages are on important roads—Tadcaster, Sherburn, South Milford, Aberford, etc.—and for the protection of the residents it is essential that something should be done in the matter. It may involve more work for the police, but they will manage it.

Sherburn petty sessional district could not produce a single case—not even a doggy case—for the magistrates to deal with at last Court, and Chairman (Rev. B. Hemsworth), in honour of a maiden sessions, was presented with a pair of white gloves. The absence of crime in the district is very gratifying, but there is every indication that people are behaving better than ever. It is not long since white gloves were presented at both Tadcaster and Wetherby, and it now remains for the Skyrack and Selby divisions to follow suit.

Now that the course of Gilchrist lectures at Garforth is over it would be interesting to know which of the five lectures was most popular. Much, of course, depends on one's reading and one's bent, but, judged from the practical standpoint, I should not hesitate in voting for Dr Hill's instructive address on the senses. Second I would place Father Cortle's lecture on "The formation of the sun and stars," while the best lecturers were Dr Hill and Mr S. C. Kaines Smith. Beautiful language fell in torrents, as it were, from Mr Smith's lips, and his description of both nature and ancient warfare were really fine.

Mr Kaines Smith, in choosing ancient Greece as an example, argued convincingly that art was a reflection of the natural life, and it will be remembered how Professor Sollas stated that ancient man revealed himself and his life by means of paintings on the walls of caves. According to Mr Kaines Smith, Britons have a greater appreciation of colour than any nation in the world, and it may be true, but the existence of so many industrial villages—hideous blots on the landscape—requires some explanation. Everything has been sacrificed to the industrialism of the coal age. Britons have a nasty habit of abusing the climate, and, let it be confessed, it is a sign of ignorance. England—blessed land in many ways—has a greater variety of colour than any country in the world, we are told, and it is due entirely to our wonderful climate—again the finest in the world. When it rains, or snows, or blows let us, then, utter no querulous complaints, as if we knew how to order things better than the Creator, but accept our blessings and be grateful for them. Mr Kaines Smith has brought enlightenment.

Certain Barleston Ash farmers are greatly perturbed over the housing and remuneration of agricultural labourers, and one gentleman—a well-disposed and well-meaning farmer who does well to his hands—expresses the opinion that any interference with the present system of bargaining between capital and labour will destroy the good feeling that exists between masters and men. It must not be assumed, however, that good feeling exists in all cases—there are good and bad masters just as there are good and bad servants—but no system will, I believe, change the excellent relations that exist between good farmers and their servants. Why should it? Many of these men are, to my own knowledge, paying the minimum wage demanded by the Workers' Union, and they have nothing to fear; the farmers whose outlook may not be so pleasing are those who do not reward their servants in a similar way.

Individual bargaining, however, is bound to go, sooner or later, as every student of economics believes. In the towns collective bargaining is the order of the day, and, although many masters would like to return to the old order of things, they accept the conditions as part of present-day industrialism. Even unskilled labour where combination is possible, is worked in the same way, and by and bye the principle will be applied to labour in the rural district. How many people years ago imagined that unskilled labour could be organised? It may be a good or bad thing, just as one views it, but for the great mass of workers individual bargaining will eventually come to an end. Of course, as farmers have organised themselves into clubs and Chambers of Agriculture, I cannot see that they can very well complain if labourers organize, too.

In promoting their town-planning scheme for Crossgates district, the Leeds Corporation have included portions of Scholes and Austhorpe, and the District Council approve of this, under certain conditions. The policy of the Corporation is a good one, and the District Council, in order to protect their interests and ensure of the land being laid out to the best advantage, cannot do better than co-opt Austhorpe and the area of land lying between Stanks and Scholes. Development in that quarter is almost certain to take place, and if the N.E.R. Co. would put down a station at Stanks Bridge house-building schemes would soon be launched. It must be recognised that for certain classes of property Crossgates is "built-up"—no more land is available at present—and there will have to be an outlet somewhere.

The controversy over the maintenance of Station Road, Tadcaster, between the County Council and the District Council is not ended yet. The contention that the road from Boston Spa Road to Selby Road is a county highway seems a reasonable one, and proof that it believe, been submitted to the County Council, who recently declared they would not accept liability in connection with this particular highway. The District Council are, of course, trying to get rid of a part of the heavy charge Station Road is upon them, but it is singular that this question was not raised years since. If it is ultimately found the portion of road is repairable by the County Council the District Council will discover themselves in the position of having spent a large amount of money on other people's property. However, it is not settled yet, but I am not optimistic as to the claims of the District Council, after the correspondence that has already taken place. The best plan is to take the heavy traffic off the roads altogether, and the N.E.R. Co. and others can do it, and so relieve the ratepayers' burdens somewhat.

In Osgoldcross Division, in which Kippax, Allerton Bywater, Ledsham, Ledstone, etc., are situated, an interesting political situation has been brought about by the expressed determination of the Labour Party to run a candidate at next election. A well-known resident in the Division told me that the Labourites would not start, but much has happened since he gave this information, and time will reveal whether or not his opinion is right. Sir Joseph Compton Rickett at present represents the Division, and his Unionist rival will be Mr Campbell Johnstone, who will prove a doughty opponent. The name of the Labour candidate has not been revealed yet, but—if he does appear—he will likely be one of the seven men put forward by the Miners' Association.

The collection at East Keswick Church for Leeds medical charities was £3 8s. 2d. against £2 14s. last year.

On Saturday afternoon a hockey match was played between Rounday and Sheffield, and this the latter won by six goals to two.

AMUSEMENTS.

LEEDS EMPIRE PALACE.

At the Empire this week "Step This Way," which makes a return visit, is one of the brightest and most attractive of the many revues which have of late made their appearance. The company performing it is well equipped in the matter of individual talent, and this, combined with a happy choice and variety in the various numbers, affords adequate safeguards against dullness and other drawbacks. Not the least noteworthy feature of the piece is its humour, and in this department Mr George Clarke, in the part of the Dude, is responsible for plenty of hearty laughter. Dainty dresses, clever dancing, and pleasing musical items are other attractions of the piece. Amongst the ordinary turns on the bill are the Craggs, whose acrobatic dance, "Terpsichoris," is as funny as ever. The amazing "talls" of the comic recruit, are as clever as they are amusing. Christine Roy, of "The Eternal Waltz" fame, sings with charm both of voice and manner, and Harry Webber proves himself an accomplished mimic. The Jerry Twins complete an admirable bill.

George Mozart, in his new entertainment, "Following the Road," will be one of the leading features of the programme for the coming week at the Leeds Empire. In his burlesque saddles Mozart is truly inimitable, while his musical oddities are so fine that they need not be enlarged upon. Another very interesting engagement is that of the famous London artistes, Maie Ash and Fred Allandale, in a musical comedy interlude "The Soldier and the Girl." Other star attractions for Monday next include the popular chorus singer Florrie Forde, in her latest numbers; the Four Holloways, in their remarkable performance consisting of acrobatic and trick cycling on the tight wire; the famous McNaughtons in fresh outbursts of brotherly affection; Stewart and Morgan, high-class vocalises; Sam Kelly, Scotch comedian—only different; O'Hanlon and Rivkin, vocalists, and novelty dancers.

LEEDS HIPPODROME

At the Hippodrome this week one of the attractions is a comedy pantomime "Unsealed Orders," which is produced by the Six Brothers Luck. There is not much plot, but there is plenty amount of vigorous fun, and the sketch promises to be a successful one. Wolseley Charles and Louis Ribili's company, numbering thirteen in all, give a breezy vaudeville entitled "Nicely, thanks." The members of the company are attired in the first part as pierrots and pierettes, and some very tuneful numbers they give. In the second part of their turn they give an impression of a village choral society, and this part of the show is very amusing. Miss Jessie Broughton, a fine contralto, and Mr Dennis Creedon, a clever violinist and tenor singer, give a delightful musical entertainment. Verno and Voyce, the well-known singing comedians, have some new business, and the Bert Hennaway have some good patter. Miss Eileen Desmond, who has lately been appearing at the Theatre Royal pantomime, sings "My Hero" song from "The Chocolate Soldier" with much success. Lyal and Bert, comedy acrobats, are also on the bill.

Next week at the Hippodrome one of the principal attractions will be Joe Peterman's company, including the inimitable comedian, Jimmy Learmouth, in "The Hairdresser," in which Miss Ruby Ralland and George Ricketts will play leading parts. It is a society episode and it will be played in four scenes. Others in the bill are Daisy Wood, the popular pantomime favourite; Gilbert Payne, a quaint comedian; Sam Walsh, the actor at the piano; Celesta, the clever lady; Fred Gray and Nellie Graham, in "The musical bell boy"; Reg Bolton, assisted by Dorothy Belmore, in "The guvnor's out"; Watson and Barker, in duets and dances; and Renee de Bauga, in "Visions of art."

LEEDS QUEEN'S THEATRE.

At the Queen's Theatre this week "The Maid of the Mill," a new and intensely interesting drama, from the pen of Mr E. Vivian Edmonds, is a great attraction. Ned Ackroyd, son of pious and God-fearing parents, is wrongfully convicted of robbing his father, a wealthy miller, in consequence of which the latter disinherits him. He escapes from Portland, after serving two years, and flees to Canada, where he amasses wealth, and returns after eighteen years to prove his innocence and punish his accusers. At the same time he finds his illegitimate daughter, working in the mills, constantly taunted through her misfortune, but his scheme of vengeance turns out triumphant. The author himself is successful as the despised son, and Miss Mary Austin plays the title role with equal success. Mr Erwin C. Edwards is also good as the stern father, along with Miss Winnie Tempest in the part of his wife.

Next week at the Queen's Theatre Mrs Frank Bottomley and her celebrated Repertoire Company will appear in "Sapho." On Friday night, by special desire, "Between two men" will be produced.

LEEDS CITY VARIETIES

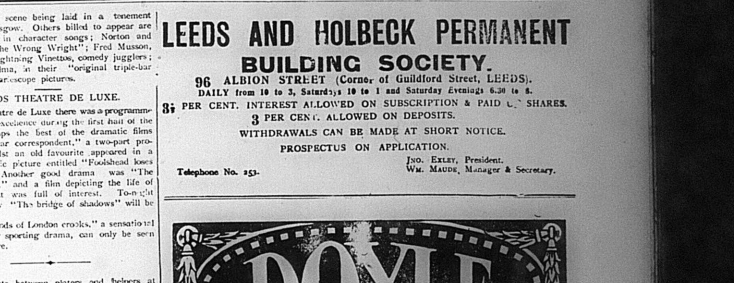
At the City Varieties a sketch dealing with the old story of Charles II and his love for Nell Gwynne has been produced, and it is one of the best sketches of its kind seen on the halls. It is produced by Mr Albert Wyndham, who takes the part of Charles Stuart; and Nell Gwynne is portrayed by Miss Mona Shepard, who charms the audience with her forceful acting. Victor Crawford plays the "Royal" pantomime, presents "The Smarties—a study in Pink and Black"; and others who appear are Jennie Reeve, male impersonator; Rapido, vocal impressionist; Syd and Myra, in a musical product; and the Holsons novelty comedians and dancers.

At the Varieties next week a Scotch domestic comedy sketch, entitled "The washing-house key," will be played by Miss Mollie Lindsey and company, the scene being laid in a tenement house in Glasgow. Others billed to appear are Olive Plant, in character songs; Norton and Doon, in "The Wrong Wright"; Fred Musson, comedian; Lightning Vinettos, comedy jugglers; Elton and Elma, in their "original triple-bar act," and Variescope pictures.

LEEDS THEATRE DE LUXE.

At the Theatre de Luxe there was a programme of all-round excellence during the first half of the week. Perhaps the best of the dramatic films was "The war correspondent," a two-part production, whilst an old favourite appeared in a splendid comic picture entitled "Foolshead loses a needle." Another good drama was "The upward way," and a film depicting the life of the tiger cat was full of interest. To-night and Saturday "The bridge of shadows" will be shown.

"In the hands of London crooks," a sensational and thrilling sporting drama, can only be seen at this theatre.



The dispute between platers and helpers at Selby Shipyard came to an end yesterday morning.

WHAT IT MEANS.—On Wednesday at a meeting of the Leeds Board of Guardians, it was stated that the decision of the West Riding Asylums Board to increase the maintenance charge for lunatics from 10s. 6d. to 11s. 8d. per week would cost the Board an additional £3,000 or £4,000 a year. The matter was referred to the Finance Committee for consideration.

ARE THEY COMING STARS?—A deputation from the Leeds City club has arranged to visit Selby to see Acklam and Carter, members of the Olympia Football Club, play in a local match. Acklam, a member of the junior eleven, has recently played with the first team as goal-keeper, and won high praise. Carter is one of the Olympia backs.

MR THOMPSON'S VIEWS.—Mr John Thompson, of East Rigton (President of Wetherby Chamber of Agriculture), speaking at the Leeds Meat Traders' Association dinner on Wednesday night, said the present was an age of panic legislation, and the attentions of the powers that be were turned too much on the farmer, to his disadvantage and that of the country generally. The latest statistics revealed the alarming fact that there had been an enormous reduction in the live and large trade, our prices cannot be approached for a similar quality of goods. stock of the country, namely, fifty thousand cattle, a million sheep, and half-a-million pigs. Many reasons were advanced as causes, but he attributed a great amount of the reduction to the doubt and uncertainty in the minds of those who occupied the land, and of stock owners, produced by past and present legislation. Agriculturists did not want the attentions of the Government, they were far better off alone, and the many wild-cat schemes hawled from half the political platforms to-day had a most serious effect on agriculture.

OUR GARDENS.

A Weekly Article specially Written for Amateur Gardeners, Allotment Holders, &c.

By ALBERT CLARKE, Birkenshaw.

THE FLOWER GARDEN

Beds and borders occupied by spring-flowering plants should be kept scrupulously tidy. Nothing detracts so much from the charms of the flower garden as untidiness. Trim the grass edging, and remove weeds, fallen leaves, and any other litter that may be present. The surface soil should be frequently stirred, as this both improves the appearance and keeps the soil in good condition. It is rather early yet to commence regular mowing of the lawns, but if the grass is rough or tufty, it will improve the appearance to run the lawn-mower over it. This should be done on a perfectly dry day, or more harm than good will be done.

HARDY ANNUALS

It is too early to sow hardy annuals, but the sites where they are intended to be grown should be forked over, with the object of giving the soil a chance to dry before the seed is sown. A fine tilth is necessary for the successful culture of annuals, and any extra labour that is put in with the digging fork will be rewarded by better results later on.

St. Brigid Anemones are beautiful flowers, and it is unfortunate that they do not seem to like a town garden. Occasionally we hear of them doing well in such a garden, and readers who are disposed to grow them will have better chances of success if they prepare a bed specially for them. They like a rich, open soil, and this may be provided by using plenty of thoroughly decayed manure, with some sand and leaf mould added. It is an excellent plan to place a couple of inches of mixed leaf-mould and sand under the corms when planting. This encourages root action and increases the likelihood of success. Ranunculus are pretty compact on plants and may receive the same treatment.

Birds are proving trouble some this year amongst the primroses. We have noticed a quantity of flower buds that have been nipped off. The black thread system may be successfully adopted as a preventative. Stretch the thread tightly over the plants and secure it to small stakes stuck into the ground about a yard apart.

TRANSPLANTING

Hardy perennials such as Delphiniums, Hollyhocks, etc., are commencing to grow earlier than usual this year, and intending planters of this class of plant should get the work completed without delay. Whilst transplanting a quantity of year old seedlings the other day we noticed that several inches of new root had already been made. It is obvious that the plants would suffer if the work of tran-planting was much longer delayed.

DIELYTRA SPECTABILIS

This plant is usually regarded as being only suitable for growing in pots for indoor decoration. As a matter of fact it is a hardy subject, and may even be grown in shady places outdoors, but a place sheltered from cold winds will suit it best. It is an ideal plant for naturalising amongst British ferns, and when in bloom in such a position its flowers are shown off to the best advantage. Plants that have been forced may be put in a cold frame to harden off, and may then be planted outdoors in a position where they can be allowed to remain undisturbed for several years.

Primroses, Polyanthus, Auriculas, Forgot-me-nots, Arabis, and Aubrelias may also be planted now, and Lily of the Valley beds should be top dressed with a thin covering of decayed manure.

EARLY CHRYSANTHEMUMS

It is not generally recognised that the summer-flowering varieties of chrysanthemums are almost hardy, or in other words, that they may be grown year after year without being taken indoor during winter. It is advisable to place some strawy manure around them in autumn, to prevent them being severely frozen. When new growth commences in spring, the manure should be removed, and the ground around them lightly forked over. If an increased number of plants is required they may be lifted and divided when the new growth is about six inches high. Each shoot will be found to have made some root, and single pieces will develop into nice plants during the growing season. The early-flowering pompones are worthy of more general cultivation. They are dwarf, and in most cases very free-flowering. Two of the oldest, yet two of the best, are Anastasia and Piercey's Seedling. Other good ones are Precocite and its crimson sport, Blushing Bride and Bronze Bride, Little Bob, Frederick Pele, Golden Beauty, Mignon Lyon, Orange Pet, Mr Selley, and Alice Butcher. There are countless varieties of the larger flowered class, but for garden decoration there are enoe note to beat the Masse section. Of these Horace Murtin, Ralph Curtis, Rabbie Burns, Geo. Howness, Ethel, Mrs Baird, Mrs Barkey, Well's Mosse, and Masse Improved are all well worth growing.

NASTUKTIUMS

These flowers seem to be neglected by many gardeners who are apparently unacquainted with their great and special value as cut flowers. It is questionable if any flower makes so rich and gay an effect in bowls and vases, while the brightness of the colours lights up the dingiest rooms. Dwarf Nasturtiums make, of course, a fine second-row plant for the flower-border, and tall sorts climb rapidly, and are often invaluable for hiding unsightly things.

To ensure the longest period of blossoming sow late in March or early in April in pots, and plant out at the beginning of May. Speaking generally, dwarf Nasturtiums flower most freely in gather poor soil, but for quick growth of the tall sorts a rich ground is needful.

The seeds may be sown out of doors in the open ground during April, but the plan we have previously recommended gives the best and most pleasing results.

VEGETABLE GARDEN

PARSNIPS

Parsnips may be safely sown now. The best results are obtained when the ground is specially prepared for them. No manure need be used when digging the ground. Dig deeply, and break it up thoroughly. When sowing the seed make a hole with a screwbar and fill it up with rich loam, woodashes, sand, and powdered, dry cow-manure. Sow 3 or 4 seeds on this and when the seedlings are about three inches high, reduce them to one. The holes should be made in rows a foot apart, and nine inches of space should be left from hole to hole in the rows. The Student and Elcombes Improved are excellent varieties.

A sowing of Round, or Summer Spinach may also be made. Deep, rich soil gives the best results.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Cuttings of decorative varieties may still be inserted, and in many instances will overtake those that were put in two or three months ago. Rooted cuttings should be potted off very soon now they commence to make root. If the roots are allowed to get entangled it is impossible to s-parate them without damaging them. The following are a few decorative varieties which should certainly be included as every collection: —Source d'or, December Gold, David Ingamells, Felton's Favourite, Parsons White, Market Red, Soleil d'Octobre, Mrs J. Thompson, H. W. Thorp, Madame R. Oberthur, W. Turner, Niveus, Baldock's Crimson, Mrs Roots, Mrs R. Luxford, Doris Raeburn, Dean's Favourite, Framfield Yellow, Framfield Early White, and Negoya. All decorative varieties should be stopped when six inches high. This will cause them to produce three or more strong side growths, which should in turn be stopped when they are six inches long. No further stopping will be required. In due course the plants will make a natural break and grow away to the flowering period. Splendid dwarf decorative plants may be grown from cuttings rooted in April. Insert the cutting about the third week in the month, and pot them into three-inch pots when rooted. They should be stopped once when about six inches high, and may be allowed to grow naturally afterwards. They may be successfully bloomed in six-inch pots and are extremely useful for house decoration, or for fronting groups of larger plants. A few of the best varieties for this purpose may be found amongst the following:—Kathleen Thompson, Coprice du Printemps, Framfield Early White (a gem), Yellow Cap, Source d'or, Félton's Favourite, Romance, Le Pactole, Soc. de Petite Amie, Mrs. Roots, Doris Raeburn, and Western King (late). Many of the single varieties may be grown in the same way, and if bushy specimens are wanted, 3 or 4 plants may be grown in each pot. If several plants are grown in a pot, they may be stopped a fortnight after potting off, and again when the side growths are four inches long. When potting into the flowering pots, the soil should be rammed very firmly with a blunt stick, and copious supplies of of liquid food must be given during the growing season. Good singles for this purpose are Sylvia, Slade, Coddie, Mason, Alzinchum Yellow, Lady Richardson, any of the Pagram family, Florrie King, Sussex Yellow, Rouped Beauty, Snowflake, Ideality, Kitty Bourne, and Buttercup.

STARTING DAHLIA TUBERS

Dahlia Tubers should now be brought out of their winter quarters and placed in a temperature of about 60 degees to start them into growth. Place them in boxes and scatter some fine soil amongst them, taking care to leave the crowns uncovered. They should be placed near the light, or they will soon "draw." A number of young shoots will soon form around the crown, and when these are about four inches long they should be cut away with a small portion of the old crown attached. They will root in small pots filled with equal parts sand and loam. Preserve them from draughts and spray overhead daily.

QUESTION

RAMBLER ROSES

I have two rose trees, "Crimson Rambler" and "Dorothy Perkins," planted last season in tubs, to grow up a porch, but they show no signs of life yet. The soil is fairly good. Do you advise giving them manure, or what is best to be done?—"Novice."

If your trees have made no progress, it is very probable that they are dead. If the bark is fresh and green they may break into growth, but they are very late. Cover the soil within an inch or two of nearly fresh horse manure. This is the best top-dressing we know of. Roses of this class, intended for growing in tubs, should be reared in pots. Possibly your best plan would be to grow with pot-grown plants.

GRIT

Recently much discussion has taken place as to the functions of grit. Several elaborate reasons have been given for its use, and I am of opinion that scientific research will add to our knowledge in the near future. At present, however, there is only one point on which we are all agreed, and that is the necessity of grit to aid in the digestion of food.

A fowl has no teeth, and grit becomes imperative for mastication. The late Mr Alexander Comyns aptly illustrates a fowl without grit as follows:—"A fowl which is deprived of grit is in the same position as regards digestion of its food as a toothless old man who has not even a knife and fork with which to cut his food into minute particles."

The food is swallowed by the bird and passes to the crop, eventually reaching the gizzard; here mastication takes place, and providing the proper material is to hand (grit) this action is very complete.

It has been noticed that shortness of supply has led to liver trouble; entire deprivation would cause ailments innumerable.

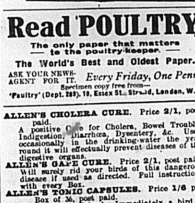
I grant you that many farmers boast they never give fowls grit, but in the many cases I have investigated I have always found the birds had free range, and consequently were able to seek their own supply. For penned birds it is essential.

It should be given in a box or other receptacle, a liberal supply should always be present, and the birds allowed to help themselves as Nature requires. A capital contrivance is on the market in the shape of an automatic grit and shell box. It is fixed to the side of the house, filled, and then is self-supplying until exhausted. This naturally is economical from the labour aspect as well as preventing waste of material. The manufacturers are the Alfen Poultry Co., Sawbridgeworth, Herts.

The cheapest material for grit is flint broken to the size of peas. It can be purchased at about 5s. per cwt., carriage paid. Many poultry-farmers purchase their own crusher at a cost of 15s. to a sovereign. My experience is that it is a bad investment. With hard work it is not possible to crack a hundredweight per diem, then there is the trouble of procuring the raw material, and as it can be purchased so cheaply one's time can be far better occupied in attention to the birds.

SHELL

Probably birds with free range can perform their natural duty of producing eggs without crushed oyster shell being placed at their disposal, as they are enabled to secure a certain percentage of shell-forming material from the elements of their vegetable food. As already pointed out, clover is particularly rich at time; but to-day there are probably more fowls in this country penned than at liberty, and for them it is necessary to supply crushed oyster shell for the formation of egg shells. From personal observation I might add that even where the birds enjoy their liberty a box of oyster shells is an advantage, as it tends to strengthen the egg shell, thus minimising the risk of breakage during transit.



RESUME

Intelligent appreciation of the matter contained in these two chapters will bring you to the time when collection of eggs becomes a necessity. I am not inferring that any divergence from the system advocated will produce failure, though I am certainly of opinion the more closely these suggestions are followed the better will be your results. Many failures occur through trying to follow simultaneously many theories. Decide on a system that appeals to you as a practical and commonsense one, give that a fair trial, and do not be led away from its main issue.

Daily you can read of experiments that appear successful. I advise you, unless your purse is a very long one, to abstain from them; but when the experiments have definitely proved the success of new theories, reap all the advantage you can by utilising them.

HUNTING TRAGEDY NEAR MICKLEFIELD.

MOOR ALLERTON GENTLEMAN'S FATAL FALL

THE INQUEST—WETHERBY RESIDENT'S EVIDENCE.

On Saturday afternoon a tragic incident marked the meet with the Bramham Moor hounds in the Micklefield district, Mr J. Bower Brooke, of Nashbrooke, Moor Allerton, being thrown from his horse and instantly killed. The meet was at Ford Mill. A blank day had been experienced until about half-past three in the afternoon, when hounds found in the Ringhu Wood. Mr Brooke, who was a remarkably hard rider to hounds for one of his years—he was 62—had changed from his favourite mare to a chestnut horse about half-an-hour before. As was his wont, he followed hounds with great keenness, and after traversing a ploughed field at a good pace drew sharply to the right upon reaching a plantation adjoining the highway. His horse over-reached itself, one of the animal's hind hoofs caught the hoof of the right fore-leg, almost tearing away the shoe, and Mr Brooke was thrown. He alighted on his head, and the horse fell on its rider. Those riding near saw the horse roll clear, and Mr Brooke raised himself for a moment to fall back lifeless. Mr Harold Nickols, who was riding alongside, and who witnessed the occurrence, at once rendered what assistance he could. Others were soon on the spot, including Dr Constable Hayes, of Leeds, who attended to the fallen rider. Dr Abbott, of Aberford, was also summoned, but all proved useless, the unfortunate gentleman being already dead. The Lord Mayor of Leeds (Mr E. A. Brotherton), who was present at the hunt, fetched his motor-car from Aberford, and, with the assistance of two other gentlemen, conveyed the body to Mr Brooke's residence at Moor Allerton. A large section of the field was ahead at the time of the accident, and hounds had run the fox to earth when Lord Hawke rode up to acquaint the members with the sad news. A most profound impression was created, and Mr Lane Fox at once ordered hounds home.

Mr Brooke, who was one of the oldest, as well as a most popular supporter of the hunt, had a somewhat similar accident about a month ago, when he sustained slight concussion. A genial man of quiet disposition, and considerable personal charm, Mr Brooke was the eldest son of the late Mr William Brooke, glass-bottle manufacturer, of Leeds. He was educated at Grendon Viearage, Northamptonshire, and afterwards at Hailleybury College. He was admitted as a solicitor in 1873, and for many years was in partnership with one of his brothers, Mr J. A. Brooke, upon whose retirement the practice was continued by Mr Brooke. His second name of Bower was derived from the well-known Leeds family of that name, and he was the grandson of the late Mr Joshua Bower, a colliery proprietor, of Hunslet. At one time Mr Brooke acted as Deputy Coroner for Leeds, but relinquished that office several years ago. Hunting was his chief, indeed almost his only hobby. He was a very enthusiastic follower of the Bramham Moor Hounds, and could be seen in the field nearly every week during the season. He was also a member of the Hunt Committee. A staunch Churchman, Mr Brooke took a keen interest in the Moortown Church, of which he was a trustee, and acted as a churchwarden until his death. He leaves a widow, who is a daughter of the late Mr Richard Dobson, of Middleton Grange.

The inquest was held at the deceased gentleman's residence at Moor Allerton on Monday by the City Coroner (Mr Malcolm).

Before evidence was called the Coroner said they would be aware of the nature of the inquiry they were about to enter upon. It was a very sad one, so far as many of them were concerned, and particularly for Mr Brooke's relatives. Mr Brooke was well-known. He was personally known to himself (the Coroner) and all his profession, and a more estimable man could not be found in the district. He had always been one of the most amicable and fraternal members of the legal profession in the city. For a long time the deceased was an assistant to him (the Coroner), and had only given up that work in order to be free for other engagements in the city.

Mr E. O. Simpson, on behalf of the legal profession in Leeds, paid a warm tribute to the deceased, and expressed deep sympathy with the bereaved relatives. Mr Brooke, he said, possessed in a very singular degree the gift of a most engaging disposition, and everybody, both in the profession and in the world of sport in which he took so deep an interest, honoured and respected him. A kinder heart never beat.

Mr Leopold St. Brooke identified the body, and stated that the deceased, his brother, was 62 years of age. Mr Brooke was accustomed to the saddle. It was his one great hobby, and he had hunted ever since he was a boy.

Mr Harold Nickols, of Wetherby, describing the accident, said that the sportsmen had just gone through a gate, and the hounds were running hard. The deceased was galloping when witness saw his horse stumble. It looked at first as though the horse had either got its foot in a rabbit hole or crossed its feet, and the horse fell on top of him. When the horse regained its feet Mr Brooke raised himself, but fell over on to his face. He was undoubtedly dead when witness got up to him. Witness did all he could for the deceased, but of course to no purpose. Since the accident witness had seen the horse, and had found that it had over-reached itself. In other words, the hind foot had caught its off forefoot, and had locked the two hoofs together. This was clearly proved because the right off shoe of the animal was bent. Mr Brooke was thrown straight on to his head.

Mr E. O. Simpson, who saw the deceased a few minutes before the accident occurred, gave evidence corroborating that of the witness. He arrived on the scene directly after Mr Brooke had been thrown, but he was quite dead then. Witness sent a message to Dr Hayes, who was also hunting, and that gentleman returned immediately to the scene of the accident. He tried artificial respiration, but it was no use.

Dr George Constable Hayes, of Leeds, spoke to examining the body after the accident, and described the deceased's injuries as hemorrhage at the base of the brain. This was borne out by the statement that the deceased had once "shimself" after the accident, which he could not have done had his skull been fractured, as was thought at first to have been the cause of death.

The Coroner said it was clearly a case of accidental death, due to a fall in the hunting field, which resulted in hemorrhage at the base of the brain.

A verdict in accordance with the medical evidence was returned.

A vote of condolence was passed with the bereaved relatives.

OSGOLDCROSS DIVISION FIGHT.

THREE-CORNERED CONTEST PROMISED

INTERESTING TO KIPPAX, ALLERTON, AND LEDSTON ELECTORS.

The annual meeting of the Conservative and Unionist Association for the Osgoldcross Division was held on Thursday at Pontefract. Mr F. S. Hubbard, chairman, presided over a good attendance.

Mr Hopkins presented the balance-sheet, showing that the income for the year had been £387, and the expenditure £412, leaving (with an adverse balance last year) a sum of £75 due to the bank.

Mr Hubbard presented a satisfactory report on the year's work, in which reference was made to the prospect of a three-cornered fight at the next election. The Labour party, which had professed hitherto to be supporters of the Government, were now ranged in direct opposition to it, and with Mr Campbell Johnston as the Unionist candidate he would say that whoever might fall in the coming battle it would not be the Unionist champions. (Hear, hear). Mr Hubbard also reminded the meeting that he had been selected to contest the Leigh Division of Lancashire, and in those circumstances it would be for the Association to say if they should select the chairmanship of Osgoldcross, seeing that he would have to be absent during the fight.

Mr E. T. Clark, moving the adoption of the report, said the Executive had considered the matter of the chairmanship, and, if agreeable to the Association, they had decided to ask Mr Hubbard to continue in the office. (Hear, hear). It would be a pity to break the continuity. During the contest no doubt one or two undersmall s could be found to carry on the work.

The report was adopted.

Mr F. M. Ibbs then moved the re-election of Mr Hubbard, of whose organising capacity and enthusiasm he spoke in high terms. He enforced a plea, already made by Mr Clarke, for more liberal support, adding that the greatest enemies of Unionism were not the Liberals and Labour men—they were only misguided opponents—(laughter)—but those idle Unionists who never gave time, money, or thought to the cause, and did nothing but grumble, sometimes being too lazy even to do that. (Laughter and applause). If the next fight was to be won it would be by the help and co-operation of all the members of the party, and he hoped his words on this subject would be taken to heart by those for whom they were intended.

The resolution to re-elect Mr Hatchard was enthusiastically adopted.

Lord St. Oswald was re-elected president, with many kind expressions in recognition of his services. Mr Granville C. H. Wheler, M.P., Mr J. G. Lyon, Col. J. R. Shaw, and Mr E. T. Clark were elected vice-presidents; and Major Anne was re-appointed hon. treasurer.

In calling upon Mr Campbell Johnston to speak, Mr Hatchard said he should watch the contest in Osgoldcross with great interest, believing that their candidate would then reap the reward of all the exertions he had made during the past three years. (Hear, hear).

Mr Campbell Johnston then addressed the meeting. He said they were met that day under a new situation, one they had not experienced before. As far as they could see they were certain of having a three-cornered fight. It was ridiculous to his mind to claim, as their opponents did claim, that the Radical and Labour parties could work together, because in the words of Mr Lloyd George, they combined all the forces of progress. There never was greater bunkum spoken, for it was absolutely untrue to fact. Why? Because there was nowadays a new spirit of progress animating the Unionist party, a leaven of democracy which was growing stronger day by day, and he claimed to represent that leaven of democracy. He was perfectly certain that the Unionist party combined the best qualities of both the Radical and Labour parties. The Radical party, on the one hand, had shown a wobbling policy in times of crises, and had refused to preserve the forces of law and order. To his mind the Labour party in the House of Commons was one to which every party than the table he was standing near was like a camel, for it was impregnated with a spirit of Syndicalism and Socialism. (Applause). On the other hand, the Unionist party was the best to give Labour their charter by rendering trades unions legal. (Applause). Therefore, they had on their shoulders a heritage of carrying on their policy to its logical conclusion, to take regard to the modern position of commerce. There was a tendency today for it to amalgamate into big trusts. Labour individually could not fight these trusts, and the party was bound to support the combination of big trades unions which could fight them by means of collective bargaining. But, while the party was holding the scales of justice equally between capital and labour, they were bound to study the best interests of the community as a whole, and when there was a crisis they were bound to see that the forces of law and order were acted upon. He claimed that the Unionist party represented the true interests of working men, and it was the bounden duty of all working men in the Unionist party to vote for a Labour candidate because he was a Labour candidate, but to stick to his own party; for if only they preserved their own convictions he had no fear as to the result. The speaker enumerated the planks of his platform as Tariff Reform, land, and housing policy for the working classes, an amendment of the Insurance Act, a strong social policy of progress of labour in the country as well as in the towns, and the thorough reform of our poor law. He was also in strong opposition to "that cursed Welsh Disestablishment" and "that confounded Home Rule." (Applause).

RATES—SALARIES

A meeting of Selby Rural District Council was held on Monday—Mr H. Anson (Hambleton) presiding.

A letter was received from the Local Government Board stating that they were not prepared to sanction permanently the appointment of Mr R. Braithwaite as inspector of nuisances for the rural district of Selby at the salary of £170 per annum.

The Chairman pointed out that the appointment was made annually.

The joint committee reported that they had appointed Dr Bertram Hill as medical officer for the districts of Selby, Cawood, and Tadcaster at a salary of £300 per annum.

A letter was received from the Housing and Town Planning Council stating that they would hold a conference in Hull on May 21st and 22nd next to consider the practical administration of the Act, more especially as applied to cottage buildings in rural areas.

Mr Armstrong thought that Selby should be represented, and moved that the chairman be appointed to represent them.

The Chairman did not think they in Selby would require many houses at present. The outlying districts, however, might.

Mr Baxter seconded the motion, which was carried.

The Local Government Board wrote stating that under the revised list of sanatoria, under the National Insurance Act, the one at Gateforth had been approved.

The Clerk: It is only a matter of form.

The Finance Committee recommended that a call of 2d. in the £ be made on the overseers for each parish for highway purposes, and 2d. in the £ for sanitary purposes for the next half-year. This was the same as the previous half-years.

On the motion of Mr Everatt, seconded by Mr Abel, the recommendation was adopted.

Mr M. Milner, collector for the water rate, at the suggestion of the Finance Committee, attended the Board meeting in support of his application for an increase of salary. Mr Milner stated that he had made an application for an increase of £5 per annum.

Mr Golton thought that an increase of £5 per annum was sufficient. Mr Milner was the biggest collector under the water scheme, and did not always get the money upon his first call. He moved that an increase of £3 per annum be granted.

This was seconded by Mr Dixon, and carried.

The Chairman stated that the Committee appointed to meet the representatives of the West Riding County Council and Goole with reference to the proposed erection of a new bridge over the river Aire recommended that the Selby Rural Council contribute £3,500 towards its erection at Carlton, provided the Goole Rural Council contributed a like amount, and that the West Riding County Council contribute the remainder, including the costs of litigation, etc.

The Clerk stated that the estimated cost of the proposed bridge would be £16,000.

Mr Everatt moved that the Selby Rural Council contribute £3,500 towards the cost of the erection of the bridge.

Mr Fentiman said they (the Selby Rural District Council) would have to assist the West Riding Council in paying their £11,000.

Mr Baxter seconded the motion, which was carried.

GILCHRIST LECTURE AT GARFORTH.

ART AND THE NATIONAL LIFE.

"Art and national life—ancient and modern" was the title of the last of the series of Gilchrist lectures at Garforth, and it was delivered by Mr S. C. Kaines Smith, M.A., before a very large audience in the Council School on Friday evening. Mr G. C. H. Wheler, M.P., presided. The lecturer, who was not without humour, has a fine, racy style, and he was soon on good terms with the audience. Some people he said, were art with a capital A, and they talked about it as if it was a thing that belonged exclusively to them, Art, however, was not worth anything unless it was part of their life, and everyone could understand it if they took the trouble to do so. Everyone had a share in the making of art. Their minds were formed and shaped by their surroundings, climate, and general feeling of the community, and that was why art was an historical thing. He mentioned that when at Steeton, near Silsden, he lived in a house, which had the name of Garforth all over it. It was probably built by a man called Garforth, so named because he came from Garforth, so they would see the place had made a little bit of history. History was not a thing that was put in school-books, but was made up of actions by human beings. That was why history and art were living things. A great deal of history was never written, and men had left fragments of civilization behind them which aroused their imagination. He then exhibited on the screen views of Stonehenge and the Roman Wall, stating that the Roman soldiers brought not only civilization, but a place in the greatest empire in the world to Britain. After the withdrawal of the Romans the country passed the vicissitudes of the Saxons, and the people looked to the great feudal lords for protection, and to the church for instruction and art. The monks were not only the educational and sanitary authorities of the time, but they were the moving spirits in art, and this was shown by the beautiful churches, illuminated books, embroidery, etc.

Everyone of them had some idea of beauty. Some of them might be wrong in their ideas, but England in the mass had a great appreciation of beauty, and that was the result of the conditions under which they lived. They were not only affected by the political and social life, but also by the geographical and climatic conditions. No nation in the world understood colour as they did, and there was no other country with such a procession of colour as revealed by the seasons. They had wind, mist, rain, and snow, but if they had not these they would not have the colour. York Minster, one of the greatest monuments to Christianity the world had ever produced, they were not interested in minutely; the idea they got from it was the beauty of mass, height, and movement. They understood beauty in terms of colour. The Greeks had narrow ideas until they came into contact with other peoples, and then they had a national art. He then, in dramatic style, told the story of the struggle of Ancient Greece against the Persian hosts, and how the national life of the nation found its expression in art, and wonderful herbal balms of the ancient Gladiators.

Zam-Buk is a rare and unique combination of the purest vegetable oils and herbal extracts, highly refined and concentrated, and is manufactured under the most scientific and hygenic conditions by skilled chemists. It is in its unique herbal composition, and its freedom from lard and all animal fats, that Zam-Buk differs so completely from common salves and ointments. And its repeated successes show how different it is in medicinal action.

Every box of Zam-Buk placed on the chemists' counter is a concentration of the world's most wonderful healing properties ready for instant use.

When Zam-Buk is applied to the skin, festering is stopped, inflammation and irritation allayed, sore places disappear like magic, and new layers of healthy tissue are made to grow.

Equally invaluable is Zam-Buk for poisoned wounds and sores, which need the corruption drawing away and new skin creating; those troublesome blotches, pimples, and rashes. Zam-Buk is so refined that its active medicinal essences are absorbed deep down beneath the outer layer of skin. Zam-Buk has real medicinal value which toilet creams and powders do not possess.

Mothers of families at home and abroad find Zam-Buk the quickest and surest healer for cuts, bruises, sores, burns, scalds, and knocks.

Zam-Buk gives such benefits as make a box of it a wise investment in every home.

When buying Zam-Buk you can tell it is the genuine article by seeing the name "Zam-Buk" on the package and on the Government Stamp by which the package is fastened up. All others are worthless imitations.

HALTON LADS IN TROUBLE.

STORY OF A MISSING FERRET

At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Thomas Albert Jackson (14), an apprentice, and Robert Allinson (14), errand boy, both of Halton, were charged in the Children's Court with stealing a box containing a ferret valued at 2s/6d., the property of Harry Bulmer, a miner, of Halton.

Giving evidence, Bulmer said he occupied an allotment garden at Halton, which contained a shed. On Sunday at dinner time he saw the ferret quite safe after feeding it. Next day about 4 p.m. he went to the hut and found someone had broken open a window, taking inside he found that the box containing the ferret had gone.

One of the boys stated that he had been sheltering in a refuse shed when he heard a scratching noise and a few moments later he saw a ferret. He had a friend, and they arranged to get it in the evening. They tried to sell it, offering it unknowingly to Bulmer. The latter, however, did not at that time know he had lost his ferret.

Ben Nicholson, miner, of Halton, stated that late on Sunday evening he visited Jackson's house as he had heard that they had a ferret for sale. He purchased it, and did not hear about a ferret being stolen until the following day. He subsequently gave it to Bulmer.

Sergeant Haigh spoke to examining the hut, and said there was a window which could have been opened by a man, but there were some marks on boards outside the window as if someone had climbed up to the window. He visited the boys' homes and asked their parents to send the boys to his house.

Both boys were bound under the Probation Act in the sum of £5, the parents to pay costs.

FARM FIRE AT BURN.

SPARKS FROM A PASSING ENGINE.

A fire broke out shortly before noon on Friday at the stackyard of Mr John Webster, Hagg Beck Farm, Burn, Selby.

The outbreak was attributed to sparks from a passing railway engine, which set fire to a stack under a Dutch barn.

A high wind was blowing, and fears were entertained that the whole of the stacks and a portion of the farm buildings would become involved.

A message was sent to Selby for the Fire Brigade, but owing to horses not being available some delay occurred. The fire engine was ultimately driven to Burn by one of the Urban Council's cart horses.

No hops were entertained of saving the stack and barn that had caught fire.

The Brigade by vigorous efforts, saved stacks in the vicinity of the burning stack. The wheat stack which first caught fire, a portion of a clover stack, and the Dutch barn were destroyed, the damage being estimated at £270.

The gale that was blowing made the work of the brigade and those who were assisting very difficult. A good supply of water was obtained from a pond close by.

WONDERFUL HEALING.

ZAM-BUK GROWS NEW HEALTHY SKIN.

CLEARS AWAY DISEASE AS IF BY MAGIC

Zam-Buk has brought the treatment of skin affections and injuries to a point of perfection never before attained. Skin magic, in fact, is how Zam-Buk's wonderful healing feats are frequently described.

Nothing else known to science has such a wonderful influence on an injured or diseased skin. Zam-Buk, indeed, reminds one of the rare and wonderful herbal balms of the ancient Gladiators.

Zam-Buk is a rare and unique combination of the purest vegetable oils and herbal extracts, highly refined and concentrated, and is manufactured under the most scientific and hygenic conditions by skilled chemists. It is in its unique herbal composition, and its freedom from lard and all animal fats, that Zam-Buk differs so completely from common salves and ointments. And its repeated successes show how different it is in medicinal action.

Every box of Zam-Buk placed on the chemists' counter is a concentration of the world's most wonderful healing properties ready for instant use.

When Zam-Buk is applied to the skin, festering is stopped, inflammation and irritation allayed, sore places disappear like magic, and new layers of healthy tissue are made to grow.

Equally invaluable is Zam-Buk for poisoned wounds and sores, which need the corruption drawing away and new skin creating; those troublesome ringworms and scalp sores that cause mothers so much worry; and aggravating piles that tell their tale in their own weakening way. All are relieved, and the surgeon's knife evaded by the marvellous healing powers of Zam-Buk.

At this time of the year Zam-Buk is particularly valuable in clearing the skin of those troublesome blotches, pimples, and rashes. Zam-Buk is so refined that its active medicinal essences are absorbed deep down beneath the outer layer of skin. Zam-Buk has real medicinal value which toilet creams and powders do not possess.

Mothers of families at home and abroad find Zam-Buk the quickest and surest healer for cuts, bruises, sores, burns, scalds, and knocks.

Zam-Buk gives such benefits as make a box of it a wise investment in every home.

When buying Zam-Buk you can tell it is the genuine article by seeing the name "Zam-Buk" on the package and on the Government Stamp by which the package is fastened up. All others are worthless imitations.

A WOODLESFORD COUPLE SEPARATED.

AFTER TWENTY-SIX YEARS.

At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Walter Gosney, quarryman, of Woodlesford, was summoned by his wife, Harriet Ann Gosney, for desertion. Mr Norman Elliott appeared on behalf of the defendant.

The complainant stated that she had been married twenty-six years. Her husband had been very jealous of her ever since. When he got drunk he treated her shamefully, and he was cruel. He left her about seven months ago.

Asked by the Chairman as to how it had started, complainant said it had commenced with him throwing a pot. She had had many a black eye through him. When he left he took his clothes. Since leaving he had given her on four occasions four shillings, and also three instalments of three shillings.

Cross-examined by Mr Elliott, Mrs Gosney said she was living as housekeeper to a man in Beecroft Yard, but she denied that she had locked her husband outside of the house on September last. It was on account of her children that she had taken proceedings. When he first removed to Beecroft Yard a man named Birkin lived there, and at the present time her children were living there. She denied that she was living with Birkin as his wife, but was paid a weekly wage by him.

At this stage the Chairman (Mr J. W. Morkill) asked Mr Elliott if he could prove his statements.

Mr Elliott replied that he would call evidence.

In further cross-examination, Mrs Gosney said she was not asking for anything for herself but for her children. She would not live with her husband again, as she was afraid of her life.

William Gosney (24), son of the complainant, said his father and mother had never lived happily.

Asked by Mr Elliott what the "rows" were about, witness said he expected it had been through jealousy.

Mr Elliott: Why has your father been jealous?

Witness: Don't ask me, because I do not know.

Mr Elliott: Has your mother not been in the habit of going to Mr Birkin's house?

Witness: Yes, to work.

Mr Elliott: At about ten o'clock at night?

The defendant said he had lived at Woodlesford all his married life, and they had lived fairly comfortably prior to going to live in Beecroft Yard. A few months before leaving his wife, he had gone to Aldershot on account of his health. On his return home his wife met him at the Station, and told him she had removed to Beecroft Yard. Afterwards he noticed that she kept going into Birkin's. In September last he was locked out by his wife, and had to be let in by the lodger. The next day he took his clothes and went. If he could have the furniture he would take the children.

Richard Ferguson, who said he had lodged with the Gosneys for seven or eight months, said that Gosney had always appeared a quiet man. He corroborated the story about the defendant being locked out of the house.

Sarah Ann Gosney, daughter, said she had seen her father strike her mother, but it was always when her mother started. It was, she added, always her mother who started the bother.

Abraham Armitage, of Rothwell, said that he had worked beside the defendant for some time. He had known the man Birkin about six weeks. A week or two ago he saw Mrs Gosney and Birkin in a public-house at Rothwell, and they were together.

After retiring the Bench granted a separation order, with four shillings a week.

LORD HAREWOOD AND NURSING ASSOCIATIONS.

MEETING AT HAREWOOD HOUSE.

At Harewood House on Saturday afternoon the annual meeting of the West Riding Nursing Association was held—the Earl of Harewood presiding. Mrs Meysey Thompson read the third annual report, and stated that the demand for nurses was rapidly increasing.

Lord Harewood, in moving the adoption of the report, said in other counties nursing associations had received valuable aid from County Councils, but in the West Riding no aid of that sort had been given. He thought as time went on, and the Association was found to be doing good work, the County Council might be induced to give some aid such as was forth-coming in other counties. They required more money to carry on the work. He hoped the Association would work hand in hand with the Territorial Association, which was prospering exceedingly in the way of nurses. Mrs Sheepshanks informed him that a gentleman was willing to give a subscription of £100 if another £400 could be raised.

Mrs Lascelles seconded the resolution, which was carried.

On the motion of the Rev. M. Lascelles, seconded by the Countess of Harewood, the Executive Committee and honorary officers were re-elected, and on the motion of Mrs Hugh Lupton, seconded by Mrs Bruce, a vote of thanks was accorded the honorary medical officers and honorary solicitor.

Miss Hughes, General Superintendent of the Queen Victoria Jubilee Nurses, gave an address on the work of the association. The West Riding County Council was to be congratulated on having formulated one of the best schemes for co-operation with the voluntary nursing associations that had yet been devised. The district nurse could carry out the duties of health visitor, and give advice in regard to the prevention of tuberculosis and other matters better than any one else, and why should there be another official coming along to trouble the working man's wife? She thought a State service of nurses at the present time was impossible. There was a very great scarcity of nurses, and women were not entering the nursing profession as they did. It was becoming increasingly difficult to get the right class of woman.

On the motion of Mr W. Sheepshanks, seconded by the Rev. W. H. Draper, a hearty vote of thanks was accorded the Earl and Countess of Harewood and to Miss Hughes.

Lord Harewood, responding, said the Association was £40 on the wrong side at the end of 1912, and now the deficit was about £100. He asked every one to do their best to get new subscribers. About £1,200 a year would put the Association, on its present footing, on the right side.

On Saturday afternoon Whitkirk hockey players were defeated by York by three goals to one.

DISTRICT BREVITIES.

Garforthians are grateful. The district rate has been reduced 2d.

• • •

At last Garforth Council meeting there was a slight "breeze," but it did no damage.

• • •

Newsham is going ahead with its church hall scheme, and the building will be provided before long.

• • •

There were no cases necessitating the attendance of Justices at the occasional police-court at Selby on Monday.

• • •

A club of motor-cyclists and drivers of light cars has been formed of Boston Spa, and will be affiliated to the A.C.U.

• • •

Booming Boston Spa! The N.E.R. Co. have wisely decided to give an improved train service between Leeds and Thorparch.

• • •

Farmers in Yorkshire are, we are told, doing their best to reduce the number of wood pigeons. What about the Barwick rooks?

• • •

Rothwell colliery owner honoured! The next sheriff for Yorkshire will be Mr C. E. Charlesworth, Conyngham Hall, Knaresborough.

• • •

Tut, tut! A member of Garforth Council says that the sanitary condition of the area is disgraceful. Why didn't he kick up a row before, then?

• • •

At a Northern Counties Athletic Association meeting in Leeds on Monday permission was given to hold sports at Allerton Bywater on July 25th.

• • •

Local women have apparently no desire to take part in public work. Hunslet Board of Guardians has one lady member, Tadcaster one, and Wetherby none.

• • •

It is not true that, as a sign of the times, the farmers of Barleston Ash are to form a golf circle. They are too busy making money to bother about trivialities.

• • •

Accidents will occur! A Kippax man, charged with using obscene language, told the Castleford magistrates that the roughty words slipped out by accident. It was unfortunate.

• • •

A man apparently suffering from loss of memory was found on Thursday night lying in a garden in Mansfield Terrace, Crossgates, and was taken to the Beckett Street Workhouse, Leeds.

• • •

In certain circumstances Rothwell will probably employ a second health visitor, yet Garforth has not the enterprise to employ a district nurse. A penny rate would meet the cost of a health visitor.

• • •

The annual meeting of the Barleston Ash Division Liberal Association is to be held at Halton next month. It is expected that Mr Spencer Hughes ("Sub Rosa") will give an address.

• • •

What do the Skyrac magistrates think about it? At the Quarter Sessions on Monday Frederick Blake (40), foreman shunter, indicted for stealing coal, value 6d., at Rothwell, was acquitted.

• • •

Barleston Ash cannot compete! A hen covered with a growth of fine fur about 5in. long in lieu of feathers was acquired in a shipment of poultry purchased by a farmer at Wescott, Missouri.

• • •

The Rothwell prayer does not meet with the approval of the bibliophiles on the Hunslet Board of Guardians, and they have asked the opinion of the Bishop of Ripon on it. Guardians get some funny things to do.

• • •

At Garforth on Friday a lecturer declared that our climate is the finest in the world, although he did not think an audience he addressed the previous night agreed with him, seeing that they got a soaking in coming to the meeting.

• • •

Hard lines! That was what a member of Selby Board of Guardians said when the exporter at the workhouse applied for the return of the superannuation deductions from his salary and was told he could not have the money.

• • •

Promising for agricola! Major Dent, of Ribston Park, Wetherby, says that agriculture is not a decaying industry. It is a very live industry, and will go forward if it is given a fair chance. This is good news for the labourers!

• • •

Mr W. H. Banks, of Woodlands, Pudsey, has bought Appleton House and adjoining estate, at Bolton Percy, from the executors of the late Lord Holden, and intends to reside there. Appleton House was built as a residence for the present Lord Holden during his father's lifetime.

• • •

Mr Bowers Brooke, who was killed near Micklefield on Saturday, had had several accidents before. On one occasion he was riding a horse which had previously been kicked by another animal. He was galloping at full stretch when suddenly his horse's leg broke, with a snap which was heard for a considerable distance. About a month ago he had a fall similar to that which has caused his death, and he sustained slight concussion. He had no recollection of that accident. Yet some folks think hunting has not a spice of danger in it.

The rateable value of Osmondthorpe is £10,604, an increase on the year of £631.

• • •

It was stated in a Stourton case that defendant's family had held a licence for 35 years without complaint.

• • •

Will Tadcaster District Council follow suit? Garforth Urban Council have given employes an increase of 2s. per week.

• • •

According to Mr John Thompson, the worst cottage property in Wetherby district belongs to people like retired tradesmen.

• • •

It is not improbable that a health visitor will be appointed for Garforth district by the County Council to look after the school children.

• • •

Mr T. Thomas, of Middleton, who has just been elected chairman of Hunslet Board of Guardians, will probably be Chairman for next year.

• • •

Edmund Bushney, who was rector of Bolton Percy about the beginning of the 19th century, made considerable gifts to the library of York Minster.

• • •

The local magistrates at the West Riding Quarter Sessions at Wakefield on Monday were Mr H. S. Childe (Potterton Hall) and Mr E. Parkin (Kippax).

• • •

Bitter times! A farmer in the Tadcaster district has purchased an estate for over £10,000. Good luck to him. He appears to think land is a good investment.

• • •

The Micklefield Coal Co., having purchased a large acreage of coal in Newthorpe district from Lord Londesborough, developments may be expected in that direction.

• • •

It is stated that Parliament is to be asked to allow women to be Guardians. Do any of our local women want a job? Why don't they try the Board of Guardians first?

• • •

Putting it on Eve again! A Rothwell man, charged with using strong language, told a constable that his wife was "uncontrollable." The humour of it! What about his unruly tongue.

• • •

A huge tree about 60 feet in length was blown down at Gledhow in a field belonging to Lord Airedale, and as a result some fencing, a gas post, big pole, and an arc lamp, were smashed.

• • •

"Leeds Board of Guardians are costing the ratepayers this year £7,000 less than in the year before," says an evening paper. Yes, the Guardians say they get no remuneration for their services.

• • •

Local suffragettes will have noticed that at two or three women's entertainments in the district the suffragette has been caricatured. Evidently local women don't bother their heads about the vote.

• • •

Pluck! The Conservatives in the Normanton Division, of which Rothwell is a part, are ready for next election, and they intend to give Mr Fred Hall, M.P., who has always had big majorities, a good fight.

• • •

Although there is any amount of work in hand at the Selby Shipyard of Messrs Cochrane and Sons, there has been trouble this week between the labourers and the platers, and a number of men were off work.

• • •

Was she a suffragette? "I prepared his meals and put them before him," said the wife, "but he did not say 'Thank you.'" "I know no law," returned the magistrate, "which says your husband must say 'Thank you.'"

• • •

Towzer must behave, or he will be executed! There are many complaints in the Wetherby and Tadcaster districts of sheep-worrying by dogs. Sheep were worried at Wetherby on Friday morning, and one dog was shot by a farmer.

• • •

The retirement from Rothwell Urban Council of Mr Wellans, who at one time was Chairman, is regretted by the members. He was a good representative of St. Aston, and kept the claims of the "Selby," as it was termed, well in the fore.

• • •

At Roundhay Park there is a beautiful display of bloom in the large greenhouse known as the Conservation House, in the Canal Gardens. The show of primulæ is as fine as anything of its kind ever seen at the Park. The bulbs, especially the narcissus, are also at their best.

• • •

Annexation of outside districts! "I think," says Mr W. B. Binder, Clerk to Hunslet Rural District Council, "that Local Government Board ought to enunciate the principle by which their policy will be guided. It is all important to the West Riding in its present stage of industrial development."

• • •

A farce! From Hagg Beck Farm, Burn, came a call to the Selby Fire Brigade. The engine, however, would not get horses to pull the engine, and the services of a donkey having been offered, they were declined—probably without thanks. After forty minutes' wait a dust-cart horse was got and hitched up to the engine. Off they started, the old horse pulling the engine and the firemen pushing, and they arrived at the fire after 1½ hours' delay.

Dated this 10th day of March, 1914. W. B. PINDAR, Clerk.

Prudential Assurance Company, Limited.

Chief Office: HOLBORN BARS, LONDON.

Summary of the Report presented at the Sixty-Fifth Annual Meeting, held on 5th March, 1914.

ORDINARY BRANCH.—The number of policies issued during the year was 71,250, assuring the sum of £6,849,724, and producing a new annual premium income of £425,717. In a Government Inter-Departmental Report recently presented to Parliament, particular attention is drawn to the advantage of payment in cash by a representative of the Society. The Report continues:—"The fact that a personal visit accompanies the payment imposes some restraint on any temptation to claim benefit improperly. The risk of the benefit falling into wrong hands is reduced to a minimum."

In the Ordinary Branch a reversionary bonus at the rate of £1 16s. per cent. on the original sums assured has again been added to all participating policies in force at the end of the year 1876.

In the Industrial branch a bonus addition will be made to the sums assured on all policies of over five years' duration which become claims by death or the maturity of endowment from the 6th of March, 1914, to the 4th of March, 1915, both dates inclusive, as follows:—and

	BONUS ADDITION TO SUMS ASSURED.

50 ,, ,, ,, 55 ,,	£50 ,,
55 ,, ,, ,, 60 ,,	£55 ,,
60 ,, ,, ,,	£60 ,,

The rate of bonus declared for the last year has thus been maintained, and an increased bonus of 4s per cent. will be added to the sums assured on policies which premiums have been paid for 35 and less than 40 years, 45 and less than 50 years, and 55 and less than 60 years.

The sale Prudential Approved Societies formed under the National Insurance Act, 1911 have done important work during the year, and the membership continues to increase. Payment of sickness and maternity benefits commenced on the 12th January, 1913, and during the year a sum of £1,401,250 was distributed to members in a Government Inter-Departmental Report recently presented to Parliament, particular attention is drawn to the advantage of payment in cash by a representative of the Society. The Report continues:—"The fact that a personal visit accompanies the payment imposes some restraint on any temptation to claim benefit improperly. The risk of the benefit falling into wrong hands is reduced to a minimum.

In the Ordinary Branch a reversionary bonus at the rate of £1 16s. per cent. on the original sums assured has again been added to all policies in force at the end of the year 1876.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT NEWS.

LEEDS WEST RIDING SESSIONS.

The magistrates on the Bench at the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday were Mr J W Morkill (in the chair), Mr R. D. Kitson, Cbl, Mr Sagar Margetson, Mr F. M. Lupton, Mr C. Holliday, Mr S. Hudson, Mr J. Hirst, and Mr E. Parkin.

ROTHWELL W.M. CLUB—A card handicap took place amongst the members of the Rothwell Working Men's Club (Marsh Villa) on Saturday night. There were thirty four entries, and at the conclusion the first and special prize was awarded Mr S. Sissons, the second prize being won by Mr J. Taylor.

Patent Fat compiled by John E. Walsh, chartered patent agent, of 25, Royal Exchange, Boar Lane, Leeds, and Crossby Street, Halifax. Applications—John Rushworth and Sons, Rawdon, improvements in window sash fasteners; D. W. Freeman, Finningley, near Doncaster, an improved combined spanner and pipe wrench. Patent completed—Lloyd H. Teale, Leeds, improvements in domestic fireplaces.

THE POST OFFICE THEFT CASE.—On Monday at the Quarter Sessions at Wakefield Fred Clinton (34), labourer, was indicted for having stolen £26, the money of Harry Summers, the postmaster at Rothwell. From December 19th to 18 February prisoner was employed at Rothwell as a postman, and on the latter date he took the money from a safe and absconded. Prisoner, who pleaded guilty, was sent to prison for six months.

ABRAHAM'S EXCUSE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Abraham Armitage, labourer, of Rothwell, was summoned for making use of obscene language at Rothwell on Friday, February 27th. P.C. Abbott stated that about 9.50 p.m. he was in Gilbett Lane, Rothwell, when he heard the defendant, who was in his house, 8, Gilbett Lane, shouting at the top of his voice, and using obscene language. The door was open and the shouting could have been heard about twenty yards away. There were several people about at the time listening. Witness went to the house, and spoke to him about his conduct, and he replied that his wife was uncontrollable, and asked the officer why he did not speak to her. Defendant pleaded guilty, under provocation, and was fined 2s. 6d. and costs.

CONCERT—On Thursday night a party of ladies, members of the Rothwell branch of the Women's Total Abstinence League, gave a concert to the inmates of the Hunslet Workhouse at Rothwell Haigh. The old folks thoroughly enjoyed the entertainment, and at the close a hearty vote of thanks was accorded the party. Mr Varley presided, and Mrs T. Burnham was the pianoforte accompanist. The following programme was gone through:—"Song of the gipsies," choir; song, "Dear little Shamrock," Mrs Jessop; recitation, Mrs Bristowe; song, "Home, sweet home," Mrs. Southwart; chorus, "We rock away," choir; song, "Sing, sweet bird," Miss Boyes; dialogue, "Slippery places," four ladies; duet, "List to the convent bells," Mrs Townsley and Miss Sidebottom; song, "The better land," Mrs Ineson; reading, Mrs Fox; chorus, "Come back to Erin," choir; song, "When there's love at home," Mrs Hampshire; chorus, "Excelsior," choir; trio, "The tide of life," Mrs Southwart, Misses Boyes and Barthram; dialogue, Mrs Bristowe, Mrs H Blackburn, Mrs R. Whitehead, and Mrs Ely; "Instrumental band," choir; chorus, "Homeward bound," choir.

P.M. CHURCH.—An interesting address was given at the P.S.A. service held in the Primitive Methodist Church on Sunday afternoon by Mr H. Collinson (Stourton). Solos were given by Miss Cropper, of Leeds.

ELECTIONS.—It is announced in connection with the local elections that Mr William Denton will contest the South Ward as the champion of the small property owners, and Mr William Robinson is suggested as a Labour nominee for the Ward.

SALVATION ARMY.—The "Self-Denial Week," which commenced on Saturday last has meant a busy time for the Captain and Lieut. of the Rothwell Corps of the Salvation Army. The "target" aimed at was £34, and the officers have by their efforts raised about £26. The general ingathering will take place at Leeds on Tuesday night.

PICKWICK SOCIETY.—Pickwickian enthusiasm waxed warm at last Saturday's meeting of the local Pickwickian Society, in celebration of the jubilee, or 50th meeting of the Society. Mr G. W. Nodding read the 50th chapter of "Pickwick Papers," which relates "How Mr Pickwick sped upon his mission." Mr Percy Kemshell gave another of W. W. Jacobs' readings, entitled "An elaborate elopement."

FIRE.—A gale blew in Rothwell throughout the whole of Friday, and was in a degree responsible for a small fire which occurred. Shortly before noon a spark from a chimney in Sydney Street was blown by the wind on to the wooden spouting of the roof of a house opposite, and occupied by a miner named John Thomas Day. The spark was fanned into flames involving the wooden spouting. Rothwell officers were notified of the outbreak, and some of the staff were quickly on the scene, and the fire was very soon extinguished.

WESLEYAN CHURCH.—The married people of the Rothwell Wesleyan Church are chargous of purchasing a small instrument suitable for weeknight services, and presenting it to the church, and with this object in view a sacred cantata, entitled "The Home at Bethany," was rendered on Sunday afternoon by an augmented choir. The principals were Miss Boyes (Stourton), soprano; Miss K. Varley, contralto; Mr E. Knee (Lofthouse), tenor; and Mr R. Firth, bass. Mr G. H. Clarkson was the organist, and a small orchestra rendered valuable assistance. Mr T. Burnham conducted. Mr F. T. Hagley, the chairman was the Rev. N. W. Thomlinson.

BENEFIT CONCERT—A concert promoted by the Rothwell Lodge of the R.A.O.B., was held in the Rothwell Empire on Sunday night for the benefit of Bro. Stead. There was a fairly large audience, and a lengthy programme was gone through. Enjoyable selections were rendered by the Rothwell Orchestral Society, under the direction of Mr A. Adamson, who also acted as accompanist. The singing of Mrs A. Adamson, who was in fine voice, was greatly appreciated. Her contributions were "The Lord is my Shepherd" and "Abide with me." Miss Elstob was also well received in "O rest in the Lord" and "A dream of Paradise." A duet was given by Miss K. Ellis and Mr Garnett, the latter giving "The Nazarene" and "Son of my soul." Mr Smithson, who was suffering from a cold, sang "Babylon" and "The Bells of Aberdovey." The old bachelor's story" in the second part.

Football—Rothwell Wednesday re-played their semi-final tie in the Leeds and District Half-Holiday League competition with the Parkside Wednesday of Rothwell on Wednesday afternoon. Play rather favoured the Parksiders in the first half, but a forward rush enabled Heaton to score from 25 yards range. The team had a penalty kick soon after, but Bulmer was unsuccessful. Parkside rallied strongly, and R. Bickerdyke equalised just before the interval. The second half proved interesting, and after 70 minutes' play Ellis headed Rothwell's second goal. The Hunslet men then broke away and netted, but the point was disallowed. Rothwell were awarded the ties of Burberry, who received marching orders, and their goal was frequently endangered in the closing stages, when Parkside forced a succession of corners, but failed to increase their tally. Result:—Rothwell Wednesday 2 goals, Leeds Parkside Wednesday 1 goal.

TEMPERANCE—In connection with the Rothwell Temperance Rotation Scheme, which has proved a public meeting was held in the Wesleyan Schoolroom on Tuesday evening. There was a large gathering, presided over by Mrs T. Young, who is a member of the Primitive Methodist minister of the Rothwell circuit, and who was instrumental in forming the Rothwell branch of the Union, gave an interesting address on her experiences in travelling about the country and the evils she had seen caused by the drinking habits of the people. She appealed to the audience not to throw down cudgels until they had made a temperance Rothwell and banished intoxicating drink from the place. Madame Norkus, of London, who made a capital impression as a temperance lecturer, followed in the wave around the subject of Nehemiah and the people who built a wall around Jerusalem, some strong arguments against drinking and drunkenness from the personal, social, and national point of view. Whilst stating that their organization was non-political, she appealed to those in the audience to do all they could to drive the drink-demon from the town which would render the obtaining of drink more difficult than was the case to-day. Madame Norkus expressed her appreciation of the choice in the Children's Society of rescuing persons from public houses, but deplored the fact that parents allowed their children to play in the streets while they themselves were in the bars. In the course of conclusion she said he hoped to live to see England a sober nation. A vote of thanks to the speakers was heartily carried, on the proposition of Mr W. Lunn, seconded by Mrs T. Barthram. During the evening a glee "We rock away" was given by the choir.

ALLERTON BYWATER.

On Saturday afternoon Allerton C.I. had a Leeds and District Football League match with St. Anthony's, and the Allertonians won by two goals to nil.

THE POLICE-COURT.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Abraham Dennistage, labourer, of Rothwell, was summoned for making use of obscene language at Rothwell on Friday, February 27th. P.C. Abbott stated that about 9.50 p.m. he was in Gilbett Lane, Rothwell, when he heard the defendant, who was in his house, 8, Gilbett Lane, shouting at the top of his voice, and using obscene language. The door was open and the shouting could have been heard about twenty yards away. There were several people about at the time listening. Witness went to the house, and spoke to him about his conduct, and he replied that his wife was uncontrollable, and asked the officer why he did not speak to her. Defendant pleaded guilty, under provocation, and was fined 2s. 6d. and costs.

CONCERT—On Thursday night a party of ladies, members of the Rothwell branch of the Women's Total Abstinence League, gave a concert to the inmates of the Hunslet Workhouse at Rothwell Haigh. The old folks thoroughly enjoyed the entertainment, and at the close a hearty vote of thanks was accorded the party. Mr Varley presided, and Mrs T. Burnham was the pianoforte accompanist. The following programme was gone through:—"Song of the gipsies," choir; song, "Dear little Shamrock," Mrs Ineson; recitation, Mrs Bristowe; song, "Home, sweet home," Mrs. Southwart; chorus, "We rock away," choir; song, "Sing, sweet bird," Miss Boyes; dialogue, "Slippery places," four ladies; duet, "List to the convent bells," Mrs Townsley and Miss Sidebottom; song, "The better land," Mrs Ineson; reading, Mrs Fox; chorus, "Come back to Erin," choir; song, "When there's love at home," Mrs Hampshire; chorus, "Excelsior," choir; trio, "The tide of life," Mrs Southwart, Misses Boyes and Barthram; dialogue, Mrs Bristowe, Mrs H Blackburn, Mrs R. Whitehead, and Mrs Ely; "Instrumental band," choir; chorus, "Homeward bound," choir.

SALVATION ARMY CONCERT.—In the Mission Hall on Wednesday evening the Castleford Corps of the Salvation Army, led by Adjutant Morgan, proved themselves able entertainers, and very well pleased the large number who had gathered to hear them. Mr Walter Blackburn presided, and said that not only could the Army beg well, but they could and did use well whatever money was entrusted to them. It all went towards overcoming the evil of poverty. The first item was a rousing march by the band, and Miss Richardson followed with a violin solo. A glee "Happy, glad and free," was given by the assembled company, and a cornet solo was rendered by Mr Butler, and Sister Tonks proved herself a good reciter by giving "Smiting the rock," while "Beautiful light" was sung by Sister Gaither. The songsters followed with the glee "Mighty to save." Miss Richardson then gave another violin solo, after which the band played a march. Mrs Hall sang a solo and Mrs Tonks gave "Two walks," Mr A Colley followed with a cornet solo, and the songsters gave the glee "The lot of the righteous," the band concluding with a march. The Adjutant expressed thanks for the use of the Hall, and to those who had helped to the giving of £2 2s. 0d. to the Self-Denial Fund.

PRIZE DISTRIBUTION.—The annual concert held for the purpose of distributing the prizes to the members of the Men's Friday Night Bible Class, who had attended the class at least 45 times out of a possible 50, was held on Saturday night in the Mission Hall Shadwell. The good number present was well entertained by the Rosa Glee Party. The first item was a pianoforte solo by Miss Wrigglesworth (Hollinhurst), who also acted as accompanist. "Earth was made for man's delight" was sung as a quartette by members of the party. Miss Davis (Ripon) tastefully sang "Oh dry those tears," and Mr Wrigglesworth (Hollinhurst) gave "The trumpeter," while Mr F. G. Dyer supplied an excellent violin solo, which was followed by Miss Wrigglesworth's song "Tired hands." Mr J. Robinson, the hon. sec., reported that 98 names were now on the register, and 55 members were presented with prizes, 17 not having missed a meeting. The class had been addressed by many men of note including M.A.'s, B.Sc.'s, ministers of the Church of England and many Nonconformist ministers, who all spoke highly of the enthusiasm and value of the class. There was a library connected with the class, and it proved of interest to the members. The weekly collection had been disposed of as follows:—Library £1 6s. 6d.; speakers' expenses, 14s.; charity, £5 os. 8d.; and missionary work, £2 17s. Mr J. W. Blackburn, who presided, said the Bible Class was working a powerful influence for spiritual and educational good in the locality. The members had had their photograph taken, and the photo had been published in the "Sunday Companion," and he had been shown that photo to the most unlikely places. The Bible Class was not a flash in the pan, it was now 13 years of age, and was firmly established. Mr Blackburn then presented the prizes. The seventeen who had never missed, received a special prize in addition to a free prize, and they were greeted with hearty cheers. On behalf of the class, Mr Blackburn presented Mr Walter Blackburn with a prize as a token of respect from the members, he being the founder and leader of the class. Subsequently the quartette "Reaper and royal queen" was given, and Miss Etherington then recited "Our folks." Mr Targett rendered "For you alone." After which "Ode to the Banks of Allan Water" (quartette) was sung. Miss Davis (soprano) sang "Oh that summer smile for aye," and Mr Wrigglesworth (tenor) contributed "The Bells of Aberdovey." A violin solo was played by Mr F. G. Dyer, and Miss Etherington gave the recitation "A play-ical mistake." Misses Davis and Wrigglesworth sang the duet "Sweet and low to me." A pleasant evening closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

ACCIDENTS IN MINES.—At the Bible Class on Friday night Mr Ben Turner (M.P.) addressed a large and profit to a lecture given by Mr D. B. Margan, B.Sc., of Leeds University, on "Accidents in Mines." Mr W. S. Blackburn (colliery manager) who presided, described the chief causes of the 150 accidents (reportable to the inspector) which occurred at the Rothwell collieries during 1913. Frequently he was injured by walking between their horse and the tub, and this was unnecessary. Invisible slips in the roof were a fruitful source of accident to coal getters and others, and more timber was used. Very stringent timbering rules were in force and some thought when they had carried them out they had done sufficient, but the frequent accidents from this cause showed that more timber and more timber needed to be set. What was needed was that each workman should be his own inspector. Mr Morgan commenced by describing by means of lantern slides how "slips" or "weight breaks" were produced in the roof of the coal seam. Then by a series of experiments with several delicate instruments he proved the necessity of watching the barometer, as a sudden fall of the mercury was a sure sign that more gas would find its way into the dry current. The explosion was caused by the coal dust, which accumulates so largely in the crevices and on the ledges of the roadways of the mine, and the various means of dealing with it by stone dusting, as practised by Mr Morgan, the dust by sprays of water from pipes laid along the roadways and patent water-cars was one method. While this method served all right in the case of dry dust, water made more than the roof and sides loosened them, and this created another danger. The vacuum cleaner drew into a tub the accumulated dust, which afterwards was mixed together. This was another method but was not very popular. The stone dust plan seemed to be the most practical method of dealing with this source of danger. Mr Morgan then explained that in applying this method zones or lengths of roadways in each ventilated district of the mine were well cleaned and stone dust was scattered on all the ledges, floor, roof, and sides. In the event of an explosion taking place the blast got to the stone dusted zone and raised a cloud of stone dust, which was a non-combustible, and extinguished the flame, and thus the explosion died for want of support. A good number of slides were shown, being photographs of the experiments at Altofts, proving the practicability of the stone dust method of dealing with colliery explosions. Mr A. Simpson, in proposing a vote of thanks to the lecturer, said it had been an ideal lecture for the class, the educational authorities supplied all the technical knowledge necessary for the prospective mine official, and then complained that pupils would not help themselves to it. He would remind them that a very small minority of mine-workers could ever hope to attain an official position. What was needed was the distribution of knowledge suitable to the ordinary workmen. Mr G Laing seconded, and observed that the many accidents in mines constituted a heavy burden on the community, and Mr Morgan could do a better work for his generation than by studying and instructing the mining community in the art of preventing accidents in mines.

CROSSGATES

LITERARY SOCIETY.—On Monday evening the annual meeting of the Literary Society will take pace in the Wesleyan Lecture Hall at 7.30, and it will be followed by a lecture on "The romance of ancient glass making," by Mr F. Swann. See advert.

SWEET PEA SOCIETY.—The members of Crossgates and District Sweet Pea Society held the first of their friendly gatherings on Saturday evening at Abbott's Cafe. Several important cultural matters relating to sweet peas and roses were discussed to the mutual benefit of all present. A third meeting will be held in May.

LIBERALISM.—Under the auspices of the Barkston Ash Division Liberal Association Mr Harriott Morley, J.P., delivered the third of a series of addresses on the Government's land policy in the Wesleyan Lecture Hall on Friday evening. Mr W. G. Smithson (President of the Crossgates Liberal Association) presided in the chair, and there was a good attendance. Mr Morley's address was excellently devoted to the housing part of the land policy.

ANNIVERSARY.—In connection with Crossgates Baptist Church the pastor's anniversary was celebrated on Monday evening, when a social gathering was held at Whitkirk. There was a good attendance, and tea was provided by the Rev. J. Miller Hamilton and Mrs Hamilton. An Illustrated lecture on "The Forth Bridge" was delivered by Mr Hamilton, and afterwards an enjoyable entertainment was given. Songs were sung by Miss Diggle, Mrs Ivy Easton, and Mrs Greenwood, and recitations were contributed by Mrs Diggle, Miss Ivy Goodall, and Mr Thomas. Refreshments were served to the company during an interval.

DEBATE.—At the Baptist Church Fellowship meeting, held in the Lecture Hall at Whitkirk on Tuesday evening, a debate took place on "Does the Church demonstrate Christianity?" Mr F. R. Carlton, of Crossgates, presided, and there was a good attendance, long remembered. Mr J. Webb, of Manston, opened the discussion, reading a lengthy paper, in which he argued for the negative side of the question, although he made it clear that he did not assert that Christianity was a failure. He held that the Church should possess the power of healing as in the days of old, and his paper figured largely in the subsequent discussion, which was taken part in by Mr Diggle, Mr Jackson, Mr Cox, Rev. J. Miller Hamilton, Mr E. C. White, Mr Morgan, Mr J. E. Walker, and Mr T. Harrop. The debate was keen and interesting, but on vote was taken. At the close Mr Webb received a vote of thanks, passed on the call of the Rev. J. M. Hamilton, seconded by Mr F. T. Hagley. The next meeting on Tuesday evening Mr Mac-Farlane will give a lecture on "An evening with Burns."

CARLTON

At Carlton Primitive Methodist Chapel a sum of 9s. was collected for Leeds medical charities against 8s. last year.

GARFORTH

The treasurer of Leeds Infirmary acknowledges receipt of £30 from the Garforth Medical Charities Committee, per Mr F. Pratt.

On Wednesday evening the members of Garforth Temperance Hall took a whist drive and dance in the Co-operative Hall, and it was a most enjoyable entertainment.

The Rev. Joseph Needham, of the Lady Lane United Methodist Circuit, Leeds, has accepted an invitation to be the superintendent minister of the Riddings Circuit, Alfreton, in succession to the Rev James Slack. He is well-known to Garforth U.M. Church members.

LAMMGRAVE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Tom Emmott and Percy Caygill, labourers, of Garforth, were summoned for having used abusive language in Garforth about 10.15 p.m. on Friday, February 27th. P.C. Dixon proved the case, and a fine of 5s. and costs each was imposed.

COMPENSATION CASE.—His Honour Judge Benson decided an interesting point in compensation law at the Leeds County Court on Tuesday, when he ruled that, in allotting compensation to a parent for the loss of a son, he was entitled to take into account the prospective advantages which the son would have been entitled during the next three years. The deceased, Sydney Smith, of Garforth, would, Mr R. A. Sheppard contended, on his 21st birthday, have had the automatic increases each year he remained with the Garforth Colliery Company, in whose employ Pit he was killed. Damages £245 had been paid into court. His Honour made an award for £241, and costs on Scale B.

ROMANCE OF GOTHIC ARCHITECTURE.—This was the title of a lecture delivered on Tuesday evening before members of the Leeds Photographic Society by Mr J. W. Thompson, of Garforth. With the aid of an interesting series of lantern views of various architectural features of abbeys, cathedrals, and churches, he traced the development of the work of the Early Gothic builders, explained the principles on which they proceeded, and dealt in turn with the evolution of the arch and the roof, the window, the porch, and so forth. He showed, for example, how the Cistercians, with all their limitations, their lack of stone appliances and money, were inspired by lofty ideals to make the most truly beautiful, and how they secured a wonderful equipoise by the thrust of the ribbed arch, the counter-thrust of the flying buttress, and the bonding of the wall by arcading. Then, contrasting the sublimity of this craftsmanship with what he termed monstrosities of the succeeding period, he had something to say about the personal interest taken by the craftsmen themselves, who at times banded themselves together in guilds not to raise wages but to keep up the standard of their work. It was, he suggested, when monetary considerations began to run influence that the craftsmanship began to deteriorate.

PICTURE HOUSE.—Visitors to the Picture House during the first half of the week have been treated to a view of one of the finest wild animal pictures ever produced. In the midst of the Jungle" is a striking example of what the film producers can do towards making us acquainted with the wonders of the world, bringing to our doors that which we would not otherwise see, most ends of the earth, and supplying us with a knowledge that could in no other way be so completely gained. We are shown the home life of the elephant, the lion and tigers in their native haunts, a terrific fight between a hyena and leopard, and an escape from death at the jaws of a crocodile, which is very exciting. Another feature of which is "The Burning Train," a two-part drama, full of incident and exciting situations, extraordinary, though quite possible, including a most realistic train fire. The first portion of the bill is made up of really up-to-pictures, the comic element being extremely well catered for. For next week the programmes promise equally interesting fare, "The Sheriff and the Bustler" by the same producers as "In the midst of the Jungle" being described as "one of the finest Western pictures ever produced." This will be screened during the first half of the week, along with another of the famous "Keystone" absurdities "Love and Rubbish." During the last half of the week a detective story "The Rajah's Diamond Rose" holds pride of place, and is accompanied by a two-part comedy, entitled "Why Girls Leave Home." For times and prices see advert.

HALTON

The collection at Halton Chapel for Leeds medical charities was £1 8s. against £1 19s. 6d. last year.

In a Billiard match between Halton Institute and Woodhouse Recreation, the latter won by 600 to 822. Mr E. Green (Halton) made breaks of 44 and 33.

On Monday evening a special meeting of the Crossgates Liberal Association was held, which was largely attended, and was addressed by Mrs Greenwood (Halton), and Mrs Haste Carr (Halton).

KIPPAX

On Saturday afternoon Kippax Wesleyan Chapel for Leeds medical charities was £1 0s. 1d. against £1 2s. 6d. last year.

In connection with the G.F.S. a meeting was held on Monday night, and the Vicar delivered an address on "Germ life," illustrated by the aid of the microscope.

THE CHURCH.—On Thursday evening a lantern service was given in the Parish Church. This was the second of a series dealing with "Men who crucified Christ," and the special character on Thursday was "Pilate."

WOMEN'S SERVICES.—On Sunday afternoon a women's service was held at the Parish Church, and there was a good attendance. The Vicar gave an instructive address on "Silent forces." —On Monday, at a mothers' meeting, the Vicar spoke to the members on the parable of the Good Samaritan.

"BY ACCIDENT."—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday David Booth, miner, of Kippax, was summoned for having used obscene language in High Street, Kippax, about 8.30 p.m. on February 28th. The defendant said the language slipped out quite by accident, as he was not in the habit of making use of it. A fine of 2s. 6d. and costs was imposed.

MISSIONARY MEETING.—On Tuesday evening a missionary meeting in connection with the church was held, and a most instructive address on "Canada" was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Westcott, organising secretary for the S.P.G. for the Northern Province. The lecture was illustrated by a number of excellent lime light views, the lanternist being Mr W. C. B. Smith.

PRIMITIVE METHODISM.—The prize distribution to the Sunday School children of the Primitive Methodist Church took place on Sunday afternoon, when 95 of the children who had obtained the required number of marks for attendance were presented with suitable books by Mr Jones, Prince and Mr J. Nicholson. Special services were held in the morning and evening, and sermons were preached by Mr Ely (of Leeds).

BILLIARDS.—Playing in the senior section of the Oulton and District Billiard League Carlton Temperance Hall lost to Kippax on Saturday night by four points. The scores were Carlton 550, Kippax 554. Details of the matches were:—J. Fox 100 v Eastwood 99, C Brown 100 v Laird 82, R Ellis 90 v Tiffany 100, R Beeton 100 v Wheatley 79, W Pope 93 v Turnpenny 100, and G Beeton 45 v. Pickard 100. R. Beeton made an unfinished break of 22.

PARISH COUNCIL.—A meeting of the Parish Council was held on Monday evening—Mr S. R. Silvervood presiding. Those present besides him were Mr J. Cripwell, Mr W. A. Dickinson, Mr J. W. Mackenzie, Mr F. Wheatley, Mr D. Mackintosh, Mr R. Johnson, and Mr J. Hewitt. Complaints anent the scavenging on the south side of the village were considered along with complaints as to blocked drains at the bottom of Mount Pleasant and Parker's Yard, and it was decided to write the authorities as to these matters. The question of a recreation ground for the village was also considered, and it was stated in connection with the powers in relation to this matter is being made by the council, assisted by the Medical Charities Committee. This canvass not being completed the result could not be ascertained. The matter will constitute the subject of special meeting, which was fixed for the 19th of March. The Council decided to present the Rev. Dr. Westcott with a purse of gold on leaving. It was stated that no offer had been received for the fire engine.

MOOR ALLERTON

FUNERAL OF MR J. B. BROOKE.—Amid many manifestations of the esteem in which he was held by a wide circle of friends throughout Yorkshire the remains of the late Mr J. Bower Brooke, of Sunbrooke, Moor Allerton, solicitor, who met his death as the result of an accident which befell him on the Great North Road on Saturday, were interred on Wednesday afternoon in Moor Allerton Church. Prior to the interment a choral service was held at Moor Allerton Church conducted by the Vicar of Leeds (the Rev. Dr Bickersteth), assisted by the Vicar of Moor Allerton (the Rev. G. Birchenough). The service was largely attended, included among the mourners being many representative of the late Mr Brooke's profession and members of the Brambam Moor Hunt. The hymns "Peace, Perfect Peace" and "Now the labourer's task is o'er" were sung. The chief mourners were —Mrs J. B. Brooke (widow), Mr and Mrs Wm. Brooke, Mr and Mrs J. A. Brooke, the Rev. H. Brooke and Mr W. H. Brooke (sons), Mrs Bower Brooke, Mrs Hodgkin, Mr T. T. Bower, Mr Joshua Bower, and Miss Bower, Mr J. A. Bower, Mr J. R. Bower, Jun., Mr E. W. Bower, Mr J. B. Bolland, Mr and Mrs W Bolland, the Rev. A. and Mrs Bolland, the Rev. C. F. Bolland, Mr J. M. Dobson, Mrs and Miss Dobson, Mr Lindley, and among those present at the church and at the graveside were the Lord Mayor of Leeds (Mr E. A. Brotherton), Mr George R. Lane Fox, M.P., Mr Darcy Beuse (Wetherby), Mr C. Brook, Mr C. F. Ryder, Mr Thos. Piercy, Dr. T. R. Taylor (Methley), Mr H. Nickols, Dr. A. A. Mackenzie (Moor Allerton), Mr F. Ryder, Mr R. M. Currer Briggs, Mr H. Fenner, Mr T. H. Nussey, and the Misses Nussey (Thorner), Mrs Whitehead, Mr Reginald Parker, and Miss Dorothy Parker (Milford Hall), Mr Bielby (Woolbersome), etc. Carriages were sent by the Misses Nussey (Thorner), Mr C. F. Ryder, Miss Ryder, and Mrs J. Le Thorparch). Included among the many hand some floral tributes were wreaths from Lord Faber, Lady Hepton, and Miss Dorothy Hepton, the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress of Leeds, and Mr and Mrs G. R. Lane Fox, Mr and Mrs T. G. Mylchreest (Thorner), etc.

MICKLEFIELD

The collection at Micklefield Wesleyan Chapel for Leeds medical charities was £1 10s. 6d. against £1 18s. last year.

LIBERALISM.—On Tuesday evening a social gathering was held in the Institute, at Micklefield, and there was a very large attendance. Mr Martin Harvey (President of the Barkston Ash Liberal Association) presided, and he was supported by Mrs Harvey, Mr E. H. Foster, J.P. (prospective Liberal candidate for Barkston Ash), Mrs Foster, and Mr F. W. Sutcliffe (Chairman of the Barkston Ash Liberal Association). An enjoyable programme of songs was gone through, and addresses were given by Mr Foster and the Chairman on the political situation. Tea and coffee were served to the company, and after the concert dancing was engaged in. The gathering was a great success.

OULTON

On Friday the Rev. Henry Thomas Pattinson was licensed by the Bishop of Knaresborough to the curacy of Oulton.

LITERARY SOCIETY.—At the last fortnightly meeting of the Oulton Literary and Debating Society an address on the "History of legal procedure" was given by Mr W. M. D. Mackey, F.I.C. The speaker sketched how in the days before the introduction of money, when people bartered goods, men were punished for such offences as the theft of cattle. Thus he traced the course of law until the present day tribunals. The address proved especially interesting, while the interest was greatly enhanced by the presence of Mr Mackey's father, a former curate of Oulton, who presided over the meeting.

DRINK.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday John William Mirfin, labourer, of Oulton, was charged with having been drunk and disorderly at Garforth on that Thursday. P.C. Beevor stated that about 5.50 p.m. on Thursday he was on the Leeds and Selby Road at Garforth, and saw the prisoner, who was in a drunken condition, shouting and using about and making use of bad language. He refused to go home when spoken to, and had to be taken into custody. Mirfin was sent to prison for one month.

THE LATE MR F. BRADLEY.—There was a sympathetic gathering in the Oulton Churchyard on Tuesday afternoon when the remains of Mr Fred Bradley, a well-known teacher in the Sunday School, were laid to rest. The deceased, who was nineteen years of age, was well liked and respected both by the teachers and the scholars. Prior to the interment, a short service was held in the church, the Rev. H. T. Pattinson (curate) officiating. As the coffin was borne into the church on a bier drawn by the Sunday school superintendent (Mr A. Sharpe) and the male teachers, "O rest in the Lord" was played by the organist, Mr Walter Poole. At the conclusion of the short service the "Dead March" in "Saul" was played. The choir were also in attendance. There were several beautiful floral tributes, including a wreath from the Sunday School, and another from the members of the football club to which he belonged.

ROBIN HOOD

U.M. CHURCH.—On Wednesday night the ladies of the United Methodist Church repeated "Ye Old Village Wedding," as given at the previous week. Several additions were introduced, and the effort was again a success. Praiseworthy work was performed by Miss Smalley as accompanist.

P.S.A.—On Sunday there was a good attendance at the weekly P.S.A. meeting at the United Methodist Church. Mr M. Hirst presided, and an instructive address on "A change in life" was given by Mr C. B. Jowett, of Army. The singing of Miss Glover (Rykill), on the solos "The flight of ages" and "The holy city" was greatly enjoyed.

STOURTON

CONSERVATISM.—A meeting of the East Hunslet Ladies' Conservative and Unionist Association was held on Monday night at the rooms of the Association, Gelsburn Stree t, Hunslet. Mr H. Armitage occupied the chair, and a number of addresses were delivered on the present political situation. The principal speaker was Mrs Greenville, of Manchester, and other speakers were Mrs E. Groves, Mr Tomlinson, Mr F. Williams, Mr Sutcliffe, Mr Bateson, Mr J. T. Taylor, Mr Shepherd, Mrs Strange, and Mr J. S. Taylor (hon. secretary).

ROUNDHAY WOMEN LIBERALS.—A joint meeting of the Roundhay Women's Liberal Association and the Barkston Ash Divisional Women's Liberal Association was held on Thursday in the Congregational Schoolroom, Shaftesbury Avenue, Roundhay. Mrs Dewhirst (Whinmoor) presided, and amongst those present were Miss Morton (hon secretary), Mrs Ernest H. Foster (Horsforth), Mrs Glover (Boston Spa), Mrs Martin Harvey (Micklefield), Miss Roberts, and Mrs A. E. Hartley (Roundhay). Miss M. Illingworth (president of the Yorkshire Council of the Women's Liberal Association) delivered an address on "Women in Local Government," and a resolution was adopted calling upon the Government to amend the Local Government Act so as to enable married women to sit upon all local governing bodies.

On Saturday afternoon Church Fenton had a football match with Boston Spa, and the game was drawn—no goal each.

A sum of £4 os. 6d. was collected at the Boston Spa Congregational Church for Leeds medical charities against £2 12s. 9d. last year.

The West Riding Small Holdings Committee have agreed to purchase from Lord Londesborough two fields at Selby, containing 6¼ acres, for £264 17s. They have also agreed to take on a fourteen years' lease from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners a piece held at Carlton, for 30s. an acre, subject to a drainage rate of 28s. a year.

HIS OFFENCE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Alex Kendrew, carter, of Bramham, was summoned for driving a vehicle at night time without showing a red rear light. P.C. Broughton proved the case, and said defendant had only a ordinary lamp attached to the shafts. A fine of 2s. 6d. and costs was imposed.

FORMERLY OF CHURCH FENTON.—A very pleasing function took place on Monday night at the White Horse Hotel, Poppleton, when Mr W. H. Whittaker, stationmaster at Poppleton, who is shortly to take up a similar appointment at Guiseley, was presented with a mahogany bureau subscribed for by the villagers of Upper and Nether Poppleton, and a silver-mounted walking stick, the gift of the passenger staff at Poppleton. Mr Whittaker has had a long experience in railway work. He joined the N.E.R at York in the waggon department as a clerk in 1869, and was transferred to the passenger department two years later. He was then transferred to Church Fenton as a telegraph clerk, and thence to Bridlington and served as an assistant booking clerk. He was then engaged as a passenger clerk at Malton, and booking clerk at Goole. In order to gain further experience in railway work he served on the Lancashire and Yorkshire at Goole Docks as a goods clerk. He next went to Wakefield, and after serving there a short period was again transferred to York, in 1895. Whilst at York he worked in all sections of the goods department, and was, in 1904, appointed stationmaster at Poppleton.

NORMANTON DIVISION CONSERVATIVE ASSOCIATION.

LOOKING FORWARD TO NEXT ELECTION

There was a good attendance at the annual dinner and meeting of the Normanton Division Conservative Association, held on Friday night, at the Great Bull Hotel, Wakefield, and the proceedings throughout were enthusiastic.

At the meeting but a few members spoke, as he was expected by the prospective candidate, Mr Cecil Lister-Kaye, Messrs H. C. B. Wilson, Mr. Cecil Lister-Kaye, Messrs H. C. B. Wilson, G. Bolton, F. M. Rea (Yorkshire representative), Richmond Lidsey, Gerald Beaumont, H. Beaumont, John Horsfield, T. H. Wordsworth, John Cumberbirch, J. Muirhead, John Horsfall and F. H. Wright.

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said it was hoped to have in a short time active associations in those districts where the new electoral law had not already been put into operation. The outstanding feature of the meeting was the fact that they were able to present to it their prospective candidate. The Executive had felt for several years that if they could only get Mr Lister-Kaye to allow himself to be nominated they could bring about a better result than hitherto. The next general election would be a most important one, and they considered the Normanton Division, as well as every other division in Great Britain, ought to be fought. The election could not be much longer delayed, and it behoved them all to be ready. He hoped sincerely that when the Unionists came back to power, as they would, sooner or later, they would see to it that a really efficient Second Chamber would be set up, with power to refer measures to the judgment of the country when necessary. (Applause). The Normanton Division was now in a much more hopeful condition than for some years past. They had a first-class local candidate, whose heart was in the cause, and he would exhort them to work hard for his return when the election arrived. (Applause).

Mr H. C. B. Wilson, in seconding, said that he was convinced that they should show those who called about the hopelessness of their constituency what could be done in the Normanton Division. (Applause).

The report was unanimously adopted.

Mr G. Beaumont (hon. treasurer) submitted the balance-sheet, which showed a small balance. He remarked that the Association did not receive the assistance it ought to do, and he trusted the ensuing year would show a great improvement.

On the motion of Mr Horsfield, seconded by Mr Horsfall, the financial statement was passed.

The retiring officers were thanked, on the proposition of Mr H. Beaumont, seconded by Mr F. H. Wright, and supported by Mr Box, the first-named observing that he was glad the seat was to be contested, as at the last election the borough of Normanton had suffered through Mr Hall having a walk-over.

The retiring President, Mr Lister-Kaye, was heartily re-elected on the proposition of Mr Beaumont and Mr Beardall; Mr G. Beaumont and Mr Gerrard respectively.

Mr Lister-Kaye, in a subsequent address, pictured the advice of the country as verging upon civil war. In the Prime Minister of England had been a more creditable hunt, and in such a they looked for a man with greater qualifications than those which Mr Asquith obviously possessed, because with was upon his advice that the King acted. They required a man at the head of the Government, a man of absolute integrity and of honour, and he (the speaker) felt that Mr Asquith had forfeited that by his failure to carry out his pledge to reform the House of Lords, which he characterised as "a debt of honour." Under Mr Lloyd George the national expenditure had grown by leaps and bounds, and at the same time the Chancellor of the Exchequer had been sowing discord and discontent wherever he had gone, setting class against class, and also endeavouring to get votes for his party by holding out fallacious promises of more golden fruit for the wrestling classes as a solution of the Irish question. He said there was only one solution of the difficulty—an appeal, which Unionists asked for, to the country, so that the people could see that the Unionist party had done its duty, not only with the view of preventing a terrible disaster, but of obviating the commission of a huge crime. (Applause).

CONCERNING A STOURTON PROSECUTION.

NOVEL POINT LICENSING LAWS.

Before the Leeds Stipendiary Magistrate (Mr C. M. Atkinson) on Friday, Emma Spencer, the holder of an off-licence in Prospect Terrace, Stourton, and her son, Frederick Spencer, were charged with offences under the Licensing Act of 1910, with regard to the sale of intoxicating drink. Mr G. Knowles prosecuted for the police, and Mr R. C. Davis represented the defendants.

The evidence went to show that late on the night of the 14th ult. Inspector Gaile and other officer saw the male defendant with a horse and wherry in Iveridge Grove, Thwaite Gate, delivering bottles of beer and stout. When questioned hereabouts the bottles were not landed on the premises, they marked as being consigned to any particular person, his explanation being that this custom was to take orders one week and deliver them the next, when he received payment.

Inspector Gaile said that when he questioned one woman at whose house bottles were being delivered she said the male defendant had called every week for the last three weeks. There was no label on the bottles, one may mark on the boxes on the wherry.

In the course of some legal argument, an interesting point was raised by the Stipendiary Magistrate, who asked whether, assuming there was a sale on the defendant's licensed premises, the subsequent delivery of the goods would be illegal.

Mr Davies submitted that the delivery would not be illegal, the sale having, in his view, been completed at the licensed shop.

The Magistrate: There must be the sale of a specific article on the licensed premises, must there not? There must be appropriation on the licensed premises?

Mr Davis argued that if a person gave an order at the licensed premises appropriation was quite sufficient if the goods were put into a cart and sent out for delivery.

The magistrate remarked that it he had been told that years ago he should have believed the argument, but he thought cases had been decided the other way. According to the Legislature, if the goods now were put into watertight compartments it was all right, and the goods might be delivered at three o'clock in the morning, assuming they were put into one package and directed to "Mrs Jones" or "Mrs Smith." But if a person did not indicate which package was for "Mrs Jones" and which for "Mrs Smith" it was all wrong, and the offender might be sent to gaol.

Mr Davis, in defence, said he would be able to prove that the order was given on the dividend's licensed premises, and argued that if such an order was given and accepted this was a completed contract. Secondly, he contended that the packages of beer and stout were actually all stated in separate boxes. He contended that just was sufficient appropriation in law. The defendant's family, Mr Davis said, had held a residence for 35 years without complaint.

The Magistrate said not think it mattered where the order was given, but there must be specific appropriation. (To Mr Knowles): You want to stop the practice, I suppose?

Mr Knowles: That is so. He wished to draw attention to the fact that at the end of the day there was a very large quantity of unsold bottles of beer—something like nine dozens.

The Magistrate: That is one of the facts which induced me to press Mr Davis.

Mr James Frederick Spencer, guilty of selling on Sunday last, and said it seemed plain enough unlawful act, and said it seemed plain enough unlawful act, and said it seemed plain enough that the error arose from his own action. He had understood that Mrs Spencer had held the licence for a number of years without complaint, and it would be unfortunate if his act on the part of her son were to result in her being fined. He was sorry he had been so unwise as he might be if a conviction were recorded. The sum would be fined £5 and costs, and Mrs Spencer would have to pay costs, no conviction being recorded.

BRAMHAM MOOR HUNT.

HUNTING AT BILBROUGH IN A GALE.

A more inauspicious day could not be imagined than Friday, when the Bramham Moor hounds met at Bilbrough, the residence of Mr Guy Fairfax. A veritable tornado of wind raged all day. Funerally was hunting bounds for the first time since his accident. The field could not get into the Park to join Farrelly and the hounds on account of a huge elm tree, which the gale had uprooted, blocking the way, so they had to go round by the village or the lane leading down to the whin. Those out included Lord and Lady Wenlock, Prince Arthur of Connaught, Mr. R. H.R.H. Prince Arthur of Connaught, Mr. C. R. Lane Fox, M.F.H., and the Hon. Mrs Lane Fox, Sir Edward Lane Fox, and Mrs Brooke-Hunt, Mr and Mrs Miles Dawson, Miss Gunter, Bank, Mr and Mrs Miles Dawson, Miss Gunter, Mr Lamb (Inbolmes), Mrs Nichols, Mr Guy Fairfax, the Misses Leetham, Mr Wailes Fairfax, Mr Liddley, Mr Tom Smith, Mr A. G. Wilson, Mr Frank Myers, Mr C. Wilstrop, Mr Hd. Parker, Mr Pead, Mr King, Mr Midgley, Mr Thompson, Miss Pagett, Mr J. Fielden, Mr and Mrs Wickham Boynton, Mr and Miss Wheatley, Mr Cundall, Mr R. Armitson, Master R. Armitson, Mr Fred Bussey, and others.

Bilbrough Whin was first drawn, and they found the bob-brush fox, so he had shifted his quarters from Askham Whin. He left no scent behind him, for Farrelly could not hunt the line a yard over the ploughs. Going out for Catterton, they worked round to Ainsty Cliff. Here they changed their fox, going away on the line of a very fine fox down to near Colton village, of a very fine fox down to near Colton village, but got on to the Stretton Wood. Afterwards they got away over the same line by Stretton, crossed the Tadcaster road to Bilbrough Whin, and ran to Ainsty Cliff. Getting away with Bilbrough on the left they crossed the road by Street House, and went over Mr Frank Myers's land down to within one field of Colton Whin, and they worked the line on to Colton village. It they worked the line on to Colton village. It had been a most creditable hunt, and in such a gale hounds worried to perfection; in fact, it was a great treat to see the Bramham hounds work the line under the most trying difficulties.

Going by the village straight for Stretton Old Hall they ran to ground under a tree, reynard having made himself secure by getting up inside, so hounds could not get at him, after one hour and fifteen minutes' hunt. They went to Stretton, and found, and ran back to Bilbrough Whin, which was passed close to the left, and then they went over the Tadcaster road to within one field of Askham Wood, and threw up. Hounds then went to Collier Hagg, hoping for better sport on the grass, but they did not find it, so Mr Lane Fox very wisely said "home."

HUNTING IN MICKLEFIELD DISTRICT.

The Bramham Moor Hounds on Saturday met at Lead Mill, Huddleston Wood, Micklefield Wood, Gosdike and the Boot and Shoe Coverts were all blank, as also were the Ledstone Coverts and Newsfield Whin. A fast twenty-five minutes began at Ringhay.

After a turn at the cover the fox left it towards Micklefield, and crossing the Great North Road, between Micklefield and Hook Moor, turned left-handed in the rear of Old Micklefield, and then taken across the Ridge Road, and forward through the Shurton coverts, across the Leeds and York Railway, to the sand quarries near Garforth Cliff, where the fox got to ground.

Hounds were moving off to draw the Shurton coverts when the melancholy and distressing news was brought that Mr J. Bower Brooke had been thrown from his horse and killed. The pack at once returned to kennels. The news came as an appalling shock to every one out hunting. Mr Bower Brooke was a keen hunting man, and was followed by the Bramham Moor hounds as long as most members can remember. Despite being short-sighted, he was a bold and fearless rider, no country was too big, and no day too long for him.

WETHERBY CHAMBER OF AGRICULTURE.

FARMERS AND LABOURERS' WAGES—HOUSING

MR LANE FOX, M.P., AND RURAL PROBLEMS

INTERESTING HOUSING SCHEME.

The annual meeting of the Wetherby and District Chamber of Agriculture was held at the Town Hall, Wetherby, on Friday night—Mr J. Crossley presiding over a good attendance. Among the others present were Messrs J Thompson, G. P. Wright, H. Simpson, J. Popplewell, J. T. Allen, R. F. Foorby, B. Dilley, T. Dawson, J. Nelson (secretary), W. Walker, son, J. H. Thompson, E. Spink, Holgate, W. Wilson, H. Whitehouse, E. Spink, Holgate, E. Hardcastle, and others.

MEMBERSHIP INCREASING.

The Secretary reported that in the course of the year there had been several new members added, and he expected several more would be added shortly.

The financial statement showed that the saving on the year had been £12, the balance in hand being £102 5s. 9d. as against £90 6s. 3d. last year.

The Chairman moved that Mr Thompson be appointed chairman of the Chamber. He had done a great deal of work for the chamber, particularly in the position of secretary until two years ago.

Mr Allan seconded. He thought Mr Thompson would be a most suitable chairman.

Mr Thompson returned thanks. He regretted they had not been able to get a landowner to accept the position, as he thought it was a good custom that a landowner and a tenant farmer should be alternately asked to take the post.

Mr Thompson moved that the heartiest thanks of the Chamber be given to Mr Crossley for his services as chairman in the past year, and this was heartily accorded.

Mr Allan was unanimously re-elected to the position of treasurer, Mr J. H. Thompson was re-elected secretary, and Mr Crossley was re-elected auditor.

Messrs J. H. Thorpe, Barwick, H. Grange, Barwick, and Walker were elected members of the Chamber.

LABOURERS' WAGES

A discussion on the Land Inquiry Committee and its recommendations was initiated by Mr Thompson, the new President, who said that the land inquiry, of which they had heard so much, had produced some very remarkable facts and figures. They had heard a good deal about the national factory of the pheasant—(laughter)—a good deal about the habits of the deer, and at the same time a good deal about the landlord, the tenant, and the labourer. The landlord was painted in terrible colours in many cases, and the tenant was supposed to be in such a position that he dared not farm his land in case he was turned out, while the labourer was depicted as a serf who dared not call his soul his own. As a result of the inquiry, there were various proposals. If the proposed Ministry of Land were to absorb the present Board of Agriculture, he thought it would be a very undesirable state of things. (Hear, hear). There were to be a minimum wage, and no encouragement to houses and cottages. He was afraid that hasty legislation of the land fore-shadowed would not be for the benefit of any class concerned in the land. The results of Land Courts, to his mind, would be that the man who farmed his land exceedingly well would run the risk of having his rent raised, and a Land Court, which was composed of intelligent and practical men the man who farmed it badly might have his rent reduced. As a large employer of labour, he had always felt that if a former wanted good workers he to be done there must be a good feeling between the man who paid the wages and he who received them. In that district he thought there were very few (Hear, hear). It seemed to him that a minimum wage, for farmers might argue that if they could not pay less than £1 they would not pay more. He believed that the majority of farmers would help the opinion that interference with the right of bargaining as between landlord and tenant, and between tenant and the man who followed the plough, would be to the detriment of all classes, and the industry they followed and loved. (Applause).

A resolution passed by the Central Chamber urging the appointment of a Royal Commission was read, and it was moved by Mr Thompson that support be given to it. Mr Thompson also added that as the Chairman of the Housing and Town Planning Committee of the Wetherby Town Council he had examined the cottages in the district, and had found that the worst of these were owned by individuals such as retired tradesmen, who derived little support from the rents.

Mr Dolby seconded.

HOUSING QUESTION

The Chairman (Mr Crossley) supported the motion. He thought a lot of harm would result from the proposals. The labourer was thought to be well looked after, but he really thought that the labourer would have more than gain if the Land Inquiry were carried into force.

Mr Holgate said he thought the main problem before the country was the cottage problem, and he did not think they would get very far with the question short of solution. The labourer was bound to be worse off under an Act of Parliament; agriculture was an industry which stood out distinctly in cases of the kind, and that was necessary. The cry of the day was back to the land, but the trend of legislation was to drive them off the land. It was only upsetting the good feeling that existed at the present time between tenant farmer, and labourer, and once they upset that good feeling they might as well throw up the whole thing.

The resolution was carried unanimously.

THE ANNUAL DINNER

The annual dinner of the Chamber followed the meeting, and was held in the Angel Hotel. Mr Crossley presided over a large attendance, and among those supporting him were Mr G. R. Lane Fox, M.P., Major Dent, Mr C. F. Ryder (Scarcroft), Mr J. Thompson, Mr R. H. Gill, Mr C. F. Meyrick, Mr J. F. Holdsworth, and others.

The Chairman submitted the usual toasts, which were duly pledged.

Major Dent proposed the toast of "Agriculture." In relation to the Land Inquiry Committee's investigations, he said that the majority of those connected with the land desired, before any drastic legislation was brought forward dealing with the land, that there should be a careful and impartial inquiry. (Hear, hear). One of the things most needed in agriculture was that more capital should be put into it. He did not see how that capital was to be obtained, because at the present time there was no inducement for the outside capitalist; the profits were small and risky. So much hard words had been spoken about landowners of late that he thought it was necessary they should reveal the true state of affairs. Instancing his own position, Major Dent said that in 1875, when agriculture was at the top of the boom, his father inherited the estates which he (the speaker) now owned. Four years later there began the terrible depression which lasted for 20 years. Since 1875 the gross income from his estates—the rent roll—had been reduced by £10,000 had been put into the land as fresh capital, in the way of additions, renewals, improvements, and alterations. It could not be expected that anybody with that experience, and knowing that during that time the burdens on the land in this and every direction had been considerably more than doubled, would rush fighting hardly to carry out fresh improvements, and put a heavy rent charge on the estate. (Hear, hear).

Mr C. F. Ryder responded, and referred to the interest the Government were taking in land just now. He thought they would find that the Government would only manage to give them eighteen-pence for the half-crown they got—(laughter)—the remainder going on the red tape and officialism that was seemingly necessary. He thought it would be better if (laughter). He thought farmers realised the importance of having Chambers like that, and he only wished the membership was much larger. As in many people members of them as possible. For, without in any way talking politics, it was plain to everybody that at the present moment agriculture was in danger, if not of attack, at any rate of criticism by people who did not know very much of what they were talking about, and the more they combined the better would it be for the future of agriculture and for themselves. He thought all farmers realised the importance of having Chambers like that, and he only wished the membership was much larger. As in the House of Commons that afternoon there was considered an Agricultural Holdings Act which he hoped had by that time passed its second reading. The mind for that amending Act was that owing to the constant sales of estates farmers were being put to terrible inconveniences, and when such a sale took place and the farmer was given notice, he had no power to claim compensation. That was practically universally recognised to be unfair, and the Bill he referred to was to remedy that. Of course the need for the sale of these estates was the general feeling of unrest and of insecurity. Recent forms of legislation had raised this feeling, particularly among the class of owners whom he thought they most desired to retain, the large estate owner, for on these estates agriculture was most prosperous in the country. These men felt that no longer was land a safe investment. The whole idea of security was that from that sprang the prosperity of the industry. At the present moment politicians were wooing agriculture, and if they were sharp enough they ought to be able to get something; enough they ought to be able to get something; (Laughter). All politicians were anxious to show their interest in agriculture, though some of them were indiscreet enough to disclose how little they really knew about it. The question of the housing accommodation was miserable, and the man who seemed to be most prosperous was the landlord. (Laughter). What was really felt in England was the want of the young agricultural labourer on the land; they all knew how difficult it was to get young men to carry out the skilled processes of agriculture. The whole problem was very difficult to solve, but he believed they could all do something towards the solution by making the lives of the men in their employ more happy. In the present conditions it would be foolish to neglect the opportunity of attending to themselves their employees so as to secure their continued service and the consequent prosperity. He believed that one way to make the land more popular was to improve the conditions of housing, but the difficulty was to build houses which could be let at an economic rental. He was building six houses, for which the scheme he had borrowed money on the most reasonable terms. The result of this was that there would be a charge upon his estate for the next 40 years of £58 4s., a sum which did not cover the cost of repairs. To this the cottages at the rental which could be paid by the ordinary agricultural labourer—at not more than 2s. per week—there would be a total rental of £78 a year, as compared with a charge of £58 4s., exclusive of repairs, and the risk, of having empty cottages. It was obvious that unless he could charge 4s. per week he would not to say profitable, could not be "a paying" concern, but would actually be a loss. Agriculture, he said, was an industry which was bound to suffer from ignorance of legislation, was wanted was knowledge, and they as farmers, and as a chamber, could do much in providing that. (Applause).

The Chairman replied to the toast. The great of "the visitors" was proposed by Mr Thompson, and responded to by Mr Gill, Knaresborough. Songs were sung by Messrs Gill, Walters, and G. P. Wright.

FOOTBALL JOTTINGS.

BARKSTON ASH CUP—SEMI-FINAL.

On Saturday afternoon at Barwick the Garforth and Hetherton teams will meet in the semi-final for the Barkston Ash Challenge Cup, and there should be a big crowd on the ground. Garforth have won every honour in the division bar the Challenge Cup, and they are making a strong bid for it this season. Aberford, who won the Junior Cup last season, have not such a record as their opponents, but they are not to be underrated on that ground, and they intend to play Garforth for all they are worth. My opinion is that if Garforth can reproduce their best form they will enter the final, but they have not been very consistent this season, and Aberford have a chance.

TADCASTER VICTORIOUS.

On Saturday afternoon in the York and District League Tadcaster were at home to Thirsk. The home team playing a fast game had much the better of the first half, and Swithenbank and S. Birdsall scored for them. The second half opened in favour of Thirsk, Bateson scoring from a centre by Acres, and the latter afterwards equalised in some play following a corner. In a scrimmage at the Thirsk end, however, S. Birdsall again put his side ahead. Result:—Tadcaster 3 goals, Thirsk 2 goals.

DEIGHTON SHIELD COMPETITION.

Wetherby Cor., who think they have a chance of winning their division in the Deighton Shield Competition, played Hardwood on Saturday afternoon, and Wetherby won a hard game by three goals to two.

LEEDS SENIOR LEAGUE—LOCAL RESULTS.

On Saturday afternoon Great Preston went down before Methley Perseverance, who scored four goals to one. Allerton Bywater did well to hold a strong team at Rothwell, no goal being scored, and Waterloo Main Colliery (Templetownsam) distinguished themselves by beating Wortley United by a goal to nil. Rothwell F.C. went under to New Worthey Gas Works by four to nil.

Rather desultory play characterised the first half of the match between Waterloo Main and Wortley United at the Waterloo ground, at Thorpes Farm, Leeds. Mason started the game for the visitors, and Wortley were the first to show danger. Play then settled down for a time, but the Waterloo left winger, sent down one or two good shots that came near scoring, and Bowden and Smales also worked hard in the Main ranks, but the efforts of the home forwards lacked sting. In the few attacks on the home goal made by the Wortley men, the visitors showed better combination than their opponents and Mason, Townsend, and Thompson initiated a few movements that seriously endangered the home goal. Kitson, Dodsworth, and Lane showed capital shots, but no goal was resulted. Half-time:—Waterloo Main Colliery, nil; Wortley United, nil. In the second half McNiff dribbled up the field and scored for Waterloo Main.

Luck seemed against Rothwell Parish Church. To begin with, they were without the services of regular centre-forward Hall (Lane), Bulmer, Kale and Nunns. The last named player did not get to the ground until the game had started, and the defence of the Rothwell goal was left to Lupton. There was a good gathering to witness the match. Rothwell started, but the Gasworkers broke away from the kick-off and scored in the first minute, Dodsworth receiving a pass from Phil. Glancey, having no difficulty in beating Bradley. New Wortley kept up the pressure, Broughton making a good individual effort, but he dribbled the ball too far, and a good chance was missed. Phil Glancey had an opportunity of adding another goal, and great amusement was caused when the Rothwell custodian was kept mainly on the defence throughout the first half. Dodsworth scored a penalty. Broughton made no mistake with a stinging shot. The visitors could make no headway, and a fine centre by Glancey ended in Broughton scoring in characteristic style. Boyes and Dobson put in some good work for Rothwell, but the Gasworkers had all the best of the first half. Half-time score:—New Wortley Gasworks, 3 goals; Rothwell P.C. nil. New Wortley continued to attack during the second half, and Summerton scored their fourth goal.

Rothwell White Rose were at home to Allerton Bywater, and the game resulted in a goalless draw. There was a fair number of spectators present when Wood commenced for the visitors. Both teams showed a decided keenness, and tend to end play marked the early stages of the game. Some exciting play was witnessed in the Allerton half, but the Rothwell forwards seemed altogether unable to find the net. A succession of corners was forced, but these were badly placed, and the homesters derived little benefit from them. The homesters were similarly unfortunate in the second half. In the many attempts of the home forwards to reach the ball being baffled against the cross-bar. Allerton were ever on the alert, and proved themselves to be slightly the stronger. The side were a bigger set and were very fast. Wood scored, and much to the two backs, Dawson and Ripley, who rendered effective service. The last five minutes proved somewhat an anxious time for the homesters, but Heaton, in goal, kept Allerton at bay.

LEEDS AND DISTRICT CUP.

At the Hospital Field, Stourton, East Hunslet and Beeston St. Hilda's Church met in the second round of the Leeds and District Cup Competition. The home side opened strongly, and for a long time kept the Beeston defenders busy. Following a concerted movement by the Hunslet front rank Kelly broke through, and scored the opening goal. Several chances were later missed, weak finishing by usually effective mid-field work. The Churchmen made most of the running in the second half, and Arnold and Burton scored for them. East Hunslet were defeated by two goals to one.

RUGBY NOTES

METHLEY AND THE CUP.

Methley made a good show in the Leeds and District Cup Competition at Stanningley, but they were beaten by the narrow margin of two points. Nash scored for the home team after ten minutes' play. Stanningley were called upon to defend practically all the time, but Hardwick, breaking away from a melee, succeeded in getting over. Nash failing at goal. Smith, for the visiting team, succeeded in scoring a fine try, breaking away from the scrummage on the home "25" line. Whitaker failed to add good measure. Stanningley were leading by five points to three at the interval, and the second half produced no change.

On Saturday afternoon Lofthouse Glenfield overcame Manningham at hockey by three goals to one

POTATOES.

SELBY, Monday.—No change in prices, trade being reported slow. Sand Up-to-Dates 4s. to 5s., and King Edwards 5s 6d to 5s 8, warp King Edwards 6s to 7os per ton. Retail 9d. per stone.

CATTLE.

WHITSIDE AUCTION MART, Monday.—Excellent supplies of cattle, and a large attendance. Dairy cows, except for the best, met a rather dragging trade. Best, £22 to £25; 12s 6d; useful and medium kinds, £18 12s 6d to £21 10s; rougher sorts, to £17 7s. 6d; present calvers, to £25; April calvers, to £17 12s 6d. A good show of fat beasts, and prices ruled in favour of sellers. Choice bullocks and heifers, 8d. with the ruling price 7½d to 7¾d; cows, 6d to 6¾d. per lb. Owing to the short supply sheep were dear; small 4s. sheartling, 10½d; heavier kinds, 9¾d.; ewes, to 8d.; clipped hoggs, to 9d. per lb. Pork pigs made to 8s. 6d. per stone; large fat pigs, to 8s. per stone; eight bacon hogs sold at 27s.; stronger kinds, to £12 10s. each. Breeding calves fetched £1 3s. to £2 18s. each. Numbers sold—82 newly calven and calving cows, 120 fat beasts, 94 sheep, 87 pigs, and 4 calves.

SELBY, Monday.—At this mart Messrs Richardson and Son disposed of 180 beasts, 8 sheep, and 54 pigs. There was a good attendance of butchers and dealers. Best beef sold readily up to 9s. per stone; a good trade for store beasts, and a quiet trade for cows in milk and in calf. Dawson and Ripley, who rendered effective service. The last five minutes proved somewhat an anxious time for the homesters, but Heaton, in goal, kept Allerton at bay.

THE GOLDEN HOPE.

By J. FLETCHER

Author of "The Threshing Floor," "Daniel Quayne," "The Harvest Moon," "When Charles the First was King," &c.

PRINCIPAL CHARACTERS:

LAURENCE WORKMAN, the inventor of a new motor for aeroplanes.

SIR JOHN BEDFORD, a partner in the Armadale engineering firm.

L' ABBE BREMOND, a close friend of Sir John's.

LILIAN DELOMOSNE, ward of Sir Herbert Armadale.

CHARITY WRAYE, a typist in Sir John Bedford's office.

CHAPTER XXIX.

"Inspector Skarratt had been present at too many tragedies and catastrophies in his time to lose his head, and his strong will and vigorous personality asserted themselves at once.

"Out of the room, everyone!" he commanded, at the same time motioning to the landlord and Miss Delomosne to stay. "You, waiter, downstairs quickly, for doctors and the nearest police—quick, now, outside!" He hurtled servants, guests, and waiters before him like a flock of sheep, and turned the key on them. "He's quite dead," he went on, indicating Sir John Bedford's body with a nod of his head as he turned to the landlord and Miss Delomosne, "but the other man isn't. Here, help me to lift him on to the sofa, landlord—Miss Delomosne, give me a spoonful of that spirit."

Penrose was breathing heavily; under the inspector's ministrations he revived, and presently his eyes opened. "He'll not be long," murmured Skarratt, as he saw the glaze in them. "A few minutes more."

The dying man moaned and turned his head—his eyes twisted round to the light and fell on the faces bending over him. They glanced, with returning intelligence, from the landlord to Skarratt, from Skarratt to Miss Delomosne. And at sight of her a strange expression came over them and the whitening face in which they were set. He made an effort to rise—to speak.

"Lilian!" he whispered. "Lilian!"

Inspector Skarratt was too well trained to betray surprise. He drew the landlord aside, and motioned Miss Delomosne to bend closer to the pallid face. She dropped on her knees at the side of the couch and laid her hands on Penrose's arms. His eyes thanked her.

"Lilian—listen!" he panted out in whispers. "Dying now—forgive—but listen. Lilian—run, run! Three Travellers—listen. Lilian—explosive—steel globe—in hedge bottom—right-hand side of barn—twenty yards from road—will go off in twenty minutes—less —run—save their lives—no more sin on my soul—run, run, Lilian—find—throw it away in field—ah!'"

"He's gone!" said Inspector Skarratt, striding forward. "What's that he was saying, Miss Delomosne?"

But Miss Delomosne made no answer. She was in a dream, a frenzy. She made one leap at the door, sought, found the key—and was rushing down the stairs and across the hall like a mad thing that must fly and fly. She was out of the house, across the lighted street, at a street corner, staring around her before she realised anything. She seized upon the nearest passer-by with a grip that made him wince.

"The Three Travellers—the way—quick—quick!" she hissed in his ear.

The man pointed along the street, edging away from her the while. "Straight down—straight down—right at the end!" he said, and stood staring at her as she darted away from him. "Mad as a hatter!" he said. "Well, of all the—" And he moved off, rubbing his arm.

But she ran on, her heart beating to suffocation, the blood throbbing in her temples, her whole being surging and pulsating in agonised fear. Their lives—her life—Laurence's life! O Heaven—for more time—more time!

It was dark now, and the lights grew less in number, and the road less smooth to her feet, and overhead the trees assumed threatening and awful shapes against the cavernous sky. Supposing this was not the right way! Twenty minutes, he said, twenty minutes! Oh—for more time!

Suddenly, at a turn in the road, the quaintly-shaped, dimly-lighted windows of the old inn gleamed before her. And there, at her left hand, was the barn, and there, at the open paddock gate, stood a policeman who had just lighted a lantern. Through the crevices of the barn walls came shafts and flecks of light; within the barn a hammer was ringing on metal.

She was on the policeman, and had torn the lantern out of his hand and had dashed into the paddock before the astonished man could realise what had happened. She was yards away up the hedgerow side, searching, searching, ere he had sufficiently recovered his presence of mind to follow her.

"Come back there!" he shouted, starting in pursuit. "Come back!"

But she had found the steel globe, and snatched it out of the weeds and grass in the ditch. She threw the lantern aside and, clasping the deadly thing to her bosom, ran towards the further darkness. The policeman on guard at the end of the barn, startled by the shouts of his fellow-officer, flashed his light on her, made for her—she dodged round him like a hare, and ran on. Her breath was coming in short, sharp sobs—her heart seemed to be held in a vice—she was quivering, shaking from head to foot. She ran on—staggering, but running

Something black, huge, shapeless, rose up against the dim sky and its tiny sprinkling of stars. A wood! She paused in her headlong flight, summoned all her remaining strength, and dashed the steel globe as far as she could against the black mass in front. Then she turned, tried to run back, tottered a few yards, and fell headlong as the second policeman flashed his lamp upon her.

A blinding flash—a sickening, thunderous roar—a tearing and rending of timber—a lifting of the ground—and all was swept away as she went down into a seething maelstrom of black waters.

They were all round her now—so many people—so much light—so much hurried talking. She opened her eyes, and found herself in Laurence's arms, his face, anxious and drawn, close to hers. And instinctively she put out a hand and laid it on his.

"You are safe!" she whispered.

She felt his arm tighten round her; and as her eyes closed again she felt that, in the presence of all those wondering folk, he bent closer and pressed his lips to her in a kiss that spoke to both of them.

Two yards away Charity saw that kiss, and caught crippled Dickie up in her arms. "Oh, Dickie," she said, "if I'd lost you—if I'd lost you! Thank Heaven, I've got you yet!"

And then everybody was full of excitement, all wanting to know what it was that had really happened. Passers-by came crowding in from the roadside, and Mr. Waple, and such customers as had been in the Three Travellers at the time of the explosion, hurried across full of fear for the airship; and the constables suddenly remembered that when Laurence and Dickie sprave had rushed out of the barn the doors had been left open, and remedied him of it. But Laurence, who had contrived to get a few words of explanation from Lilian Delomosne, turned a stern face on them and the excited crowd which made a ring around him and her.

"There is no danger now, my friends," he said. "Thanks to this lady, who has literally saved our lives and my invention, the latter is safe. You will all see in the newspapers what a dastardly conspiracy there has been against me. Let me tell you that two men are dead in Canterbury hospital, that two others were killed in France this afternoon—killed, I am assured in my own mind, because they learned that I had discovered the new motive power which I have discovered, and had not. A few days more, and I and the world shall see my machine—and see and hear of wonders such as you have never known. And now let me take this lady home, where she can recover from this trying experience."

Therewith he led her across the road to Mr. Waple's hospitable doors and into the private parlour, and what he said to her there may be gathered from the fact that the day which witnessed the triumph of the aeroplane also chronicled the news of the engagement of its inventor to Sir Herbert Armadale's ward.

For the airship, which Laurence got his prospective bride to christen, and to which she gave the name of the Golden Hope, achieved an astounding success, making its first voyage from Canterbury to London and thence to Edinburgh in the fastest time on record, and without a stop.

Laurence Workman is already a rich man. He and his wife are figures in society, and they have already forgotten and forgiven the enemies who might have ruined him. But they have not forgotten old friends, and Charity Wraye is head of the clerical department of Workman's, Limited, and Dickie is Laurence's right-hand man.

[THE END.]

CONSERVATISM AT GARFORTH.

ADDRESS BY MR LANE FOX, M.P.

On Saturday night at the Conservative Club, Garforth, a smoking concert was held, and Mr. Jos. Dobson presided (in the absence, owing to ill-health, of Mr. Robert Routledge). Mr G. C. H. Wheler, M.P., and Mr H. S. Childe, of Potterton Hall, had been invited to attend, but they sent apologies for absence.

Mr Lane Fox, M.P., was present, and, in the course of the evening, he made a speech on the political situation. Dealing with the Irish question, he said that the difficulties the Government had got themselves into were largely their own creation. The Government were told from the start that if they tried to force through the Home Rule Bill against the will of a large portion of the Irish people they would not succeed, but, instead of conciliating those people, they pursued the stupid path Mr Redmond had prescribed for them, and had run up against a blank wall. On Monday they were to have a statement on the subject from Mr Asquith, but he (Mr Lane Fox) thought it extremely unlikely that any proposition he made would settle the difficulty, because, if the proposals he made seemed to be too favourable to Ulster and those who were opposed to Home Rule, it was extremely improbable that the Nationalist leaders would be allowed to accept them, while on the other hand, if they did not go far to meet the opposition of Ulster, it was perfectly obvious the Ulster men would not accept them, and it was surely beyond the power of the Government to coerce Ulster by sending an armed force. This could not be done; no Government was strong enough to do it. If no settlement was arrived at, he did not see how the Government could get over their difficulties without having, as they ought to have had before, a general election. And if such an event did occur he hoped that in Barkston Ash, at any rate, they would win the same old victory. (Applause).

Radicals, he said, would talk about the federal system as represented in our Colonies, and pretend that Ireland was merely going to be put into the position of a subordinate Government in the new organisation; but that was not a fair statement. If Ireland were going to be put into the position of some subordinate Governments, like, say, Natal, under the South African Constitution, things would be different, but here we had an unmitigated attempt at separation, the result of a miserable and ineffective compromise. The Bill could not be a final or a satisfactory solution of the Irish difficulty.

When they spoke of Federalism, they meant the case of a Parliament at one centre and a number of subordinate Parliaments in others. But that could not be the case with the proposed Irish Parliament, because there were many things in the Bill which were absolutely inconsistent with it. Ireland was to have a separate Post Office, and the power to raise Customs duties against goods coming in from this country—a power which had never been given to any subordinate Parliament. Ireland was to have power to appoint, and to turn off, her Judges. These were some of the things which could not possibly work.

In addition to driving such a very hard bargain, the Irish had forced Mr Asquith to concede them a position under which they would not have to pay a single penny towards the great national services of the Army, the Navy, or the Foreign Office, while they would at the same time have power to send 42 representatives to our own Parliament to interfere with our affairs. If an election did occur, the Government knew it must be prepared to have it on the Home Rule issue only. They knew the electors would have in mind their threat against the Welsh Church, Mr Lloyd George's pernicious finances, and the same gentleman's land taxes.

OUT OF HIS RECKONING.

SHORT STORY.

The man put a heavy travelling bag on the rack of the first-class carriage, dropped himself into the opposite corner with a sigh, and looked out, in complete disregard of the only other occupant of the compartment, and sat down with the solid satisfaction of one who could not only set apart from the vulgar crowd in a first-class carriage, but could very well afford it into the bargain.

"When I was nineteen," he would tell anyone willing to listen, "I made up my mind what I would do, how I would do it, what I was to gain by doing it. I made out my rule of life, you understand—and stuck to it. I've done it—done it well—and I've won. I've made myself what I meant to make myself—what I am." He would pass this thin lips together and nod, and the onlooker would see him as he had made himself—a small, plumpish, square-jawed, eminently prosperous, youngish man who looked a little like Napoleon, and possibly the onlooker was impressed.

In any case James Oesterley was impressed. The magnificent and unswerving course of his career filled him with an immense contentment.

Especially at this hour did he feel this rich emotion. This hour, or one of those several hours to which this particular one was due in point of time, was the climax and the pinnacle of his plans and his career. He had built his life up to this, and it was to be the crowning of his unswerving determination. He looked at his watch as he reflected this point.

"Yes," he said, speaking half to himself, "yes, in five hours—say five and a half—I shall have done it. I shall be engaged to marry the woman I have always meant to marry." He snapped his watch back to his pocket, and beamed on the hurtling landscape.

It was at that moment the other occupant of the carriage (it was, of course, a "smoker") took a short, veteran briarwood pipe from his mouth, leant sideways and across the length of the compartment, and said—

"Hullo, Jimmy Oesterley!"

"Hey, Jack Faulder!" and he stood up to meet the handclasp of the tall, rather loosely-strung man who came across the carriage Faulder wrulig his hand with a free warmth.

"Hadn't forgotten me, then?" he said. "I wouldn't forget you myself, anywhere." He nodded brightly and happily, and Oesterley could well believe it.

Faulder was, he considered, the sort of man who would remember anyone, even on the most inconvenient occasions. Faulder thought a good heart and a breezy manner were worth a couple of bucks of baggy trousers and seedy coats. Oesterley congratulated himself upon the comparative isolation of their present circumstance. He pictured the appearance of Faulder in the proximity of the Stock Exchange in that dilapidated tweed costume—and shuddered at his escape.

It was rather stunning to meet Faulder like this, and at this time, because Faulder had been, in the old days—seven years back—something of a bugbear. He had annoyed him a great deal. His mode of life had been so irrational when compared with the reasoned sanity of his own. Faulder had been the idle where he had been the industrious apprentice—a fellow hugely content to loaf about scribbling things for papers, going to plays and picture galleries, and muzzling himself over books. Generally, that is, looking for enjoyment rather than for the hard solid scheme of work that he, James Oesterley, considered to be the necessary groundwork of success. He had always decided that by steady and cerebral industry, always giving your thoughts to pleasures or desires apart, he would achieve the pinnacle of affluence and success, while Jack Faulder remained pottering along in his dilatory groove, with never a surplus fiver to blow himself.

Faulder noted the glance that took in the dilapidation of his clothes.

"It's all right," he laughed—he was always a laugher—"I'm not here under false pretences—travelling first with a third-class ticket. I've a free pass for this journey. I've been doing an interview for a local paper, and the pass was thrown in."

"Ah! still scribbling?" said Oesterley, sitting back and regarding the other with the complaisance of his seven thousand a year.

"Certainly," answered Faulder, "still scribbling."

"Not a very paying game," suggested Oesterley, with his eyes on Faulder's old tweed.

"Not in coin, perhaps," Faulder's clear grey eyes twinkled; "but it satisfies. It is also very jolly."

"Jolly," grunted Oesterley, "of course, jolly. That's your main idea in life."

"He's not at all a bad one," laughed the journalist.

"It's a short-sighted one," snapped Oesterley. "I suppose you're not very well off?"

"Not hugely well off, I'll admit. But I've enough—and I'm very happy, and that, surely, suffices?"

"Quite enough for the day, oh yes. But one has to consider more than the day," said Oesterley, a little pompously. "I've always done that—and here I am."

"Yes," said Faulder, not hugely enlightened, "there you are."

"There I am," continued Oesterley, ignoring the interruption, "and it's rather curious that we should meet on this particular day. Here I am, not only at the top of a very solid success, but also with my withering fears of failure in it, but on my way to consummate my success. I've worked hard, seven solid years in fact, with a definite aim in view, and now I have attained that aim. I am on my way to receive the crown that my forethought, my unswerving determination has earned. I am on my way to obtain, not a casual "snoogle-to-theday" happiness, but an abiding and life-long happiness."

Faulder chuckled. He may have been dilatory, but he was certainly no fool, and saw at once what part Oesterley had cast for him in his scheme of life. The idea of his being the idle apprentice rather tickled him, but being a kind, as well as a big-hearted man, he shoved no resentment, and answered good-humouredly—

"This is very good news, Oesterley. I'm sure you deserve it all. And I must congratulate you, too, for surely it is a woman—"

"Yes, it is a woman, of course," answered Oesterley, a little heavily. Faulder's intuition had startled him. "The pinnacle point of one's life is always a woman, is it not?"

"Yes, it is," said Faulder, and his voice was soft and very tender; his eyes were dreamy and he was possibly thinking of the woman in his life. Oesterley looked at him, and rather winced at the light in his face. It was rather obviously sentimental, he considered, and the one thing he knew of Faulder was that he was not sentimental. He had no room for it in his composition. He broke in harshly because there was something in the tall man's face that at once disturbed him and annoyed him.

"Yes, that is so. That's the rounding off, as it were, of one's career. The calm nation—the finishing touch. She crowns one's efforts, so to speak. That's my idea of it. One works hards, follows out one's plans, arrives at success, and cuts a decent figure in the world, and then one marries. That gives the final dignity to one's work. Gives it distinction and relief. That's how I have felt during all the years of work, that when I had done what I had done, what I had meant to do, when I had made all the hard cash I had meant to make, I would come back and marry the woman of my choice. I have always meant to marry . . . and that's what I am about to do." His air was very superior and very final. Faulder gasped at its cold-blooded atmosphere.

"And the girl!" he cried, "Seven years is a long time."

Oesterley waved his hards.

"Oh, that's all right. She's all right." He looked a little nettled at the other's suggestion. "Girls understand these things, and they know a man's career must come first. They're sensible. They see it's much better to wait and marry a man who can afford to give them all the luxury and comfort that I can give, than marry a man who can only give them just a bare competence, and a bare living, like——"

"Like myself," said Faulder, who, as has been said, was no fool. "Well, anyhow, you are supremely lucky to get this girl to agree to wait for you. Not many girls would have——"

"Agree—agree!" snapped Oesterley. "She's not agreed. What d'ye mean?"

Faulder opened his eyes in astonishment.

"Do you mean to say that she did not promise——"

"Promise, no, of course not, why should she? Why, man, I haven't spoken to her yet. Why should I? I'd have only been hampering myself. Why, man, I've not seen her beyond from her for the whole of the seven years?"

"Good Lord—and you expect she's still waiting?"

"Of course," said Oesterley pompously. "Of course, why not? One doesn't have to be ridiculous and spoon to learn these things. Of course, she's waiting. I know. I understand women."

"But seven years?"

"Seventy years if you like. I know 'em, women. I'm as sure of Enid Rathie as I am of myself."

"Who?" burst out Faulder, with an amazed face.

"Enid Rathie, of course, it's Enid. You know Enid Rathie, there's only one in the town. What have you got against her, anyhow?"

"Only this," said Jack Faulder, looking steadily into the industrious apprentice's eyes, "Enid Rathie has loved me for eight years—and for the last three of them, she's loved me—as my wife!"

THE LADIES' COLUMN.

ONE THING AND ANOTHER

Gingerbread made with oatmeal instead of flour is a very good and useful aperient for children, and not objectionable.

If people had any idea how much infection they can carry about in their hair, they would wash it more often and would take care to keep it free from dust.

Keep sprained joint absolutely at rest, and if very swollen, let it be raised. Never allow a sprained leg to hang down. Apply cold compresses, and if the swelling does not quickly abate, send for the doctor.

When soot falls upon the carpet or rug, never attempt to sweep it up at once, for the result is sure to be a disfiguring mark. Cover it thickly with well-dried salt, which will enable you to sweep it up cleanly, so that not the slightest smear will be left.

Children who suffer from headaches should have their eyes tested by an oculist, for a common cause of headache in children is eye strain, brought on by shortness of vision, which can easily be rectified by the use of properly prescribed spectacles.

To fill cracks in a floor that is to be painted, cover flour and water, and stir into this while hot, newspapers that have been torn in strips and moistened; add paper until a thick pulp is formed, stirring thoroughly, and put in the cracks like putty.

A common and dangerous accident is brought about by unintentionally swallowing some boiling liquid. Send for doctor at once; in the meantime, keep patient very warm and apply sponges, wrung out of hot water, to the outside of the throat, and if possible, give patient small pieces of ice to suck pending the doctor's arrival.

"What is woman?" asked the speaker at a public meeting. "Woman," replied a man in the audience—a married man—"is an animated being, with the power of speech abnormally developed, and entirely surrounded by a dress that buttons up the back."

A clerk showed forty patterns of ginghams to a man whose wife had sent him to buy some for a dress, and asked him which he liked best. "My wife said she didn't want anything like that," The clerk put the last piece back on the shelf. "Sir," he said, "you don't want gingham. What you want is a divorce."

To Preserve Rugs and Mats.

Hand-made rugs and mats are apt to break out at the ends, it seems to me a defect in those foreign articles, and one which might easily be remedied in the making, but we can prevent it ourselves by lining them when new, with Hessian or other strong material, or even by lacing the ends underneath with carpet binding, and overcasting them neatly with thread between the fringe. When purchasing stair-carpet, an extra length should always be allowed at the bottom, so that when they begin to wear on the edges, they could be moved upwards a little. This precaution will enable them to wear much longer.

Economy in Candles.

"I heard of an economical hint about candles the other day, and it struck me that many of us would be glad to know of it," says Vera. "One generally has to use candles in country bedrooms. You simply give your candles a coat of white varnish and let them harden for a few weeks before using. You see, the varnish makes a hard coat which holds in the grease as it melts and every atom is used instead of running down and spluttering about. It also tends towards giving a better light."

Fire in Bedroom.

It is said that half the terrible colds, influenza, and touches of rheumatism are brought on by the common practice of going out of a warm room, leaving a nice fire, having a "good warm," the last thing, and then deliberately walking up to a cold-sheeted bedchamber. No wonder we lie doubled-up. It is enough to make one's teeth chatter only to think of it. Take advice and have a fire lighted in your bedroom an hour before going into it. This will not only prevent colds, etc., but will ventilate the room, and enable you to breathe fresh air all night. You will get up as light as a lark, instead of waking with a wish for another snooze.

How to Do It.

White feather boas are often looked upon as an expensive luxury because of the cost of constant cleaning, but it is the simplest matter to wash these at home! Make a nice lather, either with any good soap power, place the boa in this, and pull and squeeze through the hands until all the dirt is extracted. Rinse in other water, place in a towel and squeeze as dry as possible, hang near a fire, shake constantly, and it will be beautifully white and fluffy. It is not advisable to try home cleaning of a boa which requires curling, as this really needs a skilled hand, though it is possible to do it with a paper knife.

Nervous Children.

A word about nervous children. Never scold them nor "make fun" of them. They suffer enough without your threats or sarcasm. Pretend not to see their awkwardness when in company nor their grimaces when alone. There are thousands of children who give way to their nerves. Talk to them about these cases little fellows, that should be their servants, not their masters. Never whip them. The man or woman who whips a nervous child is on a level with brutes that have no reason. Encourage them. Help them. Be patient with them. They are the making of our future successful men and women, for they will work hard at what they like. Study up your nervous little boy and then be indulgent towards the expense of your nervous children.

COPMANTHORPE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The annual dinner of the Copmanthorpe Agricultural and Horticultural Society was held at the Royal Oak Hotel, Copmanthorpe, on Monday evening. Amongst those present were Mr W. Leng (chairman), Mr Arthur Hall (vice-chairman), and Messrs Kendall, Forth, Wright, Interest in agriculture and horticulture and the district in general.

Mr Leng, in responding on behalf of himself and the vice-chairman, said he considered it behoved them always to do their very best for the good of the society, but he wished to point out that without the assistance of such a good humoured and hard-working committee, they would not have been able to have had such a successful show as they had last year, and in previous years, and the good name of the society during Show would continue to prosper as in the past. He was sure that he and Mr Hall would always do everything in their power to forward the interests and welfare of the society. In closing his remarks, the Chairman said how pleased he was to see representatives of the York and Ainsty Hunt present at the dinner, and also Mr Barkwith, as representing their esteemed president, Mr Lycett Green.

"The Visitors" was proposed by Mr Herbert Kendall—Mr Cumpston, in replying, said it was a pleasure for him and his friends to do all they could for the good of the society, and he could assure them that they had now got a master who would always be pleased to see his best for the Copmanthorpe Show.

Mr Leng proposed the health of Mr Dykes, the hon. secretary.—Mr Dykes gave an interesting review of the past work of the society during the past year, and said he had much pleasure in referring to the fact that Mr Lycett Green had very kindly promised to see that the show got another cup for the hunter class. Mr Green having won the cup previously presented for competition.

During the evening a musical programme was gone through. The songs rendered by Mr Francis were much appreciated. Mr Walter Rockliffe was in fine voice, and greatly amused the audience with his quaint songs. Mr Rockliffe contributed humorous pieces, and Mr G. P. Ayson played the accompaniments. The proceedings ended with the singing of the National Anthem.

TEMPLENEWSAM RATEPAYERS' ASSOCIATION.

TRAMS TO HALTON—TREE PLANTING.

SUGGESTED CHILDREN'S PLAY GROUND AT WHITKIRK.

The monthly meeting of Templenewsam Ratepayers' Association was held at the Wesleyan Schoolroom, Halton, on Friday evening—Mr J. M. Armistead (President) in the chair.

Mr Atkinson reported that there had been no meeting of the new trustees for the Noncon-formist portion of the Whitkirk cemetery, as the deeds, etc., had not yet been completed, but as soon as that was done he would see the question of the laying on of water to the cemetery was brought forward.

Mr Young referred to the question of the extension of the Leeds city tramway as far as the Halton Institute, and said he was pleased to see that the Hunslet District Council had been able to insist upon their terms that the extension should be completed within two years of the powers being obtained. That, he thought, was a great thing in their favour.

Mr Martin referred to the question of the planting of trees on the roads in the district, and said he thought it would be a good thing if something in this way could be done.

Mr Atkinson replied that the Parish Council could not collect, the Parish Council had no power to expend any money in this manner.

Mr Kelly, who presided at the meeting, moved five Acts which the Parish Council had not adopted, and it would be necessary for them to adopt some of these before any money could be spent in the district. In one case, he thought nothing would be done until the District Council's town planning scheme was completed.

Mr Atkinson asked if the scheme as suggested was to be adhered to, and said, if so, any houses built below the sewage beds would have to have the sewage pumped up.

Mr Young said that when a Local Authority got power they could say when and where the building should be done, and how the land should be drained to it. It was a very bad state of affairs into a discussion on the plans, and thought the Local Authority's engineer would have made all the necessary provision for this in his plans.

Mr Gill referred to the question of the state of the footpath in Green Lane between the houses in Whitkirk and the houses in Halton, and said the attention of the Local Authority should be directed to it. He was in favour of a path and in some places the hedge overhung the footpath to such an extent that it was impossible to walk on it. He proposed that the District Council's attention be drawn to the condition of the footpath in Green Lane between Halton and Whitkirk.

Mr Rippon seconded, and this was carried.

Mr Cousins spoke of the need for some backed seats for the recreation ground at Halton.

Mr Young said the Parish Council had this matter in hand.

Mr White referred to the question of a field for the children of Whitkirk to play in, and said he thought something should be done. At present the children had no place to play in, and he thought this should not be so when they lived in the country.

Mr Young said he had a lot of sympathy with Mr White on the question.

Mr MacLeod said he thought it was a question the Association might take up, and he was in favour of something should be done regarding it.

Mr Young said he thought it would be better before going any further if they saw Mr Marsden on the question, as he was a member who had thought about it, and if there was any land available which could be got for the purpose. He proposed that a deputation, composed of Mr Armistead, Mr Young, Mr Martin, Mr MacLeod, and Mr Whitkirson, should wait on Mr Marsden on the question.

Mr Booth seconded, and this was carried.

Rothwell Wesleyan Circuit.

QUARTERLY MEETING

The quarterly meeting of the Rothwell Wesleyan Circuit was held on Wednesday night in the Carlton Wesleyan Sunday School. The meeting was preceded by an excellent tea, provided by the Carlton ladies, to whom a hearty vote of thanks was accorded.

The Rev. N. W. Thomlinson presided over the meeting, and among those present were the Rev. M. Phillipson, A. Mr Walter Hargreaves, C.C., and Mr M. Bibby (circuit stewards).

The numerical returns showed on the roll 481 members—an increase of eight on the year. The junior membership was 134—an increase of ten.

Mr Hargreaves gave the financial report, which showed that the ordinary income was £1097 3s. 0d., while the special gifts towards the circuit deficiency amount to £30 12s., making a total of £143 15s. 0d. The balance due to the stewards was £117 18s. 8d. It was expected that there are still a few special gifts to come in, so that at the next quarterly meeting the balance sheet will probably show a balance on the right side.

A vote of thanks to the Rev. N. W. Thomlinson was passed for his services during the past year, and appreciative speeches were made by Messrs Hargreaves, Bibby, Garrett, Batterick, Stevenson, and Marland. Mr Thomlinson suitably responded, and accepted the invitation to remain another year.

The Rev. J. Jin Wilson, of Bishop Auckland, was officially invited to serve the circuit at the conference in succession to the Rev. M. Phillipson.

The stewards expressed their intention of attending the synod to be held at Otley, and Mr W. H. Sutton was unanimously elected as delegate. It was decided, in the event of any of the above gentlemen being unable to attend, that Messrs A. Marshall, G. W. Dennis, and T. A. Young act as substitutes.

The arrangements for the visit of the Cookers one to Leeds were considered, and homes were arranged for the twelve minkers who will be allocated to this circuit.

The Rev. M. Phillipson presented a favourable report regarding the foreign missionary accounts.

On the invitation of Mr and Mrs Walter Hargreaves, the quarterly meeting will be entertained at Carlton House on June 17th.

Prudential Assurance Company

A HUGE CONCERN

The Prudential is the largest British life assurance company, and has more policy-holders than any other Company in the world. Its affairs, therefore, are more than passing attention. In a population of considerably less than 50 millions it has well over 20 million policies in force, assuring the enormous sum of over £1,000,000,000; in other words, at least one person in every four is individually interested in the Prudential for a sum of money at death or in old age, and practically every person is personally interested, since the enormous sum payable to the people in times of sickness old age or at death—has a great influence on national well-being.

It is pleasing, therefore, to be able to report splendid progress during 1913 and greater stability and higher premiums for the future than ever before. During 1913 there has been an increase in annual premium income in the industrial branch of over £80,000, and there is every indication that this satisfactory growth will exceed £80,000 this year. There has been an excellent addition to the percentage of interest earned on the funds, and with the percentage of expenses and claims remaining stationary it is clear that in future additional profits will be distributable to policy-holders. We note a further fact about the new industrial business, i.e., that the "average sum assured" per policy per year, and that the average amount of new policies has risen from £9 to £15.

In the ordinary branch the Company has made an increase of £93,574 in its annual premium income, has issued much more business than in 1912, and has increased the percentage of interest earned on its funds.

Summing up all the foregoing facts, we see that the Prudential is stronger than ever and in a better position than ever as regards the future. The past bonuses are easily maintained this year and in view of the increased interest yield nothing is more likely than bigger bonuses and more profitable policies to the public in years to come. It is very gratifying to note these results, and to be able to assure the public that its confidence in the Company was never more (says the "Insurance Mail") completely justified. We know of no office where the future bonus prospects are brighter and certainly there is no office more worthy of the patronage of the public both on the grounds of fair dealing and generosity.

Local Representative—Mr E. Tedesalle, Red Hill, Castleford (superintendent); Mr G. W. Gale, Quarry Hill, Oulton (assistant superintendent); Mr H. Moeland, High Street, Rippax (assistant superintendent); Mr D. A. Bowling, 17, Manby Street, Castleford (assistant superintendent); Mr H. Kaye, 20, Medley Street, Castleford (assistant superintendent); and Mr T. Bellwood, 32, Church Lane, Normanton (assistant superintendent). Local agents—Messrs J. Barker, 1, Springfield Terrace, Rothwell; H. Brown, 4, Granville Terrace, Rothwell Haigh; J. W. Craine, Elmwood Terrace, Oulton; Mrs L. Feldbrooke, 28, Quarry Hill, Oulton; S. Morton, Armitage Terrace, Rothwell; J. Gibson, Cross Street, Rothwell; J. Newton, Marsh Street, Rothwell; and H. R. Stringer, 3, Wright's Buildings, Commercial Street, Rothwell.

On Saturday afternoon Wetherby had a football match with Stockold Park, and the latter were defeated by four goals to one.

On Wednesday at a dog show at Wakefield Miss Gunter, of Wetherby, secured two third prizes with her fox terrier. She also secured a third prize in the Scotch terrier class.

Waggon Demolished.—While the storm was at its height on Friday at Gascoigne Wood Junction the wind blew away an empty coal waggon, which was braked, from its position, and travelled for a fair speed it crashed into six other waggons, some of which were laden with coal. The waggons were derailed, two being thrown bodily over on to the road with their contents.

Motor Mishap at Wetherby.—Mr Joseph William Hall, photographer, Gathorne Avenue, Roundhay Road, Leeds, sustained injury to the head and a fracture of the left forearm in a collision with a motor-car near the Workhouse, Wetherby, on Monday afternoon. Mr Hall was driving a motor-cycle, which was damaged, and Sydney Scofield, Hill, Otley, driver of the motor-car, has been charged with having driven recklessly and not stopping. Mr Hall said he was proceeding in the direction of Leeds when he observed the car coming towards him. He could not identify the driver. Two lady occupants of the car as well as the chauffeur, escaped injury. After being attended to by Dr Hargreaves, Mr Hall was removed to the Leeds Infirmary.

HUNSLET RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL.

THE TRAM TO OULTON

A FIRE BRIGADE FOR OULTON-WITH-WOODLESFORD

HEALTH OF THE DISTRICT

The monthly meeting of the Hunslet Rural District Council was held at the Council Offices, Leeds Street, Hunslet, on Thursday afternoon. Mr T. Thomas (Chairman) presiding. Other members present were Messrs D. Hargreaves, G. Armitage, P. S. Measham, and W. Verity, with the Clerk (Mr W. B. Pindar), the medical officer (Dr J. Buckl), the sanitary inspectors (Messrs W. Whitehead and F. C. Higgins), and the surveyor (Mr J. Nuttall).

The Clerk read a letter from the Board of Trade stating that they had refused the application of the Wakefield and District Light Railway Company to discontinue the proposed tramway to Oulton, and that they had extend the time for completion until March 19th, 1916.

The Clerk was instructed to write the Leeds City Council renewing the objection already made by the Council as to the inclusion of the Templenewsam's wages worker in the Roundhay, Harehills, and Crossgates town-planning scheme.

A letter was read from Mr H. Sheldon, licensee of the Midland Hotel, Woodlesford, complaining that according to the report in the "Courier" of the last meeting of the Council, it appeared in regard to the fire at Mr Moss's shop that Mr Moss wanted to get into communication with the Leeds Fire Brigade, and went to the Midland Hotel, which is a public call office, but owing to its being past ten o'clock the licensee does not open the door. This he wished to contradict. The facts of the case were, he wrote, as follows:—"I was in bed and was aroused by a knocking at the door, and I had to get up and open the door to have a conversation with the police and others, but no request was made from Mr Moss for me to telephone for the fire brigade."

The question of a proposed fire brigade for Oulton-with-Woodlesford was again discussed.

The Clerk described the appliances which belong to Templenewsam, and said the affair cost about £86. It consisted of a cart containing 3 lengths of hose, standpipe, nozzles, and ladders, and whenever an outbreak of fire was reported till the brigade had to do was to run off with the cart, and so have all the necessary tackle with them. At Woodlesford they might, however, do with less hose, say about 300 yards. The upkeep would mean about £8 or £9 each year. If they depend upon the Leeds Brigade they would have to pay at least £15 for a turnout.

Questioned as to the water pressure, the Clerk said that as Templenewsam they could send a strong jet over any house in the district.

Mr Hargreaves said he did not think that at Oulton and Woodlesford they could get great pressure, especially on the outskirts of the district.

Mr Armitage said such might be the case during the day time but at night time the pressure would be satisfactory. He suggested the lengths of hose be obtained.

The Clerk said hose p.p. would be practically no good unless they had trained men to deal with it, and run it out.

The Chairman asked how it would be for Oulton and Woodlesford to borrow the appliances from Templenewsam, so that the water pressure could be tested.

Mr Armitage contended that if they were to have trained men they would have to make it worth their while, or when they were wanted they would either be at Leeds or elsewhere.

Mr Verity remarked that at Templenewsam the men who formed the brigade were free agents.

It was finally decided to obtain lengths of hose, stand pipes, nozzles, ladders, and life lines, and the Clerk is to get quotations.

Dr Buck presented his report for the past four weeks, and it showed that there had been thirteen births in the district and ten deaths, while four cases of scarlet fever had been notified. The doctor stated that with the exception of one case they were practically free from scarlet fever.

Mr Hargreaves asked if Swillington was in the Hunslet district, as he had heard of an outbreak of scarlet fever there.

Dr Buck replied that Swillington was not in their area but in Tadcaster rural area.

Inspector Costham, of Dewsbury, has been transferred to the Selby Police Division, where he will have charge of the Upper Division of Lower Barkston Ash area at Sherburn.

Sold the Magistrate's Ferrets.—On Saturday at Selby George Penistone, Albert Penistone, and William Addy, all of Knottingley, were charged with stealing three ferrets, the property of Mr Charles Weddall, the well-known West Riding magistrate, of Carlton, near Selby, on February 26th. Prisoners, who admitted their guilt, had been engaged rabbit catching by prosecutor, and were given ferrets which they sold at Doncaster. The Penistones were fined 20s. and Addy 10s. and costs.

A Tadcaster Farmer's Purchase.—Messrs R. M. English and Sons, auctioneers, Pocklington, offered for sale at the Royal Station Hotel, York, on Friday afternoon, the Grimthorpe estate, which is situated about three miles from Pocklington station and sixteen from York. The estate comprises the residence known as Grimthorpe Manor House, together with three good cottages, and an excellent modern farmstead and about 548 acres 2 roods 4 perches of land, which include high-class pasture and arable wold land and sporting plantation. The house is surrounded by gardens and lawns, and stands on an eminence commanding an unbroken view of exquisite country and woodland scenery. The sale was very largely attended and some keen bidding was the outcome. The property was eventually sold to Mr George Edward Tetley, farmer, Cliffe Moor Grange, Tadcaster, who made the highest bid, namely, £10,450.

Rural Remark by a Drunken Driver.—"Where does the Selby Gaol for cells are too many hairys by half as the country," was the remark attributed to Edwin Easterby, farm servant, Spofforth, who at the Wetherby police court yesterday was charged with having been drunk in charge of a horse and cart and with driving furiously. Evidence was given by four witnesses to the effect that defendant was driving both cart and horse furiously in the lane just outside Spofforth while drunk. In Spofforth village the cart ran over a child, happily with not very serious results, and a second child was only pulled out of the way in time to avoid a similar fate. It was after the defendant had run over the child, aged four years, that he was alleged to have made use of the remark mentioned above. Defendant stated that he had never been drunk in his life, and that all the intoxicants he had had on the day of the accident were two glasses of beer and two whiskies. For the two offences he was fined £3 and £1 12s. 6d. costs.

CORRESPONDENCE.

HUNSLET RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL.

To the Editor.

Sir,—Will you please allow me a little of your space to call the attention of the ratepayers who elect the Hunslet Rural District Council to the work of that body. I think it is very unfair of the Council to increase the salary of the Clerk £30 a year, and refuse to increase the wages of £30 a year, and refuse to increase the wages of the lamplighters from 17s. to 21s. respectively. I have discussed the question of the Clerk's salary with scores of ratepayers in this district, and they all, both large and small, agree with me that £230 is far too large a salary for the position of Clerk to the District Council, which is only a part time occupation.

It is my intention to move a vote of censure upon the Hunslet Rural District Council at the annual parish meeting to be held at Woodlesford on Tuesday next, and I hope we shall have a crowded attendance. The Council must have been afraid of the public knowing the facts of the case, or else they would not have gone into committee, and so have kept the matter out of the "Courier." In my opinion the Council is too small in numbers.—Yours, etc.,

Thomas H. Killshaw.

WHITKIRK RURIDECANAL COUNCIL.

A meeting of the Whitkirk Ruri-Decanal Council was held in the Church Institute, Leeds, on Tuesday night, when a paper on "Church Reform—the Church's attitude towards Parliament" was read by Mr E. Dalton, the Church defence lecturer for the Northern Province.

The Rev. A. J. E. Irvin, Rural Dean (Vicar of Woodlesford, presided, and the representatives present were Messrs J. A. Owbridge (Great Preston), F. W. Shaw (Methley), G. Wragby (Scarcroft), W. Hartnell (Roundhay), J. Watson (Whitkirk), J. Roberts (Scarcroft), J. L. Howe (Lofthouse), J. Watson (Swillington), and J. J. Pringle (Oulton), with the hon. secretary A. B. Jessop (Barwick).

In introducing Mr Dalton, the Rev. A. J. E. Irvin, said the Church and Parliament had been always united very closely together. He supposed Parliament had had the greatest possible help from the Church in numberless ways. The lowest object of the Church was to turn out good citizens, and every good citizen turned out was a gain for Parliament. The present attitude towards the Church had not changed during the last few centuries. Whether the union would be altered or broken it remained to be seen. At the present time he thought it would be a great mistake if the Church was severed from the State.

Mr Dalton, in the course of his paper, pointed out that as Church defenders the political parties in the Commons had been unsatisfactory. There, four, Churchmen must seek to be free from as much Parliamentary influence as possible. The first question then they had to tackle—was whether the Church of England was to speak with an ecclesiastical voice. If so, who was to be made the organ of speech? Was there no governing body who possessed power and to whom they could look with confidence for the voice of the Church. The voice must be one of reality. The Convocation was defective in many points. He had nothing, he said, against Convocation, as he could give many instances of the useful work it had done and was doing, but they must admit that it was not fully representative. Church people could not address Parliament, and it was for them to wait until they could present a body of their representatives, and take more united action and make more definite demands.

Following the paper a few brief remarks were addressed by Messrs Hartnell, Owbridge, Watson and Jessop.

Mr Watson, taking up a point referring to the work of Church Councils, asked if the Councils were obligatory.

The Chairman remarked that the forming of such Councils was quite optional.

Mr Dalton was thanked for his paper by the Rev. A. J. E. Irvin.

At the Quarter Sessions at Wakefield on Tuesday Charles Bateson (32), labourer, charged with embezzlement of £3 8s., the money of his employer, John William Southern, Tadcaster, was acquitted, being found not guilty.

The Closing of Selby Twine Mills.—The closing of Portholme Twine Mills at Selby, which takes place at the end of this month, affects altogether about 200 hands, some of whom are finding employment at other works. There is some hope, however, that a new firm may purchase the premises. The loss of the industry follows upon the company's amalgamation some months ago with Barkston, and they must have a less profitable branch, it is being relinquished.

Selby Conservatives Weekly Whist Drive.—The whist drive of the Conservative Club on Tuesday evening was a success, 76 ladies and gentlemen taking part. The following were the prize-winners:—Ladies:—1, Mrs Bradford; 2, Mrs Hanson (after a tie with Mrs Weaver); 3, Mrs Perkins (after a tie with Mrs O'Neill); consolation, Mrs Pickering. Gentlemen:—1, Mr H. Hall; 2, Mr A. Hugill; sealed, Mr R. Cawood; consolation, Mr F. Thurlow. Light refreshments were handed round during the interval.

Airship Construction.—The statement by the Right Hon. Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty (Mr Churchill) in the House of Commons that a contract had been signed by Messrs Armstrong for three large semi-rigid airships of Italian design, one of them to be built by Messrs Armstrong in this country, supplies some confirmation of the details given a short time ago as to the aircraft to be built at Selby by the famous Elswick firm. A large shed will be erected for the purpose of aircraft construction is to be built on the firm's Barlow site at Selby, and a commencement will be made with the work this spring.

Testimonial.—A meeting was held on Thursday evening at the Cherbarn in connection with the proposed testimonial to Inspector John Fleeman, who has been stationed at Sherburn for the past few years, and who has lately retired on pension after 28 years' service in the police force. During his stay at Sherburn Mr Fleeman won the respect of all, and he is greatly respected in all parts of the division. A strong committee was formed, the following gentlemen were appointed to receive subscriptions:—Mr A. B. Holgreaves (Church Fenton), Messrs W. A. Osborne and W. S. Thompson (Sherburn), Mr Jas. Powell (South Milford), Messrs G. Wanless and T. E. Foster (Monk Fryston), Mr J. Powell, jun. (Fairburn), Mr Hey (Biggin), Mr T. Richardson (Saxton), and Mr H. Firn (Lotwerton). Mr A. B. Holgreaves (Church Fenton) was elected treasurer of the fund.

A Wetherby County Court Case.

DISPUTED SALE OF A HORSE.

MRS MEYRICK'S PURCHASE

At York County Court on Tuesday, before His Honour Judge F. G. Tempier, Alexander Farquharson Durkie, of Mill of Muiris, Dundee, farmer, was the plaintiff in a case which had been remitted from the High Court. Plaintiff claimed the sum of £80, the price of a horse sold by him to Rowland Francis Meyrick and Eleanor Meyrick, of Hall Orchards, Wetherby, on May 23rd, 1913. There was a counter-claim for £12 17s. 6d., for the difference in the price realised for the sale of the horse, stabling, etc., and veterinary fee. Mr Harry Wray, of Hull, appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr N. Crombie, of York, for the defendants.

Mr Wray, in opening the case, said plaintiff was not a professional horse dealer, but a Justice of the Peace and a County Councillor. The horse in dispute was, in the first instance, described as sound and quiet. A letter of May 22nd by Mrs Meyrick to the plaintiff said that her husband would buy the horse at £80, and he would be pleased to have it "vetted" first. That, he suggested, constituted a bargain. The horse was duly delivered to the defendant's home. When despatched it was in perfectly sound condition.

Mr Crombie said his case was that the horse was not sound, and suffered from malformation of the hocks. It was represented as sound, and he therefore alleged breach of warranty.

Mrs Meyrick stated that she arranged to purchase the animal from Mr Durkie on the representation that it was clean, sound, and quiet. Immediately the horse arrived it was examined by a veterinary surgeon. Her husband did not like the animal, and it was returned as unsound and suffering from "curb" bone. The agreement when the horse was purchased was that it should be sound and quite fit for hunting purposes, for which it was required.

By Mr Wray: Witness said she purchased the animal. Her husband was opposed to her buying the horse. Subsequently she wrote stating that her husband would buy the horse for £80, at the same time asking for it to be "vetted." She further asked if it was sound. She could not now state that when she first saw the horse it was unsound. Professor Hunting could not say how long before "curby" last certainly there was one. Although at first she wrote stating that she was disgusted, she yet expressed her wish to see it again.

In answer to his Honour, Mr Wray said his client did not sell the horse on a warranty.

Mrs Myrick's evidence was corroborated by three veterinary surgeons from Leeds, Messrs G. E. Bowman, A. W. Mason, and Samuel Wharram; and by Mr Meyrick, all of whom spoke to the animal having a "curb" when seen and examined by them, and which, in their opinion, must have been of considerable standing, and could not have been "sprung" on the railway journey or whilst in Mrs Meyrick's possession.

Plaintiff said he bred the horse in question; it was by Akbar, a super-premium horse. During the time the horse was in his possession it had never been treated by fully hocks. He himself was a member of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons, and had lectured at Aberdeen University. The animal was good when it left his place at Dundee, and when he saw it again at York he was certain that it had been "treated." There was no malformation of either hocks. It had highly developed bones, which would give it more strength.

By Mr Crombie: When he bought the horse hock he found out the state of the hocks, and was certain it had been "treated." Professor Hunting had not told him that the animal was unsound. Professor Hunting had since died. "Sound and quiet" was a proper description of the animal. There were many forms of malformation.

Alexander Frederick Durkie, surveyor, son of the plaintiff, said he had ridden the horse in question. Witness knew the horse from birth. It had never had a "curb" whilst in his father's possession, and had never been blistered. The horse had always been healthy.

Andrew Spreull, senior, partner of Messrs Spreull and Sons, veterinary surgeons, dealt with the history of the horse in question. He submitted it to a very close and searching examination, and gave a certificate that it was perfectly sound. At that time there was not a "curb" on either hocks, nor was there any sign of the hocks having been treated. At the time of his examination there was no fulness or malformation of the hocks. The bones were largely developed. Witness saw the horse after its re-sale, and the condition of the hocks then was due to it having been in the railway truck. The large bone of the hock had a tendency to strengthen the legs, rather than to weaken them. Witness asserted that in answer to a letter since the examination he stated that the hocks were sickle shaped.

John Dargent, coachman to Mrs Ogilvie, sister to Mrs Meyrick, said the horse was quite in good condition when he saw it in August.

Thomas Matthew Ingles, of Forfarshire, veterinary surgeon to the Board of Agriculture, said that on March 2nd he had examined the horse in question. He found both hocks sound. His opinion was that "once a curb always a curb." The bones were prominent, but this was not malformation. It was a common thing to be found in blood horses, and did not affect the soundness of the animal.

John James Ridley, M.R.C.V.S., veterinary surgeon to the East Riding Yeomanry, and James J. Dean, veterinary surgeon, Bishop Auckland, gave similar evidence to the last witness.

Mr Harry Wray, in addressing his Honour, contended that the horse was fit and well when it was delivered. This was borne out by the certificate of soundness that was obtained prior to its despatch. He would not suggest for one moment that anything wrong had been wilfully done to the animal.

His Honour, in giving his decision, said it was one of those cases in which there had been a misunderstanding between the parties, and one on which it was very difficult to decide. It would have been better if Mr Wray had had a jury. It was, he thought, unfortunate that the case should have been imposed upon him (the Judge). It should have been tried in Dundee. With respect to the witnesses on either side, he said there was a direct conflict of evidence. After carefully reviewing the evidence, he found for the defendants on the claim and on the counter claim, with special costs.

Mothers' Union.—A meeting in connection with the Monk Fryston branch of the Mothers' Union was held in the Concert Hall on Monday, when an address was given by Miss Sharp, of the Church of England Zenana Missionary Society. Mrs Hemsworth presided over a fairly good gathering. Tea was subsequently partaken of.

The Late Mr Kirkman.—The death took place on Thursday evening of Mr Robert Kirkman, farmer and miller, of Monk Fryston, who had been in failing health for some time. Deceased was in his 63rd year, and was a native of South Milford. He leaves a widow and three sons to mourn his loss. The funeral took place at Monk Fryston Cemetery on Sunday in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends. The following were the chief mourners:—Mrs Kirkman (widow), Mr and Mrs F. Kirkman (son and daughter-in-law), Mr and Mrs Thos. Kirkman (son and daughter-in-law), Mr and Mrs B. Kirkman (son and daughter-in-law), Mr and Mrs Johnson (Thornton Dale), Mr and Mrs F. Fawcett (York), Mrs Williams and Mrs A. Fawcett (Leeds). The service was conducted by the Rev. W. M. C. Clarke (vicar of Monk Fryston).

MR. THOS. ISON,

OCULIST and AURIST.

THIS INSTITUTION was ESTABLISHED in 1871. The system of working is the provident one, each patient paying a small periodical fee whilst under treatment, and they say, therefore, justly expect to receive the prompt care and attention which is only to be had in institutions where the charges are moderate. In charitable institutions is too often omitted. The treatment is of a mild and safe character, without operation or the use of Ear Trumpets, Ear Cornets or other mechanical or painful appliances. Another advantage appertaining to this dispensary is its system of treatment by correspondence, by which sufferers at long distances, and in isolated positions can have the advantage of MR ISON'S advice and remedies forwarded through the post. No case is undertaken unless there be a reasonable hope of cure, or benefit to the patient.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT JOTTINGS.

When the tramway schemes were promoted in the district a few years ago it was thought that all the colliery villages would be linked up with Leeds and Castleford, but it will apparently be a long time ithe itself. before such a scheme is carried out. It was imagined that a line would be laid from Castleford to Garforth, tapping Allerton Bywater, Preston, Bowers Allerton, and Kippax, and that this would be linked up with a line through Swillington and Oulton to Rothwell. It may come off some day, and by that time Leeds Corporation will likely be prepared to extend their tram line to Garforth Bridge.

It was, of course, definitely arranged that the Wakefield Tramway Co. should serve the Oulton district, but as soon as they completed their Rothwell line they tried to get rid of further obligations. The Board of Trade are, however, holding them to their scheme, but, having regard to the manner in which they have tried to shuffle out of their obligations, there appears to be little prospect of the Wakefield Co. making the line.

About a month ago, when Hunslet District Council reported that the Local Government Board desired to consult them with respect to sanctioning a loan for Halton sewage works, it was suggested in this journal that Leeds Corporation had been interfering, and the shot was not wide of the mark. The Corporation apparently hope to annex Templenewsam, and they, naturally, do not wish to see a large loan sanctioned, because the city ratepayers would have to pay for it.

This is an old game, and the Corporation are quite hands at it. It will be remembered that they interfered with Crossgates and the granting of a loan for the carrying out of the Kiddal scheme, and my only regret is that the proposal was not carried out by the District Council, because the Corporation would have had nearly every farthing of it to pay, following the annexation of Crossgates. As it is, I fancy they will have a tidy sum to hand over to the District Council.

Hunslet District Council do not intend to allow their area to be annexed, and they have already protested against the Halton sewage scheme—that is part of the game—being included in the Crossgates town-planning scheme. That is an impudent proposal, and it will, I hope, meet with the defeat it deserves. Leeds, with small local authorities the Corporation, I suppose, expect to wear them down, but when Leeds makes another thieving raid it will find a stronger opposition than ever. A City Corporation, who add to thieving thousands of pounds yearly into the gutter, are surely no efficient substitute for a local Council.

Ambulance workers connected with the Aberfordia League honoured Dr. Pickersgill, of Sherburn, the other night, and in doing so they honoured themselves. Throughout the North of England Dr. Pickersgill's name is familiar to ambulance workers, and he has done more than any one in the district to popularise and extend the movement. Long before the Aberfordia League was heard of, he was a force in the movement, and his work among railway men, for competition among whom he presented a trophy at York, is bearing fruit to this day. It is not often that a medical man troubles himself so much about the instruction of others, and he has the goodwill and gratitude of hosts of ambulance students.

One result of the Housing and Town Planning Act has been the institution of a house-to-house inspection in Tadcaster rural area. Of course, it's impossible to cover all the parishes in one year, but the work goes steadily on, and the record for the last twelve months is interesting. Closing orders were made in respect of six dwellings, in 103 cases houses or surroundings had sanitary defects, 28 houses were excessively damp, 11 had insufficient light and ventilation, 4 were in a filthy condition, 52 had defective drainage, and 16 had backyards in bad condition.

The birth-rate in Tadcaster rural area is going the wrong way with a vengeance. At one time it used to be well over 30, but since it became fashionable to have smaller families and fewer responsibilities, the rate has steadily fallen, and in 1913 it was 24.6, or 2 per thousand less than that of any previous year. Kippax and Allerton Bywater, with rates of 29.4 and 29.6 respectively, had the best returns.

The town of Tadcaster had the distinction of having the lowest infantile mortality, being 77 against 124 for the whole district. Kippax, however, stands well with 106, so it would seem that great care has been exercised in regard to child life in these places. On the other hand, Allerton Bywater had the unenviable distinction of having the highest death-rate among infants, being 216.

It is evident that all is not well at Allerton Bywater, and the medical officer remarks that this parish "with its bad condition of streets and rows of privy middens, compares very unfavourably with other parts of the district." In a contemporary a comparison is made between Leeds and Sheffield, and it is remarked that "the experience of Sheffield is that a remarkable decrease in infantile mortality follows where back streets and courtyards are properly paved or asphalted." Improvements must be carried out at Allerton Bywater.

The Rector of Bilbrough put forward a novel contention at Tadcaster Petty Sessions on Monday. He was summoned for non-payment of rates, and while admitting his liability, he stated that it was unfair his tithe should be taxed cheery mannerisms and clever burlesques are a for the benefit of the land, and the tithe apparently comes from land, and the farmer pays rates on it, so that is one tax, and then the clergyman has to pay a rate on the Kippax claims to be a health resort, and, while it is not asserted that the residents manage to cheat Father Time, they dodge the Scythe Man so long that he is probably wearied of the hunt here he bags his game. Tadcaster rural district had a death-rate of 12.9—the lowest recorded—but Kippax went much better than that, and came out top with 9.8—probably the lowest figures ever got for a large parish in the area.

It is somewhat singular that Tadcaster, with the lowest infantile mortality in the Union, had the second highest death-rate, viz., 14.2, while Allerton Bywater was even worse with 17. It is difficult to account for the high figure in Tadcaster, but it is evident that while the Calcarians are looking well after their bairns, they are not exercising that care over themselves that is desirable

What will Sherburn do now? Owing to the Leeds to Doncaster water scheme having been dropped, the Tadcaster District Council will have to find other means of supplying Sherburn with water, and the County Council are pressing them to do something. A good local scheme would meet the necessities of the case, but it seems impossible to convince the Council that they have better water in the area running to waste than could be fetched from outside the district.

For a number of years the parish meeting was held at Barwick, but so little interest had the ratepayers in it that they declined to recognise it, and it was accordingly transferred to Scholes, where a number of ratepayers could always be depended upon to turn up and ventilate any grievance they had. Now it has been decided to revert to the old arrangement, and it is rather surprising, seeing the people of Barwick have in the past practically ignored the meeting.

Perhaps the education authority will take the hint! At Bowers Allerton a speaker stated that instruction in mining was provided in the villages, but it was suitable for the official class only, and as only a small proportion of miners could hope to be officials, what was really wanted was instruction for workingmen. The suggestion is a good one, but it is doubtful that many men would seek to profit by such education.

For several years the question of the acquisition of a recreation ground for Kippax has been before the public, but every attempt to secure a few acres of land has been defeated. The squire, for some reason, is not inclined to meet the desires of the residents, and other landowners have not been sufficiently generous to offer to rent or sell a field. In order to ascertain the opinion of the ratepayers a canvass of the village is being made, and if it is favourable I presume the parish meeting will instruct the Council to prepare and carry out a scheme.

Owing to the great increase in motor traffic on the roads the provision of playgrounds has become more and more important. In nearly every local village the children, for want of a better place, are compelled to play in the streets, and they are faced by two dangers. Motor traffic is one, and the execution of law and order is the other. Street games are illegal, and a good many boys have been prosecuted locally for playing in the streets.

Mothers in Tadcaster rural area should note the fact that the infantile death-rate was above the average, being 124 against 109 for the whole country, and this is, in a measure, attributed to the prevalence of diarrhœa, which caused 23 infant deaths. Nearly a double score of these deaths could have been prevented by careful feeding.

On Saturday Shadwell lads had a football match with Harehills boys, and it was drawn—a good each.

Mrs Rosalie Mary Barran, of Shadwell Grange, wife of Mr Henry Barran, of Messrs John Barran and Sons, wholesale clothiers, of Leeds, left £13,089.

Stourton—On Saturday afternoon Roundhay hockey players defeated Cleckheaton by four goals to two. In a lacrosse match Roundhay overcame Moorland O.B. by 27 goals to three.

The Beanshaw Moor Hunt have not held point-to-point races for some years, but they will be held this year on Tuesday next, in the neighbourhood of Harewood Bridge. There will be four races, including one for the Royal Scots Greys.

SELBY WIDOW'S SAD WEATH.—At an inquest at Selby on Saturday afternoon Mary Boyle (68), a widow, who was severely injured through her clothing taking fire while she was cooking her son's breakfast, Dr. Scantell said the woman's daughter, who was ill in bed, risked her own life in order to save her mother. The woman was shockingly injured. A verdict of "Accidental death" was returned.

SELBY CONSERVATIVE WEEKLY WHIST DRIVE.—Another very successful whist drive took place in the Club on Tuesday evening. So ladies and gentlemen taking part. Mr R. Lodge officiated as M.C. The following were the prize-winners:—Ladies—1 Mrs B. Cartwright, 2 Miss G. H. Braithwaite; 3 Mrs. Whiteley; consolation, Mrs Maddox (after tie with Mrs Murrell). Gents—1, Mr W. Stabler; 2, J. M. Bramrose; 3 Mr W. Thornton (after tie with Mr Harvey); consolation, Mr E. G. Jackson. Light refreshments were handed round during the interval.

AMUSEMENTS.

LEEDS EMPIRE PALACE.

At the Empire this week George Mozart's feature, and he causes great amusement, first by "taking off" several types of theatre goers and then by burlesquing a problem play. His characterisations are faithful enough to be readily recognisable, and ludicrous enough to justify the raison d'etre of Mozart's art. A most laughable feature of his performance is his ingenious caricature of a picture drama entitled "Hunted Down." An excellent performance is given by Florrie Forde, whose reputation as a great chorus singer is likely to be enhanced with the trio of songs she is offering. Even at the first "house" on Monday night she persuaded her audience to join heartily in the refrains and ask for more, and that of course is the real test. The McNaughtons contribute an amusing flow of cross-patter, and other good turns are those of the Four Holloways (expert trick cyclists), and Mabel Ada and Fred Allendale ("the soldier and the girl.").

"Fifteen years ago, or even more. George Lashwood had no rival as a light comedian." This was the opinion of all the best judges of music-hall talent. Vaudeville has seen many changes in popular taste since then, and many stars have come and gone, but Mr Lashwood, who will be at the Leeds Empire on Monday next, occupies the same lofty pinnacle to-day as surely as ever. He is making a great hit at the present time with a number describing how the famous burlesque company, entitled "The Grotesques," presented by Mr Philip Braham. "The Grotesques" burlesque everything from record comedy to melodrama and tragedy, and further, they have the credit of being absolutely original and up-to-date, even so far as to present an entertainment which might possibly be called revue.

Others in a strong list of entertainers are Howard and Harris, featuring "The Tramp and the Soubrette"; Thora, in an entirely new and novel ventriloquial entertainment; Edith Fink, a dainty comedienne; Lewis Douglas, eccentric comedian and dancer; Victor and Louis, cyclists; the Delevines, in their latest skit, "An Interrupted Serenade"; and Little Ganty, "the little lump of fun."

LEEDS HIPPODROME.

If on no other ground than the excellence of the performance given by the artists who have just completed their pantomime contracts in Leeds, the programme at the Leeds Hippodrome this week would be of unusual merit. The fact that Miss Daisy Wood, Mr Reg. Bolton, and Mr Sam Wallah are among the performers will be sufficient recommendation, but there is, too, another excellent turn by Jimmy Learmouth and the company with whom he appears. This comedian has delighted Leeds audiences on several previous occasions. This time he appears in a new sketch into which he introduces quite as much fun as he put into the others. He has lost none of the mannerisms which mean so much in his show, and there is not a moment of dullness while he is on the stage. Among others on the bill are Gilbert Payne (comedian), Watson and Barker (duettists), Fred Gray and Nellie Graham (in "The Musical Bell Boy"), and Renee de Banga (in art scenas).

At the Hippodrome next week one of the outstanding attractions will be "Scenes from Wild Australia." Carlton, the comic juggler, will appear in "Hypnotism," and the Cuban Wonder, Maximo, the inebriate on the slack wire, will give an interesting turn. The Gleesons and Houlihan promise something good in the music and dancing line, introducing Bertha Gleeson, described as the champion lady dancer of America. Others who will contribute to the entertainment are Mary Moran, in her character works, emotions and saulies from life; Spessel Bros. and Mack, in "An American Quick Lunch"; the Oakes Comedy Duo, and Hippodrome pictures.

LEEDS QUEEN'S THEATRE.

Though there have been many divergences of opinion as to the advisability of producing the much-discussed "Sapho" at the Queen's Theatre this week, it must be confessed that little is seen in performances which even the most modest could take exception. Daudet's famous novel, as is well-known, is a powerful love romance, and if its individuality is to be preserved the book must be followed fairly closely. The incidents of the main story in this version are certainly less objectionable than some of the few humorous "fill-ups" which are intended as a relief to the pathetic element. Mrs Frank Bateman plays the title-role superbly; while Mr Fred W. Goddard is almost as successful in the part of Jean Guessin. They are well supported by a capable all-round company.

To-night (Friday) "Between Two Men" is to be staged, with Miss Bateman as Mrs Wakefield, and Mr Goddard in the part of the Rev. Geo. Wright.

Next week at the Queen's Theatre Mr Charles Watson Mill's Repertory Co., including a number of well-known artistes, will appear. On Monday, Tuesday, and Saturday the great morality play "A Warning to Women" will be submitted; on Wednesday and Thursday, "The Love of the Princess"; and on Friday night "For Love and the King."

LEEDS CITY VARIETIES.

At the Varieties this week a popular attraction is a sketch, "The Washing House Key," which tops the bill, and is produced by Miss Mollie Lindsay and Company. The scene is laid in a tenement house in Glasgow, and comical situations press close upon one another's heels. Elton and Elma are amusing in their triple-bar act, and the Lightning Vinettos, comedy jugglers, contribute to the evening's fun. Miss Olive Plant possesses a fine voice, and others appearing with success are Norton and Dean, and Fred Musson, a local comedian, with one or two good songs.

Next week at the Varieties the principal attraction will be the picture showing the great fight at the Palladium, London, between Bombardier Wells and Bandsman Blake. Agda and Co. will figure in a continental novelty comedy act, and other turns promised are Goodall and Knox, burlesque comedians; Nora Martyn, descriptive soprano vocalist; Harold Heath, vocalist and eccentric dancer; and Bunny and Tafft, in an original comedy and instrumental scena; the pictures "The Race" and "Big Ben of the Sierras" will also be depicted by the Variescope.

THEATRE DE LUXE.

At the Leeds Theatre de Luxe the star attraction for all this week, except Saturday, is "In the Hands of London Crooks," the great all-British sporting drama, replete with incident, and although the theme of a young man's trials in bad hands and his ultimate vindication is not new it has never before been so effectively portrayed. The musical accompaniment is worthy of special mention. "Small Town Act," "Schewers," with John Burny, "Brummer's Narrow Escape," and Pathe's Gazette are equally entertaining in a lighter vein.

On Saturday an entirely new programme will be shown.

LEEDS GRAND THEATRE.

Miss Lilish McCarthy and Mr Granville Barker's company in "The Great Adventure," by Arnold Bennett, is to visit the Grand Theatre next week. The play comes direct from the Kingsway Theatre, where it is now, and has been running for nearly a year. So great is the interest that it is likely to go on indefinitely. The story of "The Great Adventure" has been taken from the author's famous novel "Buried Alive." It deals with a master and his valet. The valet is ill, the master goes to the doctor—"in his shirt sleeves," as he says. From this simple little act, mistakes and complications arise. Every situation is handled by the author in an exceedingly original and humorous way. Each scene is a surprise, and the dialogue is brilliantly witty throughout.

CENSURE ON HUNSLET DISTRICT COUNCIL.

THE CLERK'S SALARY.

The action of the Hunslet Rural District Council in raising the salary of the Clerk (Mr W. B. Pindar) by £30 was the subject of discussion at the annual parish meeting at Woodlesford on Tuesday night.

Mr T. H. Killingbeck proposed the following resolution:—"That this meeting is of the opinion that the Hunslet Rural District Council is very extravagant with regard to the salary of its Clerk." He protested, he said, against such extravagances. Those who had from time to time read the minutes of the Hunslet Rural District Council noticed that the lower paid employees had been applying for an increase of their wages—the lamplighters and the roadmen. What they first got. They found that the applications of the lamplighters had been refused, while the roadmen had had their wages slightly increased; but the Clerk, a well-paid official for a part time office, with two other positions, making it more remunerative, had received an advance of over 10s. per week. They also found the Council went into committee on the matter, and the Clerk was offered £20. He refused it, and the matter was again discussed, and he had received an advance of £30. They as ratepayers should not be treated in this manner. He had no objection to it. He had talked to many people on the matter and found that even members of the Parish Council did not know of it. Further, he was of the opinion the Council was too small. He thought it abominable. (Applause).

Mr F. Owen asked what the Clerk had done to have the extra £30? Were they as ratepayers getting value for their money?

The resolution was seconded by Mr A. Smith, and carried without a dissentient.

A meet of the Bramham Moor Hounds took place on Saturday morning in the historic grounds of Cawood Castle, near Selby, and there was a large gathering. A most enjoyable run followed.

ST PATRICK'S DAY AT SELBY.—The infants of St. Mary's Catholic Schools gave a cantata "Who shall be Queen?" at the Selby Public Baths on Tuesday night. In addition there was a programme of miscellaneous items by the school children and older girls of the congregation. Large audience attended and made a profuse display of green in honour of St. Patrick's Day. The programme, which was very enjoyable, concluded with the entertaining dramatic sketch "The Rehearsal." The accompanists were Mrs Whitfield and Messrs Knox, Campbell, and Jones. A dance followed the concert.

A BURN MAY'S PROPERTY.—John Davies (20), pony driver, was indicted at Leeds Assizes on a charge of setting fire to a stack of corn, the property of William Hardwood, of Burn, at Chapel Haddlesey, on February 6th. He had been committed from the Selby Petty Sessions. The jury found accused guilty. The Judge (to accused): I should like to know why you did this, because it would help me. Accused, who appeared either stubborn or unconcerned by the proceedings, only nodded his head in reply. The Judge: But if you don't want to tell me, you need not. Do you wish to say anything to me as to why you did it? Accused preserved silence, and the Judge called for the Prison Governor, who was, however, absent from Court. The Judge ordered accused to stand down until the Governor returned. Later on accused was sentenced to three years' detention under the Borstal system.

OUR GARDENS.

A Weekly Article specially Written for

Amateur Gardeners, Allotment Holders, &c.

By ALBERT CLARKE, Birkenshaw.

THE FLOWER GARDEN.

Slugs and snails are proving very troublesome this year. They are very partial to the delicate young growths of delphiniums, peonies, and other herbaceous perennials just breaking through the soil. There are many excellent remedies, mostly soil fumigants. Handpicking is the most reliable method of dealing with them. They usually commence operations immediately darkness sets in, and a simple means of trapping them is to place small boxes of bran in large numbers to the borders, and by the aid of a good lamp they may easily be detected. They are partial to meal worms, and such methods are advised where by they may be reduced, the trouble will increase.

GLADIOLI.

The bright red GLADIOLI Brenchleyensis is known to almost everyone interested in flowers, and is extremely popular. The children and big gardener alike delight in its showy spikes of gay flowers which are not so well known, but are equally worthy of attention. They give a variety of shades and colours, and their cultivation is very simple. All the gladioli family like a warm, sheltered position, and the soil should be light and open. Heavy soils may be improved by freely adding sand when digging. Bulb mould also has a tendency to lighten the soil. Plenty of manure should be placed in the trenches when digging, as the flower spike requires plenty of food to build it up to the splendid proportions which the strong corms possess. When planting double the amount of bulb mould to the top of the old ones will be weak and unsatisfactory if liberal supplies of food are not available. It is quite safe to plant the corms at the end of March, and each one should be placed on a small heap of sand. The best effect is obtained by massing them in separate colours. When this is done they should be placed about 6 to 8 inches apart. In small borders they should be planted quite 4 inches below the surface. During a dry summer it is imperative that regular attention be given to watering, and any little extra attention in the shape of liquid feeding will be amply repaid by the production of finer flower spikes. There are numerous choice named varieties, some of them so cheap as to come within the reach of all.

VEGETABLES.

PEAS.

A sowing of early peas may now be made on a warm border. On light soils the seed may be sown in drills in the ordinary way, but on heavy land it is an advantage to sow it on the surface, and draw the soil over it from each side. Sow rather thickly for early cropping. The following are good early varieties:—The Pilot, Early Bountiful, English Wonder, Peter, Early Bountiful, English Wonder, William First, and Sherwood. It is advisable to dress the seed with red lead before sowing. Moisten the seed with paraffin, place in a suitable box, and sprinkle with lead, and shake vigorously.

A USEFUL BRUSSELS SPROUT.

There are numerous varieties of Brussels sprouts, many of which have been grown with success for years. The Wroxton, Dalkeith, Aigburth, Wools Colossal, and Stanton's Exhibition are all good standard varieties, but none of them can compare with the variety known as the Darlington Sprout. This was introduced by a Darlington firm of seedsmen a few years ago, and has proved useful alike for table and exhibition purposes. It grows to a medium height and is densely covered with firm, large sprouts. Seed may be sown in boxes in a cool house or cold frame. Prick off whilst the seedlings are quite small. Grow as easily as possible, consistent with the exclusion of frost, and plant out about the third or fourth week in May according to the state of the soil and the weather. We have previously alluded to the preparation of the soil for sprouts. Newly manured ground will cause the plants to grow strongly, and during the summer months they give promise of a large crop. Unfortunately, appearances often prove deceptive, and it is so in this case. The strongest plants usually fail to "button" properly, and form dense masses of "rosettes" instead of sprouts. Last year's celery patch, or ground that was heavily manured for potatoes, will grow excellent sprouts without further additions of manure. Dig deeply, and break the ground up well. Plant firm, and about a yard apart.

POTATOES.

The earliest varieties should now be sprouting freely. If not already done, they should be stood upright in boxes, with the eyes uppermost. March is usually given as the best time for planting, but on heavy soils, and in cold districts, it is advisable to delay the planting of main crop varieties until April. For the earliest crop Myatt's Ashleaf, Sharp's Victor, and Eclipse are good. Plant in rows 2 feet apart, and a foot from each other in the rows. The later and stronger growing varieties require 2½ inches from row to row and about 18 inches apart in the row. Good maincrop varieties are The Factor, Northern Up-to-date, Duchess of Cornwall, and British Queen.

PLANTS UNDER GLASS.

A GOOD SINGLE PETUNIA.

Messrs Sutton have a single violet coloured Petunia which we can recommend either for pot culture or bedding out in the open. Apparently it is easily raised from seed, and remains in flower for a considerable period. The rich violet flowers are large and firm, and under give-and-take treatment the plants attain a huge size. Seed may be sown now in a warm house, and the seedlings should be potted into small pots when large enough to handle. Grow on as required until 7 or 8-inch pots are reached, using a compost of three parts fibrous loam, one part rotten manure, and sufficient sand to make the whole porous. Add a few times to cause the plants to grow bushy.

CROTONS.

Crotons require a high temperature and plenty of moisture, and a fair amount of sunshine to develop the rich colours of the foliage. Croton leaves are much in demand in the floral trade, being largely used for backing up the flowers in wreaths and other floral designs. The potting compost should consist of fibrous loam, leaf mould, a little well rotted manure, and sand. A sprinkling of basic slag may be added if available. The temperature during the winter months should not fall below 60°, and may rise to 70 degrees. A humid atmosphere is essential to success, and during spring, summer, and autumn over head spraying, damping down of floors, walls, and staging, and a constant supply of water in the evaporating troughs will all tend towards keeping the plants in good health. Cuttings root freely in a compost of sand and leaf mould providing they can be plunged in a bottom heat of 80 to 90°. Tarp and red spider are rather troublesome, but may be kept in check by fumigation and an occasional sponging with fir tree oil.

DRACOENAS.

The coloured-leaved dracoenas are very popular fashionable plants and are largely used for table decoration. They are propagated in various ways. A tall plant with a naked stem will produce plenty of propagating material. The top may be rooted in sandy soil. The stems may be cut into lengths of about 3 inches, laid on a bed of cocoanut fibre, and covered to the depth of about half an inch. From the base of the stem a number of eyes or "buds" as they are termed in garden parlance, usually develop. These may be detached and plunged in the propagating frame, which should be supplied with bottom heat in addition to the usual stove temperature. From the buried stems a number of young shoots will spring up, and these should be allowed to remain until they form roots of their own. They may then be potted into small pots and should be returned to the propagating frame until the roots commence to work in the soil. For this potting equal parts loam, peat, sand, and leaf-mould may be used. This may be obtained through a fine sieve. When large enough put on, using fresh pots. For this potting double the amount of loam and add a sprinkling of bone-meal and crushed charcoal.

FERNS.

Ferns are very popular as greenhouse and table plants, and nearly all do nicely in a mixture of fibrous turf, loam, and sand, provided ample drainage is given. Peat, leafmould and sphagnum moss have more to do with success in growing ferns than has any particular compost of soils, though clay soils should be avoided. Abundant drainage material in the bottom of the pot prevents the effects of over-watering; but the soil must not be allowed to become waterlogged. All ferns need protection from direct sunshine and from winds, and do best in a moist atmosphere.

Many wild native ferns do nicely if moved from their natural habit to the garden, and there set in a shady, moist position. Such plants should be dressed with leaf-mould in autumn.

UNCLAIMED MONEY

INTERESTING CHAPEL ALLERTON CASE.

The solicitors of the Leeds, Skipton and Morley Savings Bank has furnished the following particulars of an interesting case of a dormant deposit which has just been dealt with.

In 1876 (so runs the story) a small sum of money was lodged in the bank in trust for the "Chapel Town Cholera Fund," and the account continued to be worked until 1849, the balance then standing to the credit of the fund being £10 17s. 6d. Subsequently £20 was advertised with a view of making the money bring in still handing proof of own rights.

The Vicar and churchwardens of the parish of Chapel Allerton, having heard of the matter, made application for the money to be handed over to them for the benefit of the Chapel Allerton District Nursing Society—an institution which is devoted to the relief of all the sick and ailments of the neighbourhood, irrespective of religious distinctions, and with the assistance and support of the Committee of the Bank, succeeded in establishing their claim to the satisfaction of the Chief Clerk, who has decided by how to determine to whom savings bank deposits shall be repaid when any uncertainty exists.

This fund will, therefore, after lying for many years forgotten and unused (but by no means unfruitful), be applied to an object very similar to that for which it was originally intended, and this is but one of many instances of the care taken by the Leeds, Skipton and Morley Savings Bank to ensure the proper return of moneys entrusted to its safe keeping, however long ought to any additional recommendation to those who are seeking a means of investing their savings in a manner which combines absolute security with a fair rate of interest and ready means of withdrawal, all of which advantages are offered by the Bank.

PROFITABLE POULTRY CULTURE.

A SUCCESSFUL BREEDING SEASON.

[Readers are particularly requested to note that this series of articles commenced with the first issue in January. In order to obtain their full value, the earlier articles should be read in conjunction with the current one].

A NOTE OF WARNING.

I have frequently met with cases of utter failure through carelessness in the collection, packing, and preservation of eggs. Frequently for ill-success the birds are blamed, or aspersions cast upon climatic conditions, when investigation would show the carelessness on the part of the attendant was the cause of the failure.

COLLECTION OF EGGS.

I strongly advocate that eggs intended for incubation should be collected twice per diem. This practice is enforced by many during the summer weather, so as to prevent broody hens sitting, including before collection. If they are only collected once daily this frequently happens, rendering them useless for hatching, and destroying one's reputation if marketed for edible purposes. Frost, however, is so destructive to fertility that I am as keen on the second collection in winter months as during more genial weather.

EFFECTS OF FROST AND COLD ON EGGS.

The germs of eggs subjected to frost is invariably destroyed. This fact is known to nearly every poultry-keeper; but what is not so generally known and which is of equal importance, is the fact that the germs of eggs subjected to any temperature between 40 deg. Fahr. is either so weakened as to produce dead in shell or totally destroyed, according to the duration of the exposure.

SELECTION OF EGGS TO BE INCUBATED.

Having collected our eggs, there is a percentage of them which can be immediately rejected as unsuitable or hatching purposes; all abnormally large and small eggs, misshapen, thin-shelled, and dirty eggs should be put aside for other purposes, as they are unlikely to be satisfactory for our present needs. In other words, select only those for setting which are well shaped, smooth, and strong in shell. At this point it is advisable to remember that the egg-shell is porous, and if the porosity is destroyed, it is impossible for the germ to be developed and finally hatched. Consequently, it is incumbent to carefully remove any dirt that may have accumulated on the shell. Of unfitness in the nests, however, makes this of rare occurrence.

PRESERVATION OF EGGS TO BE INCUBATED.

Having selected our eggs, they may be stored in an ordinary rack, or a bed of bran, or wooden trays, in any suitable store-room, provided the temperature does not fall below 40 deg., and for preference does not rise about 60 deg. It is a common mind that eggs should be gently turned two or three times a week, and undoubtedly it is beneficial. At the same time, if the eggs are put aside to be used several months the sooner they are used for this purpose the better will be the result. I am not disputing that eggs have to be stored for weeks and then hatched. I only claim the good results under these conditions are the exceptions which prove the rule; and, further, that the fresher your eggs when placed in the incubator, the better will be your results, with a confidence level equal. I am sure that the most hard-pressed controversialist will not attempt to argue about. More latitude as regards time can be extended when the hen is to be employed, or the same time the rule just given also applied to them as well as to the incubator. At a later point I shall again touch on this subject, as it is one of the arguments which convinces me that it is better to have a number of mid-rate-sized incubators than a lesser number of machines of greater capacity.

I have been asked several times this season to state how long eggs can be kept before setting. No practical benefit is to be gained, in my opinion, by laying down a hard and fast rule, Remember the ideal when artificial means are employed is to use new-laid eggs entirely. This, however, is rarely practicable, but the less you depart from the ideal the better should be your results. Personally, I like eggs as fresh as the incubator over a week old, and do not like setting them when over four days old. When hens are employed the poultry-keeper is no longer master of the situation; thus in the matured pullet when her ladyship deigns to become broody we can set our eggs till then we must wait her pleasure.

A MORLEY CASE OF TUBERCULOUS GLANDS CURED.

57, Commercial Street,
Morley,
Nr. Leeds, 10th July, 1913.

Mr Crossawaite,

Dear Sir,—

I beg to write you a line to express our thankfulness for the spl ndid cure you have made of our son.

We had almost given up in despair the idea that his face would ever be right again, but thanks to your treatment, during the time he has been under your care, we could see week by week a gradual improvement, and now the cure is complete—beyond all expectation.

I am sure we are more than satisfied and our only regret is that we did not come to you twelve months sooner.

I shall always feel proud to recommend any similar case to you.

Yours truly,
WM. D. HOLROYD.

BARKSTON ASH LIBERALISM

MEETING AT WETHERBY.

SPEECH BY MR E. SHORTT, K.C., M.P.

Under the auspices of the Barkston Ash Division Liberal Association a public meeting was held in the Town Hall at Wetherby on Tuesday evening, and an address was delivered by Mr Edward Shortt, K.C., M.P., for Newcastle-on-Tyne.

Mr J. Pearson, of Wetherby, presided, and he was supported by Mr E. H. Foster, J.P., C.C. (president of the Liberal Association for the Division), Mrs Foster, Mr F. W. Sutcliffe, Captain Glover, Mr Alder, Mr Ellis, Mr Hudson, and other gentlemen.

THE GOVERNMENT'S RECORD.

Mr Shortt said that if any Government ever deserved the confidence of the country it was the present Government. They had been in power since 1906, and what was their record? They found a heavy National Debt as the result of the South African War, and they had paid, or would pay off by the end of the year, something approaching £100,000,000 of that debt. In addition, they had relieved local taxes to the extent of £5,000,000 per annum, and they had met extra expenditure for the Army and Navy, the cost of old-age pensions, labour exchanges, and National Insurance. Let them contrast the position of the child of the labourer with what it was when the Liberal Government came into power. The first thing that happened was the maternity benefit to the mother (applause), and that kept the mother in health while she was responsible for the infant's health. Then it became a young child, and by means of the Children's Charter it was protected right to the age when it began to work. The young man was insured right up to the age of 70, and if he belonged to certain trades—ship-building, engineering, etc.—he was insured against unemployment as well. Then when he came to old age if he had not been sufficiently fortunate to save enough money to live upon, instead of going to the workhouse, he drew an old age pension. (Applause). There were thousands of old people in the country to-day who would be suffering the degradation of the workhouse if it were not for the old age pension. The labouring man and the labouring man's child were better off to-day than they were when the Government came into power. In this country they had a certain feeling of independence, and their self-respect was touched if they felt they were dependent on charity, but the old-age pension was not charity. Every man who had done his duty as a soldier of industry took his pension as a right, with the same feeling as the old soldiers and sailors took their pensions from the Army and Navy. (Applause).

WORKING OF THE INSURANCE ACT.

So far as the Insurance Act was concerned he should be the last to suggest that it was without fault or flaw. It was by far the greatest constructive experiment that any country had tried. The German insurance scheme was nothing compared with it. They carried it out, and what they said from the beginning was that faults it must have, but they would never find them them out by theoretical discussion but by working it in practice. What was the result? He gave certain complaints that had been made to the Government, and said that in the cases he had examined the fault was not with the Act or the regulations, but with the people who would not insist upon those rights which it was to carry it out during their duty. (Applause). If people would insist upon the Act being carried out on per cent of the cases would disappear to-morrow. How many people were insured who would never have been insured but for the Act? Between ten and eleven millions. He believed that those who lived 20 years would hear the Insurance Act blessed as the finest piece of legislation that they had seen.

DISESTABLISHMENT—PLURAL VOTING.

He said Home Rule had been before the country at two elections, and Welsh Disestablishment and Plural Voting at three elections. He quoted Mr Lamington as stating that Mr Asquith had made it perfectly clear that the first use of the Parliament Act would be to pass Home Rule. (Hear, hear). He was a member of the Church of England, the son of a clergyman, and he held that disestablishment would be the salvation of the Church of England. Once they could make their own laws—once they had home rule in the Church—they would strengthen their position and revive their work. What he said was "Give us our freedom." (Applause). As for plural voting, could any sensible man suppose that it was a true principle of democracy that one man should have ten votes and another man only one? It had worked against them in past years, and the Liberal and Tories had been able to fight them with loaded dice, but they were going to unload the dice. (Applause).

HOME RULE QUESTION.

He stated that in this country there were some people who considered that there was grave danger in Home Rule, and they had not lost all their distrust in the Irish people, thinking that if they were given the control of the Irish Channel would become a centre of danger to the Empire. It was astonishing to him that any such feeling should exist. When they dealt with the troubled state of Ireland prior to 1886, and said that since then the country had got more contented and peop-rous. There was only one reason for that. The great generous-minded people appreciated the fact that at last one of the great English parties had awakened to the justice of their cause—had recognised the national spirit of Ireland, and sent that spirit to the people of the Empire that that spirit should be allowed free play. (Applause). If they were back to 1910, when an attempt was made by conference to settle the question of the House of Lords, what was the question taken up by leading Unionists? They wanted to obtain better terms from the Liberals for the House of Lords, and they did it by offering to them better terms on the question of Home Rule. Would any Tory say that their leaders, prepared to do that in 1910, really thought that what they were doing would injure the Empire? Would any Tory say that their leaders consenting to Home Rule were consenting to something so very bad that it would justify civil war? Of course, he would not.

"SMASH THE PARLIAMENT ACT."

Their great leader, Mr Asquith—(applause)—had gone much further than many of them cared; they disliked the exclusion of Ulster for even six years, but they were prepared to follow him in that if the fundamental principle of the Bill was not interfered with. Their opponents, instead of recognizing that they were trying to meet them, threw up their hands and cl-ared "Now, you are beaten." It was irritating to see people going on like hooligans. (Laughter). He did not believe the Tories had the faintest intention of accepting anything they suggested. They did not care about Ulster and Home Rule, they had no fear for the safety of Ulster. Protestants, or Unionists than in 1910, but they were determined, if they could, to smash the Parliament Act, and the Liberals were determined that they should do no such thing. (Applause). If wicked men preached civil war for a matter which they knew did not justify it, and preached the principle that anything they did not like, no matter what the law of the land might say, they were entitled to use force against it, Mr Asquith might rest satisfied that every Liberal and Labour member would give him full support in any measures he might adopt. (Applause). Supposing the Conservatives were back in power and they brought in a measure to alter the picketing provisions of the Trades Disputes Act, and the Trade Unions said that "Lord Londonderry, Sir Edward Carson, the Duke of Abercorn, and the rich men of Ulster used their wealth to foster civil war, and provided arms, and we are going to use our trade union funds for the same purpose," what would be the answer? They would not have an answer.

THE LAND QUESTION.

After they had done Home Rule, Welsh Disestablishment, and Plural Voting through, the great question they would have to solve would be the land question. It had two aspects—the urban and rural, and they were by no means parted a party who could not do anything for both. Low wages in country districts did them more than anything to bring down wages in urban areas, and the drawing of people from the country into the towns did more than anything to create over-crowding and slums. There were half-a-million fewer workers on the land than there were 30 years ago. In this country 4,000,000 employed on-and-a-half-millions, Germany employed ten millions, and France nine millions in agriculture, and it was no good saying it was due to Tariff Reform and Protection in the one case they could compare this country with lands more like our own—Denmark, the Netherlands, and Belgium. For every 1,000 acres of land used for agricultural purposes in this country, 40 people were employed, Denmark employed 70, the Netherlands 120, and Belgium 166. Why was it? They had as good land and the climate was as good for the purposes of agriculture. It was the iniquitous land system—not the landlords as men—that placed this country at such a disadvantage in agriculture. When a man bought land, in many cases, he not only paid for the value of the land, but also for other things—social position, amenities of sport, etc., which had a value to buyer and seller, but had no value to the community. None of them could get more to eat because a man got a big social position by buying land, or because some one had some well-stocked coverts. When they came to the real value of the land they had to eliminate these things. In this country £25,000,000 was paid for labour, £34,000,000 for rent, and £3,000,000 for tithe. That was not a fair division. They could not do without land and it was limited in quantity, and they must exercise some control over it to ensure that the community as a whole got the best value out of it. He would deal with the proposals to fix a minimum wage for labourers, to provide cottages and land for them, and to give security of tenure to farmers and adequate compensation in cases of disturbance. That constituency was represented by a gentleman against whom no one had a word to say—(applause)—he was honest and sincere in doing his best for the constituency, but if Mr Foster were elected they would have a gentleman against whom no one could say a word, and he would be equally industrious, honest, and sincere in looking after the interests of the constituency. If the present Member supported Conservatives were back in power and they brought in a measure to alter the picketing provisions of the Trades Disputes Act, and the Trade Unions said that "Lord Londonderry, Sir Edward Carson, the Duke of Abercorn, and the rich men of Ulster used their wealth to foster civil war, and provided arms, and we are going to use our trade union funds for the same purpose," what would be the answer? TADCASTER GUARDIANS AND DISTRICT COUNCIL

TENDERS FOR WORKHOUSE AND HOME.

TEAM LABOUR CONTRACTS.

MILFORD, SHERBURN, KIPPAX, AND ALLERTON AFFAIRS.

The fortnightly meeting of Tadcaster Board of Guardians was held on Monday at the workhouse—Mr T. H. Prater (Parlington) presiding. The other members present were Col. Cockburn (Hillthorpe), Messrs. R. Wright (Ryecwick), W. Simpson (Lead), H. M. Stoker (Towton), J. H. Hogg by, J.P., W. Sykes, H. P. Clough, and J. Nettleton (Tadcaster), E. Midgley (Colton), E. Myers (Holbrough), T. P. Fawcett (Austhorpe), W. Birkinshaw (Ledsham), A. Chippindale (Scholes), T. Hey, J. E. Coulthwaite, and J. J. Foster (Sherburn), W. F. Nicholson (Sutton Grange), J. Harding and J. Heaith (Kippax), J. W. Dobson (Newsholme), W. Hudson (Bolton Percy), E. H. Lowe and J. Wadsworth (Ryecon), H. Brabant and H. Green (Garforth), J. H. Schofield (Oxton), J. Peck (Ulleskelf), W. B. Gray (Church Fenton), W. Jackson (Acaster Selby), T. Phillips and Capt. Allerton Bywater), and W. Cresland, J.P., and A. Jonnson (South Milford), with the Clerk (Mr. G. A. Brown).

The treasurer was reported to have a balance of £4,016 in hand.

The master's report showed that during the fortnight there had been three admissions to the house, four discharges, and one death, and the numbers numbered 80 so the workhouse and 18 in the children's home—up against 113 at the corresponding date of last year.

The finance committee's during the two weeks were 28 and 24 against 20 and 23 for the corresponding weeks of last year.

The Finance Committee reported that the tolls for Bilbrough, Kirkby Wharfe, Ledsham, Towton, and Ulleskelf had not been paid, and that proceedings would be taken.

It was, however, stated that the toll for Towton had been paid.

The Finance Committee recommended that Mr. Wilcock, of the London City and Midland Bank, Tadcaster, be appointed treasurer to the Board, and this was adopted.

The chairmen of the Home and Relief Committees were appointed delegates to a conference to be held in Leeds on April 7th.

The following tenders were accepted for supplies to the workhouse:—Meat, Mr. Schofield (Tadcaster); groceries, Mr Holliday (Tadcaster); coal, Micklefield Coal Company; flour, Messrs Rishworth, Ingleby, and Lofthouse; boots, Mr W. Crossley; brushes, Leeds Blind School; drapery, Mr Batty (Garforth); butter, eggs, and bacon, Mr Holliday; drugs, Mr Hull (Tadcaster); milk, Mr Spurling; clothing, Nettleton Bros. (Leeds); and coffins, Mr Grocock.

The following tenders were accepted for supplies to the cottage home at Bilbrough:—Meat, Mr H. S. Bean; groceries, cheese, bacon, and butter, Mr J. Holliday; milk and potatoes, Mr J. Fairclough; flour, Messrs Rishworth, Ingleby, and Lofthouse; coal, Micklefield Coal Co.; clothing and boots, Nettleton Bros.; drapery, Mr Batty; brushes, Leeds Blind Sch.ol.

DISTRICT COUNCIL.

At the meeting of the District Council the officials present were the surveyor (Mr Scott) and the sanitary inspectors (Messrs Driver and Wood). The treasurer was reported to have a bal nce of £6,183 in hand.

The Highways Committee minutes showed that a complaint concerning a gate and fence in Stutton Lane, Tadcaster, standing out was considered, and the Clerk was instructed to write Mr Corcoran that the matter was receiving the attention of the Council.

In regard to the water trough at Colton Lane end, a letter was received from the Water Committee asking as to who was to pay for the water, and it was referred back to the Water Committee, who could communicate with the owner of the trough.

Permission was given to Garforth Gas Co. to open the road in Barwick Lane.

In regard to the proposed improvement at Sherburn Hollins, plans and specifications were submitted, and the Clerk was instructed to write to Mrs Pearson and ask for terms for the land required. The surveyor was also asked to prepare an estimate of the cost.

A letter was read from Allerton Bywater Council asking that the road at Bickerdyke Terrace should be widened, and it was adjourned.

TEAM LABOUR.

The tenders for team labour were accepted as follows:—Mr Flood, Ledsham, and Parkington—Mr J. W. Addy; Acaster Selby, Mr H. Pracious; Allerton Bywater—Mr W. Prince; Appleton Roebuck—Mr W. Marsh; Askham Bryan—Mr W. Lee; Barkston—Mr H. Hudson; Barwick and Scholes—Mr A. Reid; Bilbrough—Mr W. H. Bean; Bolton Percy—Mr W. Marsh; Church Fenton—Mr J. Binns; Colton—Mr G. H. SANITARY AND BUILDING.

At a meeting of the Sanitary and Building Committee plans for two washhouses to be built at Tadcast r were passed. Mr Cox was to be written to in regard to having a portion of a hedge at Allerton Bywater cleansed.

Complaint was made about the deposits of rubbish and paper on land at Schools and Allerton Bywater, and the persons concerned are to be written to and asked to remove the nuisance.

Complaint was made about a nuisance by deposits of rubbish in a backyard at Kippax, and the owners is to be written to. Notice was ordered to be served on a property owner at Church Laine, Kippax, to provide a sink at a house.

A letter was read from Mr Potter asking permission to supply water to a house at Sturton from Garforth, and it was granted.

It was resolved that new manholes be constructed in Common Lane, South Milford, and in one it will be charged to the N.E.R. Co.

A letter was read from the County Council asking as to what was being done in regard to a fresh supplies for Sherburn and South Milford. It was resolved to reply that owing to the Leeds scheme having been dropped they would have to reconsider the question of a supply for Sherburn. With regard to the South Milford supply it was decided to reply that they had had an extension of the present scheme under consideration.

Plans for alterations to a shop front in Kirkgate, Tadcaster, by Messrs John Smith's Co., were passed, and plans for alterations at Fairfield were adjourned.

Plans by Mr S. Smith (Tadcaster) for alterations to a garage were approved.

A letter was received stating that the Joint Committee had appointed Dr. Hall, of Greenhill, medical officer for the Tadcaster rural area at a salary of £300.

CROSSGATES AND DISTRICT FARMERS' CLUB.

CO-OPERATIVE TRADING SOCIETY FORMED.

"SHOOT" IN TEMPLENEWSAM, BARWICK, AND ABERFORD.

A meeting of Crossgates and District Farmers' Club—an organization formed to serve the interests of agriculturists in Templenewsam, Osmondthorpe, Crossgates, Austhorpe, Scholes, Barwick, Scarcroft, Roundhay, Swillington, etc.—was held at the Brown Cow Inn, Whitkirk, on Monday evening—Mr J. M. Rayner, of Whinmoor (Chairman), presiding.

It was stated that Mr Wright (Halton) had been appointed secretary, Mr Walter Townend (Scarcroft) treasurer, and Mr Fairley (Leeds) analyst.

Letters were received from Mr T. P. Fawcett, of Barrowby Hall, and Mr P. S. Marsden of Whitkirk, who had been appointed vice-presidents, stating that they would be pleased to assist the club in any way they could.

The Chairman said the object for which the meeting was convened was to settle the principle on which the trading section of the club should be established. A good many farmers had asked him what benefit they were likely to get from joining the club, and he could point out various ways in which they would benefit. Since labour became scarce and dearer they had had to rely more and more on agricultural machinery, and if the Club had implements on the co-operative basis a good saving to the members would be effected. Farmers were unjustly treated in regard to railway rates, and they should try to get the Club's goods sent to them on the basis on which the trading section should be placed, he said that twelve members of Sherburn Club paid £5 each into the bank and that was the only thing they had to work upon. It had been suggested they should have a society run on co-operative lines, by which each member would have to take a share, so that each one would have a financial interest in it. If they did that they would have to affiliate with the Agricultural Organization Society, which was a strong body in London, and the Club would have to be registered as a trading society. Shares of £1 each would be issued, and 5s. or 10s. would be paid up as required.

Mr Skirrow, of the Wharfedale Farmers' Trading Association, said that they could not adopt a better system—the co-operative system—than they had. The Agricultural Organization Society had been at work establishing trading societies in various parts of the country for a long time, and they had over 300 societies at work now. The Government had stepped in to help the Organization Society, and was prepared to make a grant to it equal to the subscriptions got from other sources, so that it was in a very strong position. They would be willing to send an organizer down to explain the principles on which these societies were worked, and he advised them to ask for the services of such an individual. Explaining the working of a trading society, he said that the first claim on the profits was 5 per cent. on the paid-up capital and no more. Then 5 per cent. went to the paid workers (secretary, etc.), and the remainder was paid over back to the members according to the amount they had purchased. The Wharfedale Society was started three years ago, and the first year's business was very good—better than the first year, and, after meeting all expenses, they had a profit of £133 3s. 6d. In the second year the sum was £5,760 13s. 0d., and the profit £74 17s. 6d. In the third year £9,073 0s. 8d., and £143 8s., the total profits for the three years being £401 1s. 6d., which had been distributed among the purchasers. They had had their critics and grumblers at first had set on the fence, but they were now coming in. In making arrangements for the purchasing of feeding stuffs he said they would no doubt have difficulty in getting all members to act in sympathy with a trading association, but farmers paid for what they got, and surely they could place their orders where they liked. If they formed a society and were loyal to each other nothing could prevent their success. He then stated some of the operations of the Wharfedale Society and the effect of pure food on animals. Farmers were, he said, too apt to look at the price of commodities and not at the result, but a cheap thing could be very dear. He then stated the profit on the insurances effected by the Association, showing that a nice revenue could be got in that direction. Two things were necessary to make a trading society a success—loyalty and unselfishness, and if they were true to each other it would be a blessing to them all. (Applause).

Mr Appleyard (Austhorpe) inquired where the profits came from.

Mr Skirrow said they came from discounts, commissions, etc.

Mr Appleyard: And your supply consumers at cost price?

Mr Skirrow: Yes.

Mr Wright asked if the Wharfedale Association did anything in regard to farmers' interests generally.

Mr Skirrow said they had a Chamber of Agriculture, where they discussed matters of interest to farmers. The trading association was a specialized thing, and they were starting another branch in connection with a live stock improvement scheme, and applying for a horse and a bull to the authorities. The time was coming when farmers would have to combine to look after their own interests, and when they found anything proposed for their benefit they should support it, apart from the question of who brought it in, and if it was against their interests they should oppose it.

Mr Appleyard then proposed that a trading society be formed on co-operative lines, to be affiliated with the Agricultural Organization Society.

Mr Baxter (Newsom Grove) seconded.

Mr Wright, in putting the last finding of the meeting, proposed that a society be formed on the lines of the Sherburn and Beeston Clubs, where, he thought, the principle of trading was simpler.

Mr Skirrow said that they would find the co-operative system was not intricate.

Mr W. Townend seconded the amendment.

On a vote the resolution to form a trading society on co-operative lines was carried.

Mr Sykes (Barwick) then brought forward the question of reducing the number of wood pigeons. He said that in the Beeston district wood pigeons were doing a great deal of damage, and he had written to several landowners asking for their help in reducing their number, and he had received replies.

Mr F. J. Land, Beeza Hall, Aberford, wrote:—Thank you for your letter referring to the nuisance of wood pigeons and the desirability of even moderately reducing their number. Will you kindly inform me what part the other landowners in this district are willing to take in the proposed organized shooting of them.

Mr John Townend, agent for Mr D. B. Wilson, of Scarcroft, wrote:—Mr Wilson thinks that as we have a very few acres down on this estate, it would be hardly worth while to have such a shoot as you suggest.

Mr T. H. Prater, agent for the Parlington estate, wrote:—The best time to shoot the rooks is when the young ones are appearing on the edge of the nest, and that is what we do here in accordance with our usual custom. The Lingcrts report that there are very few wood pigeons, indeed, but if many are noticed I will arrange a day's shooting and try and work it on the same day as you have yours.

Mr Sykes said that there were also a lot of crows in the district, and he thought that an organized "shoot" would be of benefit to farmers.

Mr Baxter said there were a good many wood pigeons on the Templenewsam estate.

Mr Brown proposed that the secretary write to the landowners in the district and ask their permission to organize a "shoot" of wood-pigeons and rooks.

Mr Bickerdyke seconded, and this was agreed to.

On the call of the Chairman, a hearty vote of thanks was passed to Mr Skirrow for his address.

ABERFORDA AMBULANCE LEAGUE.

PRESENTATION TO DR. PICKERSGILL, SHERBURN, AT GARORTH.

In connection with the Aberforda Ambulance League an interesting gathering took place on Wednesday night, and it was attended by about sixty ladies from Monk Fryston, Hillerton, Tadcaster, Barwick, Whitkirk, Scarcroft, Garforth, etc.

Councillor Robert Routledge, jun., of Garforth, who has done so much for the movement in the district, presided, and he was supported by Mrs Gascoigne, of Lotherton Hall (President of the League), and Dr. Pickersgill, of Sherburn, who is one of the most enthusiastic advocates of ambulance work in the North and is widely-known in Yorkshire as one of the leading judges at ambulance competitions.

The Chairman said that one of the objects of the gathering was to present Dr. Pickersgill with a case of cutlery, carvers, and dessert spoons from the ambulance workers, as a slight recognition of the valuable services he had rendered to the movement. As they knew, he was one of the few medical men in the district who had given them the benefit of his knowledge and skill at lectures, and he had devoted a great deal of time to ambulance work. He hoped that Dr. Pickersgill would be spared for many years to give them his assistance and to enjoy the testimonial which Mrs Gascoigne would present to him.

Mrs Gascoigne, who had a very hearty reception, said that it had given her great pleasure to attend that gathering, and to make the presentation. Dr. Picker-gill had shown a very keen interest in ambulance work, and he had been very self-sacrificing in order to advance it. He had travelled a great many miles to give lectures, and the workers were very grateful to him for what he had done. She then spoke of the value of ambulance training to all classes, and urged the members to maintain that enthusiasm and efficiency which had characterized their work. She then presented Dr. Pickersgill with the case of cutlery, etc., as an appreciation of his services from the workers.

Dr. Pickersgill, in reply, expressed his thanks for the gift. He did not know, he said, that he deserved such a handsome testimonial, but that recognition of what he had done was very pleasing to him. It had been a pleasure to him to give the lectures, which were a welcome change from his ordinary professional work.

An excellent musical programme was gone through. Miss Cooper (Garforth), who was the accompanist, played a pianoforte solo in an excellent manner, and songs were given by Mrs Corky (Monk Fryston), Miss Green (Barkston), Miss Dunning (Church Fenton), and others.

RECTOR OF ADEL AND DESIGNING MOTHERS

VOCATION OF FATHERHOOD.

The Rev. W. H. Draper, Rector of Adel, read a paper on "The vocation of fatherhood—duties, privileges, powers, and to influence" at a conference of the Parents' National Educational Union at Darlington. Fathers, he said, ought to regard themselves as an earthly Providence. Their duty was to look ahead with foresight, intelligence, love, with something of the Creator's eye, and to fashion largely and greatly for their children's needs. To fulfil that duty they must take a share in providing a good education, clear of politics, highly enriched with art, and infused with a strong marching spirit of religion. He believed greatly in the designing mother. Real quarrels were not with designing mothers, but sometimes with their designs. All improvements in horticulture, in stock, in all the arts and sciences were the result of some people designing something. When he saw a designing mother he said, "More power to her elbow," and there would be great improvements in their designs. He (Mr. Draper) could see the designing father. (Laughter). Instead of children being turned adrift to make any kind of friendships, parents should take the difficult responsibility largely on their own shoulders and so would effect great improvements in this important direction. The father's duty was to exercise control and to have real, moral, mental, and physical qualities in their families as they grew up. Mothers should have the same standard. A child came to a certain age, however, when fathers must cease to control them and begin to trust them.

Mr J. E. Hodgkin observed that influence was a greater power than control.

Mrs Howard Glover said there were matters such as politics where two-sided arguments could be adduced, and where the parent should exercise less influence.

A BILBROUGH CLERGYMAN AND TITHE.

ARGUES THAT IT IS TWICE TAXED.

At Tadcaster Petty Sessions on Monday the Rev. Basil M. Rowland was summoned by the overseers of Bilbrough for the non-payment of rates.

Mr Rhodes, of Bilbrough, stated that Mr Rowland owed £1 7s. 10d. rates on his house and buildings and £7 19s. on tithe—a total of £9 6s. 10d.

Tim Clark asked Mr Rowland if he admitted the money was owing.

Mr Rowland said he did, but he desired to make a statement. The Bilbrough tithe was paid twice a year—in January and July, and it was paid to him by Mr Fairfax out of the rental of farms. All these were taxed by the Guardians of the Poor, and he was asked to pay on the money already taxed upon. He claimed that tithe taxation was a double tax. This question, he said, was to come before the House of Lords, and an effort was to be made to do away with the taxation of the clergy, especially the poorer clergy. His net income was £160, and the taxation on the tithe, after the agricultural rates grant, came to about £15. That amount had already been levied upon. Mr Rhodes had paid in his rent.

The Clerk: Mr Rhodes does not pay the tax.

Mr Rowland: Yes, Mr Fairfax pays me out of the rent which has already been taxed.

The Clerk: Mr Fairfax is liable to you for the tithe. Of course, he may get it out of rents.

Mr Rowland: I don't think the magistrates would like to be worried for a long time about this, but I thought it my duty to point it out. We shall hear more about it.

The Clerk said the magistrates had nothing to do but to make an order.

Mr Rowland: I am taxed on unearned increment. I shall not get payment until July next.

An order was made for the amount claimed.

THE LATE MISS S. F. RAMSDEN, OXTON HALL

FUNERAL AT BOLTON PERCY.

The funeral of the late Miss Selina Frances Ramsden, third daughter of the late Mr Henry James and the Hon. Mrs. Henry Ramsden, of Oxton Hall, Tadcaster, whose death occurred after a long illness, took place on Friday at Bolton Percy.

The deceased had attained her 80th year. The late Miss Ramsden, along with her elder sister, who still survives her, was a most generous nature, and did a great deal of good work in connection with St. Mary's Church. Her father many years ago owned and resided at Oxton Hall, which afterwards passed into the family of the Misses Harris. In more recent years, however, the Hall was repurchased by Captain (now Major) Ramsden, brother-in-law and the Misses Ramsden took up their residence at the Hall. Deceased was a sister of the late Sir John Ramsden, and aunt of Mr R. H. Ramsden, J.P., of Beeston Hall, Leeds, and Spa. The service at Bolton Percy Church was conducted by the Bishop of Beverley, assisted by the Rev. J. Rowland Jones. The hymns, "Jesu, lover of my soul" and "On the resurrection morning," were beautifully sung by the Tadcaster Church Choir, accompanied by the organist, Mr Herbert.

Among those present were Colonel W. F. Ramsden, Captain F. W. Ramsden, Major C. T. Ramsden, Captain H. Ramsden, Captain T. V. Ramsden, Mr and Mrs R. H. Ramsden, Mr T. F. Ramsden, Mr Hatchard, Mr Hope-Barton, Colonel and Mrs Gascoigne, Captain the Hon. Stanhope Hawke, Mr and Mrs E. C. Brocklebank, Mr Ingleby, Miss Emery, Miss Maxwell Stuart, Mr Crosthwaite, etc.

Wreaths were sent by Mrs Ramsden, Sir John W. Ramsden, Captain and Lady Maud Ramsden, Mr and Mrs R. H. Ramsden, Colonel and Mrs Ramsden, Captain and Mrs H. Ramsden, Mr and Mrs Ramsden, Mrs Ramsden, Charles and Cynthia, Mowra, and Enid; Mrs Thomas Fielden and the Misses Fielden, Miss Maxwell Stuart, the Bishop of Beverley, and family, Miss Harrison and Miss R. Harrison; Miss Mason, Miss Walker, and Mr Simmonds; from Ellen, Mary, Alley, Kate, Edith, Sarah; Alfred, Edward, and Agnes Shockley; Girls' Friendly Society of Tadcaster; the conductor and members of the Tadcaster Ladies' Choir; the outside staff at Oxton Hall; all the children on the estate; Mr and Mrs Wheler, Countess of Mexborough and family, Constance and Frank Fulford, Mr and Mrs C. B. Lamb, Lily, Norman and Mary Peel, Miss and Miss Isabelle Wilkinson, Elizabeth and Aleathea Saville, Mr. and Mrs. Brocklebank, and Miss York, Captain and Mrs T. V. Ramsden, Mrs Pennington, Mr and Mrs Frank Hatchard; four G.F.S. girls—G. Bradford, Amy and Florence Holman, and Florence James.

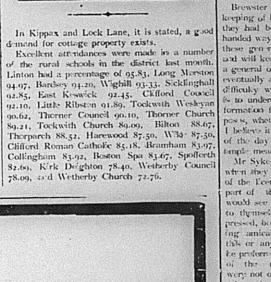
WETHERBY AND THE WELSH CHURCH BILL.

A PROTEST MEETING.

MAJOR DENT AND DISENDOWMENT.

A well-attended meeting was held in the Town Hall, Wetherby, on Friday evening for the purpose of protesting against the proposed disestablishment and disendowment of the Church of England in Wales, and a resolution of protest was unanimously carried, copies of which are to be forwarded to the Prime Minister, Mr Bonar Law, and the local Members of Parliament, Mr G. R. Lane Fox, M.P.

Major Dent, of Ribston Hall, presided, and was supported on the platform by Mr J. P. Law, J.P. (Wetherby), Mr R. J. Foster, J.P. (Stockeld Hall), Mr W. T. Lupcomb (Bramham), Mr W. B. Bridgeman Simpson (Park Hill, Wetherby), Mr A. Brett (Wetherby), churchmen; Mr J. R. Smith and Mr G. T. Allan (Wetherby), Wesleyans.



Amongst the audience were representatives from all the local places of worship, including the Rev. W. Pearson, M.A. (vicar of Spofforth), the Rev. A. G. Lockett (curate of Wetherby), the Rev. C. O'Brien Newnham (rector of Coxwold), the Rev. C. H. Durnat, M.A. (vicar of Wetherby), the Rev. J. Dingle Cocks (Wesleyan minister, Weth rby), Mr John Thompson (East Rigton), Mrs., Miss, and Mr O. Durrant, Mr R. F. Meyrick, Mr H. Crossley, Mr J. J. Allan, Mr A. S. Allan, Mrs Geldart (Kirk Deighton), Mr P. Christie (Collingham), Mr F. Kitchen (Primitive Methodist), Miss Law, Mr T. Thornton, Mr A. H. Noble, Miss Newton, Mr S. W. Padfield, and others.

Letters of apology for non-attendance were read from Mr G. Lane Fox, M.P., the Rev. Canon Geldart, Mr A. Stoughton Harris, Mr G. A. Ward Jackson, and Mr G. Gunter. Mr Lane Fox wrote that he had no desire to take away from any Major but would far more desire to help the scanty funds of religious bodies in the country. He was glad, he went on, that the Welsh Nonconformists as well as the Church of England were protesting against the Bill, which might soon be applied to any other Church in any other part of the kingdom.

Mr David B. Davies, a former Welsh Nonconformist minister, who addressed a similar meeting at Wetherby two years ago, gave an address.

Major Dent explained that the meeting was got up by a committee of laymen—it was not a meeting got up by the clergy for Church defence —but of laymen exclusive of any particular denomination interested in the matter by a desire of seeing what was best for the religious life of the country. The Bill against which they were protesting dealt with the disestablishment and disendowment of that portion of the Church of England which is in Wales, but few people, he believed, really knew the unreasonableness of the disendowment of the Church of England meant, or what the result of such disestablishment would be. He did not think the framers of the Bill even realised what the effect of the Bill would be. Many clauses had been inserted to safeguard the general public from the effects of dis-establishment, but he was afraid that if ever the Bill became law there would be a very great deal for the lawyers to do in unravelling the situation set up by the Bill. Why should one particular portion of the Church of England be attacked and not the other? The promoters said it was because the people generally in Wales, as evidenced by a majority of the Members of Parliament they had returned, desired such a Bill! That argument might equally apply to the West Riding of Yorkshire, for a majority of their Members would be in favour of a Bill for Disestablishment. Therefore that was not entirely a valid argument. They were also told that the Church in Wales was an alien Church. All in means foreign. If the Church of England in Wales was a foreign Church, still much more so was any other church of any denomination, because the Church of England in Wales had been in existence for many centuries longer than any other church. The Church of England was not the only church in Wales, but the promoters of the Bill had always opposed anything in the nature of a religious census so as to ascertain the real strength of the Church of England or any other denomination in Wales. But one thing was certain. The Church of England had a larger number of communicants and one-single Church in the whole of Wales. The promoters admitted that disestablishment was of no use to them without disendowment, and they proposed under the Bill to take away from the Church of England, since concessions had been made, something like 14s. or 15s. in the £ of her endowments to hand it from religious and hand it over to secular purposes. Such were the purposes for which it might be used that it might even be used for sewerage schemes. (Laughter). When they thought of the state of the world, and this country, surely the present was not the time to take money from religious to secular purposes. (Applause). No one of the people would rather pay tithe to the Church than the County Council, but a great deal support had been obtained for the Bill by leading people to believe that they would have tithe to pay. As Christian people they ought to protest most emphatically against the alienation of any religious funds for secular purposes. Mr Bridgeman Simpson proposed the following resolution:—"That this meeting organised by a committee of lay Churchmen and Nonconformists in Wetherby, irrespective of political opinion on other great questions, publicly protests against the Welsh Disestablishment Bill of 1912, in that (first) it repudiates all public recognition of religion by the State, and (secondly) it takes away funds definitely given for the maintenance of religion, and applies such funds purely to secular purposes, notwithstanding the fact that such funds have been consistently applied to religious purposes for the last 250 years at least."

The proposition was seconded by Mr J. P. Heap, and carried unanimously.

In Kippax and Lock Lane, it is stated, a good demand for cottage property exists.

Excellent attendances were made in a number of the rural schools in the district last month. Linton had a percentage of 95.83, Lane Moreton 94.07, Barkston 93.48, Wighill 93.33, Sicklinghall 92.85, East Keswick 92.45, Clifford Council 92.10, Little Ribston 91.89, Tockwith Wesleyan 90.62, Thorner Council 90.30, Thorner Church 89.21, Tockwith Church 89.09, Bilton 88.67, Thorpe rch 88.52, Harewood 87.50, Wike 87.50, Clifford Roman Catholic 85.18, Bramham 83.97, Collingham 83.04, Boston Spa 83.02, Spofforth 82.60, Kirk Deighton 78.40, Wetherby Council 78.09, and Wetherby Church 72.76.

TADCASTER BREWERY DIRECTOR AND THE TRADE.

BOOK-KEEPING BY LICENCE-HOLDERS.

ALLEGED PUNISHMENT FOR POLITICAL SUPPORT.

The nineteenth annual banquet of the Selby and District Licensed Victuallers' Association was held at the Georg Hotel, Selby, on Friday night, when a large company sat down. Mr Wm. Sykes, C.C., chairman and managing director of Messrs John Smith's Tadcaster Brewery Company, Ltd., presided, and the attendance included Mr C. H. Marsh, Mr Claude Kemp, Mr E. Walker (Tadcaster), Mr P. Deighton, Mr Richard Lodge, etc.

Apologies for absence were received from Mr R. G. Lane Fox, M.P., Colonel Hawdon, and others.

Mr G. Smithwood, in notifying apologies, read the following letter from Councillor Mark Scott:—"Since I have held the post of Chairman to the Magistrates' Licensing Committee, I have felt that I must decline the pleasure of accepting your complimentary invitation. I was very glad that our police superintendent in his annual report of a fortnight ago was able to state a very marked decrease in drunkenness. I am afraid, however, that I could not, as licensed victuallers to do all they can to "decrease the decrease." If I may use such an expression. I believe generally and broadly speaking such is their desire." (Hear, hear).

A CLEAN SHEET.

The Chairman submitted the toast of the evening, "The Selby and District Licensed Victuallers' Association." He said it was a pleasure to him to propose this toast, and to associate the whole-sale trade with the retail trade. The retail trade, as represented by the Selby Association, was doing excellent service in connection with its organization. It had been in existence seven years, and it was in a healthy and satisfactory condition; and in addition to that he was able to say what many districts could not say, that in the past year it had not absolutely closed a single house through the courts of this district. It was a very satisfactory position to be able to say that in connection with the trade of this district there had not been a conviction or case in the courts during the past year. (Applause). The licensed victualler was confronted with many difficulties. Selby was advancing commercially, a fact which had brought to the district an increased population, and it was highly creditable to the licensed victuallers to have such a clean sheet as they had at that date, and he hoped that they would go on prospering, and that the aviation scheme which was to be started would increase its prosperity and popularity.

EQUAL TO A CRIME.

The figures submitted at the Selby Brewster Sessions showed a decrease of 34 persons convicted of drunkenness. He observed that over 50 per cent. of them were outsiders—Selby was not responsible for them. Generally speaking the Brewster Sessions reports had been creditable to the trade, and he thought even those who were much opposed to them would give them credit for trying their level best to carry out the law as it stood, and endeavouring to maintain a decent class of houses. The licensed houses for the betterment of the people. In an old market town like Selby there might be houses which were not exactly of the up-to-date stamp, but it naturally followed that facilities should be granted to improve the houses and make the accommodation suitable for a growing population. He thought the licensing bench, with its up-to-date house gave the licensee was the better able to look after the business. In some districts, though he did not think it was so in Selby, there was a disposition on the bench to a crime to ask for an improvement to a house. He did not think that should be, as it was not to the advantage of a place, to the community, or the party who owned the property.

BOOK-KEEPING BY LICENCE HOLDERS.

Brewster Sessions chairmen had asked for the recommendation of licensed victuallers as to how they had been so much hit, almost in a backhanded way, that they were rather nervous about these general requisitions. I believe many do and other bodies, and he had used the expression that a general order on the question must mean that eventually access is wanted to those books. The difficulty we have in connection with the trade is to understand whether the getting of this information from the books is for reasonable purposes, whether it is reasonably fair to our trade. I believe it is more a matter for the Government than the police statistics, which they have ample means of doing.

Mr Sykes went on to say that it is a tribute to the way they got on together that on the chairman of the licensing bench, it should receive on the part of the trade every consideration. They would see whether they could not without injury to themselves try and meet the wishes expressed, because they found no difficulty in working amicably with the licensing authorities in this or any other matter. For his own choice he preferred to try to reasonably meet the wishes of the magistrates. Alluding to those who were not of the same way of thinking as themselves, the Chairman said it was quite right, and legitimate in connection with anything—with eating, drinking, or other things. All the trade needed to do was to conduct their business on reasonable and fair lines. (Hear, hear).

TAXATION OF THE TRADE.

At the present time they were contributing to the Government's revenue to a greater extent than they ought to do, and he did not think the Government gave them fair consideration. The retail licensed trade was practically collecting about 26 per cent. of the total revenue of the country. In addition there was the expenditure charges, and in many cases it had been a very severe tax; but the chief tax and burden had been the occupiers' liability, which had been put on by the 1910 Finance Act. The sum this year was £1,747,642, being an increase of £1,000 against the year 1908-9, brought about by the Finance Act; and it was an item that hoped like remaining on the licensed trade. It seemed to him a vindictive burden put on the trade for their supporting the Conservative party of the last election. (Hear, hear).

Councillor G. Ainley (hon. secretary), in responding, said the local association had an increasing number of members who were taking a great interest in the association, and that held a good balance in hand.

Ison's Eye & Ear Dispensary
LIMITED.
71, GREAT GEORGE ST., LEEDS
MR. THOS. ISON,
OCULIST and AURIST.

THIS INSTITUTION was ESTABLISHED in 1871. The system of working is the provident one, each patient paying a small periodical fee whilst under treatment, and they may, therefore, look for and receive the prompt care and attention which in many instances in charitable institutions is too often omitted. The treatment is of a mild and safe character, without operation or the use of Ear Drums, Ear Cornets or other mechanical or painful appliances. Another advantage appertaining to this dispensary is its system of treatment by correspondence, by which sufferers at long distances, and in isolated positions can have the advantage of Mr ISON'S advice and remedies forwarded through the post. No case is undertaken unless there be a reasonable hope of cure, or benefit to the patient.
Attendance at Leeds every Tuesday, from 10 to 7 on Alternate Saturdays, March 21st & April 4th.
Hours 10 to 7. Other days by appointment.
TREATMENT WITHOUT OPERATION.
ARTIFICIAL HUMAN EYES fitted from 15s.
SPECTACLES and EYE PRESERVERS, 3/6 to 10/6. Gold Frames from 20s.
Special Notice.—There are many cases of failing eyesight which can be speedily remedied by mild local treatment, thus dispensing with the use of glasses.

SATURDAY, MARCH 21st, 1914.

Will the removal of Mr John Burns from the presidency of the Local Government Board have any influence on the policy relating to borough extensions? Although the schemes promoted by Leeds and Bradford were dropped, it has not brought about a feeling of security in the West Riding, and people have begun to discuss the question in the cities. Mr James Walker, of Mirfield, speaking the other night at the Bradford Liberal Club, stated that "the Local Government Board was killing local patriotism and seriously upsetting good government" in order to satisfy the sense of pride of a few avaricious boroughs who called in not only every ordinary influence but every political influence to weigh the scales against the number of smaller but quite as well managed—even better managed—communities." It is natural that gentlemen representing cities in Parliament should endeavour to advance the interests of their constituencies, but by doing so it is doubtful that they are helping themselves in any way. How many ratepayers in Leeds are anxious for the extension of the city boundaries? Independent opinion, it will be found, is against it, because, looking at it from a purely selfish standpoint, people recognise that outside districts cannot generally be administered during the period of preferential rating for the amount received from the places annexed. Moreover, many believe that no good purpose is served by annexation schemes and a few acres more or less do not constitute a city's greatness. Mr Walker stated that the extension policy is destroying local patriotism, and this is a very important factor in local self-government. Leeds ratepayers have comparatively little interest in the government of the city, and this is proved by the fact that only about half of them—keen party politicians the majority of them—vote at the municipal elections, while at the triennial elections for the Leeds Board of Guardians the percentage of people who go to the poll is even smaller. In the outside districts, however, percentages of 70, 80, and 90 are not unusual, and, however much the city ruler may gibe at the "parochial spirit," it is essentially the one element that is absent, and the one thing that is needed in city elections, because the "parochial spirit" in this case is no mean, selfish feeling, but the expression of a local patriotism. In the outside districts it is easy for the elected representatives of the people to exercise an influence in every department of public work, and they are rightly held responsible for the government of the area, but in cities it is absolutely impossible for voluntary workers to efficiently supervise the administration, which must be controlled by officials. Some people may not believe this, but one illustration should serve to convince them. For years apparently Leeds has been throwing thousands of pounds away annually, owing to the fact that their staff of officials and workmen was too large by several hundreds! Such a thing could not happen in a rural area, or even in a business concern, however large, but because the representatives of the ratepayers in a city cannot, owing to the magnitude of the concern, control the various departments whilst waste goes on year after year. It is often been urged that greater efficiency is obtained in cities, but after the revelations in Leeds no one will supply make such an assertion again. By taking away their local self-government, the Local Government Board is destroying all public spirit and local patriotism in the villages, and, in addition, it is leading to an eventual increase in the burdens for which they are in no wise responsible. However it may be viewed, the policy stands condemned, and if any more extension schemes are launched in the West Riding they will assuredly meet with a stronger and more determined opposition.

Human ingenuity will probably never provide an unsinkable ship, but, taught by the lessons which almost every disaster conveys, our shipbuilders will eventually get a vessel as near perfection as possible. It is only by failure that success is gained, and mistakes and oversights serve the purposes of progress. Size and speed are fully recognised by every maritime country, and shipbuilders are now doing all that the human brain can devise in order to increase the tonnage of ocean-going vessels, preserving at the same time all that tends to safety and speed. When the Titanic disaster occurred many people used it as an argument against the use of big ships, but the builders regarded it as an object lesson in the use of methods and appliances which would preclude the possibility of such a disaster again. It is a far cry from the days when the North Atlantic steamship service was established to the launching of the Britannic, which is assumed to be the best vessel, regarded from the point of view of safety, speed, and comfort, ever launched in this country. The first ship in this service belonged to Quebec, and its first voyage was made from Pictou, Nova Scotia, in 1833. The first Cunard liner was the Persia (1830), an iron paddle steamer. Two years afterwards the Great Eastern, equipped with paddles and propeller, began to run between Britain and America. She was the first ship to exceed 5,000 tons, and when we consider that the Britannic is just exactly ten times that size, the great development of the last sixty years becomes apparent. Watertight compartments were introduced in 1879, and triple-expansion engines in 1886. The time for the voyage was reduced to less than 6½ days by the Hamburg-Amerika liner Furst Bismarck. The whole history of the North Atlantic steamship is the story of records established only to be broken. The Olympic was considered almost a miracle, but the Imperator came along with additional tonnage, and now the Britannic, the latest triumph of the ship-builder, is a vessel of 50,000 tons, 900 feet in length. From keel to truck the Britannic will be as perfect as the human brain, the highest skill, and the most powerful appliances can make a vessel. The double bottom extending the whole length of the vessel, the massive beams and close framing, the large shell plates, the steel decks, the double skin and watertight bulkheads, combine to make a structure of exceptional strength and rigidity. There will be accommodation for over 2,500 passengers in all, besides a crew of 950. This is a population nearly equal to that of Garforth or Tadcaster. Seven of the ten decks in the ship are devoted to the passengers, and all classes have been provided for in a way that will ensure both comfort and luxury. However far-seeing and ingenious our shipbuilders may be accidents will occur occasionally, and all they can do is turn out ships as safe as human brains can make them.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT NEWS.

ROTHWELL

Mr G. W. Batty, draper, of "The Beehive," Garforth, and "The Beehive," Rothwell, is the successful tenderer for drapery, etc., for the Tadcaster Union for the ensuing half-year.—Advt.

LEEDS WEST RIDING PETTY SESSIONS.—The magistrates on the Bench at the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday were Mr J. W. Morkill (in the chair), Col. A. M. Sagar-Musgrave, Mr E. H. Foster, Mr F. M. Lupton, Mr J. B. Breed, Mr S. Hudson, and Mr J. Parker.

WIFE MALTREATMENT.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday John Priestley, miner, of Rothwell, was charged with not paying wife maintenance arrears to the extent of £4 17s. Priestley said he could not pay the amount, but he was willing to provide a home if his wife would live with him. This the woman refused to do, and Priestley had to go to prison for two months.

EDUCATION.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Albert Carter, grocer, of Rothwell, was summoned for not sending his child to school. It was stated that when summoned to attend a meeting of the Education Committee he failed to do so. A fine of 5s. and costs was imposed.—James Pell, a woodman, of Rothwell, was summoned for a similar offence, and was fined 5s. and costs.

PRIMITIVE METHODISM.—A successful tea and concert, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the forthcoming bazaar funds, was held in the Primitive Methodist Schoolroom on Saturday. The tea was provided by the teachers of the Sunday School, who also gave their services in waiting at the tables. At the subsequent concert a lengthy and enjoyable programme was gone through. Mr J. W. Wainwright, of Ouzlewell Green, presided. The items were provided by Mr Albert Dixon's concert party from Leeds, including a clever boy singer, Master Saddler, who delighted all with his songs. The effort realised £3 10s. 11d.

ROTHWELL AND THE CUP.—A fresh team will have the custody of the Leeds and District Half-Holiday Cup this year. In the replayed competition on Saturday, Rothwell were beaten by defeating Leeds Parkside Wednesday by two goals to one. Thus the "Roddillites," whose first round in League football this is, enter the final, in which they will be opposed by Leeds City Tramways. The final tie has been fixed to be played on the 22nd prox. The Half-Holiday trophy has not yet been held twice by one team, having been carried off in turn by the 3rd Brigade Royal Horse Artillery, Leeds Parkside Wednesday, and Leeds Kirkgate Tradesmen, the last-named of whom dismissed Leeds by four runs, ways

The body of Thomas Watson, aged thirty-four, engine-fitter, who has been missing from his home at Thorpe, since February 14th, was taken from the River Foss at York on Wednesday afternoon.

BILLIARDS.—Playing in the senior division of the Oulton and District Billiard League, Rothwell Working Man's Club defeated Kippax by 4 points, the aggregate scores being 586 and 438 respectively. The individual scores were (Rothwell names first):—J. Banks 100 v. C. Eastwood 81, G. Pickersgill 80 v. E. Tiffany 100, H. Ely 100 v. Land 77, W. Dobson 100 v. Farrpenny 84, J. Hargreaves 100 v. Prince 93, and F. Stringer 100 v. E. Wheatley 93.

CHARITY FOOTBALL CUP.—By defeating Alfred Allison in the semi-final on Saturday afternoon, Rothwell White Rose are now in the struggle with Rothwell Parish Church for possession of the Charity Cup. The game was played at Oulton, and was not without its rough interludes. Losing the toss, Parfitt started for the White Rose, who opened out with a fine movement, which was stopped by Hall, the full back, who initiated a smart run down the right wing. However, his career was cut short by Ripley, who passed to Holmes, and the latter was passed outwards to Parfitt, Wrigley, and Hughes, who centred for Abrams to score. This was after about five minutes' play. Following the game was of a give and take character, until Webb, the Alfalfa' left wing man, became dangerous, but Heaton, the Rothwell custodian, was able to clear in time, and was slightly hurt in doing so. He was, however, able to resume after a few minutes lapse. Shortly before the interval a clever run was pieced by Hughes and Wrigley, but they were kept well in check by the opposing backs. At the interval the score was one goal to nothing in favour of Rothwell. On the resumption Alfalfa changed their tactics. Dawson was switched, but the offender was promptly given marching orders. Nothing of an outstanding nature occurred to mark the remainder of the game until about the last quarter, when Tiffany, scoring for Rothwell gave to Hughes, who passed in turn to Parfitt, the latter scoring a second goal. Abrams was afterwards brought down by Webb, and a penalty was promptly awarded, and Ripley scored. Alfalfa now came down on the left wing, and in a melee in the goal mouth scored. Another goal followed, the result being a win for Rothwell White Rose by three goals to two.

FOOTBALL.—Rothwell Parish Church played a very disappointing game on Saturday afternoon, when they faced the representatives of East Ardsley on the Rothwell ground. They were the first the visitors, who were decidedly the better team, showed determination, a factor which was noticeably lacking in the homesters. Ardsley were very smart in their footwork, and several brilliant runs down the field were witnessed. In a combined rush a well-centred shot from the left wing man ended in a goal within the first five minutes of play. For a long time Rothwell were never really dangerous; once when luck seemed in their favour Hitchin headed in, and the ball just skimmed over the cross-bar. Two fruitless corners followed. From the second the visitors broke away, but nothing came of the effort. A few minutes before the interval saw Rothwell inside the Ardsley half, but the opposing custodian stuck well to his charge and saved two hot shots in good style. Neither side scored in the second half, but Pickersgill missed a penalty by inches. Towards the close of the game Nunns, the Rothwell goalkeeper, made a mistake which nearly cost his side another goal. Rushing out to save, he missed the ball, leaving the man forwards in possession, and the situation was saved by the ball striking the cross-bar. The game resulted in a win for East Ardsley by one goal to nothing. To succeed the Parish Church will have to show better form on Saturday, when they play Methley Perseverance in the semi-final for the Leeds and District Cup.

ALLERTON BYWATER

On Saturday afternoon Allerton Bywater had a Senior Football League match with great Preston W.R., and the Allertonians won by three goals to one.

BOWERS ALLERTON

Bowers Allerton footballers had a match with Glasshoughton on Saturday afternoon, and the latter won by six goals to one.

CONCERT.—In the Mission Schoolroom on Saturday evening a good concert was enjoyed by the large number present. Mr H. Senior, of Leeds, a firm friend of the Young Men's Bible Class, and on whose invitation the singers had come, stated that the artists were all members of one family. Miss Gladys Bray, the Chairman said, had only recently won first prize in a singing competition in London. The programme was as follows:—Duet, "Merrie England"; song "Two Love Lyrics," by Mrs Gaunt (soprano); pianoforte duet, Miss G. Bray and Mr. W. S. Bray; song, "A Garden of Sunshine," by B. Bray (tenor); vocal duet, "Irish Ballad" song," Miss Bray and Mrs Gaunt; song, "Oh, promise me," Mr W. S. Bray (baritone); song, "A spray of Roses," Miss Gladys Bray (contralto); duet, "Tenor and Baritone," by Messrs Bray; song, "My Dreams," Mr Bray; song, "When you come home," Miss Bray; song, solo, "Polish dance," Mr W. S. Bray; song, "Over the hills," Mrs Gaunt; duet, "Maying," Mr and Mrs Bray; song, "The bosun, the coaster, and me," Mr W. S. Bray; song, "Abide with me," Miss Bray; quartette, "Allan Water"; quartette, "Old King Cole." On the motion of Mr W. S. Blackburn, seconded by Mr W. Blackburn, a vote of thanks was heartily given to the artists, and to Mr Bullock for the loan of the piano. The proceeds are for the forthcoming bazaar.

CARLTON

ENTERTAINMENT.—A successful entertainment was given in the Carlton Wesleyan Sunday School on Saturday night by the young ladies of the Junior Wesleyan Church. The whole programme was devoted to a representation of "Ye old village wedding," which was admirably given. There was a large company present, and the net funds of the church should benefit to no small extent.

BILLIARDS.—On Saturday both teams, representing Carlton Temperance Hall in the Oulton and District Billiard League, had matches with Hopetown Reading Room. The seniors were away and lost by 126 points, the scores being H.petown 595, while Carlton's aggregate was 469. The individual scores were (Hopetown names first):—H. Button 64 v. R. Ellis 100, C. Bedford 100 v. Beeton 48, Webster 100 v. W. Pape 93, Button 100 v. E. Brown 94, Rumsey 100 v. G. Rumsey 74, and Lilley 100 v. I. Fox 38. The junior team lost by 206 points, the aggregate scores being Hopetown 590, Carlton 384. The individual efforts were as follows (Hopetown names first):—J. Illingworth 100 v. F. Shaw 90, Dennis Dixon 61 v. T. Bloomer 100, A. Wright 32 v. R. Booth 100, A. Heard 69 v. A. Gregory 100, J. Dobson 30 v. W. Beaton 100, and Geo. Priestley 97 v. J. Passmore 100.

CROSSGATES

On Monday County Councillor Dewhirst, of Whitkmoor Lodge, underwent an operation at Sir Berkeley Moynihan's nursing home in Leeds. The operation was successfully carried out, and Mr Dewhirst is going on as well as can be expected.

LIBERALISM.—On Friday evening at the Wesleyan Lecture Hall the last of the series of lectures on the land and housing policy of the Government was delivered by Mr. Marriott Morley, J.P. There was a fair attendance of Liberals, and Mr W. G. Smithson (President of the Crossgates Liberal Association) presided. A keen discussion followed the lecture.

LECTURE.—On Tuesday evening, in connection with the Baptist Church Fellowship a lecture, entitled "An evening with Burns," was delivered by Mr L. Mellor, Manchester, of the Avenue, Halton, in the Lecture Hall at Whitkirk, before a good gathering of members. Mr Bailey, of Crossgates, presided. The lecturer dealt with the subject from three main points of view—the literary, social, and religious, and showed that Burns, although not the only Scottish national poet up to the period in which he lived, at that time filled a need, as the strains of Scottish poetry had almost dried up, owing to the social, political, and religious struggles immediately prior to his birth. The poet's early life and education were touched upon, and his influence on the social and religious conditions of Scotland was emphasized by the lecturer, who spoke of Burns championing the cause of the downtrodden, honest poor, and taking the side of the more liberal-minded "New Lichts" in the bitter religious controversy which was exciting the Kirk of Scotland in his day, by means of the scathing, satirical verse of which he was a master. The genius of the poet as a composer of love songs was dwelt upon, and his love for the lasses traced from a very early period in his short, turbulent, but interesting life. The lecture was illustrated by songs and recitations given by Mrs Milton, Mrs Burras, Mr Milton, and the lecturer, and the pianoforte accompaniments were played by Miss McFarlane. Messrs Rodgers, Diggle, Batty, Milton, and Gordon took part in an interesting discussion which followed. At the meeting on Tuesday evening a lecture will be delivered by Mr F. R. Pearson, B.A.—See advt.

CROSSGATES LITERARY SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of Crossgates Literary Society was held on Monday evening in the Wesleyan Lecture Hall, and Mr E. Hawkesworth presided. The hon. secretary reported an increase of 49 members over the previous year, and gave a review of the pleasant evenings, occupied by 7 lantern lectures and 3 without illustrations. The treasurer then presented his financial statement, showing the various items of expenditure. On the motion of the President, seconded by Mr Armistead, both these reports were adopted. The election of officials for the coming session then proceeded with, Mr E. Hawkesworth being unanimously re-elected president. The vice-presidents nominated and elected subject to their approval were:—Dr. Ashmore, Mr. J. Armistead, Dr. Bean, Rev. E. Bell, Mr. I. J. Dewhirst, C.C., Rev. B. Guyer, Rev. J. Miller Hamilton, Dr. Hayearth, Rev. H. H. Malleson, Mr P. S. Marsden, Mr Tindale Rippon, Mr F. W. Suteliffe, Mr Walter Thompson, and the President of the Wesleyan Institute. The Executive Committee elected were:—Messrs C. Appleton, G. W. Beaumont, T. K. Diggle, C. D. Fidgett, A. Morgan, J. Owrid, J. H. Pickles, W. W. Stott, T. Webster, E. C. White, and S. H. Young. J. H. Walker and Mr F. R. Carlton were re-elected treasurer and secretary respectively. Votes of thanks to the retiring officials and the lanternists were cordially passed. It was resolved to organise an excursion to Haworth for a Saturday afternoon in May or June next for members and friends. Following the annual meeting Mr F. Swann, Leeds, gave a most interesting lecture on "The Romance of Ancient Glass Making," illustrated by a number of specimens. The lecturer was thoroughly acquainted with his subject, and spoke of the discovery of glass manufacture 1,600 B.C., referring to the proficiency in the art by the Ancient Phœnicians and Egyptians, and later by the Venetians. On the motion of Mr Carlton, seconded by Mr Walker, and supported by Mr Hawkesworth, a hearty vote of thanks was passed to the lecturer, and Mr Swann suitably replied.

GARFORTH

Mr G. W. Batty, draper, of "The Beehive," Garforth, and "The Beehive," Rothwell, is the successful tenderer for drapery, etc., for the Tadcaster Union for the ensuing half-year.—Advt.

NO SALE.—At Garforth on Thursday night Messrs Oliver, Appleton, and Kitchen, of Leeds (instructed by Messrs Nelson, Eddisons, and Lupton, solicitors, Leeds), offered six lots of freehold property in Hilderthorpe Terrace and Beech Grove Avenue, Garforth, for sale by public auction, but not one lot was sold.

ADMITTED BEING "TIGHT."—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Isaac Sayers, shaver, of Garforth, was summoned for having been drunk and disorderly at Garforth on Monday, March 9th. P.C. Bevan stated that defendant was so drunk he thought it advisable to take him home to his lodgings. Sayers said he admitted being "tight." The Chairman: "You can't stand it."—Defendant: "Oh, yes, I can stand." (Laughter). A fine of 5s. and costs was imposed.

THE CHURCH.—The monthly service for men was held at Oulton St. John's Church on Sunday afternoon, when the address was given by the Rev. T. E. R. Willord, rector of Garforth. Rising his address upon "According to the eternal purpose which He purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Ephesians 3. 11, he asked what was the eternal purpose which God had placed with them. It was for them, he said, to live their life not only for this world, but for all which was to come.

B.W.T.A. MEETING.—A meeting of the Garforth branch of the British Women's Temperance Association was held on Monday in the Parish Methodist Church, and there was a good attendance. Mrs Coudwell presided, and Mrs Haste Carr, of Halton, was the speaker. She gave a most interesting and helpful address, the keynote of which was patience—patience in God, in the work, and in future results, while she gave them three thoughts to remember—sowing the seed, the seed slowly growing, and the harvest, and she urged the members not to expect too swift and great results, but work patiently and steadily on, each doing what she could to forward the cause, and the results would come. Temperance Picture was distributed, and nine new members were gained.

PRIMITIVE METHODIST SUNDAY SCHOOL.—On Saturday evening a good company gathered in this schoolroom, on the occasion of the annual concert and prize distribution to the Sunday School scholars. An excellent programme was provided, including action songs, drills, etc., by the scholars, under the direction of Miss A. Hancock and Miss M. J. Goodall; duets by Mr and Mrs P. Pickersgill; and songs by Mr Pickersgill. Miss E. B. Breed acted as accompanist. A humorous sketch, entitled "Votes for Women," was given by five of the older scholars. A short address on the value of the Sunday School was delivered by the Rev. J. P. Osborne. Mrs. J. Hemsworth presided, and the prizes were presented to the successful scholars by Mrs F. Richardson. The proceeds were in aid of the Sunday School funds.

PICTURE HOUSE.—At this popular place of entertainment capital programmes have delighted large audiences this week. The principal attractions for to-night and Saturday are "The Rajah's Diamond Rose," which shows how a clever rogue is outwitted by a girl, and "Why Girls Leave Home," a two-part Edison comedy. On the first three days of next week a very fine film will be exhibited. It is entitled "Victory or Death," and it is full of sensational incident, showing aeroplane flights, motor-car races, and a burning liner at sea. Other films promised with a man who loses his memory, is sure to please everybody. Other pictures to be shown are "The Fatal Taxi-cab," "Fickle Phil," "Calamity Anne's Trip," (specially good), and "Reigonds outwitted" (drama). For times and prices see advt.

HALTON

Mr W. B. Pindar, of Halton, Clerk to the Hunsler Rural District Council, has been elected a member of the Town Planning Institute.

On Saturday afternoon Whitkirk Church Mission were defeated in the Church Football League match by Rodley St. Andrew's by three goals to two.

WITHDRAWN.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday, when the name of John Wm. Gale, who was summoned by his wife, Annie Gale, of Halton, for assistant cruelty, was called, the woman applied to the magistrates for a withdrawal of the summons, as they were going to live together again. The magistrates allowed the case to be done on condition that the husband paid the costs of the summons.

BOXING.—A long and interesting programme of boxing was decided in the presence of a crowded audience at the Central Athletic Club, Leeds, on Saturday night. The first pair to enter the ring were John Carroll (Leeds) and Kid Newton (Halton), who met to box ten rounds. Carroll had a great advantage in height and reach, but the lad from Halton Newton got his men to a standstill in the first round Newton got his opponent in trouble and the referee intervened and declared him to be the winner.

BILLIARD LEAGUE.—The concluding games in the Non-Political Clubs' League were played this week. Highbury won an exciting game against British Workmen's by the odd point. Stourton St. Andrew's easily beat Halton, the margin of 322 dividing them at the close. Lower Wortley easily accounted for Meanwood, winning by 359 points. The best breaks were:—Mr J. Horsfield (Stourton), 52; Mr H. Coggill (Stourton), 33; Mr C. Dunbar (Highbury), 35; Mr C. Waddington (British Workmen), 33. British Workmen's and Stourton tie for first place, and a deciding match will be played on Tuesday. Stourton and British Workmen's have each lost two out of the last four matches played, whilst Tramways, who tie with Woodhouse for third place, lost their first five matches, and won 14 out of the last 15.

KIPPAX

On Saturday afternoon Kippax Woodville had a football match with Rothwell W.R., and the Woodville won easily by nine goals to one.

DRINK.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Charles Biscombe, miner, of Kippax, was summoned for having been drunk and disorderly at Kippax about 9.50 p.m. on Saturday, March 7th. He was taken home by a friend, after being spoken to by P.C. Ainsworth. Defendant was fined 20s. and costs.

LANGUAGE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Jesse Palfreyman, miner, of Kippax, was summoned for having used bad language in Kippax on Saturday, March 7th. P.C. Gough said that about 11.10 p.m. on the night in question he saw the defendant, and he was making use of bad language. Fine of 5s. and costs was imposed.

PARISH CHURCH.—A meeting of the G.F.S. was held in the schoolroom on Monday evening, when the Vicar (Rev. R. D. Smith) gave an address on germ life and some common diseases. There was a good attendance. The Lenten services were continued on Thursday evening, when "The men who crucified Christ" again formed the basis of an eloquent discourse by the Vicar, the special subject being "The Multitude." The lantern illustrations, taken from the works of the best modern painters, were excellent.

PRESENTATION.—An interesting ceremony was place on Saturday evening at the White Swan Inn, on the occasion of a birthday celebration. Mr George Fisher, in whose honour the function was promoted, was the recipient of a number of presents, which were given as a token of the respect and esteem in which he is held by his fellow workmen employed at the Ledstone Lade Pit, near Kippax. Mr Fisher suitably acknowledged the kindness shown to him. Goodwill was practised more in pit life than was generally supposed, and he thanked them heartily for their gifts.

METHLEY

The Pontefract Guardians have appointed Dr. J. W. Taylor, of Methley, medical officer for that parish in succession to Dr. Wiggin, who has resigned.

The Pontefract Board of Guardians have decided to entertain their Chairman, Mr. J. W. Bentley, to a complimentary dinner, as a recognition of his services as Chairman for over 20 years.

AFTER THIRTY YEARS.—At Leeds on Monday a verdict of "Accidental death" was returned at the inquest on William Todd, fifty-three, a collier, of Hodgson Yard, Hunslet, who died on Saturday from injuries he received on the previous Tuesday by fall of roof whilst employed at the Saville Pit, Methley, three and a half years ago.

GULTON

GOLF CLUB.—In the March medal competition the scores were:—Long, 88, 4; 84; A. P. Bolland, 94, 9, 85; Miss G. Armitage, 113, 24, 89; W. Glover, 114, 24, 90; Thos. Swan, 105, 16, 92; R. K. Swales, 101, 8, 93.

A MENDICANT.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Alfred Jordan, locksmith, of no fixed abode, who was charged with begging from door to door at Stourton on Friday, was sent to prison for seven days.

P.S.A.—There was a good attendance at the weekly P.S.A. meeting at the Primitive Methodist Chapel on Sunday afternoon, when an address was given by Mr Brierley, of Beeston Hill. Mr J. Collinson presided, and Mr Waterton was the organist.

FOOTBALL.—Our Saturday afternoon East Hunslet and New Wortley Gas Works had a League match at Stourton, and in the first half the game was well-contested. Somerton scored for the visitors, and Hinsley netted for the home team. In the second half Brooksbank and Broughton netted for New Wortley, who won by three goals to one.

STOURTON DEFEATED.—Stourton Liberal Club and Pudsey Conservative Club met in the second round of the charity competition at Hixon and Sons' Shearcrons, Park Street, Leeds, on Wednesday night. Pudsey won four of the five games, and on the aggregate totals proved successful by 109 points. The scores were 475 and 336. Details (Stourton names first):—J. Horsfield 66 v. J. B. Hylands 100, C. Clarkson 42 v. J. W. Hinchliffe 100, S. Gillings 100 v. J. W. Gaunt 75, H. Coggill 83 v. A. Mitchell 100, and S. Ellis 85 v. P. Hoyle 100.

WOMEN'S LANGUAGE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Lily Kinch and Elizabeth Rosindale, both of Stourton, were summoned for having made use of obscene language. P.C. Wright stated that about 11 a.m. on March 8th he was on duty in Atkinson Street, Stourton, when he heard the defendants use the language complained of. Both defendants denied making use of the language, and said the bother arose through another woman. They called a witness on their behalf. The magistrates were satisfied with the officer's evidence, and fined Kinch 5s. and costs and Rosindale 2s. 6d. and costs.

WHAT HAPPENED AT STOURTON?—It is regrettable to say a contemporary to hear of as ugly a demonstration as which took place at Stourton, when the East Hunslet Club were replaying their tie with Beeston Hill Parish Church. It is reported that they were met with the Garforthian head on the road, after which the conduct of the home players and spectators became very unruly. A couple of players were sent off, one of whom, after the game, made his way to the visitors' dressing-room, and there, it is alleged, committed an assault upon a member of the Beeston team. The local and the county associations are made it known that they were prepared to give their support to the assaulted player, should he take police-court proceedings, but it is stated the aggrieved individual is refraining from taking such proceedings.

PRIMITIVE METHODISM.—In aid of the funds of the forthcoming bazaar a successful concert was held in the Primitive Methodist Schoolroom on Saturday night, when a lengthy programme was submitted by the choir of the Woodhouse Hill Primitive Methodist Church. There was a large company present, presided over by Mr J. Collinson. The following were the items:—Glee, "Softly fall the shadows of evening," choir; song, "I am so spiritual when I read," Mr. H. Nicholson; song, "Up an' roll, folk," Miss D. Stead; quartette, "Bravo, Profundo," Misses Mears and Foster and Messrs Mears and Myers; recitation, "The madness hat," Miss Stead; Brewery song, "A long time gone for the wood," Mr B. Myers; glee, "The laughing chorus," choir song, Mrs Prince; duet (banjo and violin), Messrs Peers; recitation, "A husband's experiment"; glee, "Moonlight," choir; song, Mrs Prince; duet, "The Rivals," Misses Mears and Myers; song, Miss D. Stead; glee, "Call John," choir; recital, Miss Jessie Brown; song, "The night I fought Jack Johnson," Mr H. Nicholson; song, "The land of I dunno where," Miss H. Frost; glee, "In the hour of twilight," choir; and "Auld lang syne," choir and "The contented plumber." The young men of the Stourton Chapel, who were responsible for the obtaining of the artistes, are to be congratulated upon the successful result.

WOODLESFORD

LANGUAGE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday John Pritchard, engineman, of Woodlesford, was summoned for having made use of abusive language. P.C. Bennett stated that on Wednesday, March 4th, he was in Beconsfield Yard, by Woodlesford, when he heard the defendant, who was quarrelling, make use of bad language. It was stated that the defendant was brought home ill had been in bed for a week. A fine of 2s. 6d. and costs was imposed.

OULTON DISTRICT EDUCATION COMMITTEE.—The monthly meeting of the Oulton Education Committee was held in the Y.M.C.A. Hall, Leeds, on Tuesday night, Mr G. M. Abbey presiding. Other members present were Messrs B. Wood Higgins, S. H. Young, J. H. Tomlinson, J. W. Ridyard, T. H. Myson, H. E. Catton, and J. P. Allison, with the Clerk (Mr H. W. Powell). With regard to the old desks at Woodlesford, the Clerk reported that he had received an offer from Mr Parkin, secretary of the Woodlesford Cricket Club, of £1, and it was decided as there was no other to accept the offer. It was reported that there were fourteen applications for the post of caretaker of the Woodlesford Council School. The most suitable applicants were selected to appear before a committee composed of the Woodlesford members.

The attendance returns for February showed a percentage for the district of 89.19 as compared with 85.28 last year. Oulton St. John's mixed department had the highest percentage in the district, 93.39 against 91.28 in the previous February. The infants' department was 85.12 as against 74.24. Woodlesford Council mixed department showed a percentage of 90.98 for the month as compared with 91.10, and the infants' department 87.5 as against 86.21. The returns were considered satisfactory.

WHITKIRK

On Saturday afternoon Whitkirk hockey players went under to the R.H.A. by four goals to three.

A FORMER VICAR.—The Bishop of New Guinea, Right Rev. Gerald Sharp, who preached at York Minster on Sunday evening, was born in Cheshire on October 27th, 1865. He is the youngest son of Thomas Boult Sharp, Victoria Park, Manchester, and Bessie, daughter of James Liffle, of Arcourts Old Hall, Manchester, and was educated at St. John's College, Cambridge; ordained, 1889; curate of Aston-juxta-Tarporley, Cheshire, 1889-1893; Holy Innocents', Hammersmith, 1893-98; Vicar of Whitkirk, Yorks., 1898-1900. In the latter year he was appointed Bishop of New Guinea. His residence is at Samarai and Dogura, Bartle Bay, British New Guinea.

On Saturday afternoon Tadcaster had a football match with Wetherby Cor., and the Cal-cats won by five goals to nil.

The magistrates at Tadcaster Petty Sessions on Monday were:—Col. Gascoigne (in the chair), Mr J. H. Ingleby, and Mr S. Brooksbank.

Fred Bliss, labourer, Selby, was summoned at Selby on Monday for riding a bicycle on the footpath at Wistow, and was fined 1s. and costs.

HOUSING.—The Wetherby Rural District Council have ordered two houses at Wetherby to be closed as being unfit for habitation, and they have also demolished two cottages at Tockwith. The medical officer has been instructed to inspect a house at Wetherby and one at Spofforth.

WETHERBY GOLF CLUB.—In the monthly medal competition at Wetherby on Saturday the results were:—H. Armitage, 88, 13, 75; W. Graydon, 87, 11, 76; Rev. G. S. Charlewood, 91, 14, 77; W. N. Chrisdie, 88, 9, 79; G. Fourt, 97, 18, 79; S. Fobigg, 97, 18, 79; S. F. Parkinson, 89, 9, 80; R. Smithson, 101, 18, 83; C. E. Foulds, 103, 20, 83; T. Bath, 103, 18, 85; H. Whitaker, 109, 24, 85; S. Pickard, 112, 24, 88; J. Hudson, 112, 24, 88; H. Heap, 110, 22, 88.

HUNSLET BOARD OF GUARDIANS.

A ROTHWELL PRAYER.

PREPARING FOR A COAL STRIKE.

The fortnightly meeting of the Hunslet Board of Guardians was held at the Guardians' Offices, Hunslet, on Wednesday afternoon, the Chairman (Mr T. Thomas) presiding. Other members present were Mrs Dickinson, Rev. T. Cody, Dr. E. Groves, Messrs H. Schofield, J. Bennett, J. Butterick, T. G. Cowyers, W. Verity, E. B. Pickersgill, W. A. Appleyard, W. Lunn, W. Stead, J. Gawiss, Peace, Hemingway, and J. W. Verity, with the Clerk (Mr F. W. Ikin). The workhouse master's report showed that during the fortnight there had been one death in the workhouse, and that 31 vagrants had been relieved as against 60 for the corresponding period of last year, a decrease of 10.

A ROTHWELL PRAYER.

The minutes of the Children's Homes Committee showed that the committee had under consideration the letter from the Local Government Board with reference to the proposed emigration of certain children to Canada, together with the copy letter from Father Cody accompanying same, with reference to two Roman Catholic children. It was proposed by Mr Chappell, and seconded by Mr Schofield, that pursuant to the Board's authority, the Clerk be instructed to inform the whole of the facts before the Local Government Board, and ask for their reconsideration of the matter in the light thereof. An amendment was proposed by Mr Butterick, and seconded by Mr J. W. Verity, to substitute after "authority" the words "that the Roman Catholic children be emigrated through the Catholic Emigration Association instead of the Salvation Army." Messrs Butterick, Verity, and Cody voted in favour of the amendment, and Messrs Schofield, Stead, Appleyard, and Chappell against, and it was carried. The original motion was put and carried.

A letter was received from the chaplain to the Bishop of Ripon acknowledging the Guardians' letter respecting the prayer thought to some of the Homes' Children in the Rothwell Church Sunday School, and stating that the Bishop of Knaresborough, who is acting during the illness of the Bishop of Ripon, is giving the matter his attention, and has written the Vicar of Rothwell on the matter. It was resolved that the best thanks of the committee be given to Mr Mee (the Clerk), for his kindness in presenting a copy to the Children's Encyclopædia in eight volumes for the use of the children in the Homes.

In answer to Father Cody, the Clerk stated that he had not yet received a reply from the Local Government Board to his further letter.

The minutes were passed, Father Cody voting against.

WORKHOUSE COMMITTEE.

The minutes of the Workhouse Committee showed that a report was received from the subcommittee appointed to consider the subject of excess inmates in certain wards of the workhouse in which they made the following recommendations:—

(1). That it be left to the medical officer to arrange for two suitable cases from the lunatic wards to be sent to the asylum;

(2). That the Clerk be instructed to make the best arrangements possible for the transfer of the excess cases in the male infirmary to the Bramley Union; and

(3). That the Board be recommended to consider the whole question of the sufficiency of accommodation in the institution.

It was resolved that the above recommendations of the sub-committee be approved and adopted, and that they be thanked for their services.

The Clerk reported the completion of arrangements for the special training of selected probationer nurses in surgical and maternity nursing.

It was resolved that the superintendent nurse be instructed to obtain the approval of the committee at the commencement of each year, a plan of the proposed arrangement for nurses to be absent on training at outside institutions.

A letter was received from the Leeds Private Hospital Co., Ltd., agreeing that it will be most convenient that the probationer nurses should commence their period of training with them on the first of the month, and that they will expect one to go on the 1st proximo. It was resolved that the plan for this year be arranged so as to permit of one to go to Denison Hall on the 1st April as proposed.

The minutes were passed.

PREPARING FOR A STRIKE.

The Clerk asked for the instructions of the Board as to the supply of coal during the threatened strike. The workhouse master wished to avoid any difficulty so far as he could, and the contractor had communicated with the Glass Houghton Colliery Co., and they had replied that they could not guarantee to send trucks off unless they knew by four o'clock that afternoon. The master had suggested getting in a five weeks' supply.

Father Cody moved that a five weeks' supply be obtained.

Mr Lunn said he would move an amendment that the matter be referred to the House Committee.

Mr Butterick seconded, remarking that there would be no strike.

The amendment was lost upon a vote being taken, and one proposed by Mr Schofield that a sufficient quantity for two and a half weeks be obtained was carried.

COMPLAINTS BY INMATES.

When the recommendations of the committee considering the institutional regulations came up for discussion, Mr Lunn referred to a regulation which defined that inmates of the workhouse desirous of making a complaint should go to the workhouse master, who would bring it before the House Committee. He contended that if the inmates were allowed to make their complaints to the Guardians as they went round, they would probably hear more than would be the case if the complaints be made through the master. He moved that there should be inserted the regulation that complaints be made to the Board.

Mr Schofield seconded Mr Lunn's motion, as he considered that it was a very difficult thing for people in the position of inmates to come before the master when the master was present throughout the proceedings.

Mr Butterick asked if Mr Lunn meant that anyone desirous of making a complaint could have it to members of the Board not on the premises.

The Clerk said that the regulation set forth that when complaints were made to the master he should at once enter them in a register specially kept for the purpose and which should be presented at each meeting of the House Committee.

Mr Appleyard said he was of the opinion that there was a likelihood of the Guardians never hearing of complaints if it was compulsory that they should be made through the master, as the inmates would not care to make representations to the master.

Dr. Groves said if complaints were made to the Guardians in going round the institution then the Guardians would be doing their duty in bringing the complaints to the master.

Mrs Dickenson said she did not agree with the regulation. If inmates wanted to complain they should be allowed to complain to the Guardians if they wished to do so.

Mr Butterick said the resolution meant that when the inmates were allowed out they would present their complaints to individual Guardians. He had had several in that way, and no doubt would have several more. If he received such complaints then it would be his duty, according to the resolution, to bring the complaint, if there was anything in it, to the notice of the workhouse master. That he never had done, and never would do. He would send it to the House Committee. (Hear, hear).

The Clerk said the point was that any complaint made should be entered in a specially kept register by the master.

It was finally decided that the regulation be made to read that complaints are to be made to any Guardian, the Clerk, or master, who would forthwith make the entry in the register kept for the purpose, and to bring it before the meeting of the House Committee.

A STACK FIRE AT HALTON.

A BOY'S CONFESSION.

At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Albert Victor Lunn (13), an errand boy, living at Leeds, was charged in the Children's Court with having set fire to a stack of hay belonging to Richard Ricketyke, Thorn Farm, Halton.

Richard Ricketyke stated that about 4.45 on Sunday he was informed by a man named Dickinson that a stack belonging to him, which stood in a field on the Moor Road, was on fire. He also heard that four boys were associated with the fire. He found on going to the field that the stack was well alight. It was a half-ton stack. He valued the stack at £65, which was covered by insurance.

Walter Dickinson, of Halton, said that about 4.35 on Sunday afternoon he saw a boy stack on fire, and a moment later witnessed four boys running away. He gave chase and caught them, the boy Lunn admitting that he had set fire to the stack.

Sergeant Haigh said that he received news of the fire about 5 p.m. The stack was about 20 tons, and was burning all round. The boys were brought to him, and Lunn made a statement in writing, saying "I set the stack on fire with a piece of match I found in my pocket. I tried to put it out but could not. We all tried to put it out."

When formally charged, he said "I did it. We were crossing the field for a near cut."

Asked if he had anything to say, the boy said it was done by accident. He took a match and lit a piece of hay, not thinking it would set fire to the stack.

A clergyman spoke as to the boy's good character, and said he did not think he would do it maliciously.

The Chairman said they would like to give the boy a good thrashing but he was too old. They considered it stupidity on the part of the boy to do such an action. He asked the father if he had meted out any punishment to him, and he was told he had not.

The case was dismissed, the father to pay the costs.

REMINISCENCES OF TADCASTER

OLDEST POLICE PENSIONER IN THE COUNTRY.

A PARSON OF THE OLD SCHOOL.

A wonderful old man, Mr Samuel Stead, who is a native of Tadcaster, is spending the eventide of his life in the company of the frequenters of a village inn. In the genial charge of his daughter, Mrs Tindall, who is the hostess of a stick-and-spoon inn at Osmotherley, a picturesque old quaint village close to the renowned Mount Grace Priory, and on the verge of the Cleveland and Grace Priory, and on the verge of the Cleveland Hills, and consequently of the York paper had an interesting conversation with Mr Stead, whose sight is practically gone, but this deficiency has evidently quickened his other senses. Mr Stead stated that his parents farmed at "Long Moor," Tadcaster, and his father paid £1,000 on taking the farm over. When very young Mr Stead was carried to school by a servant. This school was kept by a masterly woman, and there was but one classroom. There was a constant hubbub of voices, as the scholars were grouped into various classes according to their ability, and three distinct lessons were sometimes going on at once. She was a good teacher, Mr Stead remarked, for when he was tired she would take her young scholar upon her knee, and croon him to sleep. Between the ages of 12 and 14 he attended the Grammar School at Tadcaster, which was then kept by the late Mr Geo. Hutchinson. The vicar of Tadcaster, the Rev. Mr Rhodes, was subsequently the principal of the school, Mr Stead explained, and he was a most hard-working man. On Sundays Mr Rhodes preached in the church at Tadcaster, saddled a horse and rode to Walton, near Wetherby, and conducted service there in the afternoon, then rode back in time to take evensong at Tadcaster. Upon the death of Mr Rhodes the school was taken over by Mr Wm. Cocker Bellhouse.

On leaving school when 14 years old, Mr Stead stated that he went to the "plough" basides on the farm, and assisted his father generally. He gave some interesting information on agriculture in those days, stating that they had no cutters, binders, nor threshing machines. The whole of the grain and hay had to be reaped by the scythe or sickle, and the grain was threshed by means of the flail. Mr Stead's father kept an old man all the year round to do nothing but the thrashing, women folk were allowed to go round the fields gleaning, and they often picked up as much as would keep their families in flour for the year.

Reference to the gleaners recalled to him a poem which he had learned in his younger days, and he recited it. It was entitled the "Farmer and the Traveller." There must have been close upon a thousand words in the poem, but Mr Stead gave it without a hitch and in a clear and resonant voice. "I got that off 50 years ago," he observed, so that he would be about 60 years of age when he committed it to memory.

For cutting the men were paid 1s. 6d. per acre, and the women who helped were paid 1s. per day. To housekeepers it might be of interest to know that flour was from 2s. 9d. to 3s. 6d. per stone, but Mr Stead remembered it rising to 4s. 6d. and 5s. per stone during the Crimean war, after which it dropped to 1s. 6d. per stone.

For some time Mr Stead was footman to Mr Addinall, and in connection with this employer's name he recalled how he came to hear the news of the death of King William IV. in 1837. He had been riding from Wetherby to Bramham Moor when Mr Addinall overtook them, and said: "Have you heard that the King is dead?" "No," was the answer. "Well, 'tis true," said Mr Addinall. "he died this morning." Mr Stead was then 14 years old.

Just before this time, however, he remembered seeing Princess Victoria (niece of King William IV., and subsequently Queen) while her Royal Highness was the guest of Lord Harewood and going to patronise the York Festival. He saw her at the White House, where a stop was made. Stead was with his mother, and close to the carriage from which the young Princess stepped. The Duchess of Kent was on the right side of the Princess, and young Stead standing by the Princess on the left felt the child's pride put his young hand on the waist of the Princess and lightly stroked the Royal frock "right down." "It was a great day that in Tadcaster," remarked Mr Stead, "and I was one of the proudest, although my mother reproved me for what I did."

One of the songs sung at the Festival was "Auld Robin Gray," and it was very well-known at the time, said Mr Stead. "I remember the words yet," he said, as he recited the verses.

His father, Mr Stead mentioned, used to drive the mail coach from Tadcaster to Leeds. The road was not enclosed by hedges then, but was marked by stone heaps. Up to the age of 26 he continued as an agricultural, and then, on February 20th, 1850, he entered the Leeds Police Force, but a sad accident he met with whilst on duty cut short his career as a police constable. He was stationed at the Duke Street police office, and on Christmas Day, 1855, he, along with some eleven brother constables, was ordered to put down a disturbance in the city, caused by a party of Irishmen. There were about 600 of them, remarked Mr Stead, who seemed to regard the affair as quite a common occurrence. At the collision with the police in Saxton Lane, Stead received a brick-bat on the forehead, just above the left eyebrow. It caused a terrible wound, cutting the artery and piercing the right arm and cutting the muscles of the hand. After several weeks of suffering Stead recovered, but he was of no further use as a constable, and from then to the present day he has been in receipt of a pension from the Leeds Watch Committee. He claims to be the oldest pensioner policeman in the kingdom.

Mr Stead was married in 1852, and had a family of five daughters and a son. His wife is now dead, but he has two daughters and a son living.

A FORMER WHITKIRK CLERGYMAN AND MISSIONS

BISHOP OF NEW GUINEA AND HIS PEOPLE.

The Bishop of New Guinea, the Right Rev. Gerald Sharp, is in England at present on a visit to his friends, and he occupied the pulpit at York Minster on Sunday evening, when he spoke to a large congregation.

In Lent, he said, there was a great deal said about giving up luxuries and extras, and about not doing this and that. That was all right, but there was a fear that they might forget that these were only a means to an end. They must not be merely negative, contented with doing nothing bad, but surely they wanted to go on and do something positive and to insist on doing something good. They talked about struggling against their besetting sin, but they must also seek to acquire the contrary virtue. It was not good shots, drove the ball into Gent's hands. The custodian made a faulty clearance, and the ball was sent to Laidlaw, who equalised with a capital shot. At the interval both sides had a goal.

On the restart Garforth started a pretty heading movement, and Stead sent the ball one to Bellamy, who, with a good shot, scored the third goal with a fine shot. Maintaining the pressure, Balfance again shot in, and Wilson failing to clear, Stead had no difficulty in netting. Aberford were now a beaten team, and the Garforthians simply played with them. The fourth goal, got from a corner, was probably the best of the match, being netted by Bellamy with a long shot. Afterwards Balfance should have had another, but Howson, who was off-side, pluckily in and robbed him of the leather. After Stead had banged the ball against the cross-bar, he returned and beat the custodian a fifth time, and Gibson scored the sixth from a corner. The seventh was scored by Worsley against his side from a corner, while the eighth was also netted from a corner. Pickersgill scored out to Howson, and he shot into the centre. Stead receiving and doing the needful. Stead headed to the ninth from a corner. Howson, who had played well, tried a shot, but his custodian saved, he went to the centre position, but it looked as if he was to be denied the privilege. Just on time, however, after he had headed the leather past the goalkeeper, he got the ball, and registered the tenth goal. The Garforthians won by ten goals to one.

Aberford's display in the second half was a great disappointment. They promised well, although their forward work was lacking in combination, and so long as they kept the Garforthians off the ball they were safe. But when Laidlaw and Inman were conspicuous throughout, and the backs got through a lot of hard work.

After the interval, however, the side simply went to pieces, and it was surely a case of withdrawing forwards to take part in the defence. Garforth, it must be confessed, did not show up very well in the first half, but they were distinctly superior to their rivals in the second half, when they scored from the from gave a fine exhibition of combined play. Birch, for once in a way, was not so prominent, but Ballance surpassed himself. Pickersgill played a good game, and received valuable assistance from Pickersgill. The halves completely mastered the Aberford forwards, who rarely got away, and the backs gave a good display. Settle, the match, owing to Aberford's breakdown in the second half, was a keen disappointment, but Garforth were worth the goals they got, and were greatly superior to their opponents. Garforth will meet Gilder Cawood or Selby Olympia in the final.

BARKSTON ASH FOOTBALL CUP

GARFORTH DEFEAT ABERFORD AT BARWICK.

The first of the semi-finals for the Barkston Ash Challenge Cup was played at Barwick on Saturday afternoon, the competing teams being Aberford and Garforth White Rose. The weather was showery, but there was a fairly good "gate," a sum of between £4 and £5 being taken. Mr J. H. Townend (Micklefield) was the referee, and the teams lined up as follows:—Aberford:—Goal, Wilson; backs, Thorp and Hayton; halfbacks, A. Dodds, Parkinson, and Illingworth; forwards, Inman, Kilburn, C. Dodds, Worsley and Laidlaw. Garforth:—Goal, Gent; backs, Ballmer and Atack; half-backs, Prime, H. Pickersgill, and Gibson; forwards, Ballance, Birch, Stead, Howson, and A. Pickersgill.

Garforth started the game against the wind, and both sides played with great energy, if with little combination. The first incident of interest was a promising attack on the Garforth citadel. Kilburn got away with the leather, and there was every prospect of a score, for the backs were beaten, when two of the Aberford men, who were off-side, spoilt Kilburn and Co. The goal was, of course, disallowed. Garforth retaliated, and Ballance was frequently prominent with clever play, but nothing came of it. Inman made a dashing run for Aberford, and, after beating Ballmer, he drove the leather into Gent's hands. Laidlaw then took up the running, his tricky play causing the Garforthians anxiety. Eventually Inman served a corner, and the leather was splendidly placed. Laidlaw secured and sent it hard for the net, but luckily Gent's feet were in the way, and the ball was cleared.

Garforth afterwards had a spell of attacking, and Ballance served a corner. The ball came out to Ballmer, and he banged it in, Stead pluckily rushing into the net. For a time Aberford were inactive, Laidlaw being the only player prominent, but towards the close of the half they roused themselves, and Inman, who made some

LOWEST BIRTH AND DEATH-RATES.

SCARLET FEVER AT KIPPAX—A PROSECUTION.

SHERBURN, LEDSHAM, AND SCHOLES WATER SUPPLIES.

In his annual report on the public health and sanitary condition of Tadcaster rural district for the last year, Dr. Bernard Stedman puts the population of the area at 18,000. He states:—

There were 194 births recorded, equivalent to a birth-rate of 21.6 per thousand. This is almost 2 per thousand less than that of any previous year. The average rate for the last five years was 23.8, and before that was consistently over 24. It is in the Aberford sub-district that the rate has fallen chiefly. Thirty-three births were illegitimate. The rate for England and Wales in 1913 was 24.5. The birth-rate in the sub-districts were as follows:—Aberford, 20.3; Tadcaster, 22; and Sherburn, 21.

DEATHS AND DEATH-RATE.

There were 336 deaths registered in the district, of which 9 were non-residents; 37 persons belonging to the district died elsewhere. This total of 364 deaths of residents is at the rate of 12.0 per thousand, and is the lowest recorded for this district. If corrected by the factor supplied by the Registrar-General in order to make the rate comparable with that of the whole country, it falls to 12.6. That for England and Wales was 13.4, and for the country areas 12.4. The number of deaths from phthisis, pneumonia, and bronchitis shows an increase, but those from diarrhœa in infants have risen considerably. Eleven were registered from whooping-cough. The death-rate in the Aberford district was 12.9; Tadcaster, 13.2; and Sherburn 11.9. Eighty-six were infants under one year of age, of which 10 were illegitimate, the infantile mortality (rate per 1,000 births) being 124. This is above the average, and entirely due to the prevalence of diarrhœa last summer, which caused 23 infant deaths. Nearly one-third of the illegitimate children died before attaining the age of one year. The infant mortality for the whole country was 109.

	Birth-rate	Death-rate	Infantile Mortality
Whole District	21.6	12.0	124
Aberford Sub-District	20.3	12.9	135
Tadcaster ,,	22.0	13.2	79
Sherburn ,,	21.0	11.9	148
Allerton Parva ,,	29.6	17.7	216
Kippax ,,	29.4	9.8	106
Tadcaster ,,	27.6	14.2	77

From the above table it will be seen that the parish of Allerton Bywater, with its bad condition of streets and rows of privy middens, compares very unfavourably with other parts of the district.

INFECTIOUS DISEASES—ALLERTON AND GARFORTH.

162 notifications were received, 23 being typhoid fever, 13 diphtheria, 29 phthisis, 11 other forms of tuberculosis, 7 erysipelas, 1 puerperal, 1 cerebro-spinal fever, and 78 scarlet.

Of the cases of typhoid eight were members of one family in Allerton Bywater. Six commenced during the last few days of September, and the others from the middle to the latter. These were the doubt infected from the earlier cases. The source of infection was not traced.

Two cases came from the Garforth urban district, and ran an outbreak existed. Four men had the complaint in November and December. All worked at one of the collieries, and there was good reason to believe that they caught the disease from the pit.

Every effort is made to get typhoid cases from working-class homes into hospital, and during the year 19 cases were removed. The other cases were of a comparatively unsatisfactory and the risk of spreading infection considerable. This fact seems now to be well-known, and we find patients generally only too eager to avail themselves of treatment at the hospital. The results during the last few years have been gratifying, considering the many severe and dangerous cases that have occurred. The late Aberford's breakdown was the second half, was a keen disappointment, but Garforth were worth the goals they got, and were greatly superior to their opponents. Garforth will meet Gilder Cawood or Selby Olympia in the final.

BRAMHAM MOOR HUNT.

HUNTING IN WETHERBY DISTRICT.

On Friday the Bramham Moor Hunt met at Walton, and a good day's sport began at Hall Parks. A fox crossed the railway at Scarcroft Road, and visited Thorp Arch Hall and then through Thorparch Whin, and was taken over the Walton and Wetherby Road to Barnett's Wood and alongside the railway for some distance towards Wetherby. Then he crossed the line, crossed the railway and the York and Wetherby Road, and was hunted on with some checks across Lodge Lane, with the Doctor's Plantations on the right, up to the Boroughbridge Road, but after crossing it, he doubled back, and was very slowly taken with Armitage Plantation on the left to Wilton Garth, and there abandoned after a hunt of one hour and fifteen minutes.

Finding at once at Bickerton Spring, the pack ran at top pace, and bearing to the left crossed the Wetherby and York Road. This again, in the Hollins Field Rash, and, again bearing to the left, crossed Rudgate, and got to ground just short of Bickerton Grange Stud Farm. Hounds ran excellently well for the first 30 minutes of a gallop, travelling for the most part from Marston Hall Farm. The fox taken was principally over plough, but so good was scent that grounds crossed it with the greatest dash and confidence. Going over the Tockwith and Boroughbridge Road, the fox, leaving White Syke Whin wide on the left, ran straight and fast to Wilstrop. Nine times out of ten a fox would have entered this cover, but this one did not touch it, and leaving it close on the right, ran nearly down to Skewkirk Bridge, and, sticking to the turns and twists of the River Nidd, passed Hall Farm, and leaving the river crossed Rudgate to Bessy Wood. Up to this the pack had travelled at a good pace for thirty minutes.

The fox now ran through Spring Wood and Hesketh Field Rash, and, again making for the river banks, ran slowly alongside them to Cowthorpe, and passing the famous oak, bore away to the left up to Goose Moor, hounds being run to view at the Willow Garth. The Duck Pond Wood was blank. A fox from Champagne Gorse headed out for Wighill, but at Rudgate turned to the right, and crossing the Boggart House Drain pointed for the Wetherby Race course. Just short of it he bent back to the right, and going through Hadfields Plantation crossed the York Road to the Duck Pond Wood, and being taken on to the Willow Garth was abandoned.

HOUSING AT TADCASTER.

Last year I reported upon the scarcity of houses in Tadcaster, and stated that a number were scarcely fit for habitation. No action was taken until after the receipt of a letter from the Local Government Board in September, asking what had been done. A special committee was then formed to consider the question, and after several meetings decided that the number of cottages was sufficient to satisfy the demand, and that those of which I had complained were being, or already had been, repaired. I was then asked to make a special report on the whole subject, and to give details of those dwellings which I had mentioned as scarcely fit for habitation. This was presented to the District Council in October, and was as follows:—

"I have recently made further inspection of the housing conditions in the town, and although improvement has been made in many of those recently purchased by one of the brewery companies in Chapel Street, I am of opinion that the number of houses is still short of that required to accommodate the working-classes.

"A number still exist with only one room downstairs and one bedroom. These have not through ventilation, place for storage of food, are generally dilapidated, and more or less damp. It was especially these houses to which I referred as being scarcely fit for habitation. They would serve if repaired for an old person or couple, but are unfit for a family. Such houses are found in Robin Hood's Yard, Dawson's Yard, and Ladypits. Similar, but still more dilapidated, are those in Redcliffe Yard, but at present only three out of thirteen are occupied. Those in Bolland's Yard have only one bedroom, but are in better condition than the above.

"In Rosemary Row during the last 18 months the houses in the lower end have been thoroughly repaired, and are now good cottages. Those higher up are dilapidated; some are damp, with defective sanitary conveniences and bad condition of backyards. These have one fair-sized bedroom in front and a small room or space at the top of the stairs behind, which is badly lighted and ventilated. They are only suitable for small families.

"Many of the houses mentioned are overcrowded. I give a few instances:—

One-bedroomed house, 14ft. 6in. by 15ft. by 7ft. 2in. (1,413 cubic feet), occupied by husband, wife, son aged 27, daughter aged 24, and two children aged 5 and 3.

One-bedroomed house, 10ft. by 11ft. by 6ft. (660 cubic feet), occupied by husband, wife, and 4 children.

One-bedroomed house, 13ft. by 12ft. by 6ft. 9in. (1,053 cubic feet), occupied by husband, wife, and 4 children.

Two-bedroomed house—in the front room 16ft. by 11ft. by 7ft. (1,232 cubic feet), sleep husband, wife, and 7 children.

Two-bedroomed house, 1,056 cubic feet in the two rooms), occupied by husband, wife and 7 children (two over 12 years of age).

Two-bedroomed house (1,386 cubic feet in the two rooms), occupied by husband, wife, and 7 children (two over 12).

"Complaints are constantly made that persons cannot get a larger house, and if present there do not appear to be any available. Those which have been erected during the last few years have been occupied as soon as completed.

"I have prepared a list of houses, and should be glad if a committee of this Council would visit some, or all, of them."

In my last annual report I mentioned a house in Leeds Road, Kippax, for which a closing order had been made in November. The place was rendered fit for habitation, and certificate for occupation given in January.

Helena Street, Kippax, and Robinson and Victoria Streets, in Allerton, would have been better dealt with in the above manner than allowing the owners to do the work themselves. The two former already require further attention.

HOUSING AT TADCASTER.

Although cottage building is going on fairly rapidly in Kippax and the Leeds Lane district of Allerton Bywater parish, tenants are readily found for their occupation. During 1913 thirty-five new houses were erected, thirty being in the above-named parishes.

BOWERS ALLERTON AND NEWTON.

In accordance with the requirements of the Housing and Town Planning Act, 1909, these were inspected during the year. Four were in such a state as to be unfit for habitation—two at Bowers Allerton and two at Newton. The former are cottage dwellings, and are those of dilapidation and dampness. Closing orders were made in June, and one is at present unoccupied. In the other case application is to be made to the justices for a notice to the tenant to quit. Those at Newton were in a similar state of decay, and have been empty since October, the result of closing orders made in July. Demolition orders for all the above will shortly be considered by the Council. Notices to this effect have already been given to the owners. These four cottages were let as parts of two farms, but for years have been sub-let to colliers, doubtless on account of the higher rent than could be paid by farm labourers.

One-hundred-and-three of the houses inspected were found to have defects, either in the house itself or surroundings. Fifty-six notices were served for their remedy. As a result, dampness has been removed in 16; more light and ventilation provided in 13; the drainage improved in 30; defective sanitary conveniences in 43. Sixteen backyards have been paved. Twenty-six houses have been provided with sinks, and one, for which a copper and other had been made, was demolished voluntarily.

MILK—TUBERCULOSIS.

There are now 110 registered cowkeepers in the district, occupying 140 sheds. Those have been inspected, and are kept in a very fair condition—a great improvement upon that of ten years ago.

By the provisions of the Tuberculosis Order, which came into operation in May, important powers are given to local authorities for the protection of meat and milk against tuberculosis. Any suspected cases of tuberculosis of the udder in cattle, or tuberculosis with emaciation, must be notified to the police. If, after examination by the veterinary inspector, the case is found to be one of the above, notice is given to the Sanitary Authority and the animal slaughtered. Compensation is paid to the owner by the local authority, and the carcase disposed of by them. In all cases of advanced tuberculosis it is destroyed. Nine cases were so notified during the year.

Twenty inspections were made of the factories and sixty-four of the workshops. Four notices were served for want of cleanliness, and complied with. In one for defective sanitary conveniences the requirements have not yet been carried out. There are six bakehouses and 50 other workshops at present on the register. Four outworkers are employed in tailoring.

DRAINAGE—KIPPAX, ALLERTON, AMERFORD.

The drainage of St. John's Hill, Aberford, has not yet been carried out, owing to the difficulty of obtaining a suitable outlet for the proposed sewers.

At Allerton Bywater 210 yards of six inch sewer have been laid in Robinson Street, and the old sewer converted into a surface water drain. This will save a certain amount of pumping at the outfall works. Other streets will be dealt with in due course.

The sewage of Kippax at present drains to three outfall works, which, owing to active building operations, have become inadequate, and caused complaints from the West Riding Rivers Board. Plans have now been prepared for a comprehensive scheme, dealing with the whole of the sewage for the parish of Brigshaw Lane. The sewage from Leeds Road and Preston Lane will require pumping. The method of treatment suggested is detritus tanks, settling cisterns, contact beds, sludging filters, and humus tanks. This scheme ought to include 19 houses (now draining to a cesspool) known as Waddington Row, in Great Preston township.

The works at Ledstone consisted of a covered septic tank and three contact beds, but owing to want of proper attention they became inadequate. The district Council have now taken them over and had them re-modelled. Two of the beds are provided with automatic double tippers and perforated trays, the third being used as a contact bed only.

The new sewers in Lock Lane have now been laid, the old ones remaining as surface water drains. They drain to a pumping station, where the sewage is to be screened before being lifted by two electrically driven pumps on to the Allerton Bywater works. These will be enlarged by the addition of one settling tank and two contact beds. The connections to the sewers will be made as soon as electric power is available at the pumping station.

The necessary power under the Private Streets Works Act having been obtain for Lock Lane, the Council appointed a surveyor to carry out the work in taking over the streets. Plans, specifications, and apportionments have been approved by the Council, and the work is to be carried out when connections to the new sewers have been made.

The farm cottage at Scarthingwell which I reported as unfit for habitation in December, 1912, was repaired and re-occupied in April.

Closing orders were made for the two houses in Holmfield Lane, Kippax, reported last year. They have since been thoroughly repaired; also the one-roomed cottage in Finkle Hill, Sherburn. These are now occupied.

CHAPTER I.

"And now, Annie, some of those dear little Scotch roses from the garden. You will find them along the hedge in the kitchen garden. Run and fetch them, please, Annie, and bring me some pink and some white. See that you get a very, very nice bunch."

"Eh, but Miss Pamela, you look beautiful as you be," said the somewhat rough-looking elderly woman who was hovering round her young mistress, gazing at her with open admiration in her eyes.

Pamela stamped one of her pretty feet. The colour rushed into her cheeks, and her eyes, always big and dark and intense in their expression, flashed fire just at that moment. Then she went up to the woman, and put her hand on her shoulder.

"Please, Annie; it's for him, you know."

"Eh, eh!" said the woman. Enlightenment seemed to come into her face. She went downstairs. Pamela Lennox stood and watched her as she crossed the wide lawn and disappeared into the kitchen garden at the back.

Pamela was all in white. Her dress was of the simplest, and yet anyone who knew the intricacies of a girl's dress would have guessed at once that its very simplicity showed it to be the work of a first-rate dressmaker—in short, the work of an artist. The dressmaker, on this occasion, was Pamela herself. She was proud of her designs. She liked to dress, not according to fashion, but according to that which pleased the eye. And now, with her dark hair swept softly back from her broad, low forehead, the colour coming and going in her cheeks, with her slender young figure drawn up to its full height, she looked as fair a representation of youth and love and joyousness as the heart of man could desire.

Pamela was eighteen years of age. Annie, her maid, who had been with her since her birth, was between forty and fifty. To all the rest of the world Annie Kitchener was a stern, reserved, unpleasant woman; but she understood Pamela, and Pamela understood her. She lived for Pamela, doing everything for the girl, waiting upon her day and night, reading her secrets just as though they were an open book, and planning out her future with a keenness of desire which she had never expended on her own in the long ago days when she was young.

She soon returned with the roses. "Here they are, Miss Pamela. They're the very best I could get. Shall I pin 'em in for you, or will you do it yourself?"

"Thank you, Annie, I'll manage them. And now go and rest, there's a dear old thing."

"And what shouldn't I be hanging about when he comes?" said Annie.

"I will bring him to you by-and-bye, Annie. You go and sit in the old nursery, and I'll bring him. Get your work and sit there, and some time to-night he and I will arrive together and talk to you. We'll talk of old times—it will be fun."

Annie's wrinkled old face brightened. "That will be fine, Miss Pamela," she said; "and if I know you're coming I'll make the room as cosy and span as room can be. Now then, I'm off."

She lingered a minute, however, before she went, glancing at the girl in her white dress. When she closed the door behind her she said, under her breath: "Heaven bless and keep my darling! There ain't no one like her in all this wide world."

Meanwhile, Pamela had fastened the roses into her belt. She had put on a large white muslin hat, which gave the finishing touch to her simple toilette, and then she went out into the garden.

There was not in the whole of the lovely county of Surrey a more beautiful place than Connop Grange, and Paul Colthurst, the owner of this place, evidently thought so as he stood in his garden now and waited for Pamela to appear.

"Well, my dear?" he said.

She ran swiftly up to him, and slipped her hand through his arm. "It is so funny, dad!" she said. "Do you know that for the first time since I can remember it dawns upon me that you are not my father at all."

"Don't talk of that, child," was his answer. But his manner had been as a daughter to me ever since I married your mother and left them—ever since I first saw you, dear. You were only a baby when your mother and I married, and Peter——"

"How old was Peter then?" asked the girl.

"Peter was five years old—nearly six."

"I was eighteen my last birthday," said Pamela, "and Peter is nearly five years older, but I feel as if we were the same age. I have always looked upon him as a brother, and I have looked upon you as a father."

"Well, dear, I am not your father, and Peter is not your brother, but——"

"Oh, you both dwell in my heart," she answered, kissing him, "and it is splendid to feel that Peter is coming back—that he has taken his degree with such grand honours at Oxford, and that he will live here for the summer. And later on our relationship. I must call you dad; what do you think will happen to Peter in the future?"

"I hope," said Mr. Colthurst, speaking in a slow and somewhat deliberate voice, "that Peter will give himself up to a practical life. It is unnecessary for him to work for money, because to-and-bye he will be the owner of Connop Grange. He will be a rich man, and I am myself in a position to give him plenty of money for all his present needs."

Pamela's bright eyes grew a little brighter. Suddenly she said: "I want to say something."

"Yes, my dear; what is it?"

"Before mother comes out——"

"Yes, dear?"

The girl looked full it to his face. It was a stern face, formed on strong lines. There was not a scrap of weakness about it. The lips were firm, the chin good, the eyes bold and direct in their glance.

Paul Colthurst was not an old man, as age is counted in our present day. His carriage was very erect; he had a great deal of what is called personality. Pamela knew well that in any crowd Paul Colthurst would be singled out for special observation. He would be remarked upon, not because he was the owner of Connop Grange, but because he was himself. Pamela was a girl who closely observed character, and she had noticed this fact in Paul from her earliest intercourse with him, from the time when she, as a little child, used to go about with him and her mother. Even at the big foreign hotels Colthurst was looked at, was commented upon. People hunted up the visitors' book in order to find out his name; and yet he was no one in particular—only just an upright, honourable English gentleman.

"Peter was his only son. He was his son by a former marriage, just as Pamela was his second wife's daughter by a former marriage, Peter and Pamela had grown up more or less together. Peter was unlike his father. He had not one single attribute in common with the older man. But there was nothing weak about him. He was of a different build, that was all. He seemed to have come of a different race. He was less of an Englishman and more of a foreigner. His eyes were very dark and deep, and had that sort of velvety blackness about them which is generally an heritage of southern suns. He had delicate features and well-formed features, and a well-formed figure, a perfect figure—in all respects he was a young man to draw a girl's heart to himself. Nevertheless, he was not in the least like the older man.

"He will be here," said Paul Colthurst, taking out his watch and glancing at it as he spoke, "in an hour at the latest. Pam, when did you see Peter last?"

"Not since he left," said Pamela, "for I was away. I was with the Jenkinses at Rome. As a matter of fact, I haven't seen Peter for a year. I suppose he is changed?"

"I don't believe you will find him so."

"I hope I shall," answered the girl. "At his time of life a year ought to mean growth. I want Peter to grow. Do you really think, dad, that it is good for a young man like our Peter to have nothing to do?"

Paul turned and glanced at her. "All men, whether rich or poor, ought to live the life," he answered, "and the life means fulness, each one occupied, each ability strained to the utmost, each faculty brought into play. Any other sort of life means deterioration of character."

"I agree with you," said the girl. She clasped her hands tightly together. "The man who wastes life," she continued, "is not worth looking at, not worth talking to. Peter must not join that ghastly lot of human beings."

"Pamela, you must encourage him; you must rouse his ambition. He can easily be elected for Parliament. He can get a seat in the House. When there, he must speak; he must be an orator; he must be the support of his party. By-and-bye, he may even get into the Cabinet. Oh! my child, the man who has money, who has enough power not to have to earn it, can lead a splendid life—a life full and completely occupied."

"That is possible," replied Pamela. "All the same," she added, speaking slowly, "the poor man has the best chance."

"My darling child, what do you mean?"

"It's the impetus, dad. He needs impetus. He gets it if he is poor. It's very difficult to give it to him if he is rich. Do you know," she added, and she turned now and fixed her beautiful eyes on his face, "I almost hate rich people."

Paul's smile was indulgent. It was the sort of smile that the old bestow upon the young. He presently took up a number of his dainty gown, held it between his finger and thumb, and then dropped it.

"If you were poor, Pamela——"

"Yes?" she said, her eyes sparkling.

"You could not dress as you do now."

"I am talking of Peter now, not myself," she answered, with great eagerness; "but, as you have alluded to me, I don't think for a moment it would kill me to be poor. I believe that my life would be much more interesting. As to dress—well, of course, I do love beautiful dress; but I could make something very like this, only not quite so good; cashmere instead of silk; imitation lace instead of real. Oh! you darling, you'd never see the difference. I certainly would feel just as happy in my cashmere and imitation lace dress. The fact is, dad, riches make life frightfully monotonous."

They were walking now up and down the rose walk. They were going slowly. Here for many generations roses of every sort and description bloomed and grew in lavish profusion. The favourite rose of all in this long, narrow walk was the Maiden's Blush. It in any crowd Paul Colthurst would be singled out for special observation. He would be remarked upon, not because he was the owner of Connop Grange, but because he was himself. Pamela was a girl who closely observed character, and she had noticed this fact in Paul from her earliest intercourse with him, from the time when she, as a little child, used to go about with him and her mother. Even at the big foreign hotels Colthurst was looked at, was commented upon. Connop Grange. The lake was a quarter of a mile in length, and in her early days Pamela used to spend hours here amusing herself pulling the great white water-lilies, and allowing Peter to row her about. She had been somewhat of a tyrant to Peter in those long ago times, but now she was no longer a tyrant. Something had happened during his last visit a year ago which had caused a new sensation to visit her heart. They had been out in the boat together, when suddenly she made a discovery. She bent forward eagerly as if fleshed with her mind.

"Why, Pete!" she exclaimed.

"Yes, Pam, what is it? Won't you steer? We'll get into all those weeds if you are not careful."

With a skilful movement of the helm she soon got the boat into the centre of the lake.

"I've just found out," she said, with a gay laugh, "that we're no relation at all. Why, we could, if we liked, be even sweethearts. How funny!" She laughed heavily.

Peter made no reply, but when she had ceased to laugh he looked full into her eyes, and she saw something in his which caused her to blush and turn away. He was a little shy and even awkward with her during the rest of the day, but did not pursue the subject of their discourse any further. As they were going up to the house she slipped her hand through his arm, and said:

"Peter, boy, you are not angry, are you?"

"Angry?" he answered. "No."

Nevertheless, she wondered if he was. She wondered if she had said an unmaidenly thing. The thought of the speech, which had escaped without any consideration from her lips, came back to her again and again. She wanted to unveil her mother about it, but Mrs. Colthurst, although devoted to Pamela, was not the sort of person to confide in. To all the rest of the world, even to her husband, Mrs. Colthurst was stiff and reserved. She adored Pamela. She would have died for her child. As for all other people, she was more or less indifferent to them.

Pamela remembered that during the year that had gone by neither she nor Peter had exchanged even one letter. He sent her messages through his father, but that was all. And now he was coming back, it was absurd of her to be so pleased, when she had a lot of lovers and was the darling, the adored, of every boy in the place.

The sound of an approaching motor-car caused her to start and walk rapidly in the direction of the house. The car was coming down the avenue. A young man was driving it. When he saw Pamela he drew up abruptly, said something to the chauffeur, got out, and ran rapidly to her side.

"Here I am, Pam! I am Peter. I am full-fledged. I have taken my degree, and a good one too. I can look all the world in the face, and you most of all. Oh, I say, Pam!"

His eyes were full of delight. The light in his eyes was reflected in hers. She felt her heart beat. She felt that she was growing just a trifle giddy. She sank back against a chair which was placed by accident almost in her way.

"What is the matter?" said Peter.

"I haven't seen you for a year," was her reply.

"And I haven't seen you for a year."

He bent down close to her. She turned her eyes away.

"What is the matter with you?" he said. "You are——"

He looked towards the house. There was no one in sight. The great, broad, comfortable, irregular old pile might have been destitute of inhabitants, as far as his young eyes could perceive. He looked to right and to left of him. Then, with a sudden impulse, in an instant he had fallen on one knee and taken her hand.

"Oh, darling," he said. "Thank Heaven we are not brother and sister, no—nor even cousins. Pamela, I will ask out boldly, for if you don't want to think of it I know you will as boldly say so. Will you be my wife, little Pam? Will you?"

At that she gave way to sweep her arms round his neck and lay her head on his breast.

A MOORTOWN SLANDER ACTION.

SCHOOLMASTER GETS £5 DAMAGES.

WHAT THE JURY THOUGHT.

At Leeds Assizes on Monday Thomas Fletcher, headmaster of the Council School, Moortown, sued Stanley Dale, builder and contractor, and Ada Airey, for an alleged slander. Mr E. Tindal Atkinson, K.C., and Mr H. S. Cuthbert were for the plaintiff, and Mr Coutts Trotter appeared in defence.

According to the facts stated in counsel's opening, the slander arose out of what took place about noon on June 30th, when the plaintiff was teaching a geography class in Standard IIc., the defendant's child, Mabel, being one of the children. She was sitting with another girl at a desk in the second row, and was very much interested. Three times he called her to attention, and asked her to come out, but she took not the slightest notice. At last he took her by the arm and brought her out. There was no violence, and the child did not complain of being hurt. Subsequently the mother defendant wrote to the school asking for information as to what had taken place to cause Mabel to have her hair pulled out. Miss Mawson, the class teacher, who was in the room at the time the incident occurred, replied, and said that Mabel was talking, and refused to obey the defendant's letter, but that she knew Mabel had been very inattentive, and that she had found the child difficult to teach. On July 30th Mrs Airey called at the school, and said that the plaintiff had pulled the girl's hair out and bruised her knee. Later Mrs Airey told some one in the village that the plaintiff had struck the defendants in the district, and he had threatened to lose his profession as a teacher in consequence.

The plaintiff, in the course of his evidence, said that on the day in question the defendant's child was inattentive. He was suffering from rheumatism, and he took the class for her. It contained thirty or forty children, and they sat at dual desks. Mabel was talking and playing with her hair, and after he had spoken to her three times he took her by the arm, and placed her near the wall, two yards away from defendant. He did not hurt her in the least, and she never complained. When the class was dismissed the little girl went off, "skipping and frisking about" with the other children. He complained to Mr Airey that his wife had been saying untrue things in the village about his treatment of the child, he replied that it was "the way of a woman," and said he could not explain it in any other way. He further said that the child's knee was bruised.

Cross-examined by Mr Coutts Trotter (for the defence), the plaintiff said he had not noticed that the child had a nervous affection. She did not knock her knee when he took her out of the desk. She cried a little, and perhaps that was because of the disgrace of being brought out.

Several witnesses spoke as to the statements made to them by Mrs Airey.

The child, Mabel Airey, was called for the defence. She said she was stroking her hair back when Mr Fletcher told her to come out, and as she didn't he pulled her out by the shoulder. As she was getting out her knee was bruised against the brass of the desk. She stood out on injury to the knee, and on examination witness found a bruise the size of an egg. As to the pulling of the child's hair, she never complained of that, because it was another child and not her daughter who told her it had happened.

Dr. Scarborough, of Chapel Allerton, stated that he saw the child some days afterwards, and she had a discolouration above the knee-cap, about the size of a five shilling piece. The child was suffering in a mild form from "St. Vitus' dance."

The other defendant stated that he wrote to the plaintiff on the subject, but Mr Fletcher did not answer his letter. When he heard that Mr Fletcher had "shown up" his child before the class he went to see him. Mr Fletcher denied that he had said the child was a liar, but to the other questions as to whether he had held her up to reproach before the whole school, and told her to sit by her "ill-hale friend," he would not answer.

Mr Coutts Trotter, addressing the jury, submitted that Mr Fletcher had treated a sensitive child with wholly unr easonable roughness, and that his conduct on July 4th, when he made his the object of scorn and derision before the other children, was unjustifiable and cruel.

The jury, consulting for a few minutes in the box, found for the plaintiff, awarding £5 damages.

His Lordship said he thought they might have given him a little more.

The Foreman: We left it all through that it was a very frivolous case, and a waste of our time. We also thought that it should have been arranged during the luncheon interval on an ample apology.

His Lordship: I wish it had been.

Mr Atkinson: On behalf of my client let me say I have been always willing to arrange it.

His Lordship (to the jury): Well, never mind about the money; you want to clear his character, I suppose?

The Foreman: Yes, my Lord.

ACTION AGAINST A ROUNDHAY MAN.

VERDICT FOR PLAINTIFF.

James William Sanderson, of Middle Parks Farm, Ripon, farmer, sued John Scholes, Oak Lea, Park Vilkas, Roundhay, gentleman, at Ripon County Court on Saturday, for £30 balance of the price of sheaving he to the defendant. Defendant had given notice that he refused upon the following grounds of defence: "That Section 4 of the Statute of Frauds (29, Charles II., C. 3) has not been complied with." Mr Harold Newell, instructed by Messrs Heddon and Heddon, was for the plaintiff, and Mr T. Scholes, of Leeds, was for the defence.

Mr Newell stated that the plaintiff farmed some 400 acres of land at Middle Parkes Farm, near Ripon. In the year 1912 he let his shooting rights to the defendant for £60, and the following year he again let the shooting rights to defendant for £60—£30 to be paid down and £30 at the end of the season. Defendant shot the farm from September 1st to December 2nd, on which day, because a man whom the plaintiff had taken into his employ was snaring rabbits and had half-a-dozen rabbits in his possession, defendant refused to pay the £30 owing. As his Honour would know when these small shoots were let the farmer always kept the control of the rabbits in his care, and on this occasion the man had been engaged to snare the rabbits as they were doing damage to the spring wheat.

Mr Scholes, for the defence, said there was an agreement, and the terms of the agreement were important. The difficulty was that plaintiff agreed to let Mr Scholes have the shooting, and not to take any ground game or rabbits, and that was the reason why the £30 was not to be paid until the end of the season.

Plaintiff was called, and corroborated Mr Newell's opening statement, and the defendant stated his side of the case. He added that he made his own conditions as to the shooting, and that the plaintiff should not touch the rabbits.

His Honour said Mr Scholes need not labour the case, as he could see pretty clearly that the taking of a sack of rabbits would justify defendant withholding the rent. He did not think there was any defence, even assuming all that had been said was correct. Defendant was perfectly aware that plaintiff was taking rabbits in 1912, and he took no exception to that in taking the shooting in 1913. If he had then said that he did not wish him to take any more rabbits catching, as in the previous year, and that he desired to shoot all the rabbits himself, that might have been different, but when he sold he took it on the same terms as what was there to prevent plaintiff thinking he was fully entitled to take a few rabbits? There might have been an action against him for trespass, but he should doubt even that. He gave a verdict for the plaintiff for £30 with costs.

THE LADIES' COLUMN

SORE THROAT.

Simple remedies appear to be most effectual. Salt and water is used by many as a gargle, but a little alum and honey dissolved in sage tea is better. Apply cold cloths wrung out of hot water and applied to the neck, changing as often as they become too cool, has great efficacy for removing inflammation. It should be kept up for a number of hours during the evening in the usually most convenient time for applying this remedy.

A HEALTH FOOD.

Honey is a medicament which can be used for various purposes. Dyspeptics, on a special treatment consisting in a strict food regimen, should use it as a dessert in place of cakes, fruits, and nuts such as are forbidden. It says the Family Doctor, has still one more advantage, which is that it acts as a mild laxative, and thus is a valuable adjuvant for habitual constipation, which gives rise to many disorders. Without doubt it is to this double action that honey owes its reputation. As a narcotic it may be recommended for sleeplessness. Two spoonfuls of honey in a glass of water will soon produce sleep all night. It is probable that honey in such cases serves to displace indigestible food, which, retained in the stomach, irritates the nightly rest. This is not all. Honey mixed with water serves as an excellent diuretic, and therefore useful for any one agreeable to the taste, either swallowed by accident or on purpose, for hours after a meal of fish or shellfish, and the ancient Gauls thought such a beverage was a drink of the gods and termed it hydromel.

COOKING BACON AND HAM.

Bacon and ham should be placed in a cold frying-pan, and be heated through very slowly. This prevents the rashers from curling up, and gives the slices a chance of being equally cooked. Grilled bacon is generally considered better for invalids and dyspeptics, as the surplus fat is drained away. Bacon fat which has been drained from grilled or fried rashers is a wholesome substitute for butter, and is greatly appreciated by children.

HOUSEKEEPING WRINKLES.

White marks made on polished tables by hot plates and dishes can be entirely removed by brushing the patches with spirits of nitre, rubbing them immediately afterwards with sweet oil.

Picture frames can be readily regilded at home by applying a mixture consisting of one ounce of gold bronze powder, one ounce of gold size, and half a gill of turpentine. Mix these ingredients well together, and keep stirring it while using it. Apply it to the frame with a camel hair brush.

When boiling eggs, to obtain the heaviest, also test the fruit by seeing if, when pressed with the thumb, it yields with a slight cracking sound. The best way to store apples is to place them among dry hay in a perfectly dry place.

Home-made bread is easily prepared, and is much less expensive than the shop variety. Get a pound of "flour" from the pork butcher; it will cost about fivepence. Cut it in pieces, and put in a jar. Place this jar in a larger one, half-filled with water. Put them in a slow oven, so that the fat will melt gradually. One pound of "flare" yields nearly a pound of lard.

If a little ammonia is put in the water used for cleaning mirrors and windows, the glass is quickly and perfectly polished.

Boots can be waterproofed by being left to stand for several hours in linseed oil. They should be wiped well when taken out.

According to a wholesale furniture dealer the best way to clean the backs of oak and other alcohol and two-thirds sweet oil. Apply it with a soft cloth, and rub with another cloth. Grained wood should be washed with cold tea.

NICE DISHES.

FILLETS OF MUTTON.—Cut the under-fillet entire from a loin of mutton, divide it across in two parts, and cut off the thick end of bone as near level from the top. Lard the fillets with small strips of bacon, and season with pepper and salt, and broil carefully over a clear fire; glaze, and arrange them in a circle on the dish; pour good clear gravy round, and serve. Cutlets are prepared as follows, in the centre: Cut slices of potato a quarter of an inch thick, trim them to about one and a-half inch wide, then cut into strips a quarter of an inch thick; fry by immersing them in hot fat, drain on a dish. Strain, and thicken the gravy, season with pepper, salt, and a suspicion of powdered mace, pour over, and serve. Garnish with slices of lemon, and strew a little chopped parsley over the meat.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TEACHERS' SALARIES—WHAT A CORRESPONDENT SAYS.

POSITION IN THE WEST RIDING.

(To the Editor).

Sir,—A serious difficulty in efficiently staffing the primary schools of the country has long been presaged. The Right Hon. J. A. Pease, Minister for Education, speaking in the House of Commons, declared some time ago, "In 1906-7 the number of pupil teachers and bursars was 8,740. In the year 1912-13 the number was only 4,370. In 1902 the Board of Education regarded 14,000 as about the gross inflow that ought to come from the country, and the very fact that they had only 4,370 showed the proportion of the position."

The day of absolute dearth has not yet, but many Education Authorities are finding a serious shortage in the market. Among these is the Education Committee of the West Riding County Council. Many of their schools have for many months been carried on without their usual teaching staff, and a list issued from their office recently showed that there were no fewer than 178 vacancies offered to aspirants desirous of entering their service.

The seriousness of this condition is intensified by the fact that the only methods of improving the education given in our national primary schools (the sole education which the great mass of the potential citizens of the country are likely for many years to obtain) can only be brought about by an increase in the number of qualified teachers employed, and the reduction of the classes to numbers which will allow of really efficient educational methods being pursued.

That the West Riding Authority recognize the danger of allowing matters to drift is shown by their attempt to induce entrants to come into the profession in increasing numbers, by the institution of 100 Intending Teacher Scholarships per annum.

The scholarships are open to scholars between the ages of 13 and 14 attending public elementary schools within the West Riding area and cover:—(1) Free tuition at secondary schools (including charges for games and use of books); (2) travelling expenses where the distance between home and school is more than two miles; and (3) maintenance allowance as follows:—1st year, boys £6, girls £5; 2nd year, boys £6, girls £4; and 3rd year, boys £8, girls £6.

The Education Committee would find great difficulty in justifying the position that either child or parent could decide whether the aspirant has any vocational ability or enthusiasm for the teaching profession at such an early age as 13. Exact vocational training or any attempt to map out a child's career with exactness should be deferred to a much later age.

The maintenance allowances can scarcely be described as munificent, amounting as they do to an average sum of 2s. 6d. weekly in the case of the boys and 1s. 9d. for a girl. Still, 'in these days when the question is so often cynically put, "What shall we do with our daughters?" and almost every parent is in a quandary as to what trade or profession will offer a reasonable reward in the years to come for his son's labours and abilities, the offer should be viewed with suspicion. What other trade or profession finds it necessary to offer a bonus to entrants? Is not such a bonus tacit admission that the ultimate reward is so unattractive that parents fight shy of such a career for a child of parts?

It is the evident intention of the West Riding Authority that intending Teacher Scholarships shall be chiefly occupied by the children of the working-classes, for the parent must apply in "forms pauperis," declaring that his child "requires assistance in order to render attendance at a secondary school financially possible." Just such parents should unwittingly allow their offspring to be led into a profession with whose outlook and reward they may on reaching adult age be most bitterly disappointed, a brief sketch of the financial conditions of service under the West Riding County Council is here outlined.

After three years' attendance at a secondary school as an intending teacher attending two courses offer themselves. The youth or maiden of 16 may (a) become a bursar, continuing education at the secondary school with a maintenance allowance of £10 for a boy or £8 for a girl, or (b) elect to become a pupil teacher, engaged partly in practical teaching and partly in attendance at a secondary school, for a period of two years, receiving meanwhile the following as remuneration:—Boys, 1st year, £14, 2nd year, £21; girls, 1st year, £10, 2nd year, £17.

Having passed the necessary qualifying examination the aspirant will now be qualified as an uncertificated teacher, for whose services the West Riding Authority offer a salary of £55, rising in 5 years to £70 or £1 7s. per week for men, or for women (as in initial salary), rising in the same period to £60, or 23s. weekly.

Should the pedagogic apprentice desire to make further professional advance a period of home study extending over a period of at least two years will enable the aiding teachers' examination to be attempted.

The difficulty of success may be gauged by the following figures from the report of the Board of Education (1909-10) on the final certificate examination:

Year.	Entered.	Passed.	Percentage of Failures.
1907	8473	5168	37·5
1908	5197	2122	59·2
1909	6186	2350	62·3
1910	6663	2011	69·8

Should success attend the student's efforts, he or she is still debarred from appointment as a head teacher, and can only hope for one of the following financial reward:—For men £75, rising in 6 years to £120, or £2 6s. weekly, and for women £65 rising in 5 years to £90, or 34s. weekly.

In order to obtain full professional qualification 2 years' residence in a training college is now required. This will entail an expenditure, towards which the Authority offer no assistance, of £150 with the most rigid economy, or more probably, of £200 or over. This the parent must be prepared to disburse. If his child is not to be a mere educational hewer of wood and drawer of water. On leaving college at the age of 20 or 21, the newly fledged pedagogue may accept service as a trained certificated class teacher, starting, if a man, at £85 per annum, and rising in 6 years to a maximum of £130, or £2 10s. weekly, while women rise in 5 years from £75 to £100 or £1 18s. 6d. a week.

In order that yearly increases may be obtained, the teacher's work must be above reproach, the slightest adverse criticism by the numerous inspectors and assessors who visit the schools being considered sufficient to cause refusal of advance.

What about the plums of the profession? These are head teacherships, and little over 1 per cent. of the qualified staff receive such appointments annually, and these must necessarily be unattainable by the majority and can scarcely be expected till the ripe age of 40 is over reached. The average salaries of head teachers in West Riding schools during year ending 31st March, 1912, were, according to a recently issued parliamentary white paper, for men £149, and for women £110.

It is proverbially impolite to look a gift horse in the mouth, yet the parent to whom the impending heir of financial assistance during the preliminary training as a teacher is offered, may reasonably be advised to consider whether it is wise to enter his child where the rewards of long training, strict probity of character, and strenuous service for the good of the community offer such relatively poor financial reward.—Yours, etc.,

PEDAGOGUE.

KIPPAX AND ITS AFFAIRS.

(To the Editor).

Sir,—The news contained in your last week's issue as to the steps that are being taken to ascertain the wishes of the ratepayers in regard to a recreation ground for Kippax seems to point to a solution of this problem in the near future. The provision of a playing field for the children is of paramount importance and should be the concern of every ratepayer. A canvass of the village should reveal the attitude of the villagers in regard to the matter. The question of a recreation ground for Kippax children required to be attacked with more vigour and with greater earnestness, and this is evidently being done.

The parish meeting which is to be held shortly will provide an excellent opportunity for an expression on opinion on this and other questions which still have to find solution.

The need of a fire engine and a fire brigade was brought prominently before our minds a little while ago, when a stack or stacks were burnt down, and a cottage might have been, and we had to go elsewhere for apparatus to deal with these fires. Such occurrences might never happen again, but who can tell? The parish meeting should talk these matters over, and after due consideration the meeting will, I think, deem it advisable not to sell the fire engine, but to keep it ready for efficient service when occasion requires.—Yours, etc.,

A RATEPAYER.

ROTHWELL URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL.

ELECTION—NOMINATIONS.

The nominations for the Rothwell Urban District Council were received on Thursday, and the following is the list of candidates:—

North Ward—*Joseph Hargreaves Corden, colliery manager, Possessorance Villa, Rothwell Haigh.

South Ward—*James Broadbent Hindle, auctioneer, Spring Bank, Carlton Lane, Rothwell, and Wilfred Robinson, bootmaker and repairer, Woodland Crescent, Rothwell Haigh.

Stourton Ward (ordinary vacancy)—*Thomas Ellis, miner, Board Street, Stourton.

Carlton Ward—*George Armitage, stone merchant and quarry-owner, Westfield, Rothwell; Walter Speake, miner, B. Charlesworth's Row, Carlton.

Lofthouse-with-Thorpe—*Squire Robert Chadwick, mining engineer, Haigh View, Rothwell Haigh.

Stourton Ward (bye-election)—Walter Wade, Stourton House, Wakefield Road, Stourton.

* Shows retiring members.

As will be seen from above there will, in the event of no withdrawals, be two bye-lections—one in the South Ward and the other in the Carlton Ward.

The vacancy in the Stourton Ward caused by the resignation of Mr J. W. Vollons has been filled by Mr Walter Wade, who has been returned unopposed.

The election will take place on Saturday, April 4th.

BISHOP OF NEW GUINEA VISITS WHITKIRK

RECEPTION AT HALTON.

On Monday evening a meeting was held in the Parochial Hall, Halton, to welcome the Bishop of New Guinea, the Right Rev. Gerald Sharp, to his old parish. The Vicar (Rev. B. Guyer) and Mr T. Piercy had kindly provided refreshments, and about 300 of the parishioners and friends gathered to meet their old pastor and friend.

The Vicar said that he had no need to introduce the Bishop, as from the signs of welcome he had witnessed he did not think there was any introduction needed.

The Bishop, who was heartily cheered, said he was very glad to be back in the old parish. It seemed so long since he had left them that many of the elderly people were now grey-headed, nearly 100 years old, but was agreeably disappointed, as most of the elder people were much the same in appearance as when he went away, but he noticed a difference in the young boys and girls, who had grown into men and women. He expected that some of those present would have been expecting to see him changed into a decrepit old man, but he was thankful to say that was not so. With the exception of his knee he was quite well. He said he was quite happy in his beloved New Guinea, and the work was a great pleasure to him and deeply interesting; in fact, he would be pleased to go back, and if he was offered the position of the Archbishop of Canterbury (which was very unlikely), he would rather go back to New Guinea.

Speaking of his home in new Guinea, he said the climate was very hot, and even in the coldest weather they had it was almost impossible to get cool. The food they got to eat was all from tins—tinned meat, tinned milk, and tinned vegetables, and they had no mutton, and no beef. There were no railways, no roads, no bicycles, and no travelling could be done at all except by water. He was about 5 months out of the 12 on the water, and before he got his bishopric it took him a long time to get from one place to another. The house he lived in was built of wood, and the walls were made of cocoa fibre and leaves, through which it was quite easy to push one's fingers. There were holes in the wall to let in air. One would think these holes would also let in the rain, but that was not so, as there was a twelve foot verandah all round the house. The roof was of iron, and there was a large tank at each corner which held a thousand gallons of water, and that was the way to which they got their water. Sometimes there was no rain for 3 years.

It was surprising the sacrifices the people made, after their conversion, to get to church, some having to walk six or eight miles there and back to attend communion. He instanced one woman who had to cross a creek which was infested by crocodiles, and on one occasion she had her dog with her, and it was eaten up by crocodiles as she herself was crossing. The natives were able to carry on a conversation and were good companions. The teaching in the schools was very little behind that of this country; he was surprised at the quickness of the children in answering questions in mental arithmetic—questions which would have puzzled him to answer. It was very generally believed that the natives were all cannibals, but since the introduction of the mission work about 20 years ago that had changed very much indeed. He thought they could not find among the natives any person over thirty years of age who had not tasted human flesh, but, on the other hand, he did not think they could find any who had got to 16 years of age who had tasted it. He had 25 lay readers, who received £20 a year for their services and were quite content to remain there and work. He described a journey to a church 48 miles away, and said it had to be made in a whale boat, which it took ten men to row. It was very hard work they managed to progress at the rate of 1 mile an hour, so it took 4 days, working 12 hours a day, to travel the 48 miles.

OULTON AND WOODLESFORD AFFAIRS.

THE ADMINISTRATION OF A CHARITY.

WOODLESFORD AND A RECREATION GROUND.

The annual meeting of the Oulton and Woodlesford Parish Council was held in the Woodlesford Council School on Tuesday night, Mr W. Poole presiding. There was a good attendance.

A discussion arose out of a question upon the minutes of the last annual meeting as to the charities awarded apprentices in the district. Mr T. H. Killingbeck asked the Clerk for the reply of the trustees to the following letter which had been forwarded to them after the last annual meeting:—"This meeting suggests that apprentices in all trades in which it is not customary to have legal indenture be eligible for an amount from the bounty." The Clerk read the reply from the chairman of the trustees, which stated that an order had been issued by the chairman to the trustees, and they were acting upon it.

This reply, said Mr Killingbeck, was most unsatisfactory. They found even pupil teachers receiving a sum from the charity.

Mr Parkin said that at a meeting held at Rothwell some years ago it was decided that pupil teachers as well as young girls in business should rank as apprentices.

A list of those in receipt of the charity was read, there being twenty-seven names, and Mr Killingbeck said he knew of some of those whose names appeared in the list who were not legally bound. Many firms in Leeds did not at the present time bind their apprentices, and it was simply a question of those who got to the trustees first with the best tale. (Laughter). The old system of binding apprentice was fast dying out.

Mr H. Parkin said if Mr Killingbeck would give him the names privately of those who were not legally bound, he would bring the matter up at the next meeting of the trustees. An order had been issued that no apprentice should be entitled to the charity unless he was indentured.

Mr Killingbeck said he would put the following resolution:—"That this meeting requests the Parish Council to approach the Charity Commissioners to get a definite ruling on the question of apprentices, and as to whether the Trustees are carrying out the orders or not."

Mr Pickersgill seconded, and on the resolution being put to the meeting it was carried.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT JOTTINGS.

Woodlesford is one of the growing places of the district, and were the population it employs resident within its boundaries a large number of houses would have to be built. Nothing has been done to meet the demand for dwellings, although Messrs Briggs are to build a number of houses, and it was singular that the question was not raised at the parish meeting. But the ratepayers were engaged in the discussion of so many questions that I suppose they over-looked this particular one.

What the Woodlesford ratepayers have done, however, has been to take the preliminary steps in the promotion of a scheme calculated to safeguard the young life of the district. They are apparently determined to have a recreation ground, and it is really astonishing that in these days a country place cannot get a few acres of land for this purpose without going to a great deal of trouble. The parish fathers should see that the playground they acquire is central, otherwise its value will be minimised.

When a large number of men and women are gathered together it would be astonishing did not grievances arise occasionally, and the Hunslet Guardians have had under discussion the momentous question as to who shall receive complaints from the inmates of their establishment at Rothwell Haigh. Hitherto they have been made to the master, but there may be a reluctance on the part of some of the members of the large family to go to him with grievances, and it has been decided that in future they may give the Guardians their confidence. This is a step in the right direction, but care should be taken not to encourage chronic grumblers or the persons who are never happy unless they are unhappy.

Tadcaster, Wetherby, Selby, and Hunslet Board of Guardians must make a note of it. The Local Government Board has notified the poor law authorities that the old-age pensions of persons entering the workhouse must not be appropriated for the cost of maintenance, but must be repaid to the Treasury. Certain Boards of Guardians desired to annex the 5s. per week, but the pension was never intended to pay for the maintenance of paupers, and the Guardians will now be silent. On the other hand, septuagenarians entered workhouses, and, after living at the ratepayers' expense for a while, they went out and drew their pensions, and had a high time. That will now be stopped.

Nothing, however, should be done to encourage old people entitled to the pension to avail themselves of relief. In the Hunslet Union some time ago figures were published showing an unsatisfactory state of things. People cannot be compelled to apply for pensions, but they should be encouraged to do so, and no poor law scale should be framed in such a way as to compete with the pension. It may be admitted that the persons who do not avail themselves of the industrial soldier's reward, as it has been termed, do not deserve to be classed with the respectable poor, because they are utterly lacking in independence and self-respect

Roundhay, Seacroft, Shadwell, and Crossgates, having the advantage of a preferential rate, are perhaps not profoundly interested in the administrative affairs of Leeds, but the ratepayers must take cognizance of the wasteful expenditure which, the Council admit, has been going on in the city. A demand has, I notice, been made for the resignation of the whole Council, and it would not be a bad plan to make a clean sweep of men who have publicly announced that their work was inefficient. It would not be easy, however, to convince the aldermen that the affairs of Leeds could be administered without them.

Evidently the report of the Committee of Five has been discussed all over the country, and some startling comments have appeared in the newspapers. A journal, published in a city many miles from Leeds, states:—"What is really wanted is to get the right class of men into the Council, men who are capable, fearless, and vigilant, who will not play the part of time-servers and trucklers to demagogic influences. Such men can be found. They ought to come forward and work, instead of, as is often the case, hanging back and playing the part of outside critics." This, too, seems a suggestion that the "old gang" should be swept out.

Will a water supply be provided for Scholes this year? Last summer, the medical officer states, there was a "water famine" in the place, and he suggests the laying of a main from Stanks to supply the village. Water is certainly needed, and after the arbitration proceedings are settled, the District Council will be free to proceed with some scheme or other. Scholes people, however, are not by any means unanimous about the introduction of a public scheme, and more than one member of Barwick Council has got into trouble for advocating such a thing. Probably the residents in the outlying parts of the ward are under objection to paying for any deficiency that might arise on a scheme, but Barwick would have to assist, too. If a scheme could be got to supply the whole parish it would be preferable, but the needs of Scholes must, in any event, be met.

Housing conditions in Tadcaster are probably worse than in any place in the Union, and the medical officer's report will come as an eye-opener to the public. In old towns a number of old, damp dwellings are usually found—the sad legacy from an unprogressive age—but in time must come for them to be demolished, in order to make room for more sanitary and convenient houses. Tadcaster has its share of these out-of-date dwellings, and they must either be improved or knocked down.

In one-bedroomed houses at Tadcaster it is not unusual to find families of six—not a very desirable state of affairs, but if the people were turned out they would have nowhere to go, and it would be a cruel injustice to put them into the street. Nevertheless, the conditions are a danger to health and should be remedied at the earliest possible date. I understand that the directors of John Smith's Brewery, who have erected a large number of houses already, intend building cottages at East Tadcaster to meet the need, and when their scheme is completed the District Council will have no difficulty in dealing with the property which is "scarcely fit for habitation."

Frequently the inadvisability of allowing property-owners in Tadcaster and Garforth areas to tinker with private streets, instead of having them made-up under the Private Street Works Act, has been pointed out in this column, but so-called sympathy with the poor property-owner has invariably led to the postponement of the work being properly done. Of course, the policy is a foolish one from the point of view of both the property-owner and the ratepayer, and it is easy to furnish evidence in support of this

Garforth, after giving the property-owners a chance to repair the streets, has put into force the provisions of the Private Street Works Act, and Tadcaster District Council have adopted a similar course in regard to the streets at Lock Lane. This is the most economical and efficient method of dealing with streets, because the property-owner has only one payment to make, and the ratepayer gets a good road to walk on, whereas the other plan is neither cheap nor satisfactory. The medical officer of health for Tadcaster rural area states:—

Helena Street, Kippax, and Robinson and Victoria Streets, in Allerton Bywater, would have been better dealt with under the Private Street Works Act instead of allowing the owners to do the work themselves. The two former already require further attention.

Perhaps this will be a lesson to Tadcaster District Council.

Allerton Bywater ratepayers should demand better streets, because the present conditions are a danger to the public health. The township had an infantile mortality of 216 per 1,000 births last year, as compared with 124 for the Tadcaster district and 109 for the whole country, and the general death-rate was 17 against 12.9 for the area. Continuing, the medical officer remarks "that the parish of Allerton Bywater, with its bad condition of streets and rows of privy middens, compares very unfavourably with other parts of the district." The way to improvement is obvious.

Honours to Garforth district! In the month of November the Garforth school district had the highest attendance of all the districts in the West Riding, and in January it secured second position. The figures for the West Riding for February are not published yet, but the percentage of attendance in Garforth district is so high that one expects it to be at the top again.

Nine schools in Aberford, Barwick, Scholes, and Garforth comprise the district, and seven of the schools had a percentage of over 90. Scholes secured premier honours with 96.88, and it had the remarkable record of having every child on the register, with one exception, in attendance during the whole of February. Kippax district had a percentage of 91.74, and Sherburn district 91.60, South Milford having the fine figures of 96.80. Every attendance recorded means money, and by sending their children regularly to school the ratepayers are helping themselves.

The general meeting of the Aberford Conservative Association was held at the Swan Hotel on Friday. A good number of new members were enrolled.

CRICKET CLUB.—The members of the Monk Fryston Cricket Club are entering upon a new era, as it were, and the coming season promises to be an interesting one for all concerned. During the winter the genial and esteemed President (the Rev. B. Hemsworth, J.P.) has laid out at considerable expense a new ground in a field adjoining the Park, and constructed a pavilion, sunk a well for water, and provided water basins, etc. For many years the club has stuck almost at one level, but the popular President desires to see the club amongst the foremost in the district. He presided over a good gathering of members at the annual meeting held at the Institute on Tuesday evening, and in his address he told the members he wished the Cricket Club to be as prominent as the Choral Society, the Agriculture Show and Sports Society, and the Nursing Association. Mr J. Foster, joint-secretary with Mr T. E. Foster, presented the report, which showed a balance of 10s. 2d. It was decided to alter the name of the club to "Monk Fryston Park Cricket Club." The President was re-elected, and also the patrons and vice-presidents. Mr T. E. Foster was elected hon. sec., with Mr J. Foster assistant sec. The latter was chosen as captain, and Mr Jos. Long vice-captain. Mr H. Furniss was re-elected hon. treasurer and the following committee were chosen:—Messrs R. Ward (Chairman), J. Beaumont (vice-chairman), W. Long, R. Foster, R. Pickering, A. Dickenson, T. Atkinson, H. Laycock, C. Hester, and F. Waines. A good list of fixtures has been arranged with the following clubs:—Hillam Hall, Eccleston Hall, Carleton, Wentbridge, York N.E.R., Boston Spa and Thorparch, Whitwood, Swillington Park, Sherburn-in-Elmet, Castleford A, and Castleford Wesleyans. The opening match will be played at home with Hillam Hall on May 9th. At the close of the proceedings the President was cordially thanked on the motion of Mr G. Young, seconded by Mr J. Long, who expressed in high terms the members' thankfulness for Mr Hemsworth's generosity. The rev. gentleman suitably responded.

AMUSEMENTS.

LEEDS EMPIRE PALACE.

At the Empire Palace one of the principal items is given by George Lashwood. His songs, new and old, all "get there," and his cordial reception on Monday night was not more than he merited. Another turn of merit is that given by The Grotesques, whose burlesque of a village concert is distinctly good. Vivian Foster, as the presiding Vicar, is capital fun. Others in the bill are:—Little Gamry, of comical manner; Howard and Harris, in their familiar business, "The Tramp and the Soubrette"; Thora, in his ventriloquial act; Victor and Louis, comedians; Lewis Douglas, comedian and dancer; Edith Fink, comedienne; and the Delvinos, in a skit entitled, "An Interrupted Serenade."

The principal attraction at the Leeds Empire for Monday next is, to quote the programme matter, "a mixture of mirth, music and song, to be taken twice nightly," entitled "Just My Luck" and presented by Mr Henry Dallas. It has been written (and will be produced) by George Lesaeq, with music by H. Sullivan-Rivaler, and lyrics by Messrs George Lesaeq, Hugh Robinson, and E. Le Breton Martin. A very fine cast has been secured for this production, the principal characters being taken by Messrs John Le Hay, Alec Johnstone, Gilbert Childs, and the Misses Babs Wilson, Gwen Linley, Eileen North, Gladys Anderson, and Isla Raine. The scene is laid in the lounge and hall of the Hotel Metropole, Beyting, and the action takes place during Christmas Eve, Christmas morning, and Christmas night. A comedy skit, entitled "The Electric Car Conductor," to be presented by Ernest Krake and Co.; 8 Lancashire Lads, in a vocal and dancing act; Sidney James, the versatile comedian; Little Zola, another popular comedian; and a new series of pictures on the bioscope complete the programme.

LEEDS HIPPODROME

At the Hippodrome this week Carlton, the card manipulator and comic juggler, gives one of the leading turns. In his latest act he takes the part of a hypnotist who makes people do all manner of queer things and shows their mental gifts according to his stronger will. Several of the performers who appeared locally some time ago in "Wild Australia," are now making a tour of the halls and give scenes from Wild Australia. Mdlle. Bonita performs with her snakes, and several members of this company go through buck-jumping feats and show how the lasso and the snack-whip are manipulated. Miss Mary Moran, new character artiste, receives a fine ovation. Her studies and creations from life are perfectly natural and she has a happy gift of humour. Spessel Brothers and Mack, in "An American Quick Lunch," combine broad comedy with some clever acrobatic feats, and Bertha Gibeonus (assisted by Fred Houlihan at the piano) show some very difficult dancing steps. Miss Gleesons is the champion lady dancer of America, and her turn is one of the cleverest and prettiest on the halls. The Eight Varsity Girls in revels from revues trip the light fantastic toe merrily, and show off some exceedingly pretty dresses. The Dukes Duo are also appearing.

Next week at the Hippodrome the leading place will be held by Ella Retford, described as the modern girl. Josephine La Barte, in her delightful songs at the piano, and Ernest H. Mills, lightning art humorist, will appear, as well as the Four Royal Scots, in their novel vocal and instrumental act; Ralli's and Wilson Trio, in their absurdity "The crazy ragmen"; W. F. Reno, a cycle comedian; Junora and Partner, in their latest novelty act; and Lily Langtry, the electric spark. Hippodrome pictures will also be shown.

LEEDS QUEEN'S THEATRE.

At the Leeds Queen's Theatre on Monday the play "A Warning to Women" was the attraction. It deals with the ambitions of a young and clever doctor, whose sole object in life is to obtain vengeance upon mankind through the unfortunate history of his birth, but to gain his ambition he defies, through hypnotic influence and the use of morphia, a young and handsome country girl on the very day of her wedding, to join with him in the gaiety of city life. Nothing could have been finer than Mr Mill's impersonation of the villainous doctor, and equally successful was Miss Maud Powell's acting in the role of his victim. The same play is to be produced on Saturday; on Wednesday and Thursday "The Love of a Princess" was staged; while on Friday night "For Love and the King" is down for presentation.

Next week at the Queen's Theatre Herbert Shelley's Star Co. will appear in "A Mill Girl's Wedding," which has been received everywhere with enthusiasm.

LEEDS CITY VARIETIES.

At the City Varieties this week the great attraction is an animated picture showing the great fight at the London Palladium between Bombardier Wells and Bandsman Blake. It is a most wonderful picture, and as it was taken with special lighting arrangements it shows every incident with great clearness. Agda and Co. present a Continental novelty act, which goes well. Nora Marvyn is a charming descriptive soprano vocalist, with a couple of good songs. Bunny and Katt, in a comedy and instrumental scena are good, and Harold Heath is a capital vocalist and a fine eccentric dancer. Goodall and Knox, burlesque comedians, have a comedy style, and the pictures are up to the usual high standard.

Next week at the Varieties the principal item in a first rate bill will be "The 12th Man," presented by Messrs Wilson and Crook. The piece shows a tug-of-war between prosecution and defence, how circumstantial evidence fails, and how a man's life in a dramatic trial is saved by a miracle. Fred Ward, assisted by his little lady Selina, will introduce their latest burlesque coon scena. Eddy Le Hay and Florence Irene, the juggling eccentrics will also provide a humorous act. Others appearing in the bill are Zenora, a clever equilibrist; Myra Grey, the original Yorkshire nightingale, and Jack W. Rooke, comedian, together with the pictures on the Variescope.

LEEDS THEATRE DE LUXE.

At the Theatre de Luxe during the first half of this week the principal attraction was a thrilling African picture entitled, "Amid Raging Beasts." The film bristled with exciting incidents, wild animals of every description playing an important part in the production. Another capital drama was entitled "The Trail of Snake Band," whilst "Binks Elevates the Stage" and "A Muddy Romance" were a couple of "screams." A series of photos depicting the varied beauties of three French health resorts was very interesting, and "The Magic Fountain Pen," was something new in cinematography. The "star" picture to-day and Saturday will be "Fighters of the Plains."

A SEACROFT TEACHER'S TRAGIC DEATH

THE INQUEST IN LEEDS.

Mr George Edwin Taylor, of Seacroft, an assistant master at the St. Matthew's elementary school, in Camp Road, Leeds, expired suddenly in the school on Tuesday. He entered the building as the scholars were reassembling for the afternoon, and having signed on, walked about fifteen yards across the room and then collapsed. Other teachers came to his help, and Mr Thompson, the head master, sent for Dr. Gordon, but death had occurred before the doctor's arrival. The tragic occurrence made a painful impression on the staff and scholars, amongst whom Mr Taylor was very much liked. He was fifty years of age, and leaves a wife and two children.

Mr Taylor, who was well-known in the district, served his apprenticeship at the old school at Crossgates. In Seacroft he took a keen interest in various institutions, and he was organist at the Wesleyan Church.

The inquest was held yesterday afternoon before the Leeds City Coroner (Mr J. C. Malcolm) at the Leeds Town Hall.

A brother of the deceased, Mr John Taylor, identified the body, and said he could not account for such a sudden death.

The headmaster of the St. Matthew's School, Mr Percy Thompson, stated that the deceased was an assistant master at the school, and he had known him for many years. Witness explained that it was the duty of a teacher to be at school at 1.20 p.m. and sign the log according to the time of his arrival. On Tuesday afternoon Mr Taylor arrived at the school at 1.20, and signing the log book, which was lying on the desk, walked off a few yards behind a partition. He had just disappeared out of sight when witness heard one of the other teachers shout "Mr Thompson." He (witness) rushed to the spot and saw a teacher holding Mr Taylor in her arms. He got hold of him, and deceased made a noise. He was laid down, and Dr. Gordon was called in, and on examination he found that death had taken place.

Witness said that, as a rule, deceased had his lunch in the town, but that day he had, in addition, made some purchases for his home. When he arrived at school he was flushed and looked as if he had been hurrying, although he never made any complaint.

Dr. Gordon spoke to finding Mr Taylor dead. There was a small abrasion on the forehead, no doubt caused by the fall. Death was due to cerebral hemorrhage.

The jury returned a verdict in accordance with the medical evidence.

A dish of fine mushrooms was gathered in Raby Park, Wetherby, the other day.

A verdict of death from heart disease was returned at an inquest at Tadcaster on Tuesday on Robert Peel (51), a tramping labourer, who expired suddenly at a lodging-house on Monday.

FOOTBALL.—On Saturday afternoon Tadcaster had a match with Harewood, and the Cockerites won by four goals to one. In a match between Tadcaster Grammar School and Tadcaster Primrose the former won by five goals to one.

LADY ELECTRICIAN.—Some time ago the County Council granted Thorner a second representative on Wetherby Board of Guardians and District Council, and the only nomination received was that of Miss Hilda Mary Vasey, of Bramley Grange, and she was declared elected.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.—The percentage of attendance for Sherburn school district last month was 91.60 against 88.74 for February of last year. The figures for the local schools were:—Sherburn Endowed, 93.57 against 95.1; Sherburn Girls' School, 93.56 and 99.71; and Sherburn Infants' School, 87.13 and 84.76.

GOLDEN WEDDING.—Mr and Mrs John Baxter, of Ribston, Wetherby, have just celebrated their golden wedding. They are aged respectively 71 and 69 years of age, and were married at South Muir, Forfar. They have had a family of ten children, of whom four daughters and three sons survive, and they have 18 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

TADCASTER.—A meeting in connection with the National Service League held in the Girls' Schoolroom, Kirkgate, on Monday evening. Mr W. Sykes presided, and he was supported by Ald. E. C. Brooksbank, Mr C. B. Lamb, and Dr. J. P. Southard. Major Stansfield, York, delivered an address, which was followed by a lantern lecture descriptive of the Balkan War.

MOTOR-CAR IN FLAMES.—A remarkable mishap, involving the destruction of a motor-car by fire, occurred just outside Tadcaster, on the road to Leeds on Wednesday. Mr J. E. Northrop, of Chellow Dene House, Bradford, was motoring with friends when the car skidded and overturned, rolling down a bank by the roadside. It burst into flames and was almost completely destroyed. The chauffeur, whose name is Wilson, was the most seriously injured. All the others escaped with bruises.

OUR GARDENS.

A Weekly Article specially Written for
Amateur Gardeners, Allotment Holders, &c.
By ALBERT CLARKE, Birkenshaw.

THE FLOWER GARDEN

At this time of the year the fast lengthening days and increased sun power suggest the necessity of speeding up outdoor gardening operations. A few warm, sunny days soon tempt one to commence sowing seed of hardy annuals. The enthusiasm which prompts one to hurry on with these little duties is very commendable, but unfortunately rarely meets with the reward it seems to merit. As a general rule flower seeds sown in April will bloom earlier and give all-round better results than those sown in March. Although patience must be the watchword in regard to seed-sowing, there are innumerable other duties requiring attention. Cleanliness should be the first consideration, and now that spring flowers are making their appearance, it must be remembered that clean and tidy surroundings greatly enhance the beauty of all kinds of flowering plants. The surface soil amongst spring-flowering plants should be frequently stirred with a small hoe or rake. Grass verges should be kept trim and neat, and where failures have occurred in the beds and borders the vacant places should be filled with fresh plants. Dwarf subjects such as arabis, aubretias, or even London Pride, may be used to carpet beds filled with bulbs. They not only improve the appearance, but do much towards preventing the bulb flowers getting splashed with soil during wet weather.

Hardy climbers in variety may now be pruned. An exception is the clematis montana. This blooms on the long stems produced the previous year. If it gets overgrown it may be cut back after flowering.

CLIMBING ROSES.

Climbing roses are occupying sheltered positions may now be pruned. When trained on a south wall they get full benefit of the sun, and if pruned early will bloom at a correspondingly early date. The pruning of this class of rose is a simple matter. Remove all dead wood and very weak shoots first, then reduce last year's strong growths to two-thirds their length. After flowering they may be pruned well back to encourage the production of strong wood for next year's flowering.

Rambler roses of the Dorothy Perkins type may still be planted. If pot grown plants are available they should be planted in preference to those from the open ground. The tremendous amount of growth produced by this class of rose correctly implies its requirements in regard to the production of ample cool root-run and nourishment. So far as pruning is concerned severe measures are best with newly-planted trees. They should be cut back to within six inches of the ground in April. This means that no flowers will be obtained the first year. The flowers are produced on the previous year's growths. By cutting these away, the trees are enabled to concentrate their energies upon building up strong growth, and any little sacrifice that is made the first year will be more than compensated for the following year by the clouds of blossoms which will follow.

LAWNS.

Continue to make free use of the roller wherever the turf is in suitable condition. There is no better way of obtaining a close, fine growth than by consolidating the turf in this way. Bare patches may be repaired by sowing lawn seeds at once. Dress the seed with red load before sowing.

PRIMULA MALACOIDES.

This charming little plant is worthy of a place in every garden where pot plants are grown. It is easily raised from seed and has a remarkably long flowering season. The small, star-like flowers are produced in great profusion, and are of a pale lilac shade. Sow the seed now on a light compost, and in a warm house. As soon as the seedlings may be conveniently handled, they may be pricked into boxes of fibrous loam and sand. When two inches high they may be transferred to 3-inch pots, and later to the 5-inch size. For the final potting a compost of 3 parts fibrous loam, 1 part leaf mould, with a sprinkling of wood ashes or charcoal, sand, and bone meal will satisfy them. During the summer months they may be stood in a cold frame, and should be shaded from bright sun. Overhead spraying is beneficial to them until they commence to flower. A white variety of malacoides is advertised, but from what we have heard of it we hesitate to recommend its cultivation. It is said that very few of the seedlings produce white flowers. We have it under trial this year and will report upon it in due course. During the early stages of growth this plant requires a warm, moist atmosphere. The temperature of a vinery suits it very well, and the partial shade provided by the vines is also conducive to its welfare. About mid-September the plants will again require a little fire heat and must be removed from the cold frames or the foliage will damp off wholesale.

RE-POTTING BEDDING GERANIUMS.

Year-old plants of bedding geraniums that were lifted last autumn and potted into small pots, will require potting again this spring. Soil in which chrysanthemums have been grown will answer the purpose quite as well as fresh loam. Four to five inches is the size of the pots usually required, depending of course upon the size of the plants. Many of the plants will have developed a number of young shoots, and these should be reduced to three or four on each plant. The surplus growths may be used as cuttings, and will root freely if placed in sandy soil in a warm greenhouse. Water carefully until roots form.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

By the time these notes appear it will be quite safe to stand rooted chrysanthemums in the cold frame. It will be necessary to keep a sharp look out for frost, and if there appears to be danger of that coming the frame must be safely matted up. Sun heat is getting more powerful every day and this entails closer vigilance in regard to giving air. To allow the frames to remain closed, with the sun shining directly upon them, would result in the temperature running up from 20 to 40 degrees. It is obvious that if this is allowed to occur many times the plants will soon commence to develop soft, soppy growth, and long-jointed stems. The chrysanthemum frame should be supplied with a thermometer, and this should be kept under observation as much as possible during the daytime. If it registers much above 40, a little air should be given. About midday, if the sun is shining brightly, the plants will probably droop. If this occurs they may be sprayed overhead with clear soot-water. More air will be required as the sun's power increases. Direct draughts must be carefully avoided. East winds at this time of the year are almost as destructive as a severe frost. A little intelligent manipulation of the lights will overcome the difficulty. If it is necessary to give air when the wind is blowing, all that is needed is to tilt the lights at the side opposite to that from which the wind is blowing. The earliest rooted plants will now be ready for transferring to six-inch pots. Repotting should be attended to before the roots form a mass at the bottom of the 3-inch pots. Plants that are allowed to get root-bound in the small pots invariably suffer when transferred to the larger size. A suitable compost for this potting may be made up as follows:—Four parts fibrous loam (cut early this year, if available), 1 part rotten manure, 1 part leaf mould, 1 part crushed old mortar, 1 part wood ashes, and a six-inch pottiful of bone meal to each barrow load of compost. Clean soil is rather drier, but a good substitute may be found in some fine, old engine ashes. Either of the latter may be used at the discretion of the operator. Generally speaking, very little sand would be required, as the leaf mould, wood ashes, and mortar rubble would all help to lighten the soil. The loam, leaf mould, and manure should be chopped, not riddled. Give a thorough mixing and stack for a few days before using. Before commencing to repot, go carefully over the plants and pick out any that are quite watering. These should be well soaked and stood on one side to drain, before being potted. To repot a chrysanthemum whilst it is dry is to invite failure. The six-inch pots should be made quite clean inside before being used. If used while dirty it will prove a difficult matter to turn the plants out without sacrificing a quantity of roots when the time for final potting comes round. Place about an inch of drainage at the bottom of the pots, and cover this with a little of the fibrous part of the compost. Pot slightly deeper than before and ram this soil firm, but take care to avoid damaging the roots with the ramming stick. Return the plants to the frames and ventilate very carefully for a few days. The question of pinching or stopping chrysanthemums is a very complicated one where exhibition blooms are required for a specified date. Any reader who is in doubt about dates for stopping may rely upon us doing our best to help him if he will forward a list of the varieties in question. Decorative varieties are usually stopped when six inches high, and again when the side growths are six inches long. So stopping should be done for a week before, and a week after potting. Green and bloody fly usually gets troublesome about this time, and immediately any are noticed prompt measures should be taken to clear them out. The surest way is to fumigate twice or three times at intervals of three days. An occasional overhead spraying with a good insecticide will usually keep them fairly well in check. Clear soot-water is also good for the purpose and has the advantage of being very cheap.

A recruiting sergeant who was instructed by the War Office to wait on residents in Bishop Stortford, who had applied for the Army pamphlet and invite them to join the ranks, found that they included a veteran pensioner of eighty-four, a lady shop assistant, and a boy of eight.

Early on Saturday morning the dead body of Thomas Henderson, a riveter, was found on the railway near North Shields. The man's boots were found some distance away, as if he had taken them off before his death. He was a widower, aged 63 years, and had been out of work for some time.

PROFITABLE POULTRY CULTURE.

A SUCCESSFUL BREEDING SEASON.

[Readers are particularly requested to note that this series of articles commenced with the first issue in January. In order to obtain their full value, the earlier articles should be read in conjunction with the current one].

MOST SUITABLE TIME FOR HATCHING.

The season for hatching depends on your requirements, whether you are rearing chickens for table purposes, or whether you are desirous of obtaining birds for egg-production.

TABLE POULTRY.

To secure the best market prices, spring chickens are necessary. These must be marketed between March and the end of May. At eighteen weeks old, with ordinary careful mothering they are fit for killing, so that hatching operations should commence in October, or November at latest, and be continued till the end of January. After this many consider it unprofitable to proceed further, owing to the fall in prices. At one time I accepted this view theoretically, but experience has proved its fallacy. To commence hatching operations in October, and continue throughout the winter, necessitates artificial incubation, which in turn involves considerable outlay of capital, while more money is required to fit up the fattening establishment.

Surely it stands to reason that it is unprofitable to utilise the plant for a few months only simply because the birds are purchased during the remainder of the year. Mark you, if profits disappeared entirely it would indeed be folly, but, although I have sold many hundreds of chickens at all seasons of the year, I have always found a ready market for them at a distinctly remunerative price. Slackness during the late summer and early autumn months will soon make havoc with winter and spring profits, so that I counsel those who make fattening their special branch of the poultry industry to continue their hatching operations until they have a sufficiency to execute all orders they can obtain throughout the year.

LAYING FOWLS.

An entirely new aspect is now presented for our consideration. Eggs command the best price from October till the New Year, consequently our aim must be to obtain an abundance of eggs during that period. If chicks are hatched very early in the season, say January and February, June month will find them laying, but a little later they will moult, and, with very few exceptions, will not lay again until the spring of the following year, when eggs are low in price. Again, a late-hatched chick—that is, May and June—rarely commences to lay before the following year; they mature more slowly than the early-hatched bird. Having investigated the results of very early and very late birds, and found neither advisable, we may confidently accept the happy medium as the most profitable.

Here, however, further consideration must be given. The heavier breeds take longer to mature than the lighter, so that they must be hatched first.

Personally I like to have all the heavier breeds, such as Wyandottes, Rocks, Orpingtons, Brahmas, etc., hatched during March month; the Eighter breeds, such as Leghorns, Campines, Ancones, etc., at the end of March, throughout April, with extension of time, if necessary, far into May. Then, with proper attention and careful dietary, these birds should be laying early in October, handsomely repaying their owner for the labour and care bestowed upon them.

LOCATION OF NEST.

It has been asserted that a stolen nest always produces the best results; this is occasionally true, but is the exception rather than the rule. Again, if a large number of chickens are required, it is not practicable. Stables, greenhouses, coach-houses, in turn have all been advocated, and all found more or less satisfactory. Really all that is necessary is a quiet, warm, but well-ventilated room, darkened for preference.

CATTLE.

SELBY, Monday.—At their weekly sale of live stock Messrs. Richardson and Son disposed of 190 beasts, 4 sheep, and 24 pigs. There was a good all-round and a quieter trade; best beef making up to 8d. per lb., secondary sorts from 7d. to 7¾d. A sheep shortage of sheep, which were not sufficient for local requirements. Pigs and sheep at late quotations. Fat bullocks made up to £20 15s., bullocks to £14 2s. 6d., cows to £20, store cattle £14, cows in calf to £22 7s. 6d., cows in milk £12 £18 7s. 6d., fat sheep £2 4s. 6d.

WHITKIRK AUCTION MART, Monday.—An excellent supply of stock, and buyers were well represented. Ninety-three dairy cattle were on offer, trade opening slowly, but improved later, and a fair clearance was effected. Best models calven cows £21 2s. 6d. to £24 7s. 6d., useful and medium ditto £18 7s. 6d. to £20 15s., present calvers to £21 2s. 6d., April and May calvers to £23 5s., twenty months old, store beasts to £9 5s. One hundred and ten fat cattle were offered, including some choice lots, and the demand was brisk, the best making 8d., good beef 7¾d. to 7¾d., good cows to 7d., and rougher ditto 6½d. per lb. Not a large supply of sheep, and prices rules similar to the last sale; small choice weight hoggets to 104/., heavier weights to 97/., clipped hoggets to 85/., ewes to 8d. per lb. Pigs main scarce and dear, small porkers fetching 8s. 9d., and large fat pigs to 8s. 3d. per stone (14 lb.), eight weeks' old stores to 34s., stronger kinds to 50s. Cattle number sold:—293 cattle, 122 sheep, 84 pigs, and 2 calves.

WETHERBY, Monday.—Messrs. Thomlinson and Son had forward a capital show of prime fat beasts and sheep. The attendance of butchers and dealers was up to the average, and a good trade was maintained throughout the sale, prime quality beef making up to 9d. per lb., and secondary quality from 8s. 9d. to 8s. 9d. The trade for sheep was in favour of the buyers, only the choicest lots making up to 9d. per lb.; heavy sheep from 8¾d. to 9¾d., and clipped sheep to 8d. per lb. Mr. R. Dobson, Bilton Grange, topped the sale with a prime bullock, which made £31 12s. 6d., and another £22 15s.; two very ripe bullocks from the Exors. of Mr. J. J. Thwaites, Tockwith, made £30 5s. and £27 7s. 6d.; Mrs. Otter, Hunsingore, again sent some grand quality bullocks, making £30 7s. 6d. and £24 10s.; Mr. L. TUBERCULOUS GLANDS CURED.

19, Elsie Mount,
Hyde Park,
Leeds, 30th August, 1913.

Professor Crosswaite,
Dear Sir,—

I thought it would interest you to know of THE VERY REMARKABLE SUCCESS YOUR TREATMENT HAD UPON MY YOUNGEST DAUGHTER, who last year was suffering from TUBERCULOUS GLANDS.

Many of my friends advised me to consult a surgeon, but being opposed to the knife I emphatically declined to have my child tortured and perhaps disfigured for life.

You assured me, sir, after our consultation together, that it was quite possible to remove the substance without the aid of an operation. You were a true prophet.

The scar (what little is left of it) is gradually passing away, and before long it will entirely disappear.

I cannot adequately find words to express my feelings of GRATITUDE, you, sir, you have won our EVERLASTING GRATITUDE, and if at any time the accuracy of my statement should be disputed, I shall be willing to bring my child to your consulting rooms and there give similar demonstrations of the wonderful cure you have accomplished.

Trusting you may be spared for many years to come to carry on your splendid work.

Believe me, dear sir,
Gratefully yours,
H. DORRINGTON SMITH.

A WONDERFUL AEROPLANE.

In "The Air King's Treasure" (Cassell and Co.), Messrs. Grahame-White and Harry Harper have given us a novel in which the flying machine is a great factor. They have a machine which flies round the world, and the story is told by the authors. Apparently there are its details, as described by the authors: "Every time you were born, I fell in love. I was at that time a complete egoist, a very perfect specimen, with unlimited selfishness of all crustaceans who live on the defensive, and wear their bones outside. Then you were born, and when I was a year or two younger than I was, just about Miss Georges age. Miss Georges reminds me of herself when she was a little girl. All this long time I was content with my work—it absorbed me, and I had a great friend. And he fell in love with her too. And I announced her, and withdrew in his favour. I went away without speaking.

"I thought I was sitting nobly. He said there was no one like me. Thoreau had done the same, and I worshipped Thoreau in my youth, and had been to see him in his last smaller, set of skids, springs, and wheels.

The landing-carriage raised the body of the machine quite 20ft. above the floor. Sir Ralph noticed that the point of the bow projected some little distance in front of the wings. On the upper side of the body, just between the front edge of the planes, was a low, semi-circular dome, or coming-cover, which was raised a little above the level of the hull. Small, thick, plate-glass windows, set round this dome, were evidently devised to give its occupants a view upon every hand. Just below the dome, fitted to the outside of the vessel's hull, was a powerful searchlight, designed to be moved at will from within the dome. The two sweeping wings of the machine were, Sir Ralph now noted, set at a very slight upturned dihedral angle, and came up flush against the sides of the hull.

"See," said Longley, pointing as he spoke. "you will note that towards the end of the wing furthest away from the body of the aeroplane, the metal ribs—which go across and are fixed from front to back—are made so that they spread out rearwards from a joint fitted at the front edge of the plane."

"Like a fan," interposed Dale.

"That's right," agreed Longley. Then he added: "As we see the wing now, the greatest surface is exposed. That is to say, it is ready for lifting purposes. When you want to alter the wing smaller there's a lever within reach of the machine which causes this fan-like extremity of the wing to fold inwards. Each rib, you see, slides neatly over the other.

"Yes," answered Sir Ralph; "I understand. But how do you work it when you're in flight?"

"That is easy to explain," replied Longley. "When you're leaving the ground, or when you want to fly at slow speed, the full extent of the wing-surface is exposed, as we see it now. But when you're travelling at a good height, and flying speed is required, you gradually 'reef' the wings in the way I have mentioned. Then, when your wing-spread has reached its minimum, your speed is at its maximum. Is that clear?"

CONCERNING WOMEN.

"Every woman is as old as Eve."

"I adore to be young, and I adore to be old. But, oh, middle-age is a tragedy for a woman."

"Girls are the most extraordinary dashed things in the world."—"A Train to Catch a Dream." By Dion Clayton Calthrop (Hodder and Stoughton).

A LITTLE LOVE STORY.

In Miss Mary Cholmondeley's novel, "Notwithstanding" (John Murray), a touching little love story is related by one of her characters—Mr. Stirling, the novelist. He tells the story to another character in this way:

"Twenty-five years ago, Miss Manvers, before here are its details, as described by the authors: you were born, I fell in love. I was at that time a complete egoist, a very perfect specimen, with unlimited selfishness of all crustaceans who live on the defensive, and wear their bones outside. Then you were born, and when I was a year or two younger than I was, just about Miss Georges age. Miss Georges reminds me of herself when she was a little girl. All this long time I was content with my work—it absorbed me, and I had a great friend. And he fell in love with her too. And I announced her, and withdrew in his favour. I went away without speaking.

"I thought I was sitting nobly. He said there was no one like me. Thoreau had done the same, and I worshipped Thoreau in my youth, and had been to see him in his last illness. I was sustained in my heartache by feeling I was doing a heroic action. It never struck me that I was doing it at her expense. I went abroad, and after a time she married my friend. Some years later I heard he was dying of a terrible disease in the throat, and I went to see him. She nursed him with absolute devotion, but she would not allow me to speak with him. I put it down to a kind of jealousy. And after his death I tried to see her, but again she put difficulties in the way.

"At last I asked her to marry me, and she confessed me, 'Because you had deserted her to nurse with,' said Janey. No; she was not like that. Because she was dying of the same disease as her husband. She had contracted it from him. That was why she had never let me be much with him, or afterwards with her. When I knew, I had nothing to risk if, but she was not. She had her rules, and from them she never departed. She let me go with her in the garden, and to the shore, and she was carried out to her long chair so that I might be with her. She told me it was her husband's presence of her life. I found that from the first she had loved me, and she loved me to the last.

"She never reproached me for leaving her. She was a simple person. I told her I knew that it was a very dear friend, and she thought it very noble of me, and said it was just what she should have done if she had been a man. And she slipped quietly out of life, keeping her ideal of me to the last."

A SELBY MAN'S ATTEMPT.—Joseph Cummings,

blacksmith's striker, employed at Messrs. Selby shipyard, was charged with attempting to commit suicide by cutting his throat with a razor on March 7th. Superintending Stafford stated that the man had been employed by the firm, and had attended work regularly, and the foreman at the shipyard said he would take care of him as well as he could. Cummings had been staying at a lodging-house in Wren Lane, and in the early morning a fellow lodger found that he had inflicted a wound on his throat. The man was taken to the hospital, where two men had to be employed to look after him, the cost to the county being £8. Cummings promised to keep from drink, and was discharged, arrangements being made for him to pay the costs.

BISHOP OF NEW GUINEA AT WHITKIRK

HOW CHRISTIANITY HAS TRANSFORMED THE PEOPLE.

KINGDOM OF GOD ON EARTH.

The Bishop of New Guinea (the Right Rev. Gerald Sharp), who was for eleven years vicar of Whitkirk, was on a visit to his old parish last week-end, and on Sunday he was the special preacher at the ancient church at Whitkirk. In the morning there was a crowded congregation, and the service was conducted by the Rev. Brett Garner (vicar).

"Thy Kingdom Come" was the Bishop's text, and he said this petition was answered when the brotherhood was converted and when nominal Christians became real Christians. It was being fulfilled all over the world, but it would not finally be fulfilled until the end of time. The Lord once said that the Kingdom of God cometh not with observation, and the real progress of the Kingdom was often unnoticed, whilst the things that obscured not the eye and ear, so that many people were apt to think there was a lot of wrong in it (laughter). In a country like New Guinea (he went on) they had to keep native people and white people apart, and when they got a native to accept Christianity, and when after some years' work they saved in, there were no faithful communicants and no others were being prepared for baptism. In a third place which was particularly savage and which was the only place in which the Governor of New Guinea was set upon and robbed, Christianity had been accepted and a large number were to be baptised in a few days. They had been under preparation for three years, and now the beginning of Christianity would be seen in that place.

In the early days of the mission when the first bishop went there, he was able to confirm one girl, and in the four years he (the speaker) had been there he had confirmed over 1,000. The Church was now a spiritual force in that land, and was making a marked difference, as every white person who entered New Guinea had to confess. They had very great opportunities, because the education of the children was put by the Government into the hands of the Church, and the clergy were able to teach them religion with all let or hindrance. At their mission stations they had schools, and there the children were taught not only the religion of Jesus Christ but the ordinary subjects taught in the Council Schools at home. All the medical and nursing work, too, along 300 miles of coast was in their hands. He thought it was tragic that people who were so able to appreciate Christianity and respond to education should have left for above until nearly the end of the nineteenth century without having been given the opportunities they now enjoyed.

They found how much the natives rejoiced in the religion of the Lord, and he stated, in illustration, that he went to hold a confirmation at a large village, and as he drew near about 150 of the elder men out of the place rushed into the sea up to the necks and not only drew the boat ashore but carried it to the house where he was to stay. Why did they do that? Not because they cared for him personally. They gave him that welcome because he was the bishop of that religion they loved and appreciated, and they knew that he was going to do a great thing. In another village some of the people on Good Friday sat on the ground most of the day, and when the children ran about and made a noise, they were rebuked by their elders in the words, "Be quiet, for this day the Lord Jesus Christ died." People in this country who said that the natives of New Guinea were better left alone, dominated by their evil spirits, and with out new knowledge of the one Spirit that was able to help them and give them joy, were committing a crime only to lunatics. They went there and found a people with a simple capacity for belief, they had no hostile religion such as Mohammedanism to break down, for the natives had no religion except a belief in evil spirits.

It was largely owing to the Church Councils in the middle of the day, and often find, during the time of preparation for baptism or confirmation, several people, mostly men, saying their prayers to God. Here these people required their sympathy and help. Their help was needed, for, although Australia supported nine and more the New Guinea Mission, had they not had help from England they would rather be involved in debt or their work would have to be curtailed. Had it not been for the contributions coming from England a year by year they would not, he in such a good position today. In conclusion, he said that some people had asked him if he was happy in New Guinea, and he said "Yes." Others had asked "Would you rather be back here?" He answered that he would not, not that he did not appreciate the kindness he received from them during the eleven happy years he was at Whitkirk. The people of that parish and the church must always have a warm corner in his heart, and he always looked on the place with love and gratitude. He, however, was happy in his work and did not want to return to Whitkirk, because it was a glorious, triumphant, and captivating thing to see the Kingdom of God on earth springing into existence and going forward by bounds and bands, as it was doing in New Guinea.

In the evening Whitkirk Church was again crowded, and the Bishop devoted his remarks to mission work. The collections were for the New Guinea Mission.

MOTOR CARS, AND A TRIP ROUND THE WORLD, AT NO COST.

In these days of vigorous advertising, many ingenious ideas have been exploited, but surely nothing has been more striking than the lavish generosity of Messrs. Joseph Watson and Sons, of Leeds, the makers of "Watson's Matchless Cleanser." This firm is just bringing to a close a competition which must have attracted attention in every part of the country. The prize-giving is based wholly upon the number of "Matchless Cleanser," "Nubolic," and "Sparkla" wrappers which are sent in, and the prizes themselves are of such extraordinary value, and so numerous, as to excite wonder and admiration. No fewer than four motor-cars will be given away, and some lucky person will obtain a free-class five tour of the world (value £2,000). But Messrs Watson's generosity does not stop there. Other prizes include a dozen pianos and organs, 15 Chesterfield lounges, 150 vacuum cleaners, and literally hundreds of thousands of acceptable and valuable household requirements. A unique feature of the competition is that a prize is guaranteed to every competitor who sends wrappers according to the rules, and every prize is guaranteed the value stated. Readers should particularly note that the last day for sending in wrappers is March 31st.

BARKSTON ASH FARMERS AND LAND REFORM.

MR JOHN THOMPSON CONDEMNS LIBERAL PROPOSALS.

MR C. F. RYDER AND HOUSING.

At a meeting of the Yorkshire Union of Agricultural Clubs, held on Thursday for Chairman (Mr J. S. Booth, of Pontefract) proposed: "That this Union urge upon the Government the desirability of the appointment of a Royal Commission to inquire into what changes, if any, are required in the best interests of all concerned in agriculture." In doing so he said the question was a very wide one, and it had been taken up by inexperienced men, who knew very little about agriculture, and who proposed anything and everything that came first to their fingers. If a Royal Commission there was a practical man, agreed on the Chancellor of the Exchequer's suggestion, and if the proposal which was subsequently to the meeting was taken up by all agricultural organisations he thought it would help this very socialistic movement in hand. Nearly all land taxes were made to bring taxation to the land, and he was pleased to see that they did not find these land changes the only land of adversity. (Hear, hear). They were generally connected of men who had made their pile in commerce who wanted all they could possibly get out of the land and out of the land. That sort of landlord wanted to keep the game that was on the farm, but he (the speaker) felt that a farmer paid the rent he should have all that was on the farm. He had in his mind a case of a farm of 100 acres, and in of these acres game consumed every year. Why should not the landlord be rated on the scaring of the tenant's land with his game? (Hear, hear). He would also bring into line the question of a farmer fencing against rabbits and hares.

Major Stapylton seconded.

Mr Thompson (East Rigton) said it seemed to him a deplorable thing that a question so important as the land should become the happy hunting ground for the trothy mouthings of every windy demagogue, who promised a new heaven and a new earth, and everything else. Ever since he had been able to take an interest in agriculture there had been a cry raised. There had been many cries, but the latest cry he thought was the most dangerous one, and was just forward by one political party alone. (Hear, hear). The question of rural housing had been referred to. If the promoters of the land inquiries really took an interest in the housing of the people of the country, did they not think that before they attacked the peasant cottages they should have turned their attention to the slums of the large town? (Hear, hear). He believed if they would come out at Marsh Lane Station in Leeds and go round that district they would find houses that would put to shame any cottage in a village.

The Chairman: Th Government had the votes of these people, though. This is a vote-catching expedition. (Hear, hear).

Mr Thompson, proceeding, referred to security of tenure and the land courts, and in connection with the latter said he did not think any farmer in the country would put his fortunes to the test by going to one of these courts. He was satisfied that nothing could be gained by the establishment of land courts—at any rate there would be nothing gained by farmers. There would be people who would gain, but these would merely add to the enormous army of officials that had been created in the last few years, and that were being added to every day. He wondered what was really the matter with agriculture. They were told that an enormous amount of land had gone out of cultivation, and he thought it was obvious that this was the price they had to pay for Free Trade. (Hear, hear). There was no juggling with the land laws that would ever bring that land back to cultivation; only the price of prices or products on the land could do it. (Hear, hear). He thought it would be a bad day for agriculture when they had these violent changes forced upon them.

Mr C. F. Ryder (Scarcroft) also referred to the housing question, and said he had met cottages in Suffolk and Cambridge, for which he would gladly pay 5s. per week as yearly rent. On the question of the minimum wage it said that things would not stop there. The next thing that would be wanted would be security of employment. Were they satisfied up on legislation they never knew where it would end.

Mr Byass (Pocklington) said that if a Royal Commission could do any good he would support it. The matters to which they had referred had all been brought out in the land inquiry report. The men who had given evidence before the committee had been practical men, and no Royal Commission on the face of the earth could bring better or more faithful evidence than had been brought.

Mr Johnson: They would bring information more above board than these.

Mr Byass: I am not so sure of that.

Mr Johnson: But I am.

Mr Byass: Some men would not give evidence before that committee because they knew they would be marked men. (Cries of "No, no.") "Allow me to have my opinion," proceeded Mr Byass. They got so much of the other side, but they never heard about this side of the question. He did not agree with all that was in the Land inquiry report. For instance, he did not agree to the minimum wage question, but he came to look at the matter fairly and squarely.

Mr Thompson said Mr Byass did not seem to appreciate the difference between a Royal Commission and the Land inquiry. The land inquiry was a back-stairs inquiry, instituted by a packed party, and carried out in a manner absolutely unexampled. (Hear, hear). A Royal Commission would be composed of a public man, with a knowledge of the subject, and their names would be given.

The resolution was then put to the meeting, and carried unanimously.

A ROUNDHAY LADY'S DEATH

THE INQUEST.

A fatal accident to Mrs Mary Birdsall, aged 50, a widow, of Jean Brodrill, retired merchant, 4, Norwood, Old Park Road, Roundhay, was investigated by the West Riding Coroner (Mr P. C. Maitland) at the Mansion, Roundhay Park, on Tuesday afternoon.

The accident occurred at the junction of Harehills Road and Park Road with Roundhay Road. Mrs Birdsall was following her husband on to a tramcar about to proceed to Roundhay, when a motor-car belonging to Dr. W. A. H. Waite, of Richmond Hill, in passing round the tramcar and into Park Road, knocked her down. Mrs Birdsall was pinned underneath.

Mr W. Tempest appeared at the inquest to represent Mr Birdsall; Mr A. Willey was for Dr. Waite's chauffeur, Sydney Scott; and Mr C. Scriven for Dr. Waite.

Mr Birdsall said that on March 6th, about one o'clock in the afternoon, he boarded a tramcar. On turning round he saw that his wife was in the road approaching the footboard of the tram, when the motor came along and ran into her. She was taken home in the motor-car, and died on Monday. Her sight and hearing were good.

William Wheelhouse, grocer, of 255, Roundhay Road, said he saw the accident through his shop window, which was near the spot. He notice Mrs Birdsall step off the footpath opposite the centre of the tram and turn towards the footboard, and for a moment or two the high wind forced her to a standstill. At the same time he noticed the motor-car sweeping round from Harehills Road towards the near side of the tramcar, "and," added the witness, "it seemed to be approaching too quickly under the circumstances."

The Coroner: Do you think when you saw the car 20 yards away from the tram that the driver could see the lady?

The Witness: In my opinion, he should have done. He added that before striking her the motor appeared to slacken a little.

The Coroner: I think now a room for motor-cars to pass trams on the wide spaces on the off-side of the road?

Mr Willey: It is not allowed by the by-laws; all traffic must come on the near side of the tramcars.

The Coroner: Notwithstanding that it is very nerve-racking eight feet from the car line to the causeway?

Mr Willey: Yes.

Mr Tempest: It is very difficult to know what the requirements are with regard to Roundhay Road.

Detective Officer Kirk Handford, of the Leeds Police Force, said the rule for passing tramcars was different to that for passing any other vehicles. They must be passed on the near side because they could not deviate from their track. The officer added that the junction where the accident occurred was very dangerous.

The conductor of the tramcar, George Herbert Nicholson, in reply to Mr Willey, said the lady had only stepped on pass off the footpath when the car struck her. He did not think the driver had any chance of pulling up or avoiding her.

Dr. Waite said his chauffeur, Sydney Scott, who was driving the car, said they did not see the deceased until they got within four or five yards of her. She was then on the pavement and walking along with her head down. When the car was within a yard of her she stepped off the causeway right in front of the motor. It was impossible to avoid striking her, but the driver pulled up in a little over a yard. The car's speed was not more than six miles an hour.

Mr Willey remarked that Mr Wheelhouse might have thought Mrs Birdsall was hurrying with the wind on the road, whereas she was on the causeway.

The Coroner agreed, and said the jury must consider whether the chauffeur was driving recklessly, or with sufficient care to avoid an accident under ordinary circumstances.

The jury returned a verdict of "Accidental death," and exonerated the driver from all blame. "We think," the foreman added, "he was driving at a very moderate speed when the accident happened."

CHARGE AGAINST A THORNER FARMER

PUPPY-WALKING AND ITS DRAWBACKS.

At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Philip Campbell, farmer, of Thorner, was summoned for a dog being at large and not under proper control during the night time. Mr A. Willey (Scholes) prosecuted.

P.C. Ferguson stated that about 8.25 p.m. on March 10th he found a foxhound puppy loose in the road of nine and ten months straying in Carr Lane, Thorner. He took charge of it, and on the following day told the defendant that the dog was at the police station. The officer stated that on March 4th he called upon the defendant and asked him to keep the dog under proper control.

Mr Willey: You know perfectly well that this dog is one of two which he was walking out for Mr Lane Fox, M.P.?

Witness: Yes.

Mr Willey explained that when this class of dog was walked, it was known perfectly well that they were allowed every freedom, and it was not a rule to "keep them in a leash and a big collar." Neither was it the custom in that district to register foxhound puppies. He asked that the case should be dismissed.

After retiring the Bench decided to consider it as an off-ence, while recognising the fact that it was not the custom to register this class of dog.

The case was dismissed on payment of costs.

A THORPE MAN'S DEATH.

FOUND DROWNED.

An inquest was held at York Law Courts on the body of Thomas Watson (34), an engine fitter, of Thorpe, near Robin Hood, which was recovered from the Foss Lock at Yearsley.

Arthur Watson, to, Oakley Street, Thorpe, labourer, identified the body as that of his brother, who had lived at the same address, and was a locomotive fitter on the Great Northern Railway, and unmarried. Their parents were dead. Witness last saw his brother alive at the house on Feb. 14th. His brother was going to York on a visit to his cousin. Nothing was heard of him until last Friday, when witness, himself on a visit to York, heard that his brother had been to York and visited a cousin, whom he found away, only the children being present. His brother did not stop. He had other cousins living at York. Witness knew of nothing to trouble his brother, but he had not been so well as usual for the last six months. His brother had been accustomed to taking a drop of drink, and witness thought that the fact that his brother had been teetotal for four or five months accounted for the poor health. Another thing was that his brother had to do indoor work after having been accustomed to outdoor work.

Florence Watson, sister of the deceased, of the same address at Thorpe, said she saw him before he left home on the Saturday, when he was in bright spirits. He intended to stay in York until the Sunday night. Witness never saw him again. He had been "five weeks' suspense to the family. She thought he must have been treated badly at York. He was one of the last in the world who would take his own life. He must have suffered starvation rather than that. He held 17s. to £1 on him when he left home. His prospects were bright. Witness reported his disappearance to the police the Wednesday after he left home.

Beatrice Watson (13), said she lived at 71, Newbiggin Street, York, and her father was cousin to the deceased. On February 14th deceased called at the house; her parents were not at home, and she asked him to walk in and sit down, but deceased said he would not stop. Deceased was very sober, and seemed to have had a drop of drink.

A young lady named Leah King, 10, Regent's Square, St. Maurice's Road, York, said the deceased was a friend of hers. She saw him on Saturday, February 14th, when he called at her house between 8 o'clock and half-past. He was slightly intoxicated and would not come into the house. He remained for about a quarter of an hour, and enquired after his cousin from Thorpe.

The deceased had been going along Groves Lane in the direction of Newbiggin Street.

P.C. Holgate said he took charge of the body of the deceased. He assisted to convey it to the mortuary, the body being fully dressed with the exception of the hat. Witness found on the body £1 os. 2d., two watches, and two chains (produced). Both the watches were stopped at 20 minutes to 11. There was also a photograph and a ticket for a whole drive and dance, and two half return railway tickets.

Dr. Reynolds, police surgeon, said that he examined the body and, as far as he could see, death was due to drowning.

The jury returned a verdict of "Found drowned."

MOTOR SMASH NEAR HAREWOOD

SEVERAL PERSONS INJURED.

An alarming motor accident, resulting in serious injury to several Leeds people, occurred on the Leeds and Harrogate Road, between Pannal and Harewood, on Friday night. It appears that a car containing three ladies and two gentlemen was returning from Harrogate to Leeds shortly after eight o'clock, when the driver mistook a turning at the road and ran into a stone wall, the occupants of the car being thrown out.

The accident occurred near Battersike Bar, and cars arriving at this spot the driver of the car mistook for the main road a lane which leads to Swarcliffe Bank Farm. He swerved to his right to take the entrance to the lane, with the result that he crashed through a substantial stone wall into an orchard. Fragments of the wall were sent flying in all directions, and after knocking down a fruit tree the car came to a standstill. The car was badly damaged, and the impact was so great as to throw all five occupants out.

The driver, Mr William Sawsding, of Sholebroke Avenue, Leeds, escaped with a severe shaking, as also did one of the lady passengers, but the others were less fortunate. Mrs Jefferies, of 21, Louis Street, Chapeltown Road, sustained a broken collar bone, and Mrs Dyson, of the same address, was found to be suffering from a fractured pelvis. The other gentleman, Mr Ernest Dixon, 25, Cardigan Avenue, had an arm broken.

Assistance was rendered by motor cyclists, who arrived upon the scene shortly after the accident, and the injured people were attended to by Dr. A. M. Wilson, of Walton Head, Pannal. Later in the evening the motor ambulance of the Harrogate Volunteer Fire Salvage Corps conveyed the injured to their homes.

MINERS' STRIKE AT LOFTHOUSE

THE MEN'S GRIEVANCES.

Work at Lofthouse Colliery was suspended on Tuesday owing to a strike among the hookers and screeners, who ceased work in the morning without giving notice. Their only grievance relates to the time allowed them for "snap," which they contend is inadequate. This question, along with others affecting the conditions of working, was dealt with jointly by representatives of the owners' association and the men's organisations some little time ago, and an agreement embodying the terms and conditions decided upon was recently ratified and put into operation. The action taken by the men is an unmistakable intimation that they refuse to subscribe to the terms of the agreement.

Pickets were stationed at the colliery on Tuesday morning, and as the men went to work they were turned back. In all, about 1,200 men and boys are affected.

The management intimated their willingness to allow the men ten minutes' extra time for their meals without prejudice to the agreement, pending the consideration and settlement of the point at issue, in order to keep the pit working, but the men declined to accept the offer.

During the course of the afternoon a deputation from the men had an interview with the management of the colliery, when the offer mentioned was renewed. The men stipulated for double the time for meals fixed under the agreement, and this the management refused to concede, because of the principle involved.

The notorious prisoner Hopf was executed on Monday at Frankfort. Hopf, who was about 50 years of age, was a chemist. He was charged with five murders, but three only were confined to seven. Among his victims were his three wives (whose lives he had insured), and one of his children. It is believed that his mother also was one of his victims.

DISTRICT BREVITIES

Going ahead! Selby is to have a new art school.

• • •

At the Skyrack Court on Tuesday there were very few cases from the district.

• • •

Land at Barwick seems to be a saleable commodity, despite the croaking of pessimists.

• • •

Garforth district has 1,163 school children, Kippax district 1,550, and Swarcliffe district 1,060.

• • •

How is the Scout movement in Barkston Ash proceeding? Not so much has been heard of it this winter.

• • •

In these days of education! The only two witnesses at an inquest at Tadcaster on Tuesday were unable to write.

• • •

A man, arrested for begging at Stourton, had come out of prison on the day of the offence. He is again one of H.M. guests.

• • •

A good many Barkston Ash Liberals were at the meetings addressed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer at Huddersfield on Saturday.

• • •

One of the busiest clergymen in the district is the Vicar of Kippax, and the residents of the village should greatly profit by his activities.

• • •

Barkston Ash and food supplies! On Monday at Whitkirk Mart 411 animals were sold, at Wetherby 423 (311 sheep), and at Selby 1[illegible].

• • •

School window smashing seems to be good sport for Stourton lads. They will find it a rather expensive one. Let them stick to marbles.

• • •

Another danger in the mint! It is suggested by the medical officer for Tadcaster rural area that two men contracted typhoid down a coal pit.

• • •

Saxton School had the worst attendance of all the schools in Garforth division last month, but it is only fair to state that the attendance was affected by sickness.

• • •

The success or failure of Crossgates and District Farmers' Club will depend entirely on the farmers themselves. If they are loyal they may help themselves a great deal.

• • •

There is little trouble nowadays in the district about non-attendance at school, and this is a good sign. Even in the district about half-a-dozen families give all the bother that there is.

• • •

Dog-owners in the district should look carefully after their animals. Complaints have been received of Toxzer disease among the collectors, Wetherby, and Peckfield. The unmannerly cur!

• • •

A lesson to the bigger ones! The children under five years attending Rothwell Wood Lane School had a percentage of attendance of 97.14 last month. This was the best attendance in the district.

• • •

Garforth must wake up! The evening classes are very small, although the attendance is good, and it is astonishing that so few boys and girls avail themselves of the educational facilities provided.

• • •

Changed days in Garforth surely! Only five gentlemen were nominated for three vacancies on the Council. At one time there would have been as many as thirty nominations. The novelty has gone!

• • •

What did she mean? A women appeared before a local education committee and alleged that the attendance officer said he would "make her do the high jump." Of course, the committee did not believe her.

• • •

What do the B.W.T.A. members say? A Thorpe man stated at an inquest on his brother, who had indulged in a drop, that he had not been well for some time, and he attributed this to his having turned a teetotaller.

• • •

Mr Frank Myers, of Ilkbrough, who is a member of Tadcaster District Council, has been appointed a member of the committee of the Yorkshire, Durham, and Northumberland branch of the Agricultural Organization Society.

• • •

Garforth is getting a bad name! Nine-teen residents were summoned by the overseers, and twenty-five by the Urban Council on Tuesday for non-payment of rates. They will have the Court costs in addition to the rates to pay now.

• • •

Certain people at Rothwell are, it is stated, not very early risers. A candidate for municipal honours was once asked if he was in favour of lodgers being provided for the working-classes with which they could get up in the morning. Does Rothwell want lodgers?

• • •

Mr J. Pearson, the Chairman at a Wetherby Liberal meeting, who at one time resided at Crossgates, was very funny, and probably his Conservative friends will not agree with him. He said that the "Tory Party seemed to have no policy except that of a General Election. In 1910 they wanted a General Election on the Parliament Act. They got two, but unfortunately for the Conservatives they both went the wrong way. Now they wanted an election on the Home Rule Bill. If it went their way it would be all right, but if it did not it had not to count."

• • •

A big order! Tadcaster wants new roads and new houses.

• • •

The inhabitants of Oulton want to know the origin of the name of the place.

• • •

How long? Complaint is again made regarding the dirty condition of Tadcaster streets.

• • •

At Tadcaster last year there were 744 loads of night-soil and 140 loads of rubbish removed, and at Sherburn 604 and 42.

• • •

The improved train service to Thorp Arch will come into operation next month. Will it lead to the development of Boston Spa?

• • •

How is it done? A man, found sleeping in an outhouse on a farm at Rothwell, was charged at the Skyrack Court with "sleeping out."

• • •

As a Thorner farmer discovered, puppy-walking is not without its drawbacks. Perhaps the Brumbium Moor Hunt will compensate him.

• • •

Good! Mr Thompson, of East Rigton, talked at a meeting of farmers at York about "the frothy mouthings of every windy demagogue."

• • •

People who follow hunting will soon have to take to cricket or golf. The York and Ainsty season is closed, and the Brumbium Moor are to follow suit.

• • •

No chance for the bow-wows! Wetherby Agricultural Show Committee have decided not to have a dog section at their annual show. It is not going to the "dogs."

• • •

What will Mr Lloyd George say? The massively beneficial has been worked wonders in Tadcaster rural area, for there was a serious decline in the birth-rate last year.

• • •

The York Wesley circuit meeting unanimously confirmed the invitation of the Rev. W. C. Pobjoy, of Selby, to become superintendent in place of the Rev. E. Martin, who goes to Derby.

• • •

Splendid! The percentage of attendance for the Garforth division—the districts of Kippax, Sherburn, Oulton, and Garforth—was 94.1 last March as compared with 89.04 in February last year.

• • •

How is it? Templemeadam has only 473 attending the local elementary schools, whereas Oulton-with-Woodlesford, with a somewhat similar population, has no fewer than 721.

• • •

Garforth is going the wrong way. The school population is decreasing. Last month there were 978 children on the books of the schools in the urban area, and at Kippax the number was 873.

• • •

Did they forget at Tadcaster? Selby Urban Council at their last meeting passed a vote of thanks to Dr. Stedman, who has just resigned the position of medical officer to the Tadcaster and Selby Councils.

• • •

Barkston Ash scores again! Built at Selby at a cost of £15,000, the largest trawler in the world is now being fitted out. She is named the Marne, of 614 tons gross, with a crew of 48, and will be fitted with wireless.

• • •

The local members present at the last meeting of the Yorkshire Union of Agricultural Clubs were Mr John Thompson, East Rigton (Chairman of Wetherby Chamber), Mr F. Myers (Ilkbrough), and Mr C. F. Ryder (Scarcroft).

• • •

The Bishop of New Guinea (Right Rev. Gerald Sharp) has been on a visit to Whitkirk, his old parish, and he has had a very cordial welcome. He will be remembered as having been one of the most popular clergymen in the district.

• • •

Crossgates Literary Society has completed its season's work, and the members have reason to be pleased with the progress made. A lecture on the Brontes was given, and the members are to have an excursion to the Bronte country this summer.

• • •

"Parents must mend their ways." The medical officer for Tadcaster rural area, writing of scarlet fever, stated that "although efficient isolation in their own homes is often difficult, many parents make little attempt to keep the infected children apart from the others."

• • •

The school holidays in the Wetherby district are to be as follows: from noon on Thursday, April 9th, to Monday, April 20th, with the exception of the Bardsey school, which will close on the 8th prox. instead of the 9th. Whitsuntide —From Friday, May 29th, to Monday, June 8th.

• • •

The order of the bath! A Board of Guardians has ordered that every pauper shall have a bath once a month, and he or she will have the right to demand water which has not been previously used. What a concession! What will be done at Tadcaster, Wetherby, and Selby?

• • •

Mr John Burns, M.P., who has promised to lay the foundation stone of artisan cottages now being built by the Selby Urban Council, is being asked by that authority to name a date on which he will be able to pay a visit to Selby for the purpose. The Hon. E. S. Montagu, M.P., Secretary to the Treasury, has promised to visit Selby soon to address a gr at Liberal gathering there.

Ison's Eye & Ear Dispensary
LIMITED.
71, GREAT GEORGE ST., LEEDS
MR. THOS. ISON,
OCULIST and AURIST.

THIS INSTITUTION was ESTABLISHED in 1871. The system of working is the providentdent one, each patient paying a small periodical fee whilst under treatment, and they may, therefore, justly expect to receive the prompt care and attention which in many instances in charitable institutions is too often omitted. The treatment is of a mild and safe character, without operation or the use of Eye Drums, Ear Cornets or other mechanical or painful appliances. Another advantage appertaining to this dispensary is its system of treatment by correspondence, by which sufferers at long distances, and in isolated positions can have the advantage of Mr. ISON'S advice and remedies forwarded through the post. No case is undertaken unless there be a reasonable hope of cure, or benefit to be derived.
Attendance at Leeds every Tuesday, from 10 to 7
On Alternate Saturday, April 4th and 18th, Hours 10 to 2. Other days by appointment.
TREATMENT WITHOUT OPERATION, ARTIFICIAL HUMAN EYES fitted from 15/-

Rothwell Courier & Times

SATURDAY, MARCH 28th, 1914.

Miners are apparently a very healthy class, and there is more chance of their enjoying the old age pensions than people employed in many other trades generally thought to be more healthy occupations. In the district—at Kippax, Great Preston, and elsewhere—a good number of folks, engaged in mining for many years, have lived far beyond the allotted span, but the fact has received little notice. Mining is a very dangerous calling, and when a man enters a colliery he has no surety that he will come out alive, but notwithstanding the numerous fatalities that overtake miners in and about collieries, the rate of mortality is materially lower than that of any other large industry, bar agriculture. If the men employed on the land have small wages they have compensating advantages in good health and long life, but the well-paid miner does not come so far behind them in the matter of length of days. Miners have, of course, been accused of indulging in all manner of excesses, which cannot tend to health but, as a matter of fact, the death-rate is lower than the average mortality rate among males. It would appear, then, that the miner takes as great care of himself as other men—if statistics prove anything he exercises greater care—and it is folly to attribute to a class the sins of a few. The superintendent of statistics in the office of the Registrar General states that while the risk of fatal accident among coal miners is much greater than among other males, their risk of death by disease is much lower, being 16.6 per cent. less than all occupied males, and 23.2 per cent less than that of all males. These are remarkable figures. Miners suffer more than the average mortality from bronchitis, but, on the other hand, they show a marked immunity from consumption. Cases of this disease, of course, occur—reports from the district prove that—but as compared with other classes of workers they are fortunate in escaping serious ravages by the "white plague." From diseases of the nervous system their mortality is 18 per cent. lower; heart disease 10 per cent. lower, and from diseases of the liver 10 per cent. lower than among all males. In a mining community, therefore, the death-rate should not be a high one, but the conditions under which many of the men are compelled to live are often a menace to health. Many of the villages might be accurately described as "blots upon the landscape"—a disgrace to the people who laid them out, and it is really a surprise that more illness does not occur. Happily, local authorities are now moving, and, in the creation of new villages they exercise a control which will be for the general good.

Many people in this country condemn the large expenditure of money by churches on foreign missions, and assert that the money would be utilized to better purpose in bringing about the conversion of the heathen at home. England, as a professedly Christian country, permits conditions of life which are admittedly a disgrace to any nation, but may the continuance of these not be due to the apathy or selfishness of the very people who are against spending a penny in bringing the natives of foreign lands to a knowledge of true religion? If it is good for "the heathen at home" it must be equally good for the heathen abroad. The detractors of foreign missions, in their show of interest for the benighted in this country, do not define who are the "heathen" people, but they presumably mean the denizens of the slums of large towns and cities, although there may be more real Christianity in that quarter than amongst the very people who are so eager to stop missionary endeavour abroad. Preaching at Whitkirk on Sunday the Bishop of New Guinea said these people were comparable to lunatics. In the great country in which he has been at work for the last four years, along with other missionaries, cannibalism was practised until recent years, and the natives, when not otherwise employed, were engaged in raiding each other's villages and slaughtering as many people as they could. The introduction of Christianity has brought about a transformation in the life of the people, yet men in this country would stop the funds which enable such a beneficent work to be accomplished. They fail to realize that the churches would be false to the charge left them were they to neglect the carrying of the divine message to the uttermost parts of the earth, but they are really not concerned about that; what they lament is alleged waste of money that goes to the maintenance of missions. The betterment of a race, or the winning of a people from savagery to Christianity, does not appeal to men who are what may be styled commercially-minded, and in the sacrifices of missionaries they see nothing but foolishness. They may very well be left to their own selfish notions. In New Guinea the missionaries are working on virgin soil, as it were, and they have no opposing religion to combat or overcome, so their task, after they have won the confidence of the natives, is not such a difficult one. Whilst the missionaries are spreading Christianity, they are at the same time educating the boys and girls, and the next generation of men and women in that quarter of the globe will be very different from the present generation. Large parts of the country are unexplored, and it is practically undeveloped, and the people are being trained for a work which must bring greater prosperity and happiness to them. It has, of course, been argued that the natives living in a savage state get more enjoyment out of life than after they come under civilizing influences, but surely work—even hard work—is preferable to the debased life that existed before. The missionary prepares the way for the trader, and, instead of trade following the flag, it follows the Bible. From a mercenary point of view, therefore, missions have a value. But if men were not actuated by a higher motive than that of gain the conditions in uncivilized countries would be rendered more horrible than they were before, because evidence is not lacking of what outrages commerce has committed upon native peoples. The Christian missionary has no self-seeking object in view when he enters the dark territories of the earth, and any work which has for its purpose the uplifting of our fellow-mortals is deserving both of encouragement and support.

The family of the late Frederick Cyril Blackburn desire to thank all friends for the kind expressions of sympathy which they have received in their recent bereavement.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT NEWS.

ROTHWELL

RABBIT COURSING.—At the City Grounds, Wakefield, on Monday, a rabbit coursing match, the best of seven courses, for £20, took place between Blackburn's Mag, Rothwell, and Hoegreaves' Beauty, Stanley. Beauty, who was the favourite, the betting being 2s. to 20s., won by four courses to her opponent's three.

"SLEEPING OUT."—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday William Buttle, a labourer, of no fixed abode, was charged with sleeping out. He was fined 10s. or 7 days.

P.C. Abbott stated that about 4.20 a.m. on the day in question he was, in the company of P.C. Leahy, examining property at Rothwell Haigh, when he found the prisoner sleeping in an outhouse belonging to a farm. When aroused and asked what he was doing there, he replied "I have no money and am bound to sleep somewhere." He was taken to the Park Street Police Station, Leeds, and searched, but no money was found in his possession. Prisoner was committed to prison for one month with hard labour.

LEEDS WEST RIDING PETTY SESSIONS.—The magistrates at the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday were Mr W. Morkill (in the chair), Col. T. M. Sugge-Musgrave, Mr F. H. Lupton, Mr J. R. Cross, Mr J. B. Breed, Mr S. Hudson, and Mr E. Parkin.

FOOTBALL.—In the Kirkgate tradesmen played Rothwell Wesleyites at Hunslet on Wednesday afternoon. The tradesmen had to defend at the outset, and Arch scored for the visitors. The home team pressed, and one of their opponents gave them the equaliser by sending the ball into his own net. After the interval Kirkgate played up better, and Jubb-and Spencer each scored. Result:—Leeds Kirkgate Tradesmen 3 goals, Rothwell Wednesday 1 goal.

COUNCIL ELECTIONS.—Mr George Armitage has withdrawn his name as a candidate for the Carlton Ward, thus leaving Mr Walter Speaker, who was put up by the Labour Party, the opposition. Both retired, and entered upon the poll contest which will take place on the election day (Saturday, April 4th) will be in the South Ward, where Mr J. B. Hinde, the retiring member, is being opposed by Mr Wilfred Robinson, the nominee of the Labour Party.

WESLEYAN CHURCH.—Rothwell Wesleyan Church celebrated its anniversary on Sunday, when a sermon was preached in the morning and evening. In the afternoon the Rev. E. Lloyd, now of Batley, who preached a number of times to large congregations in the morning and evening. In the afternoon the cantata "The promise of Jesus" was rendered by the Lofthouse Wesleyan Choir. Mr J. B. Hinde presided. Mr T. Hampson conducted the singing, and Mr G. H. Hall was the organist. The collections throughout the day were in aid of the trust funds.

TEMPERANCE.—An "at home" promoted by the members of the Rothwell branch of the Women's Total Abstinence Union was held in the Wesley Sunday Schoolroom on Thursday evening, with Mr and Mrs T. Young as host and hostess. There was a good attendance, and an enjoyable programme was rendered. This consisted of songs as follows:—Chorus, "Come back to Erin," choir; song, "Dear Little Shamrock," Mrs L. Iveson; reading, "Under the Limelight," Mrs Hall; song (old tableau), "The Better Land," Mrs L. Iveson; dialogue, "Slippery Places," four ladies; recitation, "The Dean's Brother," Mrs Townsley; chorus, "Excelsior," choir; recitation, "The Alarm Clock," Mrs Hetson; song (and tableau), "Love at Home," Mrs Hampshire"; and chorus (humorous), "Instrumental Band," choir. During the interval refreshments, provided by the members, were handed round. The proceeds, including the donation by Mr and Mrs Young of £1, amounted to £3.

ALLERTON BYWATER

FOURTEEN YEARS' COMPENSATION.—At an inquest at the Pontefract Workhouse, on Wednesday, on the body of Thomas Morrey, aged forty-eight, miner, formerly of Wetherby Street, Castleford, it was said that in October, 1900, whilst working in the Allerton Bywater Colliery, Morrey was struck on the head by a piece of "muck," and was off work several since, but had lived on a compensation allowance of 15s. a week. Dr. Osmond said the accident had no relation to the cause of death, and the jury returned a verdict that death was due to natural causes.

SIR J. COMPTON RICKETT, M.P.—The Rev. W. J. Hopper, United Methodist minister, of Boston, preaching on Sunday evening at the Cresswell Chapel, Spalding, entered a protest against Sir J. Compton-Rickett, M.P., occupying the position of President of the Free Churches (to which he has been nominated for next year), on the ground that he was reported to be a big shareholder in armament companies. Mr Hopper intimated his intention—if the nomination proved to be true—of entering a personal protest to the National Free Church Council. They might as well, he said, have a brewer as president of a temperance society.

BARWICK

On Saturday afternoon a football match was played between Barwick R.S. and Boston Spa, and Barwick won by four goals to nil.

THE SCHOOLS.—At Barwick School the percentage of attendance last month was 92.85 as compared with 88.3c in February last year. At Scholes School the percentage was the best in the Garforth division, being 96.88 as compared with 91.43. There were 32 children on the books and the average attendance was 31.

BOWERS ALLERTON

The attendance at Bowers Allerton School last month was excellent, the percentage being 94.18 against 87.90 in February last year.

THE LATE MR. F. C. BLACKBURN.—After an illness of about four months the death took place on Friday afternoon of Mr Frederick Cyril Blackburn, second son of Mr and Mrs Walter Blackburn, Scott Hall Villas, Astley. Though only in his 19th year the high esteem in which the deceased was held was well proved at the funeral, which took place on Monday afternoon, the cortege including the large procession representing the various interests in life. The cortege was headed by the Mission Hall Ladies' Bible Class, followed by the Men's Bible Class, and many deputations from the local collieries followed, while the Castleford Sunday School, in which the deceased was at one time a devoted student, was also represented. Representatives from many of the churches in the district also attended. The service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Bergheim (rector), assisted by the Rev. H. W. B. Chapman, United Methodist Church minister, of Castleford. The hymn "There is a home eternal" was feelingly sung by the Mission Hall choir at the graveside. The chief mourners were Mr and Mrs Walter Blackburn, Mr J. P. Blackburn (brother), Miss Blackburn (sister), Mr J. W. Blackburn (grandfather), Mr W. S. Blackburn (uncle), Mr and Mr H. Peck (uncle and aunt), Mr H. H. Blackburn and Masters Blackburn, Thorner (uncle and cousins), Mr and Mr H. Jackson (aunt and uncle), and Mr H. Greenhill (cousin). Also present were Mr and Miss Curtis (Castleford), Mr A. Wright (Ackworth), Mr and Mrs Buther (Burnsley), Mr and Mrs A. Parker, and Mr and Mrs J. Robinson. Wreaths were sent by the following:—Dad and Mam, Mr and Mrs J. W. Blackburn (Astley), Mr and Mrs Peck and family (Roundhay), Mr and Mrs W. S. and Miss Blackburn, Mr and Mrs H. H. Blackburn and family (Thorner), Mr and Mrs H. Jackson (Thoithorpe), Mr and Mrs J. E. Jackson (Bridlington), Mr and Mrs Hubert Peck, Mr and Mrs Garthwaite (Darlington), Mr and Mrs Garthwaite (Darlington), Mr and Mrs Curtis and family (Castleford), Mr and Mrs Walter Drake (Castleford), Mr and Mrs Burlington (Methley), Miss M. E. Ward (Hollinhurst), Miss Nellie and Master Charlie Brown (Allerton Bywater), and Cyril's shopmates, while three were sent from the Mission Hall—from the Ladies' Bible Class, the Men's Sunday Class, and Men's Friday Night Bible Class.

CROSSGATES

The many friends of County Councillor Boothriest, who is under the care of Sir Berkeley Moynihan, will be glad to learn that he is making steady progress.

LIBERALISM.—On Wednesday evening at the Wesleyan Schoolroom a meeting of the three Liberal Associations in Crossgates was held to make nominations for official positions on the Division Association, the annual meeting of which takes place at Halton next month. Mr W. G. Smithson (President of Crossgates Liberal Association) was in the chair, and the following nominations were agreed to:—President, Mr Martin Harvey; chairman, Mr F. W. Sutcliffe; vice-chairman, Captain Glover; hon. treasurer, County Councillor Denbiriet; hon. sec., Mr R. G. Macpherson; representatives of Crossgates Association committee, President and hon. sec. On the motion of Mr F. W. Sutcliffe, seconded by Mr P. Hartop, the following resolution was passed and ordered to be sent to the Prime Minister:—"This united meeting of the Crossgates and Seacroft Liberal Association expresses its unfaltering faith in the wisdom and judgment of the Prime Minister and his Cabinet at this critical juncture, but also expresses the hope that they will not be intimidated, deterred, or deflected from the object of their legislation by any combination of Army officers or other organisations, save only the voices of the duly elected representatives of the British people."

BAPTIST CHURCH FELLOWSHIP—LECTURE.—At the weekly meeting of the Baptist Church Fellowship held in the Lecture Hall, Whitkirk, on Tuesday night—Mr M. Elliott, of Crossgates, presiding—an excellent lecture on "Machiavelli" was delivered by Mr J. R. Pearson, B.A., of Crossgates. He said that Machiavelli was born at Florence in 1469, and he was the son of a jurist. He was in 1498 appointed Secretary to the Florentine Government—a post which he held until his exile in 1512, and in this capacity he paid many visits to various countries in Europe. Being a keen student of men and things, he doubtless obtained during these embassies that intimate knowledge of human nature which shines through every page of his writings. He was pre-eminently the child of his age. The end of the fifteenth century witnessed the rise of strong national monarchies everywhere in Europe, except Italy, where anarchy and disintegration were rife. The lack of patriotic spirit amongst the Italians greatly troubled Machiavelli, and "The Prince"—his most famous work—was an impassioned plea for the advent of a national deliverer. He was an ardent patriot and the real forerunner of Mazzini and Garibaldi. He longed to see his country a stable and well-respecting State, and to that end, if it could be attained, he was prepared to endorse measures which were obviously at variance with the elementary principles of morality. It was in that sense that he was so often charged with immorality, though he was rather unmoral than immoral. He did not deny the excellence of the moral virtues, but he did deny their efficacy in the establishment and extension of dominion, which must always be regarded as the main end of the Statesman. Machiavelli might be regarded as the real founder of modern political science, and he was the first thinker to make a distinction between politics and ethics. For him the question was not as to how the ideal man would act under circumstances, but how a man acted under such conditions as actually existed. The influence of Machiavelli throughout the whole of modern history had been great. Frederick the Great openly avowed him with their lips, had followed him with their hearts, and the constant placing of policy before principle was a standing tribute to Machiavelli's diagnosis of the human heart. He, however, neglected the divine element in human nature as an operating force in the world of politics, and history proved that there were many times when it preferred to follow the right rather than expediency. The beat men of all times were against Machiavelli, but that should not blind people to the services which he rendered in the study of political thought. An interesting discussion followed, and it was taken part in by Messrs Hartop, Rodgers, Cox, and Walker. On the motion of Mr Anderson, seconded by Mr F. Hyde, a cordial vote of thanks was passed to the lecturer. On Tuesday next Mr Clegg, of Headingley, will give an address on "What Norman Angellism stands for."

CRICKET CLUB.—The members of the Carlton Cricket Club are looking forward to a successful season, and to augment the funds a tea and concert were held in the Wesleyan Sunday School on Tuesday evening. A large company sat down to a sumptuous tea, which was followed by a successful concert. A number of talented artistes had been secured, and the concert was greatly enjoyed. Those contributing to the programme were the Carlton Temperance Prize Band Quartette Party, Miss Elsie Higgins (soprano), Mr J. W. Rowley (tenor), Mr F. Hall (humorist), Mr A. Gascoigne (descriptionist), Cleckheaton, Mr F. Gawthorpe, F.R.C.O., was the accompanist.

FAIRBURN

In the Totalisator sweep on the Lincoln Handicap the first three prizes have been won by Mrs J. Atkinson, Hill Top Farm, Fairburn.

FRYSTON

On Saturday afternoon a football match was played between Fryston Colliery and Norland, and the former won by five goals to nil.

A serious accident befalls George Wilkinson (6d), of Chapel Lane, Castleford. Whilst he was working in a sand-quarry at Fryston the roof fell in and seriously injured him about the body. He was removed to Leeds Infirmary.

FOOTBALL.—A meeting of the Cup Committee of the West Riding County Football Association was held on Tuesday night at the Grand Central Hotel, Leeds. Mr J. Connor presiding. It was arranged that the final for the West Riding Cup Competition should be played at Keighley on April 11th. Sergt. Hammond (Bradford) was appointed referee, and Messrs P. Whitley (Otley) and R. V. Gee (Keighley) linesmen.

GARFORTH

URBAN COUNCIL ELECTION.—Five candidates were nominated for three vacancies on Garforth Urban Council, and on Tuesday there were no withdrawals. The following gentlemen will, therefore, go to the poll:—Mr E. R. Archer gentleman; Mr J. B. Breed, flag and banner manufacturer; Mr D. Gascoigne, checkweighman; Mr Robert Routledge, mining engineer; and Mr W. Yeandle, miner.

RATES.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday nineteen Garforthians were summoned by the Garforth overseers for non-payment of the poor rate. In all the cases orders were made. Orders were also made against twenty-five others who were summoned by the Garforth Urban District Council for non-payment of the district rate.

GILCHRIST LECTURES.—A meeting of the committee appointed to carry out the Gilchrist lectures was held at the Education Offices on Thursday night—Mr H. J. Denby presiding. It was reported that 449 syllabuses had been applied for, 56 of which were for shilling tickets, and 14 one shilling tickets had been sold, and there was a balance of over £c in hand. A discussion ensued in regard to promoting lectures for next winter, and a sub-committee was appointed to go into the question and report.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.—In the Garforth district the school attendance was very high, viz., 92.35 compared with 86.45 in February last year, and for the local schools the percentages were:—Garforth Council, mixed, 90.39 against 91.43; Garforth Council, infants, 90.17 and 83.28; Garforth, 95.89 and 88.16; Garforth Parochial, mixed, 93.28 and 88.16; Garforth Parochial, infants, 86.81 and 77.88; and Garforth Roman Catholic, 88.38 and 79.49. It was pointed out that every school with the exception of one, had an improved attendance.

DARTS.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday James Sharpe, miner, of Garforth, was summoned for being drunk and disorderly in Garforth on Saturday, March 14th. P.C. Benner stated that about 10.30 p.m. on the night in question he was in the Main Road, Garforth, where he saw the defendant, who was in a drunken condition and making use of obscene language to some women. As defendant had a number of convictions against him, and did not appear in Court to answer the summons, he was fined 20s.s and costs.

INQUEST.—On Monday at an inquest conducted by Mr J. C. Malcolm, the Leeds Coroner, on the body of Thomas Charles Sparrow (34), the Parade, Garforth, described as a head horse feeder at a colliery, it was stated that in October last Sparrow assisted in the killing and dressing of examination of two horses which were found to have been suffering from glanders. At the time the deceased had a split finger nail. It was suggested that his death might have been caused by glanders. Dr. Wilkins, of the Leeds Infirmary, said, in his opinion, death was caused by ordinary septic poisoning. The jury, after a long retirement, asked for evidence as to how the man sustained the injury to his finger nail, and the Coroner adjourned the inquest for a week to enable further inquiries to be made.

PICTURE HOUSE.—At Garforth's popular place of amusement this week attractive programmes have been submitted to very appreciative "houses." The excellent drama of "Victory or Death" proved a great draw in itself, and early part of the week, and for Tuesday and Saturday "A Ray of God's Sunshine" (a pretty and pathetic drama of love and reformation) will be screened. Other fine films presented are "The Lost Millionaire" (a powerful detective story) and "The fatal taxi-cab" (comedy). For the first three nights of next week the Lubin Film Co.'s great production of "Ben the Earth" (a realistic description of the earthquake at San Francisco, showing the upheaval of whole streets of houses, has been secured. Other excellent pictures will be submitted. In connection with the great interest now being displayed in the "noble art," patrons of the house will have brought before them on Monday, Friday, and Saturday the vivid description of the great glove fight between Kid Lewis, feather-weight champion of Europe, and Paul Til, the famous French lightweight, for the featherweight championship of Europe, at the Premierland, London. Another great film will be "Bred in the Bone," a powerful and exciting drama of the Wild West, by the well-known Film 101 Company. For times and prices see advt.

GREAT PRESTON

The percentage of attendance at Great Preston School last month was 86.74 compared with 68.28 for February last year. This was the lowest attendance in the Kippax district.

PREFERMENT.—The living of Price's Marston, Warwickshire, has been offered by Earl Spencer to a former curate-in-charge of Great Preston, to the Rev. J. H. Woodman, M.A., who has accepted the same. Price's Marston is a country parish comprising about 3,000 acres, with a beautiful church, built early last century by Sir Leonard, with a fine peal of bells, and the village is very pleasantly situated. There is a nice vicarage, with garden and orchard, and the value of the living is £220 gross, and £200 net. The population is a little under 300 souls. Mr Woodman is at present curate-in-charge of Wychbold, a large country parish in Worcestershire.

ANNUAL PARISH MEETING.—The annual parish meeting of Great and Little Preston was held on Wednesday in the Bowers Allerton Sunday Schools. The vicar (the Rev. Canon Mr W. Schools. The vicar (the Rev. Canon Mr W. S. Blackburn (in the chair), Messrs A. Parker, W. Longbottom, J. Stockwell, B. Evans, R. Wardle, and A. Simpson, with Mr W. Blackburn (Clerk). The accounts for the past year were given through, and these proved that beginning the year with a balance hand of £5 5s. 10d., necessary books, printed notices, postage, stamps, and school expenses had been responsible for the expenditure of £2 3s. 5d., leaving a balance in hand of £3 1s. 5d. The letting of lands for grazing purposes was then carried out, after which a vote of sympathy was unanimously extended to Mr W. Blackburn in his recent bereavement, on the motion of Councillor A. Parker, seconded by Councillor A. Parker.

HALTON

On Saturday a football match was played between Whitkirk C.M. and Leeds St. Saviour's in the Church League, and it was drawn—one goal each.

ATTENDANCE.—At Halton School (mixed) last month the percentage of attendance was 88.31 as compared with 84.45 in February last year, and in the infants' school 87.60 against 77.34. The figures for Colton School were: 87.60 and 87.50.

HON. E. L. WOOD, M.P., AND HOME RULE.—Speaking in the House of Commons on Wednesday the Hon. E. L. Wood said the great danger in the country had a feeling that both parties in the Irish controversy had fatally mismanaged and bungled it during the last two years. Primary responsibility, of course, rested with the Government, and why should they cost come into the arena and set to work with the Opposition in order to secure a national settlement which would not be partisan, being national? What was their chance of being permanent? If the Chancellor of the Exchequer would use his arts in this direction he would do a much better day's work for the country than by making such speeches as he delivered last week at Huddersfield.

KIPPAX

On Saturday afternoon, in the Leeds and District Football League, Kippax Woodville played Rothwell P.C., and the Woodville won by three goals to nil.

WESLEYAN CHURCH.—At the Wesley Guild meeting on Tuesday evening a paper was given by the circuit minister (Rev. H. W. Wilkinson on "Wanted a Man." There was a good attendance of members.

THE SCHOOLS.—At the Kippax schools last month the attendance was excellent. In the boys' school the percentage was 93.23 against 91.99 for the corresponding month of last year, the girls' school 93.22 and 89.22, and the infants' school 87.88 and 85.05.

UNITED METHODIST CHURCH.—An "at home" was held in this church on Tuesday evening, and was presided over by the minister (Rev. H. W. B. Chapman) who was present, and gave an address on the work of the Church. Mr J. Stewart presided. Songs were contributed by Miss Holliday, Miss H. Cockell, Miss Kilburn, Miss E. Smith, Mr D. Smith, and Mr J. Farrant. The accompanist was Mr W. Halliday. Refreshments were served to the guests during the evening.

EVENING CLASSES.—The students who have attended the evening classes during the past winter and a few friends were entertained by their teachers. Mr Howell and Mr R. Veitch, at a social held in the Council School on Friday evening. A feature of the evening's proceedings was the presentation by the students of a hall-stand to Mr Howell, and a walking stick to Mr R. Veitch as a token of appreciation of their services. Games and other amusements were engaged in.

CYCLING.—A West Riding Club League, consisting of the following half-dozen clubs, has been formed:—Castleford Wellington, Crofton C. and C., Kippax Road, Altertheppe, Stanley Wheelers, and Yeadon Clifton. These have combined to have all their fixtures printed in one book, and thus reduce the cost of same. Combined runs have been arranged for Easterside, Selby being the meeting place on Good Friday, and Boston Spa on Easter Monday. These resorts appear to be favourite ones, and a prize is offered to the rider who records the most visits between Easterside and October 1st at each place. One good feature at these inter-rube is the provision of a hot dinner at a moderate charge at both venues.

PASSIVE METHODIST CHURCH.—A special effort was made by the members of the Primitive Methodist Church to augment the finances of the sewing basket on Sunday, and the Rev. A. H. Fitzwood, (Circuit minister) (Castleford), preached morning and evening to good congregations. A public tea, given by Mr and Mrs J. W. Smith, was provided in the schoolroom by Mrs Ward (contralto), Miss Parker, Astley (elocutionist), and Mr N. Wheatley (humorist). The humorous sketch "Dr. Dionsham," was given by Mr Ward, Castleford, and the humorous sketch "The contented plumber" was contributed by Rippax Wesleyan friends. Mr Chas. Bellwood, of Bowers Allerton, presided, and the accompanist was Mr T. Booth. Mr H. Gummerson was an efficient pianist. The proceeds of tea and entertainment amounted to £7 2s. 10d.

LOFTHOUSE

On Saturday afternoon a hockey match was played between Lofthouse Glenfield and Leeds Y.M.C.A., and it was drawn—two goals each.

Mr Harold Blackburn, the aviator, accompanied by Dr. Russell as passenger, flew from Lofthouse Park to Harrogate, on Sunday, and alighted on the Stray. Later he made flights over the town.

LEDSHAM

At Ledsham School last month the percentage of attendance was 89.36 against 86.27 in February last year.

LEDSTON

William Haley (20) was found not guilty at Leeds Assizes on Monday, of an offence against a girl of 15 at Ledston in November, and discharged.

OULTON

The following are the results of the semi-finals for the Oulton Institute Billiards Challenge Cup:—J. Clemitt (scratch) 250 v. W. Jopling (rec. 30) 163, and G. Wilkinson (rec. 50) 250 v. J. Nuttall (scratch) 225.

BILLIARDS.—A billiard match was played at Oulton on Tuesday night between Oulton Institute and Castleford Liberal Club, the former being defeated by 458 points. The aggregate scores were Castleford Liberal Club 1,195, Oulton Institute 741. Details (Castleford names first):—H. Waster 103 v. C. W. Penfold 200, T. Caine 99 v. S. Gover 200, W. Jopling 141 v. T. Dollick 200, S. Lockwood 99 v. W. Allerton 200, J. Pollard 200 v. W. Hodge 200, and G. Wilkinson 200 v. F. Batty 199.

HISTORY OF OULTON.—Much interest was taken in the paper read by Mr R. V. Higgins on "Some history of Oulton," at the fortnightly meeting of the Oulton Literary and Debating Society held in the Oulton Institute on Thursday evening. There was a record gathering, which was presided over by Mr Fred Nettleton. Mr Higgins's paper showed that much time had been spent in a careful search for material dealing in any way with the history of Oulton, and it is not unlikely after the information contained that the public will be in eager search for clues that may help to show the origin of the place. Mr Higgins discountenanced the argument that Oulton owed its name to mythical relative to Ulysses, but it may be interesting to note, form the crest of the Cholerleys. It was argued that the probable origin of the name came from the fact that the Saxon word "Ulta" (meaning a forest) from, Oulton was inhabited by a better class portion of the community; thus the derivation—Oulton. Mr Higgins was duly paid a vote of praise to which he replied, and who wrote an interesting history of Rothwell.

MICKLEFIELD

The workpeople at Micklefield Colliery have sent £34 9s. 4d. to Leeds Infirmary.

THE SCHOOLS.—At Micklefield School last month the attendance was very good. In the infants' department the percentage was 92.28 against 90.68 in February last year, and the figures for the infants' department were 88.81 and 88.51.

ROUNDHAY

A hockey match was played between Roundhay and Leeds on Saturday afternoon, and Leeds won by the narrow margin of one goal to nil.

At the Leeds County Court, on Friday, a receiving order was made, on a creditor's petition, against Henry John Hawthorne, of 7, Greek Street, and Cookeostone; Lidgett Park Road, Roundhay, solicitor.

A PICTURE.—The Leeds Camera Club's exhibition of specimens of the photographic art which was commenced on Saturday at the Leeds Institute, was continued on Monday afternoon and evening. The winner of the special silver plaque was Mr George Fletcher, who exhibited a fine picture of gleaninas in a Roundhay Park greensbouse.

A MOTOR ACCIDENT.—A serious motor-car accident occurred on Sunday at Severn Stoke, near Worcester, as the result of which a lady, named Mrs Brook, of Glenwood, Park View Crescent, Street Lane, Roundhay, lies in the Worcester Infirmary with a fractured skull. Mr and Mrs Brook and Mrs Tasker, also of Park View Crescent, were returning home from Torquay, and when passing through the village of Severn Stoke the steering gear suddenly broke and the car mounted the bank and turned completely over. The chauffeur, Mr Brook, and Mrs Tasker were thrown out, but escaped unhurt. Mrs Brook, it was evident, was badly injured. Dr. Hefferman was fetched at once, and he drove the injured lady in his own car to the Worcester Infirmary, where she was found to be suffering from a fractured skull.

ROBIN HOOD

P.S.A.—At the P.S.A. service held on Sunday afternoon in the United Methodist Church, an address on "Indifference" was given by Mr W. Wright (Leeds). The solos "How lovely are Thy dwellings" and "The desert of redemption" were rendered by Miss Kate Ellis (Rothwell). There was a good attendance presided over by Mr J. Keighley.

SEACROFT

PRESENTATION.—In connection with the attendance section, a social evening was held in the schoolroom on Thursday. Alderman D. B. Wilson presented a silver watch to Mr Robert Lazenby, (gth) who has been with the workers, as a slight recognition of the services he has rendered to them. Afterwards a short programme of music was gone through, the artistes being the Misses Green, Green, and Ryder, and Mr Harold Carpenter.

STOURTON

The address at the P.S.A. service held at the Primitive Methodist Church on Sunday afternoon, was given by Mr Thomas Hall, of Woodhouse Hill. There was a good attendance.

A MENDICANT.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday a labourer named James Huddlestone, of no fixed abode, was charged with begging in Stourton on March 17th, and was sentenced to two months with hard labour. Prisoner stated that he only came out of prison on the day he was arrested at Stourton.

IN DARKNESS.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday James Proctor, teamster, of Hunslet, was summoned for driving a vehicle without a light at Stourton on Monday, March 9th, at 11.30 p.m. P.C. Boyes stated that on the night in question he was on the Pontefract Road, Stourton, when he saw the defendant driving along in a cart which had no light. He stopped the defendant, who said the light had gone out, but he had another candle in his pocket. A fine of 2s. 6d. and costs was imposed.

CONCERT.—A concert was given in the Primitive Methodist Sunday School on Saturday night in aid of the Sunday School staff at the forthcoming bazaar. There was a very large audience. An enjoyable programme was submitted by a party from the Hunslet Carr Methodist New Connexion Church, and a humorous sketch by Mr Ward and Mr Wheatley (Burmantofts Congregational Church. Mr Lyndon, of Stourton, presided, and at the close a vote of thanks to the entertainers was passed on the call of Mr Brook, seconded by Mr H. Collinson.

SHADWELL

LIBERALISM.—On Friday evening, under the auspices of the Liberal Association, a public meeting was held in the Temperance Rooms, and Mr North presided, being supported by Mr E. H. Foster, J.P. (prospective Liberal candidate for the Hemsley Division), Mr Mayfield, Mr F. W. Sutcliffe (Chairman of the Barkston Ash Liberal Association), Mr Garner, and Mr W. J. Taylor (Liberal agent). Addresses on current politics were delivered by Mr Foster and Mr Walker, and they were thanked at the close, on the call of Mr Garner.

SWILLINGTON

Excellent returns were made by the Swillington schools last month. At the Common School the percentage was 95.06 against 75.31 for February last year, and at the Parochial School the figures were 94.40 and 73.47.

WHITKIRK

HOCKEY.—Although disappointed by having three fixtures cancelled, Whitkirk have been fortunate in arranging a series of three games with the Royal Field Artillery stationed in Leeds. As each side has previously won one match, the rubber depended on Saturday's game, the result of a very enjoyable game was a draw of two goals each, the soldiers showing much improved form. Watson and Milnrow scored for Whitkirk, who have won 15 and drawn three of 23 fixtures.

WOODLESFORD

MISSIONS.—In connection with the Woodlesford Wesleyan Church the annual home missionary meeting was held on Sunday, when there was a large gathering, and the meeting was addressed by the Rev. N. W. Thomlinson (Mrs. Mardy Digby). A meeting will afterwards be held at which it will be decided as to what form the presentation will take. The Rev. B. Hemsworth is to be asked to make the presentation.

SELBY CONSERVATIVE WHIST DRIVE.—Another enjoyable whist drive was held in the Conservative Club, Selby, on Tuesday, and as the competitors took part Mr R. Lodge officiated as M.C. The following were the prize-winners for the month:—Ladies: 1, Mrs H. Gibson; 2, Mrs Fawkes; scaled, Miss F. Clubley; consolation, Mrs Horsford. Gents: 1, Mr Bonrose; 2, Mr Bennison; scaled, Mr A. Swift; consolation, Mr E. B. Jackson. Refreshments were served during the evening.

LOFTHOUSE

The workpeople at Micklefield Colliery have sent £34 9s. 4d. to Leeds Infirmary.

THE SCHOOLS.—At Micklefield School last month the attendance was very good. In the infants' department the percentage was 92.28 against 90.68 in February last year, and the figures for the infants' department were 88.81 and 88.51.

ROUNDHAY

A hockey match was played between Roundhay and Leeds on Saturday afternoon, and Leeds won by the narrow margin of one goal to nil.

At the Leeds County Court, on Friday, a receiving order was made, on a creditor's petition, against Henry John Hawthorne, of 7, Greek Street, and Cookeostone; Lidgett Park Road, Roundhay, solicitor.

A PICTURE.—The Leeds Camera Club's exhibition of specimens of the photographic art which was commenced on Saturday at the Leeds Institute, was continued on Monday afternoon and evening. The winner of the special silver plaque was Mr George Fletcher, who exhibited a fine picture of gleaninas in a Roundhay Park greensbouse.

A MOTOR ACCIDENT.—A serious motor-car accident occurred on Sunday at Severn Stoke, near Worcester, as the result of which a lady, named Mrs Brook, of Glenwood, Park View Crescent, Street Lane, Roundhay, lies in the Worcester Infirmary with a fractured skull. Mr and Mrs Brook and Mrs Tasker, also of Park View Crescent, were returning home from Torquay, and when passing through the village of Severn Stoke the steering gear suddenly broke and the car mounted the bank and turned completely over. The chauffeur, Mr Brook, and Mrs Tasker were thrown out, but escaped unhurt. Mrs Brook, it was evident, was badly injured. LIGHT REFRESHMENTS were served during the interval.

BRAHMAN MOOR HUNT.—The Brahman Moor pack met at Rawdon Hill on Wednesday, and trotting straight to Cresheld found at once. The fox, leaving Bramhope Hall on the left, crossed the road, and got to ground in the Bramhope Quarries was marked to ground. Returning to Cresheld another fox from it headed out towards Black Hill, but was headed back to the Quarries between Leeds and Otley Road, and passing the ballast heaps on the summit of the Arthington Tunnel was taken forward across the Coalcridge Road, and by the timber yard into the Otley Road, where he was headed for St. Helena and the river. He was heading for St. Helena when he turned right-handed, and, crossing the road, ran to ground at the corresponding hall of last year. The Otley Road near the Dyenley Arms, made a cast straight to the Bramhope Quarries, and was marked to ground after a hunt of 20 minutes. Cresheld was called upon a third time, but not again holding a fox, the pack went to Harewood Park, and soon found, but after some wandered and broke. Wike Wood and crease in the clumps for prosper quarters, from thence, abandoned their fox. Wike Wood and the grese patches near Wike village were blank. Wike as also were the Scarcroft coverts, and hounds to the kennels were without finding again.

FARMERS' "SHOOT."

A largely-attended meeting of the members of Wetherby Chamber of Agriculture was held at Wetherby yesterday afternoon—Mr John Thompson (President) in the chair.

It was decided to hold a wood-pigeons "shoot" over the area covered by the Chamber on Saturday afternoon, most of the landlords having given their permission.

Landlords, farmers, and gamekeepers are requested to assist in the shoot by shooting the birds there until dusk. The Committee trust that there will be no interference with game, but that all will unite in trying to get rid of wood pigeons which are doing so much harm to farmers' interests.

FOOTBALL JOTTINGS

BARKSTON ASH CUP—FINALISTS.

On Saturday afternoon the second of the semi-finals in the Barkston Ash Cup Competition was played between Cawood and Selby Olympia, and the Olympians were defeated by three goals to two. The Cawood team will, therefore, meet Garforth W.R. on April 11th (should be the strong vigorous game they will provide excellent opposition for the White Rose). Cawood, it will be remembered, defeated Wetherby. The final will be played on April 11th.

The match between Cawood United and Selby Olympia was played on the Selby Bowling Green. The ground was in a slippery condition, resulting in rather erratic shooting at goal. In the first half play was very fast, the teams appearing very evenly matched. In the second half, having been given against Olympia for a foul, Percy James, half-back, took the kick and landed the ball well into the goal-mouth, from which position it was forced into the net. The second half was more eventful, each side scoring twice. Result:—Cawood United 3 goals, Selby Olympia 2 goals. There was a good gate, and about £7 10s. was taken.

A meeting of the Cup Committee was held on Tuesday night at South Milford, and it was decided that the final between Cawood United and Garforth W.R. on April 11th should be played on the Bowling Green at Selby, with Mr Bickan (York) as referee, and Messrs Walton and Townend as linesmen. In the event of the match being drawn the re-play will take place at Sherburn on the 18th. After the match the trophy and medals will be presented to the winners by the President of the Association.

DEIGHTON SHIELD—FIRST.

With the exception of two or three matches the fixture list in the Deighton Shield Competition has been completed. The season has not been an interesting one, there being too many Saturdays without matches, and it is unfortunate there are so few clubs now playing in the district, because that curtails the fixture list. A feature of the season has been the promising work of Aberford and Barwick, and these teams will, I hope, keep their colours flying. Garforth W.R. and South Milford, in one division, and Wetherby, in the other, have been outstanding, and there is no doubt they are all good teams.

If was a pity the close of the season was marred by the dispute between Garforth and South Milford, because it has left some unpleasantness, which might easily have been avoided. The decision of the Appeals Board was undoubtedly unexpected, especially by the Barkston Ash Executive, but it has been given, and it is evident that a revision of procedure in the granting of transfers in Barkston Ash will have to be made.

Wetherby, who have won their division, will appear in the final, and their opponents will be either Garforth or South Milford. In view of the decision of the Appeals Board, there was some talk of the match between these teams being allowed to be played, but I understand that objection will be taken. It is contended that South Milford, having infringed rule 9 of the League regulations, "should have two points deducted from its score and may be fined, and the match replayed at the discretion of the Executive." South Milford have, I understand, asked the Appeals Board for a re-hearing of the case, and nothing will be done by the Barkston Ash Executive until the outcome of the appeal is known.

WATERLOO MAIN DEFEATED AT ROTHWELL.

On Saturday at Rothwell, Waterloo Main Colliery were beaten by Rothwell White Rose by four goals to one. The visitors started against the wind and were quick to attack, but a good run by Rothwell put them on the defensive. Their custodian was called upon to save and made some brilliant efforts, but he was baffled by Wrigley, who put in a fine shot. The Waterloo afterwards made a promising attack, but could not pierce the defence of Dawson and Ripley. Securing the leather, Taylor passed to Abrams, who centred to Parfitt, and he scored. Once again Waterloo appeared dangerous, and Wrigley, in trying to clear, gave a penalty, from which Hanoock scored. On the restart Parfitt commenced for Rothwell, the forward line combining in a strong attack. From a weak attempt by the visitors' custodian to save, Hughes scored a third goal for the homesters. From a penalty against the visitors, Dawson added a fourth.

LEEDS CUP—ROTHWELL P.C.V. METHLEY P.

The semi-final for the Leeds and District Cup between Rothwell Parish Church and Methley Perseverance attracted a large "gate" at Oulton on Saturday afternoon, and the match resulted in a draw of two goals each. Methley were prime favourites from the start, and matters certainly did look black for Rothwell in the second half, when they were without a single goal, while their opponents had netted two. However, the Churchmen put up a good fight, and scored twice within the last half-hour, and the Methley eleven should have learned a thing or two which should stand them in good stead when they meet again in the replay, which takes place a week on Saturday. Hitchin started for Rothwell against the breeze. The opposing forwards were very quick, but Stringer and Bulmer (full backs) had to be reckoned with, and defied all attempts to break down their defence. A narrow escape was witnessed when Stringer rushed to meet the ball, and he and the Methley man kicking at the same time, the leather went up in the air and passed just over the bar. From a corner kick the ball was headed by first one and then the other until it was sent straight for the net; but Nunns fisted it out. The leather was caught on the rebound and was promptly "booted" back, and struck the cross-bar. A break-away by Rothwell brought them well within the goal area, and several shots were put in. Parker, however, was equal to the occasion and cleared well. Rothwell were unable to score. The ball was kicked about until a scrum, in which the Methley men got them a splendid opportunity for a dash down the field. A neat centre pass was given, and an anxious moment was caused the "Rodillers" in a scrimmage in which Bowman scored without any difficulty. Very little of note occurred in the brief period to the interval.

On the restart Methley seemed bent on making themselves secure, and they played with great energy. Many shots were sent in, and a few went wide, while the rest were cleared in easy manner by Nunns. During the first few minutes of this half the ball was seldom out of the Rothwell area, and Bowman was successful in scoring another goal, Nunns being sent sprawling in an effort to save. It was now Rothwell's time, and they worked themselves well up the field, but each time the full backs, Jennings and Teale, returned the ball. Indeed, both men displayed remarkable footwork. At the other end, too, Stringer and Bulmer showed a sterling defence. A neat shot from Shires, and the ball was safe home, with Parker beaten. Rothwell, in the closing stages, did all the attacking, and Methley (and especially Jennings and his partner) resorted to kicking the ball at every opportunity out of the field of play. This, however, proved their own undoing, and in the last minute Teale sent the leather into touch. From the throw-out a melee ensued in the good area and Hurst netted.

RUGBY NOTES.

HALTON LADS DEFEATED.

The semi-final for the Goldthorpe Cup was played on the Headingley ground, the contending teams between Halton Council School and Bramley National School. Bramley started, and after good footwork by the forwards, Binks and Fletcher made an opening for Worsnop, who scored at the corner. In very quick time Baxter side stepped, and ran through. He was also unsuccessful in goal. A brilliant round of passing by the Leeds champions saw Worsnop outdistance all and score behind the posts. Lockwood placed the goal. A sharp short pass by Binks enabled Fletcher to score, Baxter goaling. The right wing was now worked by the "Goats." Ellingham scoring an unconverted try. Lockwood, a forward, joined in the next passing round and scored. He also kicked the goal. Stephenson was the next, and Baxter again succeeded with the place kick. Before half-time Worsnop, after a good run, scored, Baxter adding the major points. On resuming, smart passing exchanges by the "Church" lads saw Worsnop add five prior straight off the reel. His speed and dodging could not be overcome. Lockwood converted two, and Baxter one. Binks, after his unselfish work at scrum, half, received his due reward, smartly tripping round the scrum, near the line. Close on time Fletcher ran in, and Baxter goaled. The score was a record for the "Goats." Result:—Bramley National, 10 goals 13 tries, 65 points; Halton Council, nil.

YORK AND AINSTY SEASON CLOSED.

This York and Ainsty pack concluded a very good season's sport on Monday at Hawk Hills. They have hunted, including cutting, 124 days, have killed 20 brace of foxes, and marked 30 brace to ground. "The season has been an exceptionally open one, hounds not having been idle on more than half-a-dozen days. The sport has been generally divided over the whole country, but that hunted on Thursdays has produced many excellent gallops.

On Monday the pack found in the Home Wood at Hawk Hills, and, leaving the covert at the Folly end, the fox pointed for Huby, but, swinging left-handed, and leaving Stillington just on the right, he passed to the right of Croyle, ran straight to Spellow in Lord Middleton's country, and leading out on a ring was finally marked to ground at the Helmsley Road, after a good hunt of an hour and twenty minutes. The Croyle Covert was drawn blank. The Folly at Hawk Hills held a fox which quitted the covert for Huby, and turning to the left pointed for Stillington, but not reaching that village, turned right-handed, and gaining the Farlington Low Covert was abandoned after a hunt of forty minutes.

BRAMHAM MOOR HUNT RACES.

MEETING NEAR HAREWOOD.

MANY MISHAPS.

It is in the teeth of years since the Bramham Moor Hunt held point-to-point races, and the resuscitation on Tuesday, near Harewood Bridge, was a very successful and well-attended gathering, but unfortunately half way through there was a complete breakdown in the weather, and after the second race rain commenced to fall. It subsequently increased in volume and the day became decidedly cheerless, the anti-scathing kilts being set at a background of leaden grey. The Tight also became cold, and those who braved the elements and were forced to be out in the open got nothing but a dreadning for their pains, as little could be seen of the races until a couple of fields from home. It was a great pity, because all could have been mapped out, all grass, over splendid hunting country, which required galloping. The start was near Raygmont Carr, and round by the celebrated fox covert, Sandshoe White, the Harrogate and Leeds road being crossed before the opening field, which adjoined it, was reached. Amongst those present were Prince Arthur of Connaught, Lord Lascelles, Lord Furness, M.F.H., and Lady Furness, Hon. E. Lascelles, Mrs. G. Lane Fox, Mr E. Lane Fox (deputy M.F.H.), and Mrs E. Lane Fox, Lady Evelyn Collins, Colonel Nicholls, Colonel C. Bulkeley Johnson, C.B., Major and Mrs Swetenham, Earl of St. Germans, Lord Rodney, Sir G. Baillie, Colonel Langdale, Mr and Mrs T. L. Wickham-Boynton, Hon. Mrs. Hustler, Mr C. B. Lamb, Mr and Mrs Arnold Foster, Mr and Mrs J. M. Dawson, Mr Thompson (Esrick), Mr A. H. Hutton Mayerd, Mr G. Gunter and Miss Gunter, Mr R. J. and Miss Foster, Mr and Mrs J. Wormald, Mr Evelyn Milnes Gaskell, Mr and Mrs Richard Nickols, Mr and Mrs Harold Nickols, Mr and Mrs Mills, Mr J. Snowden, Mrs Lee, Miss Ramsden, Mrs Jenner, Mr Coghlan, Captain Cliff, Mrs Law, Mr C. Sherston, Captain S. J. Hardy, Captain E. J. Hardy, Captain Long, Captain McCrombie, Mr G. St. Lawrence, Mr L. H. S. Boothby, Mr G. J. R. Cooper, Mr W. Callander, Mr W. S. Cornwallis, Mr J. G. Crabbe, Mr R. T. Stanyforth, Mr Compton, Mr A. Michael Lupton, Mr and Mrs R. F. Meyrick, Mr A. W. Mallinson, Mr W. H. Farrand, Mr W. Hepton, Captain Maine, Mr C. H. Helmsley, Mr R. Low, Mr H. C. R. Homfray, Captain Neville, Captain Forsyth, etc.

The card comprised four events, and they all furnished capital races. The Spoil Cup, which opened the programme, brought out thirteen runners, the race going, as expected, to Lord St. Germans, who won with Gabot, the horse he was successful with at Bedale on Saturday last. Mr W. S. Cornwallis gave him a good race with Black Prince VI., the grey leading for most of the journey, and was only beaten a couple of fields from home. Spitfire was a bad third. Mr G. St. Lawrence had a bad fall, and a nasty cut across his forehead as a consequence. He was taken to Harewood and medically treated. The accident, happily, was not serious. Captain McCrombie also came to grief, and had a cut over his left eye. The motor-cars on the road, drawn up in a long line, interfered with the race considerably, and the riders got mixed up with them.

There were fourteen runners for the Bramham Moor Hunt Subscribers' Race, the winner being Mr. C. Foster with Ladybird. He was a lucky winner, because his brother, when leading him, fell at the last fence, and the horse, Verney, was so badly stalked that he had to be destroyed. Skylark, who broke a blood vessel, was pulled up, and Plumstead refused at the water. Peggy finished second, and Lord Hawke's Moonlight was third.

The Farmers' Race supplied the best finish of the afternoon. There were ten runners, and half of them were in the picture until a mile from home, when Foxcatcher was leading from Silcrest VII. with Old Sport in close attendance. The trio ran home in close company, Foxcatcher scoring a popular success by four lengths. The race was for a cup presented by the officers of the Royal Scots Greys, and it was gratifyingly received by the rider in the Scots Greys' tunic after the race by Lady Evelyn Collins. Young Sutton was afterwards presented to Prince Arthur, who shook hands with him, and also with his father, and congratulated them upon their success.

The Open Race came last, and for this Mrs Wickham Boynton's Owbridge and Saturday Night were the fancied candidates. They were odds-on Owbridge last year had beaten Mr Kenyon's horse at the Hon. Vane's point-to-point near Scarborough. Nothing could be seen of the race until close home, as it was raining in torrents from a blackened sky. A couple of fields from the finish the pair were seen to be in front, and they raced home together, Mr Wickham-Boynton winning another costly by a length. Lengths, simply fell and broke his back, but Mr R. Lord, the rider, was not hurt.

The officials were:—Stewards: Colonel C. Bulkeley Johnson, C.B., Major Swetenham, Mr G. Shirecliffe, Mr R. J. Foster, Mr E. Lane Fox, and Mr J. Wormald; Judge: Lord Lascelles; Clerk of the Course: Mr. F. Meyrick. Handicapper: Mr. T. Stanyforth.

The Spoil Cup (Royal Scots Greys' Race). Lord St. German's The Gabot Owner 1
Mr W. S. Cornwallis's Black Prince VI. Owner 2

Mr L. H. S. Boothby's Spitfire Owner 3

Won by two lengths; a bad third.

The Bramham Moor Hunt Subscribers' Race.—A Sweepstakes of £2 each four subscribed, and £2 extra for starters, for horses the property since Jan. 1st, 1914, of subscribers of not less than £12 to the Bramham Moor Hunt funds, and regularly hunted with the hounds.

BRAMHAM MOOR HUNT.

MEET AT THORPARCH.

The Bramham Moor hounds met at Thorparch on Friday. The Bramham and Horn Banks were drawn blank. Finding at Spoil Bank, near Thorparch Station, hounds crossed the Walton Road, and ran, heading to the right, across the railway, to the river bank. The fox turned alongside the river, and reaching the railway bridge, dubbed back to the river bank, and was killed.

Wighill Ings held the next fox, which headed up towards Wighill Church, and, leaving it on the left, ran down to Shire Oaks. Skirting the covert, he bent to the right, and was making back towards the Ings, when he turned to the left, and was taken past Healaugh Manor, and over Wighill and Tadcaster Road. The pack now hunting an improved pace, took their fox, with Shire Oaks wide on the left, pointing for Catterton village; but just short of Spink's Plantation, they turned left-handed, and ran up to Healaugh Manor Farm.

After a check there they bent away into Shire Oaks, and from it hunted slowly out to Catterton village, marking their fox to ground when abreast of Spink's Plantation, after a hunt of 45 minutes.

The pack trotted straight off to Hall Parles, and, finding at once, crossing the grassy lane leading to Walton, and hunted forward over the Walton and Wetherby Road and the railway to Thoparch Whin, pushing their fox through it, killed him at the boundary wall of the Park. Hadfield's Plantation was blank. Hounds found next in Champoyne Gorse, but the fox was lost almost at once in a blinding hail and rain storm. The Duck Pond Wood and Ingmanthorpe Willow Garth being blank, the day's sport ended.

HUNTING IN SAXTON AND MICKLEFIELD DISTRICTS.

The Bramham Moor hounds on Saturday met at Towton. Renshaw Wood was blank. A fox was picked up in the open near Saxton Carr, and the pack getting away very close to him ran fast, with Saxton village on the right, up to Oldgate Lane. Here the fox swung to the right, and ran by Cold Hill to Ringhay, and without delay, leaving Daniel Hartley's Wood on the left, went through Micklefield Wood and forward across the Leeds and York Railway into Castle Hills.

The fox tried to get to ground in the old quarries, but failing to do so he doubled back over the railway, and made his way to Old Micklefield, where he turned right-handed between Hawk Hartley's and Micklefield Woods, and reached Huddleston Wood. Up to this hounds had run extremely well, and at a good pace, for forty minutes. The fox, after running the length of the wood, left it at the Quarry end, and crossing the lane between Huddleston Hall and the railway, pointed for Cold Hill, but short of it turned left-handed into Ringhay, and ran very closely hunted through Huddleston and Micklefield Woods, and on across the railway to Castle Hills.

Recrossing the railway once more, the fox was taken parallel with the line, and north of it, back to Huddleston Wood, where he was abandoned after a hunt of, in all, three hours and ten minutes, slow and twisting, with the exception of the first forty minutes. Saxton Carr and Lumsdon coverts were blank, and hounds returned to kennels without finding again.

MEET AT RIBSTON.

The Bramham Moor Hounds met on Monday at Ribston Village, and drew Scalebar and Birkham Wood blank. The Arbour and Plompton Rocks were also drawn without finding, but crossing the Harrogate and Wetherby Road, a fox was in waiting in the bracken-covered hill beyond it.

The quarry crossed the Crimple, and headed up towards Follfoot Village, turned to the left, and was hunted, with frequent checks, up to the railway. Now turning to the right-handed, he ran down almost to Spofforth before turning alongside the Crimple, and being brought slowly back alongside it to where he was found. Here he bowled away at full, but the fox jumping up on the fallows near Plompton Rocks gained the covert, and was marked to ground. A fox was killed in Brahom Wood, and another from it was taken to Abraham's Whin and abandoned.

Rudding Park not holding a fox, the pack than drew the covert on the Crimple Tunnel, and, finding there, ran fast with Rudding Park on the right and Follfoot Village, through the Plompton Coverts to Birkham Wood, and from it hunted at reduced pace over Forest Moor, and crossing the Harrogate and Wetherby Road to Ribton Grange, went slowly on to Crimple, and worked their fox up to Rudding Park, and across it back to the starting point at the Tunnel Top, where scent failed, after a run of 65 minutes, which redeemed the day.

TRAMMER'S OFFENCE.—William Henry Warren (48), a pony trammer, employed at the Lofthouse Colliery was charged at Wakefield on Friday with driving a pony underground in the coal mine. Mr J. R. Green, who appeared for the colliery company, said the defendant had been warned many times never to take more than two tubes attached to his pony. The lad took no notice of the warnings, and on Friday, March 6th, he took five full tubs attached to his pony. The animal was over-run, and some of the tubs went on top of it. The prisoner had to be got out in order to extricate the animal, and it was a mercy it was not killed. Warren was also charged with attempting to obtain 6d. by fraudulent pretences on March 9th. Defendant had nothing to say on the first charge, but denied the second. In the first case he was fined £2 9s. 6d., including costs, or one month's imprisonment, and in the second case he was ordered to pay 40s., or one month in default, the sentences to run consecutively.

THE PIGS DID IT.

Here is an amusing episode described by Weedon Grossmith in "From Studio to Stage" (John Lane):

Walter Webb had in the farmyard a large old barn, which was converted into a theatre. These entertainments were got up for the benefit of the tenants on the estate, who, I must say, formed a highly appreciative audience. I remember, on one occasion the laughter became so great when I was on the stage that I became greatly embarrassed, as I could scarcely account for it. I had never heard more laughter in a theatre, and I couldn't help thinking to myself if I ever went on the stage and caused such roars of laughter, how successful I should be. The laughter became so great at last that Mr. Webb rose in the audience and addressed them. He said: "I know they are difficult it is to restrain our mirth when Mr. Grossmith is on the stage, but if we don't check our laughter the performance won't be over till midnight." A burly farmer rose from his seat and replied: "Excuse me, Muster Webb, it hain't Mr. Grossmith we be laughing at, but someone have left the barn door open at the back, and all the pigs have got in, and they be almost a-pushing of us off our seats." Then, under the direction of our host, the whole audience rose and chivied the pigs out. But it sadly stopped the action of the play, and the laughter was certainly not so excessive.

REAL BODILY REST.

Bodily rest can only be got by having the muscles completely relaxed. The ordinary sitting position in a chair is not sufficient, as the lower extremities are still more or less rigid, says Dr. Musgrove. The chair should be an easy one, with an extension or a footstool to support the lower limbs just a trifle below the level of the body. A better rest can be had, however, by lying full length on a couch or bed with the arms and legs sprawling in the manner adopted by the tramp when he takes a sleep by the wayside. This attitude assures ease if not elegance. And it does more than relax the limbs, for it gives repose to the heart as well. When the body is in this position the heart beats more slowly than when we are standing, walking, or even sitting.

CHAPTER II.

The day of an engagement is a great day, and so Pamela Lennox found it. There was the wonder of the whole thing. There was the sleepless dress that narrow brooklet which divides girlhood from womanhood. There was the touch of a man's lips on hers. There was the look in a man's eyes which proclaimed to herself and to all the world that she belonged to him better, far worse, for richer, for poorer. He had whispered the words in her ear.

"Pam, I am quite rich, and I know my dad will approve, and there is nothing to hinder our being married at once. We will be married at once, and we will go away together and see the big world. Oh, it is a glorious thing, Pam, to have plenty of money. It smoothes out all the wrinkles of life."

"And yet," she answered, smiling back at him, "just before you came I was saying to the dad that I almost wished that I were poor."

"It doesn't matter in the least," said the young man, "whether you are rich or poor if I am rich—or I shall be rich. This is a glorious day for me."

"We will keep it to ourselves just for the present, won't we?" said the girl.

Peter looked serious. "No," he answered; "I don't think that would be fair. You can tell your mother after dinner, and when I am alone with my father I will speak to him. It's a long way from dinner yet, and I will go into the house and bring out some tea for us to have together on the lawn. I am very thirsty, too, after we can talk and be quite by ourselves."

The evening of that day came all too soon—at least, so Pamela thought. Old Annie was waiting to help her darling into her dinner dress. She was looking a little reproachful.

"Miss Pamela, you quite forgot that you promised to bring Mr. Peter round to see me."

"I will bring him some time to-morrow, Annie."

Annie looked full up at the young, joyful face, and her lips half opened. The girl put her hands across them.

"Not yet, please; presently you will know."

The old woman nodded in a satisfied manner.

"And what do you wear to-night, Miss Pam?"

"Anything white and simple—oh! it doesn't matter."

She was soon dressed, and ran downstairs.

Mrs. Colthurst was a great contrast to her daughter. Pamela had inherited none of her mother's characteristics. She was, in fact, as unlike her mother as Peter Coltharst was unlike his father. Mrs. Coltharst was a somewhat stout, small, fair woman—the sort of woman who has always a great deal to do and never has time for anything, who is eaten up with jealousy, who is, in short, small minded. Pamela tried to consider her mother the first person in all the world, but she knew that, in order to keep up the delusion, she must walk through her life with her eyes shut.

Mrs. Coltharst now glanced at the girl with anxious eyes. Pamela stooped and kissed her.

"Why weren't you in as usual to tea, Pam?"

"Because, mums darling, Pete and I had a picnic tea all to ourselves in the wood."

Dinner was announced, and they went into the dining-room. As soon as the ladies had withdrawn, Peter sprang to his feet, came up to his father, and took his hand.

"Well," he said, in an excited voice, "I suppose you have guessed?"

Paul's clear-cut, strong face turned crimson. She started to his feet, and stood by the young man. "Guessed? What, my boy?" he asked, and his tone was a little tremulous.

"Just this, sir. I fell in love with her when I was at home last summer. During the year that has gone by I could think of no one else. When I saw her to-day my whole heart went out to her. She is the one woman in all I am ever one man. We are engaged, dad, and we want to marry as soon as ever we can manage it."

"Peter!" said his father. He took the young man's hand.

"Dad, are you glad or sorry? You know, I'd give all the world for you. You know that next to Pamela there is no one in my life who can possibly take your place. Are you glad or sorry?"

"Glad—more than glad. Why, this is splendid! Peter, my dear Peter——"

"Yes?"

"I can't enough thank Providence."

"Is that really so? Are you really so glad to see me married young—and to Pamela, of all people?"

"Of all people," said Paul Coltharst. "There are very few Pamelas in the world. She is a downright splendid girl. Now I will tell you the truth, Peter. When this property came to many years ago, when you were only a little child, there was a condition attached."

The young man was standing with his back to the fireplace. He was tall and extremely good-looking—one of the flowers of the youth of England.

"Yes?" he said, quietly.

"The man who left me this property, my old cousin, Walter Coltharst, made a condition."

"What was that?"

"That the condition was what has happened to-day."

"Father, what do you mean?"

"Pamela was an infant at the time. She was a daughter of Walter Coltharst's niece. He wanted you to marry her when you came to a marriageable age. I was sure, therefore, my son, that even if you had not loved her it would have been my duty to have urged you to think of this marriage. It is very seldom that a marriage arranged long years ago should come about so happily—that it should turn out to be the marriage that you want. I can scarcely believe my own senses when I think about it. You want to marry her, your stepmother wants her to marry you, and you want to marry each other. Peter, Providence is very good."

Peter was silent.

"What is the matter, my dear boy?"

"Of course, I am delighted, dad," he said, after a pause, "only I wish somehow——"

"What, my son?"

"That the old man had not thought of it years and years ago. I think that each man ought to choose his own wife."

"Peter, you chose her, knowing nothing about this. I never breathed it to you."

"It was well you didn't, dad. Had you done so, say, two years back, perhaps even one year back, I should have thought of marrying any girl in the world in preference to Pamela."

"It is all right as it is," said Paul. "And now, will you go in and talk to your stepmother? She will be pleased—delighted."

"I don't know that I want to talk to her to-night. You can tell her, father. Of course, I am glad that you are glad, only somehow that wish of the old man, the old man whom I have never seen, takes the freshness out of the thing."

"You will get over that, Peter; and it means, my dear son, a considerable amount of money."

"What do you mean, dad?"

"If you had not married Pamela all our lives would have changed."

"I never hear about this."

"Where is the use, my son? You love her; you are engaged to her; let good things alone. Don't hear about them. Be thankful for it. It ought to rejoice your very heart."

These words were scarcely out of the older man's lips before one of the servants entered the room. He brought a lady's visiting-card on a small salver and gave it to Paul Coltharst.

"The lady says that she is particularly anxious to see you, sir, I said you were at dinner, but she begged of me to tell you that she was here, and that she was willing to wait any time for your convenience."

"Read the name aloud, Peter," said his father. "I am short-sighted of late without my glasses."

Peter read the words: "Miss Patricia Ransome."

Paul suddenly sprang to his feet. "Tell her that I will see her presently," he said to the man.

The servant withdrew.

"Why, father, what is the matter?" said the young man.

"Nothing, I hope—nothing. But don't let your mother know, nor—nor Pamela. Leave me now, Peter. Don't—don't ask me any questions. Leave me, my son."

Peter went slowly out of the beautiful dining-room. He stood still for a few minutes outside. That moment, much as he loved Pamela, he was not specially anxious to see her. He felt more disturbed than he had ever been in his life before. The will which appointed his marriage with this girl annoyed him indescribably. He felt as a child does who is forced to do something which, under ordinary circumstances, he would have loved to do.

"It's ridiculous, my mind," he kept saying to himself, and yet he knew that he did mind intensely. "I should have been told years ago, so I was thought; but he knew that had the subject of his marriage with Pamela been breathed to him in his early youth he would have laughed just for the sake of contrariety, any other woman in the world better than this most lovely, most bewitching, most splendid young girl."

"The fact is this," he said to himself. "That tiresome old man's will takes the glamour out of my engagement."

He stood by an open window, letting out on the summer night the smoke of a cigar. He had smoked slowly by. She was a tall, slender, thin woman. Peter turned and glanced at her. Her eyes riveted themselves on his face. They became immediately full of pathos, of a sort of indescribable longing. She was standing in the shadow of the dining-room, being led into his father's presence by the servant. She was, of course, Miss Patricia Ransome. Peter relaxed his face with a curiosity nearly as great as that which she bestowed on him.

"Who can she be?" he said to himself. "Why, during all the years, has my father never breathed her name before? When she looked into my face I felt that she took me—did—just as though her eyes would devour me? Who is she? Where does she come from? I feel like someone wounded by mystery."

After a minute or two of further thought, Peter joined Pamela and his stepmother in the drawing-room. They opened the door and entered. On this midsummer evening the room was without artificial light. Mother and daughter were seated together by one of the open windows. Peter felt his heart beat. After all, notwithstanding the feeling of romance, he felt that in his heart of hearts he did love Pamela. He put his hand on her shoulder.

"It is a glorious night!" he said. "Come for a walk, won't you?"

"Pamela will go with you in a minute," said his stepmother.

The moment Mrs. Coltharst spoke Peter dropped his hand from Pamela's slight shoulder. The moonlight fell on his face. It also lit up the pale, pathetic eyes of the lady who was about to address him. Perhaps in all the world there were no people less like each other than Pamela Lennox and her mother. Pamela had depth, had sincerity, had a character which could be plumbed. She had a reserve force within her of strength which could and undoubtedly would come to the fore when occasion demanded. With Mrs. Coltharst all was shallow. Nevertheless, she was the girl's mother—she was the mother of that brilliant creature. She was all enthusiasm, brightness, and loveliness.

"The world is a strange place," thought Peter; then he looked with a growing impatience at his stepmother.

"Well, my boy," said Mrs. Coltharst, "Pam tells me she has been telling me of your engagement. Of course, Peter dear, I am pleased—highly pleased—that I have been able to keep my Pam a little surprise. She never guessed that, like Royalty, you two had this marriage arranged for you since ever you were in the cradle and you were a little child. Things have indeed turned out well; but even, Peter, if you had been a disagreeable, objectionable youth, if you had been wanting in force of character, and if Pamela had been——"

"Yes, mother," interrupted the girl, "if I had been frightful and squinting and had hair red, you would still have brought about a marriage between us—or, rather, you'd have tried to do it. But how wonderful how prearied in that case would we, Pete, would we?"

"No, Pam," he answered; and now he looked at her with delight shining in his eyes.

"Providence is good," said Mrs. Coltharst. "You are both a charming couple, and you have known each other often and often fain awake at night wondering if that strange will of your old cousin's and of my uncle's would ever come to the desired consummation. But everything is right."

"Supposing," said Peter, "that everything had been wrong?"

"We won't suppose anything so dreadful but had——"

"Yes, mums, speak—tell us the worst. It would be fun to hear what that is like."

"Why dear child, I tremble even to think of it. You would have been comparatively poor, and you would have blamed your father. He'd have had only a life interest in the money."

"And to whom, in that case, would this place have come?" asked Peter.

"Ah! that I am not prepared to tell you."

CHAPTER III.

As Peter and Pamela stepped out of the open window the girl was trembling all over. Peter attempted to put his arm round her waist, but she drew herself away from him.

"Pete, it is odious!" she cried. "You know what I mean—that it should have been planned for us like——"

"Yes, it is detestable," he answered; "but we have each other. Pam, therefore we must be content."

"We can't!" said the girl, stamping her foot. "Mother is gloating over it. I can't stand anyone who gloats. I wish with all my heart she had opposed it."

"And I wish my father had opposed it also," said Peter.

"I wish we had to fight for our engagement!" said the girl.

"I wish we had to run away together," remarked the boy.

"Let's elope—do it!" exclaimed Pam.

Peter laughed. Some of the shadow went out of his eyes. "If we could certainly bring back the romance," he said.

"We'll do it," she repeated. "We'll go lend they can't find us till pair. No one would rather we died than that we should be happy. Peter, how much money have you in your pocket-book at this moment?"

"Not a great deal, I'm afraid. Then I could meet you in London, and we'd be married from—oh, there's a splendid——"

"It would be glorious!" said Peter. "Pam, have you ever heard of a lady called Miss Patricia Ransome?"

"What a curious name! I certainly have never heard of her."

"I don't mind telling you, dear, that to-night," said the boy; "but she came here—she is here now talking to father. She has a curious face—the sort of face that you, Pam, would put into your stories when you are busy making them up. I wonder if she lives in London. If she does, she would help us. We could go to her and be married from her house."

"Of course we could."

The pair turned slowly down a shady path. After all, notwithstanding that old man's detestable will, they were engaged, and this was their first night, and, despite the little rub which that will had caused, their hearts were too full of each other to think long about anybody else.

Peter suddenly put his arm round the girl's slim waist. "You mustn't shrink from me, Pamela."

"I won't," she answered.

"Lean against me, darling."

She did so.

"You don't mind, do you, Pam?"

"No, Peter; I am afraid I like it."

"Then kiss me, Pam."

"Oh, there's nothing new in my kisses, Pete," said this girl. "How often we have kissed when we were children."

"Yes, but we are children no longer. Kiss me, Pam. Put your lips on mine. There."

She pressed her soft lips to his for a minute, turned crimson, felt herself trembling, and hurried her head on his shoulder.

"Pete, I'm dreadfully afraid——"

"What, dearest?"

"That whatever happened—were there a will or no will—I'd have to be yours."

"There, it's out!" he said, with a sort of choking laugh. "And I'd have to be yours."

They walked until they came to the borders of the lake. They stood and looked into the water. The moon was shining and made a path of glory on its surface.

"I wish we were poor," said Pam again.

"And so do I," said Peter.

They began to talk as though they had not made pretence, and talked of how little they could marry on. Then all of a sudden they ceased pretending and came to facts, and determined that they would enjoy the fulness of their love for each other, and be married and go round the world and see the loveliest things on earth, and come back together and have a home of their own.

"And we'll make other people happy as well as ourselves," said Pamela.

"Yes," said Peter, "we'll do our best for the world, just because it has been so good to us."

Meanwhile, a very different scene was being enacted in Paul Coltharst's dining-room. He had asked to have tea brought to his guest, and when Miss Patricia Ransome was announced he came forward to greet her. He was strong-minded. He was more than its wont. He looked like a man who knew he was about to go through an ordeal of some anxiety.

The servant flung the door open; Miss Ransome entered. She was a slender, upright woman of about fifty years of age. Her dress was quiet, and altogether suitable to her general appearance. She did not attempt fashion, but she was a lady and looked like one. The expression of her face was eager, almost passionate. She had the look and did—just as though her eyes would devour me? Who is she? Where does she come from? I feel like someone wounded by mystery."

After a minute or two of further thought, Peter joined Pamela and his stepmother in the drawing-room. They opened the door and entered. "Yes, mother," interrupted the girl, "if I had been frightful and squinting and had hair red, you would still have brought about a marriage between us—or, rather, you'd have tried to do it. But how wonderful how prearied in that case would we, Pete, would we?"

"No, Pam," he answered; and now he looked at her with delight shining in his eyes.

"Providence is good," said Mrs. Coltharst. "You are both a charming couple, and you have known each other often and often fain awake at night wondering if that strange will of your old cousin's and of my uncle's would ever come to the desired consummation. But everything is right."

"Supposing," said Peter, "that everything had been wrong?"

"We won't suppose anything so dreadful but had——"

"Yes, mums, speak—tell us the worst. It would be fun to hear what that is like."

"Why dear child, I tremble even to think of it. You would have been comparatively poor, and you would have blamed your father. He'd have had only a life interest in the money."

"And to whom, in that case, would this place have come?" asked Peter.

"Ah! that I am not prepared to tell you."

CHAPTER III.

As Peter and Pamela stepped out of the open window the girl was trembling all over. Peter attempted to put his arm round her waist, but she drew herself away from him.

"Pete, it is odious!" she cried. "You know what I mean—that it should have been planned for us like——"

"Yes, it is detestable," he answered; "but we have each other. Pam, therefore we must be content."

"We can't!" said the girl, stamping her foot. "Mother is gloating over it. I can't stand anyone who gloats. I wish with all my heart she had opposed it."

"And I wish my father had opposed it also," said Peter.

"I wish we had to fight for our engagement!" said the girl.

"I wish we had to run away together," remarked the boy.

"Let's elope—do it!" exclaimed Pam.

Peter laughed. Some of the shadow went out of his eyes. "If we could certainly bring back the romance," he said.

"We'll do it," she repeated. "We'll go lend they can't find us till pair. No one would rather we died than that we should be happy. Peter, how much money have you in your pocket-book at this moment?"

"Not a great deal, I'm afraid. Then I could meet you in London, and we'd be married from—oh, there's a splendid——"

"It would be glorious!" said Peter. "Pam, have you ever heard of a lady called Miss Patricia Ransome?"

"What a curious name! I certainly have never heard of her."

"I don't mind telling you, dear, that to-night," said the boy; "but she came here—she is here now talking to father. She has a curious face—the sort of face that you, Pam, would put into your stories when you are busy making them up. I wonder if she lives in London. If she does, she would help us. We could go to her and be married from her house."

"Of course we could."

The pair turned slowly down a shady path. After all, notwithstanding that old man's detestable will, they were engaged, and this was their first night, and, despite the little rub which that will had caused, their hearts were too full of each other to think long about anybody else.

Peter suddenly put his arm round the girl's slim waist. "You mustn't shrink from me, Pamela."

"I won't," she answered.

"Lean against me, darling."

She did so.

"You don't mind, do you, Pam?"

"No, Peter; I am afraid I like it."

"Then kiss me, Pam."

"Oh, there's nothing new in my kisses, Pete," said this girl. "How often we have kissed when we were children."

"Yes, but we are children no longer. Kiss me, Pam. Put your lips on mine. There."

She pressed her soft lips to his for a minute, turned crimson, felt herself trembling, and hurried her head on his shoulder.

"Pete, I'm dreadfully afraid——"

"What, dearest?"

"That whatever happened—were there a will or no will—I'd have to be yours."

"There, it's out!" he said, with a sort of choking laugh. "And I'd have to be yours."

They walked until they came to the borders of the lake. They stood and looked into the water. The moon was shining and made a path of glory on its surface.

"I wish we were poor," said Pam again.

"And so do I," said Peter.

They began to talk as though they had not made pretence, and talked of how little they could marry on. Then all of a sudden they ceased pretending and came to facts, and determined that they would enjoy the fulness of their love for each other, and be married and go round the world and see the loveliest things on earth, and come back together and have a home of their own.

"And we'll make other people happy as well as ourselves," said Pamela.

"Yes," said Peter, "we'll do our best for the world, just because it has been so good to us."

Meanwhile, a very different scene was being enacted in Paul Coltharst's dining-room. He had asked to have tea brought to his guest, and when Miss Patricia Ransome was announced he came forward to greet her. He was strong-minded. He was more than its wont. He looked like a man who knew he was about to go through an ordeal of some anxiety.

The servant flung the door open; Miss Ransome entered. She was a slender, upright woman of about fifty years of age. Her dress was quiet, and altogether suitable to her general appearance. She did not attempt fashion, but she was a lady and looked like one. The expression of her face was eager, almost passionate. She had the look and did—just as though her eyes would devour me? Who is she? Where does she come from? I feel like someone wounded by mystery."

As Paul came towards her, she went quickly up to him. She put out her hand. Paul grasped it, but looked into his eyes.

"How strange," she said. "Time has done nothing to alter you."

"And you, Peter, you would not have altered

ROTHWELL DISTRICT EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

LATE SCHOLARS—PARENTS WHO HAVE TO BE "KNOCKED UP."

The monthly meeting of the Rothwell Education Committee was held in the Robin Hood Council School on Friday night—the Chairman (Mr J. Butterick) presiding. Other members present were Mrs Stoner, Mr T. Thomas, Mr S. R. Chadwick, Mr J. Hirst, Mr W. Lunn, Mr R. McCulloch, Mr J. Horner, and Mr Walton, with the Clerk (Mr A. Angus), and the attendance officer (Mr W. Steele).

The Clerk reported that during the past ten weeks there had been a number of children late at the Rothwell schools, and he gave the names of about twenty of the worst offenders.

Enquiring as to one of the children whose name appeared in the list, Mr Butterick was told that the child came from the Children's Homes, Rothwell Haigh. He expressed surprise, stating that all the children from the Homes left together in reasonable time to reach the school.

Mr Lunn said that in the majority of the cases it was not the fault of the parents, on instance of which had been given by Mr Butterick. He was surprised that one of his children had not been mentioned, and he lived practically on the school step. The child left home with the others but would not go to school.

The Clerk said a few years ago at Outwood the number of children late was "something awful." A circular signed by the headmaster was sent to the parents of the offenders, stating that they could be prosecuted just the same as for non-attendance.

Mr Butterick asked if this attendance officer had enquired at the homes of the children at Rothwell?

Mr Steele (the attendance officer) said he had, and in some of the cases he had had to knock the parents up.

Mr Butterick: What about the children from the Homes?

Mr Steele: We have no difficulty with them.

It was decided that the parents of the children be circularised, informing them of the seriousness of the offence.

It was reported that the young woman against whom a complaint had been lodged by the headmaster of the Stourton School, had written apologising for her action.

The Clerk was instructed to make arrangements for the purchase of a new piano for the Stourton Infants' School.

It was reported that a number of windows at the Stourton School had been broken by boys, who are known to the head teacher. The windows are now repaired, and the boys are to be asked to provide the cost.

The applications of Mr Martin and Mr Clark, headmasters of the Rothwell Council and Rothwell National Schools respectively, for increases of salary are to be recommended to the authorities at Wakefield.

The attendance returns for the district for February showed a percentage of 90·27. The returns for the various schools were as follows:—Rothwell Council (mixed) 93·26; Rothwell Council (infants), over five 90·57, under five 88·63; Carlton Council (mixed) 89·44; Stourton Council (infants), over five 84·21, under five 80; Robin Hood Council (mixed) 96·15; Robin Hood Council (infants), over five 89·59, under five 84·71; Carlton Council (mixed) 90·22; Carlton Council (infants), over five 85·9, under five 75; Thorpe Council (mixed), 90·22; Thorpe Council (infants), over five 75·02, under five 88·88; Wood Lane, Rothwell Haigh (infants), over five 95·23, under five 97·14; Rothwell National (mixed), 95·75; Rothwell National (infants), over five 87·73, under five 88·57; Loftshaw National (mixed), 93·95; Churwell National (infants), over five 87·06, under five 77·77; Middleton National (mixed), 95·74; Middleton National (infants), over five 90·19, under five 83·33.

The returns were considered satisfactory.

TADCASTER PARISH MEETINGS

The parish meeting for Tadcaster West was held in the Council School on Tuesday evening, Mr J. Netleton (Chairman of the Parish Council) presided, and there was a very small attendance.

A sum of £115 was voted for the lighting of the streets for the coming year, a request being made for an additional lamp at Broomfield Terrace.—It was also decided, seeing that an additional service of trains had been granted to Thorparch, to ask the N.E.R. Co. to extend the same to Tadcaster.—This meeting was followed by a meeting of the Parish Council, and it was resolved to ask the Electric Light Co. to light the lamps for an hour on winter mornings, for the benefit of the workmen of the town.

The parish meeting for Tadcaster East was held on Monday evening, and Mr Brook Peel presided over a small attendance of ratepayers. It was proposed by Mr Hawley, and seconded by Mr Abson, and carried, that the sum of £50 be allowed for street lighting on condition that two more lamps be erected, one in Cinder Lane and another on York Road. It was also resolved that arrangements be made with a view to the lamps being lighted from 5.30 to 6.30 a.m. on dark mornings during the winter months, for the benefit of workmen.—A Parish Council meeting was afterwards held. A letter was read from the Rural District Council relating to the Mill Lane crossing, pointing out that a paving crossing there would be dangerous owing to the gradient of the road. It was resolved that the Council be asked to meet a deputation on the spot to further consider the matter.

AFRICA'S WONDERFUL ANIMALS.

The two fine volumes "From the Congo to the Niger and the Nile" (Duckworth and Co.), by the Duke of Mecklenburg, contain in addition to the author's contributions descriptions of the adventures of the leaders of his various expeditions. Dr. Schubotz, for instance, describes an expedition from Fort Archambault to the Nile, in the course of which he secured a specimen of the okapi, though not of his own killing. Remarkable indeed are the incidental acquisitions he records.

During the fortnight that I spent in the first village I collected more than 100 specimens of mammals. Very rare and remarkable animals were brought to me, among them many that I had vainly endeavoured to secure during my first Congo travels: charming little tufted antelopes that never leave the semi-darkness of the jungle, long-tailed armadillos with pointed snouts that walk on their tiptoe bones instead of on their toes, four different kinds of squirrels, one of which possesses powerful wing-membranes between its four legs, serving as a kind of parachute when it leaps from tree to tree. There were rats, too, as large as cats, each with a white stomach, a white tail, and a huge moustache; three-mice as large as guinea-pigs, with tails like sewage, and with large, gentle, brown eyes; seven different species of insect-eating shrews and mice, two night monkeys, with eyes that shone in the dark like phosphorescent peppercorns, not the common East African type, but the jungle variety (Arbeyra), with long tails and so many different kinds of hairy, bearded spells, and scales that every possible body appendage seemed to be represented in their coats.

CORRESPONDENCE

AMBULANCE WORK AT GARFORTH.

(To the Editor).

Sir,—It has come to my notice again that a member of the Voluntary Aid Detachment proved his efficiency before ground at the Trench Colliery, Garforth. A miner whilst at work there hewing coal met with an accident, which would have proved fatal had not first aid been properly rendered. The accident was caused by the man's pick sliding off the coal, striking him, and puncturing the temporal artery. Three workmen were there at the time, but could not arrest the bleeding, having no knowledge of first aid. Dixon Wilby, two hundred yards from the scene of the accident, was fetched, and applied direct pressure on the artery, and covered the wound, and the man was taken to the pit bank. Mr R. Routledge, junior, commandant, was there, along with Sergeant Smithson, and the case received other attention before the man was conveyed to Leeds Infirmary. This is Wilby's third case with which I am acquainted. I have been informed the manager is going to take the matter up, and the honour will, I hope, be conferred at the Voluntary Aid Detachment's Bazaar to be held at Monk Fryston Hall in May.—Yours, etc.

FIRST AID.

UNIONIST LADIES AND ULSTER.

(To the Editor).

Sir,—Each day brings us nearer the time when the intention of the Government to pass the Home Rule Bill into law without giving the nation an opportunity of pronouncing judgment upon it will undoubtedly plunge the Empire into unparalleled civil turmoil.

We, therefore, appeal to all our fellow-countrywomen to join us in signing the Women's Covenant, which is a solemn protest on the part of the women of Great Britain against the attempt to force Home Rule upon the loyalists of Ireland without any direct reference to the electors. It binds every woman who signs it to render what assistance she can to defeat a proposal which means bloodshed and disaster.

Every woman can do something, whether it be by assisting actively, in some direct manner, the wives and mothers in Ulster, who are so nobly standing by Sir Edward Carson and the men who have joined with him in resistance to tyranny; or whether it be by using her influence on those around her to create public opinion which may avert the disaster even at the eleventh hour.

The object of the "Women's Covenant" is to demand that civil strife shall not take place, but to make it clear that, should this be forced upon Ulster, there are hundreds of thousands of women in Great Britain who will stand by their Irish sisters in the hour of need.

The Declaration is as follows:—"Being earnestly convinced that the claim of the Government to carry the Home Rule Bill into law, without submitting it to the judgment of the nation, is contrary to the spirit of our Constitution, we do hereby solemnly declare that, if that Bill is so passed, we shall hold ourselves justified in taking or supporting any action that may be effective to prevent it being put into operation, and more particularly to prevent the armed forces of the Crown being used to deprive the people of Ulster of their rights as citizens of the United Kingdom." To this Declaration we have all signed our names.—Yours, etc.,

NINA BERESFORD-PEIRSE, EMILY C. BRIDGEMAN, ALICE M. BUTCHER, MAUD FITZWILLIAM, F. HAREWOOD, MARJORIE BLANCHE HELSHAM-JERVOISE, MABEL HOPE, AGNES E. LANE FOX, BEATRICE LISTER, KAYE, MARY MOWRAY AND STOURTON, SUSIE ROBERTS, DOROTHY WOOD, LILIAS ZETLAND, EDITH BOTOMLEY, Yorkshire Secretary, the Primrose League.

KIPPAX PARISH MEETING

LIGHTING—RECREATION GROUND QUESTION.

The annual parish meeting was held at Kippax on Wednesday evening—Mr S. R. Silverwood presiding. There were very few ratepayers present. A question was raised by Mr D. Firth as to the parish meeting making recommendations to the Parish Council with regard to the placing of lamps in certain places, and he asked if these recommendations were ignored by the Council.

The Chairman said that nine additional lamps had been put down, and the places selected for these erection must have met the wishes of the ratepayers for no complaints had been made in regard to them.

Mr A. Plows asked if the Council were precharged to place lamps where they thought fit. In his opinion so far as Bickerdike Terrace was concerned the lamps had been placed on the wrong side of the houses, and if the selection of the owners had to be got before the lamps could be put at the back of the houses, he felt sure the owners' consent would have been given in this case.

Mr J. Cripwell, speaking for the Council, stated that a lamp was put down in Shiltito's Yard before obtaining the owners' consent, and it had to be removed.

A resolution that the Parish Council consider the advisability of lighting the back street to Bickerdike Terrace was carried.

Mr G. Hastings said the lamps should be put down in those places where the light was most needed. That should be the first consideration of the Council.

Mr D. Booth: It is understood that each recommendation coming from a parish meeting is considered on its merits by the Parish Council. It lights are required in Westfield Lane or on the Common or elsewhere, will the Council take steps to meet these requirements.

Mr Cripwell: The Council are prepared to do their best so far as these places are concerned.

It was agreed that the Parish Council should take steps to provide lighting for Westfield Lane, the 14 cottages at Owlet Hall, and also on the Common.

The meeting agreed to the laying of the street gas rate.

The question of a recreation ground was considered. The Chairman stated that 574 signatures had been put to the petition which the Parish Council, assisted by the Medical Charities Committee, had taken round to the ratepayers. He asked if the meeting was in favour of presenting the petition to the squire (Mr Bland).

Mr D. Firth raised objection to the petition. People who were here to-day gone to-morrow had been asked to sign, and in many instances the women had signed instead of the men.

Mr Revis: Great care has been taken to obtain the signatures of ratepayers and householders to the petition.

Mr Cripwell thought that success would attend their efforts in the getting of a recreation field. The field known as the Intake had been surveyed, and it was a suitable field in every respect.

It was then agreed that the Chairman, along with Messrs J. Cripwell, Hewitt, and Revis, should approach Mr Bland in regard to this matter, and that the result should be laid before a parish meeting as soon as possible.

HINTS FOR THE HOME.

FLIES AND DUST.

One of the chief reasons why stomach complaints are more frequent in summer time than in the cold season of the year is the great prevalence of dust and flies, says Good Health. Dust is simply dirt, and oftentimes the most filthy and fatal kind of dirt, and it is usually loaded with excretory matter and germs. All foods and drinks should be most rigidly protected from dust, whether in the shop, the pantry, or on the dining-room table, if one would avoid infection and disease. The fly must be looked upon as one of the greatest enemies of mankind, and should be kept out of the home and away from all foods and drinks.

HOT ROOMS.

Nothing causes chills more than hot, stuffy rooms, says Dr. Musgrove in "Nervous Breakdowns." We often hear people complaining that they took cold when they came out into the night air. Yet it was not the night air which did the mischief, but the poisonous atmosphere in the room itself, due to the accumulated exhalations of many lungs, &c. Had the apartment been well ventilated the so-called chill would never have occurred. Most cases of asthma are the result of a bad atmosphere. The catarrh has extended down from the nose and throat into the bronchial tubes, and set up a spasm which is the source of this distressing malady. No asthmatic can afford to keep his windows closed. Whether by day or night, he needs a liberal supply of fresh air.

A GOOD SHAMPOO.

To cleanse the scalp use an egg; stir the white and yolk thoroughly together in a basin, add about one cup of warm water; mix thoroughly with the egg, and apply it to the scalp in the same way as soap; after which rinse out in warm water and dry with towels, and if possible expose the hair for a few minutes to the sunshine and pure air, says a writer in the Family Doctor. If this treatment is applied about once a week it will thoroughly clean the scalp, keep the hair in perfect condition, and prevent the hair from coming out.

Do not allow the barbers to injure your scalp with their so-called hair tonic, and especially do not allow them to use grease or hair-oil, as it is no benefit whatever, and causes the dirt and dust to cling to the hair, and also soils the bed linen and everything with which the head comes in contact. There would not be half so many bald heads if they would only cleanse the scalp with an egg instead of soap.

READING AT MEALS.

A very great mistake made by a large number of persons—a mistake which leads to indigestion and all its attendant horrors—says Health, is the practice of reading at meals. Digestion is always best subserved when the mind is free from care and when the physical processes of our frames are left to discharge their work free from nervous trammels. It is on the ground of the elevation of spirits produced by cheerful association with others that "pleasant company" at meals has always formed a condition of social enjoyment.

The stimulus to nervous activity which is thus given acts beneficially on the digestive powers, just as the man who is harassed, worried, and over-excited will not be likely to digest or eat a satisfactory meal.—The habit of reading at meals is to be condemned where it has grown to one of actual "study," and where the mind endeavours to gain knowledge and to save time at the meals. The solitary eater, if he reads, should read what is light and amusing.

A STRONG PASTE.

Every housewife believes that she knows how to make good, strong, reliable sticking paste, but it is not every user of the paste who thinks with her. Some home-made paste is most untrustworthy stuff. A paste that will not grow mouldy and disagreeable, but which is also strong, may be prepared as follows: Add to every pint of paste (made by rubbing flour up with cold water and then boiling it) thirty grains of corrosive sublimate, previously powdered; this paste is not liable to the attacks of insects, but is poisonous, so the pot containing it should not be allowed to lie within reach of children or animals.

MUSHROOM POISONING.

Mushroom poisoning is not an infrequent occurrence where these fungi are partaken of, mistakes being readily made as a result of confusion between fungi which are harmless and good to eat and those which are poisonous, says Dr. Wilson in "Before the Doctor Comes." A violent attack of colic accompanied by vomiting and diarrhœa, occurring soon after poisonous fungi have been swallowed, constitutes marked symptoms of this emergency. Insensibility may supervene, with a slow pulse and stertorous breathing.

The stomach should at once be emptied by means of an emetic. The special antidote for mushroom poisoning consists of twenty drops of tincture of belladonna given in water after the active symptoms have subsided. A large dose of castor oil should be given in order to clear the bowels. If symptoms of collapse appear, and heart failure threatens, stimulants may be freely given, while warmth to the extremities and poultices to the stomach should be applied.

NICE DISHES.

SUMMER VEGETABLE PIE.—Take about four ounces of peas, beans, young carrots (cut in slices), young potatoes (cut in cubes), and onions (chopped), two ounces of butter, pepper, salt, chopped parsley, and pastry. Dissolve the butter in a saucepan, add the vegetables, cover, and let all cook till tender, without colouring; add seasoning. Put in a pie-dish, cover with light pastry, and bake.

TOMATO PUFFS.—Take cold roast meat, either beef or mutton, or veal and ham; clear it from the gristle; cut it small, and season with pepper and salt, and pickles finely minced. Boil and mash some potatoes, and make them into a paste with one or two eggs; roll out the paste with a dust of flour; cut it round with a saucer, put some seasoned meat on one half, and fold the other half over it like a puff; pinch or nick it neatly round, and fry a light brown.

STUFFED PIGEONS.—Take two large pigeons, three ounces of bread soaked and then well squeezed, bacon, two shallots finely chopped, nutmeg, salt, and pepper, the yolk of an egg. Chop the hearts and livers of the pigeons with an equal quantity of fat bacon. Mix these with the soaked bread, add salt, pepper, chopped shallot, grated nutmeg, and moisten with the beaten yolk of the egg. Stuff the pigeons, fasten them securely, and wrap round them some thin slices of fat bacon. Put them into a baking-tin with a very little dripping, and cook for twenty-five minutes, then take off the bacon and let them brown. Take them off the baking-tin and keep them hot. Have ready four square cut slices of bread, fry these in the baking-tin, and then put them on a hot dish. Split the pigeon in halves, put one-half on each section of bread, and serve with a little good gravy.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT JOTTINGS.

People connected with religious organizations in the district should be careful lest they find themselves at variance with the Skyrack police, who have allowed a somewhat generous latitude to promoters of church functions. During the past few year, it has become the custom to produce "farces," under the name of "sketches," on church premises unlicensed for the performance of stage plays, and I must confess to being surprised that no prosecution has taken place. At Kippax, Garforth, Crossgates, Bowers Allerton, and other places "sketches" and children's operettas have been played in unlicensed buildings, and, although the promoters may have been ignorant that they were transgressing, they have run the risk of being summoned.

Recently at Halton, Bowers Allerton, and Garforth a production, styled "An old village wedding," consisting of dialogue, songs, duets, and choruses—a medley which could be submitted by no one company—has been the means of bringing the heads of religious organizations, and quite innocently the performers gave it without obtaining the necessary licences. At the Bradford West Riding Court last week the lady and gentleman were fined for producing this same piece on unlicensed premises, and one must conclude that the local performers were fortunate in not being taken to task by the police.

Considerable difference of opinion exists as to what constitutes a stage play, but it may be taken for granted that where there is what is, in common parlance, known as "acting" by a number of persons the piece comes within the ban of the law. In connection with some places of worship forces which have been performed by dramatic societies have actually been played, and it is astonishing that the people did not know better. In future, therefore, it would be wisdom to have the premises licensed before putting sketches and so forth before the public, otherwise the authorities may be compelled to take action.

Kippax folks are apparently optimistic in regard to the acquisition of a recreation ground for the village, and I hope that this view will be fully justified. A petition signed by upwards of five hundred ratepayers and householders is to be presented to the squire, Mr Bland, of Kippax Park, in order that he may be persuaded to grant to the place what a villager describes as "a long felt want." He has, however, been approached before, and I understand that he has declined to deprive any of this tenants of their land. What action will be taken if the squire declines to grant the prayer of the petition?

Garforth has an election on Saturday, and the ratepayers will have to choose three members to serve them on the Urban Council. Three of the candidates—Messrs R. Routledge, J. B. Breed, and H. Gascoigne—are retiring members, and Mr E. R. Archer was on the Council for three years. The fifth candidate—Mr Yeadon—makes his second attempt to enter the Council.

Two important questions will have to be settled by the Garforth Council during the year. It is conceded by the members that a rearrangement of the staff is necessary, in order that the best results in the highway and sanitary departments may be secured, and it is not improbable that the Council will purchase horses and carts and do their own work. A sum of money owing by Tadcaster District Council will come in handy for this purpose.

In Garforth and Rothwell apparently few residents think very seriously of obtaining the title "Councillor." At one time competition was very keen in both places, but a change has come about, and in Rothwell district there is only one contest in only one ward, where the sitting member is provided with opposition by the Labour Party. It would be an interesting contest in local elections to have one, and it would be equally unfortunate were good men to decline to undertake public work.

The areas threatened by Leeds Corporation, we are told, have been granted only a temporary respite, but the defeat of the Wakefield proposal in Parliament may have the effect of deterring the promotion of raiding schemes for a number of years. Mr Lane Fox, M.P., stated how the West Riding County Council—and this means every ratepayer in the district—will be affected if this constant chopping-off of parts of the county area is allowed to go on, and it will be a really serious thing, because rates will assuredly go up. The agricultural community, especially will be hard hit, and they should strenuously resist every attempt to reduce the size and rateable value of the county. In my opinion, Tadcaster District Council made a bad blunder when they allowed Crossgates to be handed over to Leeds, and its 20 miles should profit by it.

A correspondent enters a protest against people uprooting ferns and wild flowers in the country, and it is important. It will be remembered that two hawkers were prosecuted for doing this at Harewood last year, but only a small portion of the damage is done in the country, who sell the fruits of their raids to the people in the towns and villages. In the schools children should be taught to leave alone the wild flowers which adorn the countryside, and it is really astonishing how some parents allow their little ones to carry home flowers in order only to transfer them to the ash-pit. The hawker's ferns very rarely live, and if he did not find a market for them he would soon cease his raids. Many wild flowers have disappeared from certain parts of the district owing to the destruction that has gone on year after year, and it is time it was put a stop to.

The County Council nursing scheme, in the working of which the co-operation of Tadcaster District Council has been sought, will probably prove one of the greatest boons ever launched in the Riding, and anyone with imagination can discern what great advantages may be conferred on suffering humanity by it. The work will, I suppose, deal primarily with children and mothers, and the kindly advice and skilful help of qualified nurses will not only tend to alleviate suffering, but prevent it. When dealing with a question which affects the whole community people urge that they must begin with the children, and that is what the nursing scheme will do. If the mothers and babies are cared for the men will be able to take care of themselves, and a healthier and stronger race will be produced.

District nurses have done an infinite amount of good in villages, but the great majority of places are not privileged to possess such a fine institution as the Sykes told the District Council, in the town at Tadcaster has. I was going to enumerate the places in Tadcaster Union which have not had the public spirit to engage a district nurse, but this would represent the majority, and I will forbear. Under the county scheme all these parishes will be looked after, I suppose, and the people will have demonstrated to them daily the value of work of this character. Even Garforth, which declined to pay for a district nurse, will eventually pay tribute to the service.

For the loss of Crossgates the Tadcaster District Council have received substantial compensation, but the award against Leeds is not altogether satisfactory. The arbitrator has decided that the city authority is to pay about £4,000, and included in this is the amount of the preliminary expenses of Kiddal water scheme, but nothing has been allowed for loss of prospective profit, if I may put it that way. The water revenue from Crossgates would have made the scheme a paying concern from the outset but when Leeds annexed that part of the parish it became possible for Barwick and Scholes, on their limited rateable value and small water revenue that would have accrued, to undertake it, and a claim was consequently made for the loss of this contract. I understand similar claims have been allowed, and it is no doubt a disappointment that £4,000 or £5,000 has not been granted under this head.

This, of course, precludes the possibility of Barwick and Scholes going on with the scheme, and unless the Kiddal proposal is taken up by the district it will be left where it is. For Barwick and Scholes to undertake it would probably involve a rate of 2s., in addition to the water charges, and I don't think the parishioners would be willing to accept such a burden, although their rates would not be high with that sum added.

In addition to the sum awarded the District Council, the Leeds Guardians and Tadcaster Guardians have come to an agreement as to the amount the former should pay, an amicable settlement being preferred by both parties, and over £2,500 will go into the coffers at Tadcaster. That is a tidy sum, and it will come in very handy.

From Crossgates the City Corporation must certainly expect good things in future, otherwise they have made a very bad bargain, and one wonders what the Leeds ratepayers think of it. Crossgates has a preferential rate for fifteen years, and it is impossible to administer the place efficiently upon it, so Leeds loses there, and in addition, it has to pay the Tadcaster authorities nearly £7,000 for the luxury of including Crossgates in the city area. Perhaps the Corporation will "suck" a few more employees in under that they may meet the loss.

While on this question, I would direct attention to a matter which is of the utmost importance to local authorities in the areas of Tadcaster, Garforth, Rothwell, and Hunslet. Recently a number of persons in Hippenholme declined to pay the charge for baths in dwelling-houses, and they were summoned. The question was argued at some length before the Halifax county magistrates, and it was contended that the authority could not, without the assent of Parliament, make a by-law entitling them to charge for whatever they wished. The bench held that the District Council, in the absence of specific powers, could not make extra charges for baths, and the defendants won.

One local Water Committee has, I know, had the question under consideration, and it is perfectly clear, if the decision referred to is to be observed over, that the local authorities have no power to make a charge for baths. On the other hand, they are, in my opinion, adopting a wise policy in making such charges. A certain sum must, from the outset, be obtained, in order to meet all payments, and if the bath charges were withdrawn the general rates for water for domestic purposes would be increased. This would be manifestly unfair to people who have not baths. Occupiers of houses which contain baths get value for their money, and the section of the Hippenholme defendants, while it may be legal, does not commend it to one's sense of fairplay.

Wetherby Guardians are apparently inclined to "kick up a row" about the increased charges made by the County Asylums Board for pauper lunatics, but what good will they do? The members of the Asylums Board, which is composed of the representatives of various bodies in the Riding, have informed more than one Board of Guardians that they have been compelled to advance the charges owing to the increased cost of living and of the staff, and as they are a perfectly independent body, and in nowise subject to election influences, they can snap their fingers at any Union in the area. The pauper lunatics must be looked after, and they must be paid for, and Wetherby Guardians' protest might as well never have been made.

Well may the lady members of the Aberfordia League at Garforth, Monk Fryston, Seacroft, Whitkirk, and Sherburn envy their auxiliary sisters at Tadcaster. The Guardians are to allow them to go round the workhouse infirmary two or three times a week with the head nurse, and they will thus gain an insight into practical work which will be of the utmost value to them. Where such enthusiasm exists it would have been unkind of the Guardians to have done anything to damp it.

REMARKABLE ROBIN HOOD CASE.

SUCCESSFUL CLAIM BY A MINER.

His Honour Judge Greenlaw was occupied on Wednesday at the Leeds County Court with an unusual case respecting the compensation to be paid to a miner who had become partially disabled. Martin Henry Lost, miner, of Sheard Buildings, New Southrough, Tingley, sued John Furey, general secretary representing the board of management of the contracting-out scheme for the West Yorkshire Collieries of Messrs J. and J. Charlesworth (Limited), for £100, it being contended that as and from January 6th, 1912, the plaintiff had been entitled to receive compensation under the contracting-out scheme in respect of his incapacity to work owing to miners' nystagmus, but that the board of management had wrongfully refused to pay anything, to consider the case, or to appoint an arbitrator under the scheme. Alternatively, the plaintiff claimed £100 for breach of contract.

Mr R. A. Shepherd appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr L. A. Greene represented the defendants.

For the plaintiff, it was stated that he had been employed at Messrs Charlesworth's Robin Hood Colliery for about eleven years, and had been a paying member under the contracting-out scheme. He had been able to earn about £2 a week. At the end of 1911 his working place became worked out, and it was suggested to him that he should continue to work, but in a "market" man. He did not, however, care to attend the pit as a casual worker, and he sought another position. On January 4th he saw the officials of Topcliffe Colliery, with the object of obtaining work. He was then asked to "get liberty" from the Robin Hood management, and to submit himself to examination by the certifying surgeon at Topcliffe. Accordingly, on January 5th the plaintiff signed off at Robin Hood. On the following day he submitted to examination, and the surgeon refused him permission to work at Topcliffe, because of the fact that he was suffering from a bad form of nystagmus. The doctor had certified that he was disabled from following his employment as a miner as from January 6th, this certificate having been sent to the defendant on January 20th.

The defendant and Messrs Charlesworth had contended that they were not compelled to pay compensation under the Industrial Diseases Section of the Compensation Act, or under the contracting-out scheme of rules, inasmuch as the plaintiff had left his employment a day before being certified as disabled.

His Honour, therefore, had to decide a question which, he said, bristled with difficulties, owing to the fact that the Act did not provide that an accident had taken place until there was certification of disablement; and the surgeon explicitly stated that the "disablement began on January 6th," the day following that on which plaintiff signed off from Robin Hood Pit. But it seemed very probable that if it were not for this contracting-out scheme the plaintiff would, by the nature of his disease, have been able to recover from Messrs Charlesworth under the Compensation Act. There was no doubt that the plaintiff had gone without compensation for a long time, when, roughly speaking, he was entitled to it.

Mr Greene argued that the disablement was established after plaintiff had left his employment.

His Honour found for the plaintiff, and assessed damages at £50.

FOOTBALL. On Saturday afternoon Cawood United Res. had a League match with Lowther Reserves (York). The Cawood players were the better team, and Lofthouse scored in the first half. Walker and S. Lund (2) afterwards netted, and Cawood won by four goals to nil. Cawood United, who arrived with only seven players, were defeated by St. Andrew's team at Fulford by five goals to two.

CONSERVATIVE WHIST DRIVE.—The weekly whist drive at Selby Conservative Club was again very successful, and a large number of competitors took part. The prize winners were:—Ladies—1, Mrs Foster; 2, Mrs Kilburn; scaled, Miss Dawson; consolation, Mrs Simpson. Gentlemen—1, Mr A. Swift; 2, Mr W. Thornton; scaled, Mr Hugill; consolation, Mr J. Harland. Light refreshments were served. Mr R. Ladge officiated as M.C.

CONFIRMATION SERVICE.—A confirmation service was held at Church Fenton Parish Church on Friday afternoon, when 29 candidates were presented to the Bishop of Beverley from the following parishes, viz., Church Fenton (9), Ryther with Warke (9), Saxton (9), Bolton Spa (1), and All Saints', Pontefract (1). The clergy present were the Vicar (Rev. J. E. Keates), the Rev. H. G. Metcalfe, the Rev. Cyril Ash, and the Rev. A. C. Shipley.

LIBERAL MEETING.—Under the auspices of Barkston Ash Division Liberal Association a meeting was held in the Grand Hall at Cawood on Wednesday night, and there was a large attendance. Mr Tomlinson presided, and he was supported by Mr E. H. Foster, J.P. (prospective Liberal candidate for the Division). Mr Martin Harvey (President of the Division Association), Mrs Harvey, Mr F. W. Sutcliffe (Chairman of the Association), Mr Whitby, and Mr Sparkes (National Free Trade Union). Addresses were delivered by Mr Foster and Mr Whitby, and they were well received. Glees were sung by the Selby Liberal Glee Party, and the humorist was Mr Girton Barrie.

The Rev. J. Hughes, from a Surrey parish, has been offered, and has accepted, the living of Carlton, near Selby.

PRESENTATION TO A DOCTOR.—At the Standering Hall, Selby on Monday night Dr. Waddington, who is leaving for Stockport, where he has taken a practice, was presented with an inkstand and a 14-day oak clock, from the members of the Abbey and St. James's branches of the Church of England Men's Society and friends. Dr Waddington took a great interest in Biblical history, and his read papers at the meetings of the C.E.M.S. branches named. The Rev. A. Conway Goulden (vicar of St. James's Church, Selby), presided, and made the presentations on behalf of the subscribers. The oak-stand is made of Abbey oak saved from the fire of 1906.

MAN SERIOUSLY INJURED.—A serious trap accident occurred at Brayton Junction Railway Crossing Selby early on Sunday morning. Mr William Makin, joiner, of Haddlesey, and Mr Fred Darley, farmer, of Haddlesey, were driving in a trap from the Cambleforth Road towards Brayton on their way home. At the crossing, as the gates were opened, the horse took fright and bolted. The vehicle came into contact with the wall of a bridge which spans the canal close by. The trap was overturned and both occupants thrown to the ground. Mr Makin sustained injuries to his head, and was found in an unconscious condition, suffering from concussion. He was conveyed to the Selby Cottage Hospital. Mr Darley escaped injury.

SICKNESS AND VOMITING.

17, Shaw Lane,
Headingley, Leeds.

Dear Sir,—

I feel it a duty upon me to inform you, and through you the public at large, of the WONDERFUL BENEFIT I have received from taking your Herbal Medicine. I was troubled with sickness and vomiting owing to Indigestion, and for many weeks I vomited my food back, and NOTHING WOULD STAY ON MY STOMACH. I gradually grew weaker and weaker. I also suffered terribly from pains in my back, my head, and all round the stomach, and at times so swollen that my tongue was dry and thickly coated, and at times so weak that I could scarcely speak. Eventually, I got so weak that I COULD NOT WALK WITHOUT ASSISTANCE and my friends said I was dying fast. The doctors said that no medicine in the world would do me good, and the only thing that could save my life was an operation. At that time I only weighed 7 stones, and did not feel inclined to undergo the operation owing to being so weak.

Having heard a good account of your skill I decided to give you a trial. During the first nine weeks of your treatment, my weight increased from 7 stones to 7 stones, and now I have been weight increased from 7 stones to 7 stones, and now I have been cured several weeks, I weigh just over 9 stones. The soreness and acidity of the stomach, the pains in the back, and the dizziness have all left me, and I can honestly say that I NEVER FELT SO WELL, OR SO STRONG IN MY LIFE. Thanking you for your kind and careful attention,

I am, Sir, yours sincerely—

(Miss) L. TATE.

OUR GARDENS.

A Weekly Article specially Written for

Amateur Gardeners, Allotment Holders, &c.

By ALBERT CLARKE, Birkenshaw.

THE FLOWER GARDEN.

Any planting of roses and shrubs generally intended to be done during November should be completed without delay. When only a short interval elapses between planting and blooming time, there is not sufficient time for the roots, which must be nicked the flower are then deprived of the nourishment of the tree. Weeds this occurs week growth following, and it takes some considerable time to remedy the ill effects.

Hybrid Rhododendrons are now very popular, and are planted in suitable soil are not difficult to grow. They thrive best in peaty soils, and are not a success on heavy or clay soils. Lime is exceedingly distasteful to them. In almost all town gardens it is advisable to prepare a bed specially for them. The addition of peat or leaf-mould will greatly increase the chances of success.

PLANTATIONS AND SHRUBBERIES

Plantations and shrubberies that were dug over during autumn may now be neatly raked over. This serves a double purpose. It creates a tidy appearance and disturbs only young weeds that may be making their appearance. The work should not be attempted if the soil is very wet. On the other hand it is a mistake to delay it until the soil goes dry and hard, especially on clay soils.

COLD FRAMES

Many of the occupants of cold frames will now require a little extra attention. Shrubby Calceolarias, Cinerarias, Salvias and the winter very well. The same remark applies to Pentstemmons and marguerites. In each case the tops should now be pinched out to encourage bushy growth. All the unrooted stock of Calceolarias are required, the tops may be utilised as cuttings. They should be dibbled into boxes of sandy soil, and stood in a slightly heated greenhouse, where they will root readily. When nicely rooted they may be removed to a cold frame for about a fortnight, and then transferred to a nursery bed. The soil in which potatoes, Scabias, and the above subjects are growing often gets covered with moss or weeds at this time of the year. To cure, or prevent this, the surface soil should be stirred with a pointed stick. Moss or weeds may then be picked off with ease, and the plants will benefit by the aeration of the soil which must naturally follow. All the plants mentioned above will now require plenty of ventilation. The lights should be removed entirely on mild days, and should not be closed at night when frosty afternoons. Calceolarias are not quite so hardy as the other subjects mentioned, and special care should be taken to prevent frost reaching them.

VIOLAS FOR EXHIBITION

A Halton reader asks for particulars of the cultivation of violas for exhibition purposes. He has been struck by the remarkable difference in the flowers staged at a local show and those usually seen growing in the flower garden, and considers that comparatively speaking the latter are not worth growing. We suppose it is much a matter of taste. Many of the flowers exhibited at flower shows are unnaturally large, and are only produced by sacrificing a tremendous amount of bloom. Personally, we would rather see naturally grown flowers. If our friend wishes to grow exhibition blooms he must be prepared to devote a lot of time and attention to his plants. Violas are very deep-rooting plants and the ground for them should be trenched at least two spades deep. Plenty of rotten manure and leaf-mould should be worked into the soil. Before using the leaf-mould it should be special thinly on a firm spot and well rolled. This is essential to destroy insects. In March and is heavy, sand should be added. The first week in April is early enough to plant, and if the weather for the soil is not considered suitable, delay planting for a week or two. The plants should not come in direct contact with the manure at planting time, and to obviate this a layer of the following compost should be placed first of all. Loam and rotten manure, two parts each; leaf-mould, wood ashes, and sand. Allow the plants a foot of space each way and plant moderately firm. A sheltered position should be found for them, but shade will be necessary for a few hours at midday on very bright days. Every encouragement must be given to them to grow. Syringe in the evening of hot days. Water when necessary. Stir the surface soil about once a week. Mulch with decayed horse manure and top-dressed in July. Remove all flower buds until about three weeks before the show, and do not allow more than four shoots to each plant. A few good varieties for this purpose are Mrs. Chichester, Mrs. McQueen, Mrs. J. Watson, Helen Paul, Mossley Perfection, Mossley Purple, and A. Bostock.

SWEET PEAS.

Sweet Peas raised in pots must be hardened off as quickly as is consistent with safety. Their roots should be undisturbed when planting into flowering quarters. Cutting winds are apt to do much damage at this time of the year, and we have unpleasant recollections of some fine plants which were blackened by the wind last year. They are safer in pots, stood in a position where shelter may be provided if necessary. The frames may be uncovered on all favourable occasions, but protecting should be done whilst the ground is wet, and until settled weather comes along.

WINDOW PLANTS

Aspidistras, Indiarubber plants, Aralias, palms, and ferns may now be re-potted. It is not necessary to repot every year, but an annual top dressing of fresh compost should be given. In the case of the aspidistras, when repotting it becomes necessary, most of the old soil should be removed. This being the case it is advisable to get an experienced gardener to perform the task. In inexperienced hands much damage may be done. Top-dressing is a comparatively simple matter. Use equal parts fibrous loam, decayed manure, and sand. Remove about an inch of the old soil and replace with the above. Press moderately firm.

PLANTS UNDER GLASS.

STOVE CLIMBERS

Allamandas, Bougainvilleas, Cassus, Dipladenias, Clerodendrum Balfouri, and similar climbing plants, if not already done, will benefit by being trained to at once. Usually these subjects are often grown in large pots or tubs, or otherwise planted into prepared beds. In any case they should be provided with some new rooting material. A top-dressing of equal parts loam, peat, old manure, and wood ashes will give them a decided fillip when new growth commences. Make free use of the syringe to encourage them to break strongly and keep a sharp look-out for mealy bug, which is usually active on bright sunny mornings.

AMERICAN CARNATIONS

These useful plants are now growing freely and it may be necessary to open them out to allow light and air to circulate freely amongst them. A stagnant atmosphere is particularly bad for them. Continue to insert cuttings for successional flowering. A reader informs us that he has discovered a simple method of rooting cuttings. His greenhouse staging is covered with about two inches of coco fibre, and he dibbles his cuttings into it, with remarkable results. The cuttings, he claims, are sufficiently rooted in three weeks to be potted into small pots. Flowering plants may be fed with liquid manure once a week, and an occasional topdressing with special carnation chemical manure will give much improved results.

SEEDS.

Seeds of almost all kinds of half-hardy bedding plants may now be sown. Stocks and asters should be sown on a slight hot-bed made up in a cold frame. Marigolds, Scabias, Nemesia, Helichrysum, etc., may be sown in boxes in a warm greenhouse. An important point in the cultivation of seedlings of this class is to prevent them getting drawn. Sow the seed thinly, and when germination takes place stand the boxes near the glass. Shade from sun will be required for a few days until the first rough leaves appear. Prick off singly whilst the seedlings are quite small. It is a mistake to allow them to grow to a large size in the seed boxes.

Liberalism at Garforth.

MR E. H. FOSTER AND REBELLION IN THE ARMY.

"THE ARISTOCRACY WERE NOT FOOLS"

"TORIES DETERMINED TO RULE."

MR H STOREY AND LABOURERS' WAGES

In connection with Garforth Liberal Association a public meeting was held in the hall at the Liberal Club, Garforth, on Saturday night, and there was a large and enthusiastic audience. Mr R. Brownridge presided, and he was supported by Mr E. H. Foster, J.P., C.C. (prospective Liberal candidate for the Division), Mrs. Foster, Mr Martin Harvey (President of the Barkston Ash Liberal Association), Mr F. W. Sutcliffe (Chairman of the Association), Mr Harold Storey, B.A. (Leeds), Mr A. Deighton (Church Fenton), etc.

ISSUE AT NEXT ELECTION.

Mr Ernest H. Foster, who had a capital reception, moved the following resolution:—

"That this meeting expresses confidence in the determination of the Government to resist the efforts of a section of the Army to destroy the principles of representative Government. We pledge ourselves in unfaltering support of the Ministry in their intention to give full effect to the Parliament Act, notwithstanding the unbecoming and seditious action of the Opposition."

He said he felt that the events of the past week had been of immense importance, and out of them a new set of issues which must be finally settled. Was the Government of the country to be controlled by Parliament and the Cabinet, or was it to be controlled by a junta of officers at the head of the army of a faction? Opposite to that would probably be the dominant issue at the next election. The challenge had been recklessly made, and it must be boldly met, and decisively answered. (Applause). The democracy of this country was absolutely unworthy of the franchise if it allowed itself to be overawed—as the Tories were trying to frighten it—by a mere drum and fife agitation in a matter which was so vital to their liberties.

ARISTOCRACY NOT FOOLS.

They could not have events of that kind arising suddenly. They must not think the aristocracy of the country were fools. They were not. They had been, from their own point of view, wise people. They had taken care to control the land and the two great services, and they had a body in the House of Lords, who were preeminently on their side. How had the other classes? To understand it they would have to go a long way back. Up to 1832 the Government of the country was entirely in the hands of the landed aristocracy, and it was government of the most corrupt and scandalous description. Land was not even liable for debt then, people were hanged and transported for trivial offences, and seats in Parliament were acquired like a pound of treacle—they were bought and sold. The Act of Union, which they were now proposing to affect by the passing of Home Rule, was carried by the most unbridled bribery, and the Irish Parliament was entirely controlled by Protestants, because Catholics were disenfranchised. When they came to 1832 reforms were pushed forward, and in many cases they thought were moderate, but which were at the time considered far-reaching.

IN THE OLD DAYS.

The franchise was conferred on the middle classes, but still the power remained with the landed aristocracy. The great movements were carried out by Governments at all, and, as an instance, he gave the repeal of the Corn Laws, which was carried through by Sir Robert Peel, helped, indeed, in the main, by an unrepresented people. In 1806 they took another step, and household suffrage was granted, but practically none of the population of Belfast had merely come into possession of the franchise by purchase in the Army—a Liberal measure—and the disestablishment of the Irish Church. They had to get the 1880 before they got many signs of any liberal measure of legislation, and they had then admitted to the Cabinet the first business man—Mr Chamberlain. But the Government was still controlled by the Whig aristocracy, with a few exceptions, but [illegible]. In 1886 Gladstone embarked on Home Rule, and a large body of the Whig aristocracy went over to the other side. Here they were on a new era, but it was very unfavourable for a long time because the Tory Party were in power. They began to see it in 1906, when the Liberal Party went back with a great majority, and a mandate to do certain things, but it did not matter what they wanted to do, for there was the House of Lords determined to control the destinies of the empire. The Bills of a Liberal Government were contemptuously rejected, and they then set about limiting the veto of the House of Lords.

TWO REBELLIONS

Two elections were fought, and the Government went back with a substantial majority. The Parliament Act was passed, and the veto of the House of Lords was swept away. (Applause). Still the Tories were determined to rule in spite of that, and the very first measure they tried to put on the Statute Book they brought in the Army to carry it through. There were two rebellions in the north of Ireland, which were contemplated by the Government, but

CORRESPONDENCE.

UNIONIST LADIES AND ULSTER.

REPLY BY PRESIDENT OF BARKSTON ASH LIBERAL ASSOCIATION

To the Editor.

Sir,—The letter which appears in this week's issue of your paper is just now of very great importance, and as view of the wide circulation of the "Skyrack County," the intention of the writers to shock the very laudable one so influencing the electors.

As President of the Barkston Ash Division Liberal Association, I should be wanting in my duty if I failed to back up the efforts of those Unionist Ladies, and I therefore appeal to your readers (of all parties) to give this important document the attention it deserves for the following reasons:—

(a) It demands that "civil strife shall not take place." Excellent doctrine to which we can all agree; but may I ask whether these ladies have ever heard of the recent bustings about the hundred thousand Ulstermen with their hundred thousand rifles, and a million cartridges to provide for the widows and orphans? What were the rifles intended for. Clearly not to fight a foreign foe! What was the object? Those who are responsible obviously intended one or two things; either they were intended as the aggressors in certain acts which could not but encourage the idea of "civil war," or they stand convicted of the grossest spirit of bluster and make-believe on massive times, hinging thereby to break-beat and intimidate the Government.

In this connection I would remind these ladies that their objection to "civil strife" is a plant of very recent growth. In 1887 many reforms in Ireland were being carried out because the farmers could not pay the excessive rents demanded, this is what was written by Mr Balfour's "instructions":—

"Deal very summarily if any organised resistance to lawful authority. If necessary do not hesitate to shoot."

"Unionist Ladies" were wild with delight on their recession at the prospects of shooting down Nationalists.

The second reason why this precious document is of importance is because those responsible for it say in particular object is "to prevent the armed forces of the Crown being used" in certain eventualities; in other words, its chief object is to tamper with the loyalty of the British Army for party purposes.

May I again remind these ladies of Mr Balfour's doctrine when he moved in the House of Commons that a grant of £10,000 be given to Lord Roberts? Mr Balfour rightly said:—

"This country asked her soldiers to fight her battles without regard to political consideration, or to the rights or wrongs, the justice or injustice of the policy of the Government, and surely if they made such a demand they ought not to allow party prejudices to interfere with the rewards given to those soldiers who had so successfully served them."

This is just what we all thought until recently, but evidently it all depends on which political party is in power! The doctrine is sound only when the Tories are in power, and those who are not are using large sums for their own ends. No doubt this explains more fully what that other Tory Cabinet Minister (Lord Hamilton) had to say, viz., that he held it down that the duty of the Conservative party is to take care of their friends when in power, and so arrange matters that they would also be looked after when the Tories were in opposition. "Rigid obedience" was the Tories cry in power, and looking after their friends; "Optional Obedience" (regardless of the highest interests of the Army) is the Tories cry in Opposition. Should the Liberal Government, after all their other "poppuns" have failed.

The third reason is because the document purports to be issued solely on behalf of "Ulster," and a General Election is asked for, professedly in the interests of "Ulster." When one considers the facts one wonders whether such an episode is the result of arrogance or ignorance. It must be one or the other. Fancy "Unionists," claiming to speak for "Ulster"! Why, sir, at this moment the majority of "Ulster's" representatives in the House of Commons are actually Home Rulers. As to a General Election, these ladies ought to know that Sir Edward Carson has expressly stated that Ulster would not be bound by the results if they again favour Home Rule. But most important of all, Ulster has actually had a by-election since the present Home Rule Bill was introduced. What was the result? Bitter a fair and square fight between Colonel Sir Clive Wigram (Londonderry), whose local affairs are chiefly in the hands of Protestants, the electors turned on a Unionist and elected instead a Liberal and Protestant Home Ruler.

Finally, the document should be carefully considered in order to what it means as well as for what it says. It means that the Tories are selfabsorbed on their fetish-like position known in the political world as "consequences." I suppose they have already forgotten how the "consequences" worked out on a former occasion. Have they yet gone through the anticipated Home Rule Lecture, the "Slaughter" of the party followed Lord Milner's advice to reject the Budget, that the Constitution, and "blame the other sex-parties." Has, as now, the land reformers' Valley Appeal? They got more than they bargained for. Those "bad-hearts" are the real authors of the Parliament Act. The fate of the House of Lords was a matter of no importance whatever except to themselves. But it is another proposition when the discipline of the Army is at stake, and every true patriot is today offended at the base attempt of the Tory Party to exploit the Army by encouraging sedition and mutiny for party purposes.

They may try how they will to cover up their tracks by specious "red ink," but the facts are obvious and well-known to the "man in the street." The plot was concocted in consultation with the "Down the consequences" Directors. Everything was thought out and finally passed on to the "young sprigs" in the Army from the "Unionist Ladies'" drawing-rooms. Those superior people actually got it into their heads that a few Tory officers could exploited could decide the policy of a Liberal Government!

The seeds have been well sown, they will surely grow. The Tories have started on another slippery slope and as sure as day follows night, a blow has been struck at the Army by its so-called friends, the effect of which will be very different from what these blind partisans anticipated. It will come the wold of those more immediately concerned "Save us from our friends."

In conclusion, may I suggest a new fighting motto for the Tory banner:—

Optional Universal Insurance.
Optional Army Discipline.
Compulsory Military Training.

This would fairly represent the only policy we appear likely to get from them. At any rate the two first are now officially endorsed, and the real leaders of the Tory party are consistently advocating conscription. What a glorious prospect.—Yours, etc.,

MARTIN HARVEY.

TADCASTER GUARDIANS AND DISTRICT COUNCIL.

IMPORTANT CLASSIFICATION SCHEME.

LOSS OF CROSSGATES—WHAT LEEDS HAS TO PAY

KIPPAX, TADCASTER, ALLERTON, SHERBURN, AND MILFORD AFFAIRS.

The fortnightly meeting of the Tadcaster Board of Guardians was held on Monday at the workhouse at Tadcaster.—Alf. E. C. Brooksbank, J.P. (Chairman), presiding. Other members present were Miss Bethell (Newton Kyme), Rev. C. D. Ash (Saxton), Messrs T. H. Peace (Parlington), A. Chippendale (Sybell-st., G. Webster (Huddleston-cum-Lumby), W. Cousland, J.P., and A. Johnson (South Milford), R. Wright (Barwick), E. Myers (Bilbrough), J. H. Ingleby, J.P., W. Sykes, and J. Nettleton (Tadcaster), B. Brittain, J. Prime, and H. Green (Garforth), J. Pick (Ulleskelf), J. H. Schofield (Oxton), E. H. Hare (Ryther), and J. Wordsworth (Preston), J. Ledley (Kirkby Wharfe), W. A. Dickinson and J. Harding (Kippax), E. Parker (Ledsham), T. Hey, and J. J. Foster (Sherburn), T. P. Fawcett, and A. Chippendale (Sybell-st.).

BUILDINGS AND SANITARY.

The minutes of the Sanitary and Building Committee showed that a wash was discharging from a surface water drain at Aberford, and the inspector was instructed to do what is necessary in the matter.—Plans for certain buildings in Fairfield, Tadcaster, were passed.—It was resolved that a pan and flush range at Sherburn sewage works be tarred, and a tender was accepted for the work. Plans for men's and a urinal in Hodgson's Yard, Tadcaster, and for a garage were passed, as well as plans for a drying machinery room at John Smith's, Tadcaster. A letter was received from the County Council asking what was being done in regard to the supply of water for Sherburn and South Milford, and it was decided to reply that the matter was receiving attention.

Letters were received from Tadcaster East and West Parish Councils in regard to the naming of streets and numbering of houses. The West Parish Council stated that they did not think the numbering of houses was necessary. The suggestions of the Councils were approved, and they were authorised to carry out the work.—In regard to the Lock Lane and Allerton Bywater sewage works, a letter was received from Mr J. L. Fothergill, attendant, and it was agreed that his salary should be £2 per week when the Lock Lane pumps are in full working order.

In respect of the Infectious Diseases Hospital at Garforth, the following tenders for supplies were accepted:—Meat, Mr J. H. Pickering; groceries, bread, and paraffin, Messrs T. B. Smith and Son; milk and potatoes, Mr James Wilson; and coal, Micklefield Coal Co.—The tender of Messrs Marshall and Son for providing and fixing a stove for £5 2s. 0d. was accepted. Nurse Nicholson's salary was raised from £48 to £52.

Kippax sewage works scheme was up again, and a letter was read from Mr Forbes stating that Mr Eland has authorised him to negotiate with the Council on the question of a field that he owns. Mr Forbes was instructed to meet Mr Forbes on the ground and explain the nature of the works contemplated.

NURSES FOR THE VILLAGES.

The County Council wrote stating that they had adopted the Notification of Births Act and to appoint nurses in connection with it, and school nurses, and they asked the co-operation of the Council

The Chairman suggested that a committee should go into the matter and report to the Council.

Mr Sykes said that he thought questions should be addressed to parishes asking whether they employed district nurses, etc., and the information they got would be a basis to work upon.

The Chairman said the idea was a good one, but he thought it advisable to adjourn the matter for a month, and each member would be supplied with a copy of the County Council scheme, and he could by it before his parish meeting or parish council. Then at next meeting they could appoint a committee to go into the matter, and it would be possible aff-wards to frame questions.

This was agreed to.

WHAT LEEDS HAS TO PAY

The Clerk produced the arbitrator's award in connection with the proceedings relating to the loss sustained by the District Council owing to the annexation of Crossgates by Leeds. He stated that Leeds would have to pay:—District roads, £1,543; salaries, £307 10s. 10d.; bridges, £168 3s. 4d.; sewers and sewage works, £8,760; water undertaking at Riddal, £1,214 17s. 0d. The total is £4,193 7s. 11d.

The whole of the Leeds claims amounting to £2,811 5s. were disallowed, except the agreed figure of £107 in respect of hospital buildings, steam rollers, etc.

Decided liability for the repair of Westgate and Kirkgate.

The Chairman proposed that the matter of Station Road, Tadcaster, be adjourned.

Mr Prater seconded, and this was agreed to.

CONCERNING A WATER TROUGH

In regard to the water trough at Colton Lane end, the Chairman said he understood that when they gave permission to erect the trough, they were to supply it with water. He understood that as long as anything they would not undertake to supply it with water.

Mr Myers said that he, too, understood the Council were to supply the water.

The Chairman asked what was done with regard to the trough at Tadcaster.

Mr Nettleton said 7/- was supplied by the Water Committee. A notice was passed prohibiting drivers of engines taking water from it.

Mr Ingleby: There is a policeman stationed opposite the trough at Tadcaster. (Laughter).

The Chairman eventually said that he would communicate with the Water Committee.

MR LANE FOX, M.P., AND LABOURERS' COTTAGES.

WHAT WILL THEY COST?

In the House of Commons Mr Lane Fox (C., Barkston Ash) asked the President of the Board of Agriculture whether the Board was still advised that satisfactory cottages with three bedrooms for labourers could be erected at a cost of £300 the pair in the North of England, such cost including cost of drainage, water supply, fencing, cartage, and levelling; whether his Department had had occasion to build any such cottages on Crown lands or elsewhere in the North of England; and if so, at what cost.

Mr Runciman (President of the Board of Agriculture): I appointed a Committee last autumn to advise the Board and the Commissioners of Woods on matters relating to the cost and planning of cottages for agricultural labourers. Much useful information has already been collected, including particulars of satisfactory cottages built recently at a cost of £117 each, exclusive of drainage and other incidental expenses. The total cost must, of course, vary to some extent according to the locality and other circumstances. I understand that the question of issuing an interim report, with plans, is now under consideration. The Commissioners have not hitherto built any cottages in the North of England for £300 the pair.

MR LANE FOX, M.P., AND CITY EXTENSIONS.

DEMAND FOR AN INQUIRY.

In the House of Commons, on the motion for the third reading of the Local Government Provisional Orders Bill constituting Cambridge, Luton, and Wakefield county boroughs.

Mr. Duncan-Pender C. (Newmarket), as member for one of the County Divisions of Cambridgeshire, moved the rejection of the measure.

Mr. Black, L. (Biggleswade) seconded the rejection.

Mr Lane Fox (C., Barkston Ash), speaking for the West Riding Council, said they did not oppose the initial stages of these proceedings, because they thought it hopeless in view of the practice growing up in the House of accepting a Provisional Order of the Local Government Board as final, and also that it would be a waste of money. The less that was said about the roads in Wakefield the better, considering that Wakefield made its own roads. The Committee did not consider this matter on its merits. No evidence was tendered to show that it was desirable in the interests of Wakefield—that Wakefield would benefit by the change.

Mr Herbert Craig, who was Chairman of the Committee, interposed with the remark that there were certainly two witnesses called.

Mr Lane Fox said that there was very little on that point, and since the evidence was before the Committee a considerable number of new facts had come to light which strengthened the hurry Committee's case very much. In addition to what had occurred in recent years, there was evidence of several more districts wishing to get county borough powers. The population of 180,000, with a rateable value of £850,000, by the creation of county boroughs, and they also stood to lose by the extensions in the areas supplied for immediately by their Committee. They knew that extensions were contemplated which would affect a population of something over 500,000 out of the total West Riding population of 1,600,000.

Mr Marshall: If the hon. member is thinking of the Leeds and Bradford extensions those have been abandoned entirely for the moment.

Mr Lane Fox said that they had not been permanently abandoned. They were in Leeds' mouth by Mrs Mary Ellen Mitchell, of Wood-lesford, for consulting her daughter, Fanny Mitchell, a child of about ten years of age.

Mr A. Willey appeared for Mrs Hines.

The child said that on coming home from school on Wednesday Mrs Hines, who was behind a wall, came out and knocked her down and kicked her. She did not know why she had done it.

Mr Willey: Has your mother told you to call Mrs Hines any names?

Witness: No.

Mr Willey said he would put it that the child used language to his client which she could not have done unless told by her mother. This, however, was denied by the child.

Mrs Hines was called, and she said that about 4.30 p.m. last Wednesday the little girl Florence Mitchell came up to the house door along with other children. She (witness) told them to run away, whereupon the child called her a name. About 4 p.m. the same day she was waiting outside the school when the child again called her the name. She went to her and slapped her. Later in the day the child's parents came round, and one of them threatened her, saying that they would "pull her heart out, and hang it on a nail."

The summons was dismissed, as was a cross summons between the two parties.

AGRICULTURAL DESCRIPTIONS IN BARKSTON ASH.

A "COKE" OF MEADOW HAY.

Mr Clifford Dunn, of Leeds, writing to the "Post," said that there appeared in the advert columns relating to forthcoming agricultural sales by Messrs Bartle and Co., an unusual description of a quantity of hay in two of their notices: one of a sale at Osmondthorpe, "close to Leeds," the other at Church Fenton, "near Leeds." The expression used in both cases is a "coke of meadow hay." In the Osmondthorpe sale it is given as "a coke of meadow hay about three tons"; in the Church Fenton one it is given as "coke of meadow hay and pea straw, mixed, about 100 cubic yards."

In both instances it will be seen that the quantity is such as to preclude (in the ordinary acceptation) the idea of the familiar "cock" of hay which is seen in the fields when the crop is being prepared for stacking.

I am under the impression that these two places are both within the bounds of the old kingdom of Elmete. It may be that the local usage in this locality is accountable for the term. Perhaps Messrs Bartle can explain why it is used.

I may add that Messrs Bartle (and several other agricultural auctioneers) in the same issue use generally the term "A stack of meadow hay." At Farnley, which is quite near to Leeds, Messrs Bartle advertised "Two stacks of meadow hay, about thirty tons." These are large stacks, and it may be that the term "coke" is intended to convey the idea of a small stack or of a stack partly used.

Mr William Clayton, the well-known Appleton Roebuck schoolmaster, writes:—I have no knowledge of the particular items of hay which are described by Messrs Barth as for sale in the places mentioned, but I have no doubt that the "coke" of hay in the Elmet is closely related to, if not identical with, our "goke" (or gooek, as the real rustic calls it) in the Ainsty.

I am far away from a good reference book or dictionary of dialect, but I know the meaning of the work as used hereabouts to be "A remnant of a stack of hay." "That which is left of a stack which has been cut for the use of the horses and cattle on the farm."

The "goke," or "gooke" of a stack is generally the finer or most solid part of it. It has a close resemblance to the term "core," as applied to apples. The centre of the apple and pear, is often called by the rural worker and his child "th' gook."

SELBY RURAL DISTRICT.

THE VILLAGES AND SCARCITY OF HOUSES.

Dr Stedman's annual report up in the Selby Rural district states:—The population I estimate to be 5,080, the Selby rural sub-district being 3,700, and Carlton 1,380. This would, no doubt, be greater were there houses enough to accommodate the increased population.

One hundred and forty-eight births were registered, and are at the rate of 24.7 per 1,000 of the population. It is the lowest recorded in this district for many years, but is below the average of the last five years. The birth-rate for the rural areas of England and Wales in 1913 was 22.2. In the sub-districts it was as follows: Selby, 23.5; Carlton, 26.7. Four births were illegitimate.

Sixty-four deaths occurred in the district, four being non-residents, and eight residents died in other districts. The rate calculated on these figures is 12.5 per 1,000, which is very low one of 11.4. The average rate for the years 1908—1912 was 14.7.

As in the urban, so in the rural district, the scarcity of houses is becoming a serious problem, owing to industrial developments in and around Selby. Private enterprise is doing practically nothing to supply the demand, two houses only having been built during the year. It is, of course, in the village of Carlton that the demand is greatest, and I believe that if Part III. of the "Housing of the Working Classes Act" were put into operation, and a number erected by the local authority, there would be no loss to the ratepayers and great benefit to the district.

Under the provisions of the "Housing and Town Planning Act," 100 houses were inspected during 1913. Of these 140 were found to have some sanitary defect, and 70 notices were served for their remedy. The defects were almost entirely with respect to drainage or sanitary conveniences. Four had insufficient light and ventilation, and in six the back yards were in bad condition.

There are no cowkeepers at present on the register, supplying the milk from about 90 cows into Selby. The sheds are in a very fair condition, and are generally well kept; also the nine slaughter-houses in various parts of the rural district. In the latter one carcase of beef was found to be extensively diseased with tuberculosis, and was destroyed.

WHITKIRK CRICKET CLUB.

ANNUAL MEETING

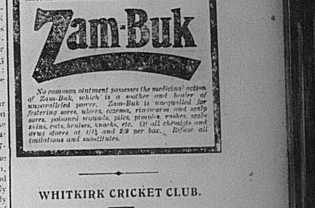
The annual meeting of Whitkirk Cricket Club was held on Friday evening.—Mr P. S. Marsden presided.

Mr J. F. Lyoday, the hon. sec., submitted the annual report and balance sheet. He said that last season the first team played 20 matches, won 7, lost 9, and 4 were drawn. It was not record to be proud of, and they must see that improvement took place, but it was not to be brought about if so many of the members continued to show that indifference which has characterised the work in the past. Mr A. E. Milford (captain), Mr J. H. Tomlinson, Mr W. O. McClintock, Mr W. Merrill, J. E. Butler, C. Firth, Rathby, and Rev. B. Guyer) corresponding secretary, Mr J. F. Lyoday; financial secretary, Mr E. D. Dawson; captain, 1st team, Mr E. D. Dawson; vice-captain, Mr J. Shepherd; captain, 2nd team, Mr W. E. Tapley; vice-captain, Mr P. Coultas; committee (Messrs W. Merrill, J. Shepherd, W. O. McClintock, W. Moss, A. R. Milford, T. Rodgers, G. Hearn, T. Pickering, H. Whitwright, and E. Wilkinson; League representative, Mr R. H. Bruce; auditors, Messrs J. P. Berry and J. W. Pickles.

Lord and Lady Airedale are returning from Nice for Easter, which they will spend at Colsterdale Hill, Claughton. They will be at 3, Cadogan Square, London, during May and June.

AN outbreak of itchy pimples on Mrs. A. L. Savage's face started a long and severe attack of eczema. Writing from 66, Chestnut Street, Leicester, Mrs. Savage says:—

"My skin got inflamed and dry, and the burning, smarting sores practically covered my face. I daren't go near the fire nor face the least wind. The doctor's treatment failed. Then Cotton ointment, creams, etc., were no better either.



"After nine years of indescribable misery and disfigurement, I felt I should never be cured.

"A friend, however, persuaded me to give Zam-Buk a trial. At the same time I also used Zam-Buk Medicinal Soap, which I found very comforting to my tortured skin.

"I was delighted with Zam-Buk; it was so healing and soothing to the sores and skin. Perseverance with this splendid Zam-Buk treatment relieved all the itching and soreness, and cleared the sores from my face.

"Now, thanks alone to Zam-Buk I have a skin free from blemish."

It is two years since Mrs. Savage made the above statement, and to-day she writes: "I am glad to say that I have had no skin trouble at all since Zam-Buk cured me of the terrible eczema."

No common ointment possesses the medicinal action of Zam-Buk. Its herbal essences are unequalled for unscrupulous powers. Zam-Buk is unequalled for Eczema, ulcers, abscesses, ringworm and scalp sores, poisoned wounds, piles, pimples, rashes, scalds, cuts, etc. Rubbed on the chest it relieves chills, arms aches at once, and 2/9 per box. Refuse all imitations and substitutes.

Have received instructions to offer for Sale by Auction, at the Station Hotel, Crossgates, on TUESDAY, the 7th day of April, 1914, at Seven p.m. precisely, subject to the General Conditions of Sale of the Yorkshire Union of Law Societies, and to such Special Conditions as shall be then and there produced,

THE FREEHOLD DWELLING-HOUSE, situate and being No. 12, Hollyshaw Lane, Whitkirk, in the occupation of Mr Geo. E. White, at a Rental of £21, containing on the Ground Floor, drawing-room, 17ft. 6in. by 14ft., with excellent bay-window; dining-room, 14ft. 6in. by 12ft.; useful kitchen, 14ft. by 17ft. 6in., with good cooking range and setpot. There is an entrance hall, including a good cellar 14ft. by 6ft. 6in. long. The accommodation on the First Floor, comprises 3 excellent bedrooms, bathroom, and w.c., opening on to a good-sized landing. Above there is one large attic and a box-room.

In the basement are good coal and keeping cellars.

At the back of the house is a convenient yard 15 yards long and 7 yards wide, with a small outhouse. There is a nice garden to front, and an entrance porch with tiled floor.

The property is brick built and slated, and is in excellent repair. It has an elevated and healthy position, and overlooks open fields, being only five minutes from Crossgates Station, and would be a very suitable residence for a business gentleman.

Further particulars and notes to view may be had from the Auctioneers, 14 and 16, Park Lane, Leeds, or from

Ison's Eye & Ear Dispensary
LIMITED.
71, GREAT GEORGE ST., LEEDS

MR. THOS. ISON, OCULIST and AURIST.

THIS INSTITUTION was ESTABLISHED in 1871. The system of working is the provident one, each patient paying a small periodical fee whilst under treatment, and they may, therefore, justly expect to receive the prompt care and attention which in many instances in charitable institutions is too often omitted. The treatment is of a mild and safe character, without operation or the use of Ear Drums, Ear Corners or other mechanical or painful appliances. Another advantage appertaining to this dispensary is its system of treatment by correspondence, by which sufferers at long distances, and in isolated positions can have the advantage of Mr ISON'S advice and remedies forwarded through the post. No case is under taken unless there be a reasonable hope of cure or benefit to the patient.

Attendance at Leeds every Tuesday, from 10 to 7 On Alternate Saturday, April 4th and 18th. Hours 10 to 7. Other days by appointment.

TREATMENT WITHOUT OPERATION, ARTIFICIAL HUMAN EYES fitted from 15s. SPECTACLES and EYE PRESERVERS, 3/6 to 10/6. Gold Frames from 20s.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—There are many cases of failing eyesight which can be speedily remedied by mild local treatment, thus dispensing with the use of glasses.

SATURDAY, APRIL 4th, 1914.

A marriage has been arranged and will shortly take place between Robert J. Foster, of Stockeld Park, Wetherby, and Susan, youngest daughter of the late Rev. Frederick Fawkes, of Farnley Hall, Otley, and Mrs Fawkes, of Bilton House, Harrogate.

A youth of twenty who appeared before Judge Greenwell at Gateshead County Court for non-payment of a debt pleaded that he was about to be married. "If your father and mother did right," commented the judge, "they would whip you and send you to bed."

The Wetherby Rural District Council are asking the County Council to take over the maintenance and repair of a portion of the Great North Road, which runs through the centre of the town, and 700 yards of another road—from the Workhouse to the river bridge.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT NEWS.

ROTHWELL.

Miss Castle, of Rothwell High School, has passed the first examination for the diploma for teachers of German at Leeds University. She obtained the teacher's diploma for French last year.

PRIMITIVE METHODISM.—A P.S.A. service was held in the Primitive Methodist Chapel on Sunday afternoon. There was a good attendance, and the address was given by Mr Gibson (Rothwell), in the absence of the advertised speaker, the Rev. S. S. Henshaw. Mr W. Thurwell presided, and during the service Miss Boys sang the solos "The Children's Home" and "How lovely are Thy dwellings."

HUNSLET BOARD OF GUARDIANS.—An election in the West Hunslet Ward will take place on Monday next in consequence of the death of Mr Edward Green, late chairman of the Hunslet Board of Guardians. The candidates for the vacancy on the Board are Mr Henry Isles Bulford, Mr Thomas Dixon, Mr Joseph Ellis, representing the Liberal interests, and Mr Arthur Charles Relton, of Greenmount Terrace, Beeston Hill, railway goods checker, who is the Labour candidate.

BILLIARDS.—Playing in the semi-or division of the Oulton and District Billiard League, Rothwell Mechanics' Institute defeated Hopetown Reading Room by 500 points to 428, at Rothwell on Saturday night. The aggregate scores were: Rothwell M.I. 500, Hopetown R.R. 543. Details (Rothwell names first):—W. Watson 100 v. H. Bolton 97, J. Hainsworth 100 v. R. Webster 100, A. Banks 100 v. J. Benton 80, W. Armison 40 v. W. Beddard 100, L. Edward 100 v. J. Liley 75, and E. Bedkwith 100 v. W. Bloomer 82.

TEMPERANCE HALL.—The junior representatives of the Rothwell Temperance Hall were beaten in a billiard match with Hopetown Reading Room at Hopetown. Out of the six games Hopetown obtained full points in five, the aggregate scores being Hopetown 570, Rothwell Temperance Hall 383. Details (Hopetown names first):—F. Shaw 100 v C. Edwards 38, W. Benton 100 v C. Lunn 86, J. Ward 100 v. E. Newton 32, D. Bloomer 100 v. H. Taylor 81, W. Gregory 100 v. W. Sidebottom 45, and T. Bloomer 79 v. C. Armstead 100.

ROTHWELL P.C. BEATEN.—Rothwell Parish Church footballers were defeated at Hunslet on Saturday, when they were beaten by five goals to nothing. Horsforth kicked off against the wind, and Rothwell took play into the Hunslet's goal area, but nothing resulted. Then Ali. Taylor sent in a poor shot when he had only the goal-keeper to beat. A fine effort by the Horsforth forwards resulted in Isles shooting over the bar. Wyke gave Horsforth a free kick, and from a lovely pass by Roo. Isles increased the score just before the interval, when Horsforth were leading by two to nil. Early play opened the second half, and after good work by the Horsforth forwards, Isles added another goal after five minutes' play. Horsforth nearly increased their score when Isles put in a fine shot which missed by inches only. The homesters added that more before the finish.

ROTHWELL DEFEATED.—After being at the top of the Leeds and District League, Rothwell suffered a heavy reverse on Saturday, when they played Hunslet A. at Rothwell, in the semi-final of the League championship. There was a splendid gate. Wishard kicked down hill for Hunslet, the visitors putting in some fine pressing. Smalley failed to take a pass from Mitchell, and Rothwell were penalised. Bowen just failed to lower the home goal, and for offside the same player missed an easy chance. Ashall ran three-parts the length of the field and scored behind the posts. Bowen improving. Rothwell were penalised for off-side. Bowen kicking a goal. Heywood, after a tricky run, passed to Pitts, who scored easily. Bowen converted. On Rothwell becoming dangerous for once, Bowen cleared cleverly. The Hunslet three-quarters passed splendidly, and on Beal stopping Heywood Smalley scored a goal from near half-way line. Bowen missed a penalty, Ashall, with a strong run, scored again, Bowen converting. Ashall again got over, Bowen this time failing. At half-time the score was—Hunslet A., 5 goals 4 tries; Rothwell, Nil. Milner restarted, and the game was keenly contested. Clayton, one of the Rothwell forwards, retired injured. Heywood scored a clever try, Bowen failing to add the goal points. After splendid passing, Kaye scored, Bowen improving. Bolton was tripped, but the same player kicked wide. Wilkinson was sent off for tripping. Kaye scored a try, but Bowen failed to add the goal points. Wise succeeded in getting through and scored under the posts, Bulmer converting. Result:—Hunslet A., 33 points; Rothwell, 5.

In the first round of the Leeds and District Rugby Cup Competition Rothwell will play Outwood, who have choice of ground.

PARISH CHURCH.—To provide funds for the purchase of new Psalters for the church choir, a rummage sale was held in the Church Room on Saturday night. The effort was well supported.

LEEDS WEST RIDING PETTY SESSIONS.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday the magistrates on the Bench were Mr J. W. Mitchell (in the chair), Mr R. D. Dixon, Mr J. H. Reed, Mr C. Holliday, Mr E. Perkin, and Mr S. Hudson.

COLLIERY OWNER.—At the Knaresborough Petty Sessions on Wednesday Mr W. Sheep-shanks (Chairman) announced that he had had the pleasure of swearing in Mr C. E. Charlesworth, Cowparkhall, Hall, to the position of High Sheriff of Yorkshire. It was a great honour to the town of Knaresborough for one of its residents to fill such a position.

ROTHWELL W. BEATEN.—Rothwell Wednesday footballers played Micklefield Wednesday at Rothwell on Wednesday. The visitors were aggressive in the first half, and scored twice through Robinson. In the second half Cooper netted a third goal for Castleford, but the ball bursting, the game terminated ten minutes before time with the score—Castleford Wednesday 3 goals; Rothwell Wednesday none.

COAL STRIKE.—The pits in this district were closed down on Wednesday, and the majority of men on the morning shift had come up. Although the majority of the men would sooner have remained at work, they have resigned themselves to make the best of the time. The men have found various ways of filling in their time. A good many are interested in gardening, and no doubt many of the guards will appear much improved by the time the men return to work. The members of the Rothwell Temperance Band are also turning the time to good account by practising, and on Thursday played outside the Temperance Hall.

ROTHWELL P.C. FOOTBALLERS.—Owing to Clapdale matches the Rothwell P.C. team have been unable to fulfil a number of their League matches, and this has necessitated a re-arrangement of fixtures. For the Easter week they are pressed as well booked up with a match nearly every day. On Wednesday night they played a League match with the representatives of Worsley United. The game was a fast one and ended in a win for the Parish Church team by three goals to two. At the interval Worsley led by one goal to nothing, the Churchmen having had a good shallowed. The homesters played promisingly in the second half, and, after four minutes' play, Taylor equalised. A spell of end to end play followed, and Wheatley obtaining possession, passed forward, and the ball being centred to Harrison, the homesters were given the lead. Newton, the Rothwell outside left, assisted with a pretty piece of play, and Harrison, who netted a third. The visitors from a break away scored their second goal. For the homesters Bulmer, full back, played a good game.

CONCERT.—An interesting concert was given at the Primitive Methodist Sunday School on Saturday night, the programme being provided by the Ladies Bigophone Band. Miss Storey presided over a large gathering. The following programme was gone through:—Selection, "With songs of ringing laughter," band; quartette, "List to the convent bells," Messdames Dufeson, Taylor, Chadwick; and Mr Dufeson; song, "Laugh, be merry, be fat," ladies' band; song and chorus, "Old folks at home," Mrs Southwart and band; reading, "There's allus summat," Mrs Lunn; part song, "Who will o'er the downs so free," ladies' chorus; song and chorus, "Lewis's beautiful tea," Mrs L. Thurwell and ladies; part song, "Come lassie and lads," ladies' band; selection, "Annie Laurie," five ladies; recitation, Mrs Jennings; selection, "Adieu," band; duet, "Milking maid," Messdames Williams and Southwart; selection, "Auld lang syne," band; song, "Home, glorious," Mrs L. Thurwell; part song, "Good night," ladies' chorus. Mr Williams acted as accompanist. At the conclusion a vote of thanks was accorded Miss Storey—and those who had taken part.

FOOTBALL.—Rothwell White Rose entertained Great Preston White Rose at Rothwell on Saturday, and won the match by six goals to two. Parritt kicked off for the homesters, who were the first to make short, against a sharp breeze. Smart footwork by Graham soon changed the venue, and the Preston forwards worked their way well up the field, only to be checked by Dawson, who sent the ball further down to the opposite end. Once more the visitors were the aggressors, Cockburn gaining possession. He passed to Graham, who, in his turn, transferred to Parritt, left wing man. The ball was again centred, and Graham, from a pass by Kness, had no difficulty in netting, although he seemed to be offside. Rothwell then attacked in force, and Appleby dribbled the ball well down, but he was brought to the ground on the dreaded area. From the penalty given Ripley made the scores equal. For the second half the homesters left their opponents well behind. From this restart Parritt passed quickly to Abrams, and a fine sprint put him well ahead, and the second goal was registered. Parritt, Appleby, Abrams, and Hughes put Rothwell still further ahead. The visitors also scored another goal.

CONSERVATISM.—Mr Cecil Lister-Kaye, prospective Unionist candidate for the Normanton Division, on Wednesday night addressed a meeting in the Church Institute, Outwood. County Councillor T. P. Tew presiding. Mr Lister-Kaye, discussing the Home Rule question, said that in the sordid state of affairs now confronting the nation there was only one bright spot, and that was the action of the two generals, who preferred the preservation of their honour before anything else. (Applause.) "But, to my mattter," he added, "which the citizens of Great Britain cannot be too grateful for, and we shall always remember with pride those two generals who so fearlessly sacrificed their duty." (Applause.) The Government were afraid of going to the country, because they knew the English people loved justice and would declare against Home Rule by an overwhelming majority. The union of Great Britain and Ireland was compatible with the safety and integrity of the nation, and the vitality of Home Rule had always been maintained by a generation of agitators. In their endeavour to get rid of English rule. But was it right to put the Irish loyalists under the dominion of rebels and traitors? Such a thing would be unparalleled in history; yet Mr Asquith had shown during the past week that he was only too ready to sacrifice to party the welfare of the nation. If they had an election in England and Ireland they would—he had the greatest confidence in thinking they would see a Unionist Government returned to power, when the Imperial Parliament would be led and controlled by men of the very highest ability and honour. (Applause).

ALLERTON BYWATER

On Saturday afternoon a League football match was played between Allerton Bywater and Wortley United, and the former won easily by nine goals to nil.

BOWERS ALLERTON

The workpeople of Messrs T. and R. W. Bower, Ltd., of Allerton Main Colliery, have sent £57 8s. 6d. to Leeds Infirmary.

CARLTON

BILLIARDS.—Playing in the senior division of the Oulton and District Billiard League Carlton Temperance Hall defeated Rothwell Working Men's Club by 64 points at Carlton on Saturday night. The aggregate scores were Carlton 618, Rothwell 544. Rothwell had a man short and full points were awarded the home-staters' player who would have opposed him. Details (Carlton names first):—W. Page 100 v. O. Rooks 56, 1 for 48 v. J. Hargreaves 100, R. Beeson 100 v. R. Dolkin 80, G. Priestley 70 v. T. Thurwell 100, E. Bowen 100 v. F. Stringer 76, and R. Ellis 100 v. Another 0.

CROSSGATES

It is proposed to extend the automatic system of lighting street lamps at Crossgates to other parts of Leeds. It is estimated that by doing so a saving of nearly £6,000 a year will be effected.

PARISH MEETING.—The annual parish meeting for Austhorpe was held at Austhorpe Hall on Thursday night—Mr T. P. Fawcett, of Barrowby Hall, presiding. Mr Fawcett was re-elected chairman, and Messrs. Appleyard and Booth overseers. Mr J. R. White resigned the position of assistant overseer, and Mr Walter Townend, of Seacroft, was appointed in his place. The usual votes of thanks were passed.

BAPTIST FELLOWSHIP.—On Tuesday at the weekly meeting of the Baptist Fellowship in the Lecture Hall, Whitkirk, an address on "What does 'Evangelism stand for" was delivered by Mr Clegg, of Headingley. There was a good attendance, and Mr Anderson, of Whitkirk, presided. The lecturer dealt with the subject in an able and convincing manner, and was highly complimented at the close, the gentlemen taking part in the subsequent discussion being Messrs Diggle, Hartop, J. Batty, White, and others. A vote of thanks was passed to Mr Clegg on the call of Mrs Hyde, seconded by Mr Rodgers. Next Tuesday is "Portfolio night." See advert.

GARFORTH

The Rev. Samuel S. Henshaw, of Victoria Avenue, Leeds, has decided to leave the Leeds circuits at the Primitive Methodist Conference next year, and the Rev. R. W. James, of Dewsbury, has accepted an invitation to remove to the Leeds First Primitive Methodist Circuit.

PICTURE HOUSE.—The great attraction at the Picture House on the first three nights of the week was the film "When the earth trembled," depicting with terrible realism the horrors of the San Francisco earthquake, and it had a fine reception. For to-night and Saturday the principal picture will describe the great glove fight between Kid Lewis and Paul Til for the feather-weight Championship of Europe, and another outstanding film will be "Bond in the bone." For next week arrangements have been made for showing that splendid film "The House of Temperley," in four parts, and it should be noticed that there will be two performances on Monday and Tuesday nights. On Thursday, Friday and Saturday the great Indian Mutiny drama "The deathstone of India" will be screened. It is a three-reel drama, and is described as a triumph of the cinematographic art. "The flames of the ashes," a fine story of manhood in an outcast, is another good film promised, and other interesting pictures will go to make up very attractive programmes. For times and prices see advert.

HALTON

FOOTBALL.—On Saturday afternoon a keenly-contested match was played at Cross Gates Farm, Osmondthorpe, between the Waterloo Main Colliery and East Ardsley United. Guest scored for the Colliery in the first half, and the second moiety was fruitless. Waterloo Main won by a goal to nil.

PROPERTY MARKET.—Mr V. Stanley Walker, auctioneer, East Parade, Leeds, offered for sale at the Irwin Arms Hotel, Halton, on Monday night, nine cottages and a corner shop at Field End, Halton, but the lot was withdrawn. Enquiries were made after the sale which will most likely result in the property changing hands.

MENDICANTS.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Timothy Bergin, a labourer, of no fixed abode, and Hargreaves Kilvington, described as a fireman, and also of no fixed abode, were charged with begging on the Leeds and Selby Road, Halton, on Sunday afternoon. As both men had been in custody since Sunday they were allowed to go.

HARRIERS.—Leeds East Ward Harriers decided their eight miles club championship and handicap on Saturday on the private Red Road and Pontefract Lane, near East End Park, over a circuit of about 1¼ miles, the Hon. E. L. Wood cup being offered for the championship, and the Macrae cup for the handicap. For the latter Beanland overtook Ledgard at 7¼ miles, and won by 150 yards, and in the contest for the championship Wrigglesworth obtained a clear lead at the half-distance, and won.

ASLEEP.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Joseph Waite, a drayman, of Leeds, was summoned for being asleep when in charge of a dray, and also for having no light at Halton on Tuesday, March 10th, at 12.30 a.m. P.C. Stothard stated that he came across the defendant on the Leeds and Selby Road, Shadwell, with his lamp in him. He found him asleep on the shafts of the dray. The candle in the lamp had burned clean out. Defendant pleaded that he had been worked hard that day, and he was let off on payment of a fine of 1s. and costs in the first case, and 1s. including costs in the second case.

KIPPAX

PRIMITIVE METHODIST CHURCH.—The Rev. B. H. Farlow, circuit minister (Castleford), gave the address at the Christian Endeavour meeting in connection with the Primitive Methodist Church in the schoolroom on Wednesday evening.

PARISH CHURCH.—A service for men was held in the church on Sunday, and the Vicar gave an address on "A question of values." There was a good attendance. At a meeting of the Girls' Friendly Society on Monday evening Miss Smith gave an address on "Things how we live in." There was a good gathering of members, and the address was much appreciated. The speaker was accorded a vote of thanks at the close. Another of the series of Lenten addresses which had been arranged for the weekly service during Lent, was given by the Vicar on Thursday. There was an excellent attendance, and the address was on "The men who crucified Christ," the special subject being "Caiphas."

LEDSHAM

On Monday the Rev. John Henry A. Thomas, B.Sc., was licensed by the Archbishop of York to the vicarage of Ledsham-with-Fairburn (to officiate at Fairburn).

MOORTOWN

HARRIERS.—On Saturday afternoon Leeds St. Peter's Harriers decided their annual handicap or club championship from the Chained Bull Hotel, Moortown. The course was one of eight miles, and was laid across the country to Eccup, returning home through Shadwell. The Muckle Cup was the trophy competed for, and attracted 23 entrants, of whom nine faced the starter.

OULTON

BEGGING.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Frank Crawt, a labourer, of no fixed abode, was charged with begging at Oulton. P.C. Bennett stated that on Monday afternoon he saw the prisoner on the Leeds Road, Oulton, begging. Crawt said he had tramped from Southampton in search of work. He was discharged.

BILLIARDS.—The final for the Oulton Institute Billiard Challenge Cup took place at the Institute on Saturday night before a large number of the members. The finalists were G. Wilkinson (receives 50) and H. Cleaver (receives 90) in a game of 250 up. A close match was the result, and in the end Wilkinson won by the narrow margin of six points. Later the cup was presented by Mr A. Sharpe, the Chairman of the committee. Mr Wilkinson and Mr Cleaver both responded.

OSMONDTHORPE

A market gardener gathered a plateful of mushrooms at Knostrop on Monday afternoon. The biggest was 7 inches in circumference, and weighed a quarter of a pound.

STOURTON

There was a good attendance at the P.S.A. service held in the Primitive Methodist Church on Sunday afternoon. The address was given by Mr J. W. Doughty, of the Ladypit Lane Church.

HUNSLET MAN'S REMARKABLE CONDUCT.—Wm. Henry Dobson, a young miner, of Hunslet, was charged at the Leeds Police Court on Wednesday with assaulting his former sweetheart, Harriet Locke. The complainant said the defendant failed to turn up at the Registry Office on the morning appointed for their wedding, and she returned home, where she had provided a wedding breakfast out of her own earnings. She said another party was partaking of the breakfast when the defendant called at the house, and, without any provocation, created a disturbance. He smashed a plate over her head, broke all the crockery, and did other damage. The defendant, who denied the offence, said he could not get to the Registry Office at the appointed time because he was at work. He was still willing to marry the complainant, but she told the magistrate she "would not have him at any price." Mr H. Marshall (the magistrate) told defendant that his conduct was most extraordinary, and fined him 40s. and costs, or a month's imprisonment. Defendant refused to pay the fine.

WOODLESFORD

On Saturday afternoon Woodlesford All Saints' had a football match with Leeds Christ Church W.S., and it was drawn—two goals each.

WHITKIRK

COLTON MAN'S OFFENCE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Session on Tuesday Harry Tinker, labourer, of Colton, was summoned for having been drunk and disorderly at Halton. P.C. Taylor stated that about 12.50 a.m. on Saturday, March 21st, he found the defendant in a very drunken condition, knocking at the door of his parents' house. As he could not get in he commenced using bad language. As defendant had already been up before the court in the early part of the week for a similar offence, he was fined 10s. and costs.

HOCKEY.—On Saturday afternoon a match was played at Bradford between Whitkirk and Manningham. Whitkirk attacked from the bully-off and for several minutes the home goal was in jeopardy. Ault saving brilliantly from Pickersgill. Following a fast centre from Ault, Watson opened the scoring for Whitkirk. Manningham improved in the second half, and after Higgins had driven in a nice shot from the left which the goalkeeper stopped, Singham rushed in and equalised. Shortly afterwards the same player snapped up another weak clearance and gave Manningham the lead, which they held to the end, winning by two goals to one. Chief credit for the victory is due to the defence, as Whitkirk were on the attack for three quarters of the game. Cookson was prominent at right back.

CROSSGATES, ROUNDHAY, SHADWELL, SEACROFT LIBERALS.

ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Roundhay, Shadwell, Seacroft, and Crossgates Ward Liberal Association was held on Friday night at the Leeds and County Liberal Club.

The following officers were elected:—President, Mr Frank Avison (Stanks); vice-presidents, Mr F. W. Sutcliffe (Manston), Mr G. H. Whatmoor (Roundhay), Mr W. G. Smithson (Crossgates), and Mr Haigh (Shadwell); hon. treas., Mr H. J. Garner (Shadwell); and hon. secretary, Mr G. A. Drake (Stanks).

Mr F. W. Sutcliffe proposed a resolution expressing satisfaction at the admirable way in which the Prime Minister and Cabinet had dealt with national affairs in the present crisis, and trusted that they would continue to show a firm attitude so as to assure the nation that no coercion adopted by Army officers or any other organization would deter them passing the Home Rule and Welsh Disestablishment Bills into law without unnecessary delay, and, if possible, place on the Statute Book the Plural Voting Bill before another appeal was made to the country.

Mr Haigh seconded, and this was carried unanimously.

At an Arts and Crafts Exhibition at York, on Tuesday prizes were offered by Prince and Princess Arthur of Connaught for laundered articles done by working women, and they were won by Mrs Roberts, of Askham Bryan. For bedwork Mrs Morgan, of Askham Bryan, won first prize, and for wool hearthrug she was second.

NARROW ESCAPE.—A number of children were playing by the side of the river Ouse, near Messrs Williamson's depot, on Ousegate, Selby, on Saturday, when a little boy named Smith, Smithwhole, son of Upchurwood's Yard, fell into the water. Thomas Irwin pluckily went to his assistance just as he was sinking. He, however, was nearly overpowered by the drowning child, and Arthur Barlby, a bill-poster, noticing the struggle, was able to effect the rescue of the children. A strong tide running added to the difficulties.

CONFIRMATION SERVICE.—There was a crowded congregation at Monk Fryston Parish Church on Friday afternoon, when a confirmation service was conducted by the Bishop of Beverley. Altogether there were about 120 candidates, of whom 50 were from Monk Fryston, and the others from the parishes of Sherburn, South Milford, Micklefield, and Ledsham. The vicars of the five parishes were present, viz., Rev. W. M. C. Clarke, Rev. F. C. Young, Rev. E. J. Barry, Rev. C. D. Farrer, and the Rev. G. E. Warlow. The Bishop delivered a helpful and appropriate address, which was closely followed by the confirmees and the congregation. After the service all the confirmees partook of tea in the Concert Hall.

GARFORTH URBAN COUNCIL.

HEALTH OF THE AREA.

WATER SUPPLY—PRIVATE STREETS.

The monthly meeting of Garforth Urban District Council was held at the offices at Garforth on Wednesday night—Mr J. B. Reed (Chairman) presiding. Other members present were Messrs S. Routledge, jun. (vice-chairman), J. W. Dobson, R. Routledge, sen., W. W. Hartley, T. S. Slater, W. Goodall, H. Liversedge, and H. Chapell, with the Clerk (Mr A. E. Carr), the medical officer (Dr Pickersgill), the surveyor (Mr T. Abbott), and the water inspector (Mr Naylor).

The proposed alterations to a shop in Main Street, and for the construction of w.c.'s at Mr Archer's property in Wilkefield Road were passed.

Three tenders for iron labour were received, and that of Mr E. Dixon was accepted.

A circular was received from the County Council asking the co-operation of the Urban Council in carrying out their nursing scheme, and it will be discussed at next meeting.

At a meeting of the Fire and Lighting Committee it was agreed that the Council be recommended to purchase 14 tunics, and 14 helmets.

HIGHWAYS AND SANITARY

At a meeting of the Highways, Sanitary, and General Purposes Committee a letter was read from Mr Arthur Mosley with respect to building on land at Garforth Cliff, belonging to him and purchased from the Hon W. Lowther, and enquiring whether the Council would be prepared to extend the sewer so as to serve this estate, and it also enquired as to the water mains. It was decided that the Council could not extend the sewer, but would be prepared to lay on the water.

A letter was read from Mr J. W. Armitage, of Salisbury Terrace, Garforth, complaining about the cottage adjoining Salisbury Terrace being in a verminous condition, and their gardens being covered with straw in windy weather. The letter was allowed to lie on the table.

A letter was read from Mr John Horsfield stating that Mr A. Fox had been instructed to carry out the work in connection with the conversion of the privies at his property into water closets.

A letter was read from Mr. F. Kirkby Wilson stating that the owner of the property at Milnthrope Buildings was dead, but that he did not appreciate any difficulty in arranging matters with the executors, and asking for the matter to stand over for a time.

The grader of Messrs Learoyd and Cockrem for cleaning sewer outfall was accepted.

The Clerk was instructed to write Mr Buckhouse that the Council would be at no expense in connecting water closets, and that the work would be personally looked after once.

HEALTH OF THE DISTRICT

Dr Pickersgill reported that during the month there had been 13 births—7 males and 6 females, and 7 deaths—4 females, and 3 males, the ages ranging from a day to 70 years. One of these deaths registered was an Allerton Bywater person from typhoid in the hospital.

Two cases of scarlet fever were notified, one of them having been sent to the hospital at Leeds.

Dr Pickersgill: Yes. The patient is a Garforth girl.

Measles and chickenpox, it was stated were prevalent in the area.

THE WATER SUPPLY

Mr Naylor, the inspector, reported that during the month ended March 31st (35 days) the consumption of water was 18,512,000 gallons, being an average of 43,000 gallons daily. The total consumption for the year was 18,410,000 against 18,417,000 for the previous year.

During the month seven water closets had been fixed and 19 for the year, there being 177 altogether, while three baths had been fixed during the year, making 129 in all. No connections had been made to the mains during the year.

Mr Hartley said he thought that the water inspector's duties should include a periodical inspection of the taps, and he mentioned a case where water had been running to waste. They ought not to allow that, because it meant loss to the ratepayers, and he thought it might be prevented if the water taps were periodically examined.

Mr Routledge said he understood that the agreement as to the duties was to be brought up at the next meeting.

The Clerk indicated that he did not know about it.

Mr Gascoigne said the question could be gone into on the reappointment being made by the new Council.

The Clerk said he would supply each member with a copy of the agreement.

The matter will be considered at the next meeting.

PRIVATE STREETS

For the making-up of two private streets—Beech Grove Avenue and Beech Grove Terrace Beech Grove—tenders were submitted, ranging from £839 to £633.

Mr Routledge inquired how many property-owners there were in the streets.

Mr Abbott said he did not know.

Mr Gascoigne said he heard of a man who had gone into one of the streets with a waggon, and he was over the knees in water.

The Chairman said he thought they should adjourn this question and have Mr Smithson, the surveyor, at the meeting.

Mr Goodall said it was impossible to settle the tenders until they had Mr Smithson present.

Mr Hartley said they would have to have the tenders and the appointments would have to be left with the surveyor.

Mr Routledge, sen., proposed that the tenders be adjourned until next meeting, and that Mr Smithson be asked to attend.

Mr Routledge, jun., seconded, and this was adopted.

Mr Gascoigne accused some of the members of lacking earnestness in their duties. "Talk about the health of the district," he said, "the children get cold by getting wet in these streets and other troubles follow."

Mr Routledge said it would be foolish to do anything with the tenders without Mr Smithson being present.

Then followed some cross-talk between Mr Gascoigne and Mr Routledge, jun.

"This discussion is out of order," said the Chairman, who passed on to the next business.

MONEY FROM TADCASTER

The Clerk intimated that he had received the order of the County Council awarding Garforth £209 in settlement of all claims in connection with the old water works against Tadcaster District Council. The money was to be paid on April 1st.

Mr Routledge: We have not got the money yet.

Mr Dobson: It has been included in the estimates at Tadcaster.

Mr Gascoigne asked if Garforth was entitled to any of the money awarded to Tadcaster District Council in connection of the Kiddal scheme.

Mr Routledge said he did not know, but he would look into the matter.

HUNSLET BOARD OF GUARDIANS

The fortnightly meeting of the Hunslet Board of Guardians was held at the Guardians' Offices, Hunslet, on Wednesday afternoon, the Chairman (Mr J. H. Thomas) presiding. Other members present were Mrs Darling, Rev. T. Cody, Dr. Graves, Messrs W. Scrimshaw, F. Bussell, J. Batchelder, T. G. Cowens, W. Verity, G. Artingstall, P. S. Marsden, R. B. Pickersgill, W. A. Appleyard, W. Iveson, W. Stead, J. Gawins, F. Jee, Hemingway, and J. W. Verity, with the Clerk (Mr F. W. May).

The workhouse master's report showed that during the fortnight there had been three deaths in the workhouse, and that 56 vagrants had been relieved as against 52 for the corresponding period last year, an increase of four.

The minutes of the Children's Homes Committee showed that two only of the four selected candidates for the appointment of paid mother attended before the Committee, and both of them withdrew their applications. Three applications from persons over age were considered, and it was resolved that the Clerk advertise again. It was also resolved that the only age limit be a minimum of 20 years.

A further letter was received from the Local Government Board stating they were not adequate reasons for departing from the decision conveyed in their letter of the 2nd ult, and requesting the Guardians to make arrangements for the emigration of the two Roman Catholic children through the Catholic Emigration Association. The Clerk reported an interview with an official, and subsequent correspondence with the Salvation Army in which it was pointed out that they expected the children to be sent to them reasonably clad and were prepared to make an abatement of £2 in each case conditional upon the Guardians providing the supplementary outfit required, which the superintendent reported would cost £2 tgs. in the case of the boys and £2 6s. 6d. in the case of the girls.

A letter was received from Mrs Birt in reply to enquiries stating that she is prepared to undertake the emigration on the same terms as before.

The Clerk reported that in consequence of the letter from the Local Government Board he had made enquiry of the Child Emigration Association, and received a reply stating that they will be prepared to comply with the reasonable wishes of the Guardians concerning the placing out, and terms and conditions of employment or service of any child, emigrated through them while under the age of 18 years, and while under the parental control of the Guardians. It was resolved that under the altered circumstances the Board be recommended to emigrate the two Catholic children through the Catholic Emigration Association on the terms and conditions laid down in which they have agreed to accept the resolution adopting the proceedings and recommendations of this Committee so far as it directs the emigration of the said children through the Salvation Army.

A proposition that under the same circumstances the remainder of the children be emigrated through Mrs Birt was lost.

The minutes were approved.

At a special meeting of the Children's Homes Committee the Clerk submitted eleven applications received in reply to his advertisement for a relief mother, and reported that three of them were not in compliance with the conditions. Of the remainder four were selected to attend before the Committee.

A resolution moved by Mr W. Verity that the salaries of two of the charge nurses of the general institution from £30 and £34 respectively be raised by annual amounts of £2 on approved service to £40 per annum together with the usual emoluments, was passed.

Mr Bennett moved a resolution rescinding the adoption of the proceedings and recommendations of the Children's Homes Committee so far as it directs the emigration of such children through the Salvation Army.

The Clerk read a letter from the Clerk of the West Riding Asylums Board relating to the increase of charge of maintenance of lunatics from 10s. 6d. to 11s. 8d. per head, which stated that the increase was due to the greater number of inmates and the increased cost of food, clothing, etc., together with the increase of nurses' salaries.

Mr Lamb said the explanation was perfectly satisfactory, and he hoped the Hunslet Board would keep the facts of the increased cost in clothing, food, and fuel when considering the question of relief.

The Rev. F. Gumley, at one time curate at Boston Spa, was inducted to the living of Gateforth on Saturday.

SUCCESS.—On Tuesday at the Arts and Crafts Exhibition at York, Mr T. Atkinson, of Bolton Percy, was first for chip carving. In the school classes Stanley Pounder, of Bolton Percy, was first for woodcarving, and for basket of osier or cane Cecil Roper, of Bolton Percy, was second.

LANTERN LECTURE.—On Thursday evening at the Concert Hall, Monk Fryston, an interesting lecture on "What we owe to animals" was given by Miss Percy, R.S.P.C.A., of York. The lecture was illustrated by over 100 pictures, and there was a large gathering. A collection was taken to defray expenses.

DANCE.—On Friday evening a dance was held in the Concert Hall, Monk Fryston, under the auspices of the Monk Fryston Dancing Class. Dancing was indulged in from 8 p.m. until 3 a.m., and about 100 persons were present. The musicians were Miss Laycock and Mr G. Good enough, and the duties of M.C. were discharged by Messrs I. Atkinson and W. Goodenough.

CHILDREN'S CONCERT.—A very successful and enjoyable children's concert was given in the Monk Fryston Wesleyan Schoolroom, on Tuesday evening. The programme consisted of songs, recitations, action songs, sketches, etc., and all the items were well rendered, and greatly appreciated by a large audience. The children were trained by Mrs Walker and Mrs Cundall. The proceeds were in aid of the Young People's Union.

BURIAL BOARD.—The yearly meeting of the Monk Fryston Burial Board was held at the Institute on Thursday evening. The Rev. B. Hemsworth, M.A., presided, and other members present were Messrs J. W. Holdridge, H. R. Bucke, and G. Webster, with the Clerk (Mr G. Wanless). The Clerk reported that only 11 interments had taken place during the past year, showing that the parish had had a very low death-rate. The Clerk was instructed to give notice to the Hillam Parish Council that it was their turn to elect two members on the Board for the ensuing three years. The retiring members are Messrs H. Bucke and J. R. Stockdale, who are eligible for re-election.

AMUSEMENTS.

LEEDS EMPIRE PALACE.

At the Empire Palace the principal attraction is a production entitled "Just My Luck," and certainly deserves the title, a riotously humorous mirth, music, and song." The merit of such a description is that one is saved the bother of trying to discover what the piece is really striving to be. It is simply a "mixture" of song, dance, and comedy. Miss Claire Romaine has a couple of good songs, and the chorus of 12 "girls" do well, and take part in some pretty dances. Miss Eileen North and Mr Gerald Williams also contribute tuneful numbers, and there is some graceful dancing by Miss Ida Rayne. The remainder of the programme includes some amusing knockabout nonsense by Bennie Brake's company, clever dancing by the Eight Lancashire Lads, and some entertaining juggling of new words and old tunes by Sidney James.

An exceptionally fine programme has been arranged for Monday next at the Empire, Leeds Brandon Hurst, the American actor, and his own company, the sensational comedy by Edward Peple, entitled "The Girl," will be one of the leading features of the programme. The characters in this sketch consist of three apparently unimportant quality. They are simply described as The Man, The Boy, and The Servant, played respectively by Mr Brandon Hurst, Mr H. B. Waring, and Mr Harold Brandon. A novel feature is that although the sketch is played in one scene, the curtain is lowered momentarily during the act to indicate that a lapse of six hours in the action takes place. Among others on this excellent programme are Victoria Monks, popularly known as "John Bull's Girl." Miss Monks will introduce her new song success "All aboard for London Town"; Friend and Downing, the chosen couple, awarded the palm in the Hebrew couple's class, vide "Sunday Chronicle"; The Tourbillon Troupe of Acrobatic Equilibrists; Ling Tai's Country"; Alec, Kendall, simply natural—no other excuse; Rob, Ivy, and Lynn, in a vocal scena; Griff, the joking Juggling Johnny; Modelle Rosalie, comedienne and dancer; and a new series of pictures on the American bioscope.

LEEDS HIPPODROME

At the Hippodrome this week Miss Ella Retford heads the bill. Her popularity was again demonstrated on Monday night. She sang three songs which her characteristic vivacity, and there were calls for more. In ragtime Miss Retford excels, and very typical of this class of song was her "Automobile" ditty, with its quaint descriptive phrases. No less welcome was her rendering of the well-known "Heigho! Can't you hear the steamer?" Another artiste, in quite another line, is Miss Josephine La Barte, who, accompanying herself at the pianoforte, plays much above the average. On Monday night she was obviously suffering from a cold, yet she gave a very effective rendering of a little sentimental ballad, "The Country of Dreams," and also rendered bright songs, one of them of the "Breezy, Briny Sea," the other Irish. The Four Royal Scots give quite a merry musical entertainment; Ernest Hastings does some lightning cartoon and white sketches very cleverly; the Raffis and Wilson Trio have a turn in which tumbling blends with vocalism in an unaccustomed degree; Lydia Yeamans Titus are W. F. B. the comic cyclist; Junora and Partner, clever hand and head "balancers"; Miss Lily Langtry, and Monty Ash.

Next week at the Hippodrome the chief attraction will be a revue, entitled "Go-Ahead," reviewing the revues, in eight incidents, and the cast will include Edris Coombs, James Leslie, Frank Hemming, R. Lee, Billy Myles, Ernest Bell, Robert Reilly, and Winifred Rema, while there will be a galaxy of handsome ladies and a smart chorus of gentlemen. Others billed to appear are Jessie Jackson, in a new repertoire, from the London Palace and Coliseum; Dolly Elsworthy, in character studies; Barney Murphy, comedian; Mr and Mrs W. F. Manning, in "Our Wedding Anniversary"; and Eric Clifford, the Australian baritone. In addition pictures will be shown on the bioscope.

LEEDS QUEEN'S THEATRE.

One of the latest dramas makes its first appearance at the Queen's Theatre. This is "A Mill Girl's Wedding." In the various performances it has met with a good reception, the audiences showing keen appreciation of the most of the characters. Particularly is the character of Peter Arncliffe, the weaver and captain of the Beaver Mills Football Club, and he has the able support of Miss Alma Shelley, who impersonates Mary Grey, the mill girl. The other members of the company have been well chosen, leading parts being taken by Mr Royce Milton, Miss Florence Huntley, and Miss Tony Tourcoin.

Next week at the Queen's Theatre Charles Draycott's London Company will appear in the great thrilling drama of real life "The Heart Bowed Down," or "His Love for an Actress."

LEEDS CITY VARIETIES.

At the City Varieties Messrs Wilson and Crook are presenting a dramatic sketch entitled "The Twelfth Man." The scene is laid in a jury room attached to the Criminal Courts, and it deals with a lattle-pox trial for prosecution and defence, and the saving of a man's life through a sheer miracle. Fred Ward and his little lady, Selina, sing and dance well in their burlesque coon scena, "Ma Lindy," and Fred Leroy, though young in years, provide plenty of amusement by their juggling eccentricities, and Zenora presents some smart handbalancing acts. Others who contribute are Myra Grey (vocalist), and Jack W. Rooke, in song and patter.

Next week at the City Varieties Charles F. Hill, described as the dumb droll of serving a Mill Girl's Wedding" will be supported by a first-rate company of artistes. These include Connie Mascot, comedienne and dancer; Eddie Walker, burlesque comedian; the Rochefords, vocalists and dancers; The Randles in "Subdued"; and Neuman and Royle, in the ventriloquial novelty, "The Widow." Several pictures will be depicted by the Varlescope.

LEEDS THEATRE DE LUXE

At the Theatre de Luxe this week "Orders Under Seal," a fine achievement of the cinematographic art and embracing those qualities which make a successful production, was a great attraction. It is a remarkable story of the love of Count Spinelli, a spy, for Lady van Houven, and the almost tragic results of his efforts to disclose the sealed orders. It occupies nearly two hours and there are some wonderful scenic effects. Pathe's Gazette and a daring Civil War burlesque "Cohen Saves the Flag" are also shown.

The N.E.R. employees at Gascoigne Wood Junction have sent £3 5s. 7d. to Leeds Infirmary.

On Saturday afternoon East Keswick had a hockey match with Leeds Salem, and the latter won by four goals to one.

On Monday at the Petty Sessions a resident of Tadcaster West was summoned for non-payment of rates, and an order was made.

P.C. Pearson, of Selby, after twenty-six years' service in the West Riding Constabulary, spent in the Selby Police Division, retired on pension on Tuesday.

PARISH ROOM.—At a general meeting of the members of Aberford Parish Room on Monday night, the following were elected on the Working Committee:—Messrs Woodward, Stead, Blakey, Worsley, Chapman, Capt. Pratt, and Wallace.

RABBIT COURSING.—A £40 rabbit coursing match was held on the canal side, Selby, on Saturday afternoon, between C. Goodyer's Sam (Selby) and A. Hartland's Bowbrion Gipsy (Haddlesey), best of fifteen courses, Goodyer's Sam, who received 4½ yards start, proved the winner, winning eight courses, against Gipsy's seven. Three courses were undecided.

A NEW ORGANIZATION.—The motor-cycling club which has been formed at Boston Spa had an outing at the week-end to Pately Bridge, the first programme for the season. The muster auguring well for the season. The organization is intended to be of mutual benefit to members in technical matters, as well as to act in defence where motor-cycling interests are threatened. An interesting social and competitive programme is being arranged. Mr E. C. Dickinson, Boston Spa, is acting as hon. sec.

Rhodes, Leeds, improvements in mattresses, bedding, etc.; David Hannam, Ben Rhydding, improvements in jackets, traction and like garments. Application completed —S. Wormald and W. Stead, Batley, railway signalling apparatus. Patent accepted—E. B. Laycock, Wakefield, combined tennis post and stake. Patent sealed—F. Swithenbank, Yeadon, an improved advertising toy or puzzle.

THE LATE MRS GATHERCOLE.—On Friday the remains of Mrs Gathercole, who died at the age of 66, were interred in the churchyard at Aberford. Deceased, who was very highly respected, was the widow of Mr. William Gathercole, who was at one time postmaster of the village. The funeral was largely attended. Wreaths were sent as follows:—Sissy and Alfred, "Loving sister;" Albert and Louie, Harry and Annie, Mr and Mrs Roberts (Scarcroft), Col. and Mrs Musgrave, Mr and Mrs Prater, Mr and Mrs Hawkes and family, Mrs and Miss Denham, Mr and Mrs P. Addy, the tenants of Barwick-in-Elmet, Mrs Dodds, Mrs Wilson, and Miss H. Denham.

LIBERALISM.—A largely attended Liberal meeting was held at Sherburn on Tuesday evening. Mr Martin Harvey, President of the Barkston Ash Liberal Association, was announced to preside, but was unavoidably prevented from being present, and the following letter from him was read to the meeting:—"I regret very much an important business engagement will prevent me from attending the meeting at Sherburn. I hope you will have a good meeting in view of the critical times through which we are passing. It is most known that the policy of the Tories have been attempting to tamper with the loyalty of the Army (both Regulars and Territorials), and I predict that the common-sense of the electorate will easily perceive the very short step between such 'sedition mongering' and the overthrow of all democratic institutions in this country. Many leading Tories are also 'flirting' with Conscription, and we might reasonably look for a new Tory banner with a new inscription thereon as follows:—Optional National Insurance, Optional Army Discipline, Compulsory Military Training. What a noble policy!" Mr W. J. Taylor, Liberal agent, presided, and stirring addresses were delivered by Mr Stafford B. Whitby and Mr F. Bonner Spurrier, who were accorded a hearty vote of thanks at the close.

SHERBURN-IN-ELMET C.C.C.—The general meeting of the Sherburn Cricket Club was held at the White Swan Hotel on Thursday night, and there was only a small attendance. The chair was taken by Mr J. E. Lawrence, who again elected President, and Messrs F. L. Oglesby and W. A. Osborne were elected captain and vice-captain respectively. A useful working committee was elected. Mr J. Potts, who again undertook the duties of secretary and treasurer, presented the financial statement, which was considered very satisfactory, there being a good balance in hand. Last season 12 matches were played, and 6 were won, 1 lost, and 5 were drawn, while the average number of runs per wicket for the club was 11 against 13 by their opponents. The batting averages were headed by W. A. Osborne, with an average of 31.5, whilst M. C. Holgate and B. Hey had an average 19.6 each. The best bowling figures were those of W. A. Osborne, 16 wickets at an average cost of 2.4, and J. Potts, 34 wickets for 5.6. D. Atkinson headed the list of catches with 6. Messrs J. Rowley and C. H. Cawthorn were awarded a hearty vote of thanks for acting as umpire and scorer during last season. An interesting list of fixtures has been arranged for the coming season, and the prospects of the club are extremely bright, although since the last cricket season the services have been lost of Messrs J. Hawley, L. Ramsden, and B. Hey, the latter having gone to Canada.

ROTHWELL URBAN COUNCIL.

The monthly meeting of the Rothwell Urban Committee in putting it on the Water Committee. It was true there were people had to Dispatch Council was held at the Council Offices, Rothwell, on Monday night—Mr J. Hirst Iveson (Chairman) presiding. Other members present were Messrs J. A. Bridge (vice-chairman), S. Gill, R. Chadwick, J. Armitage, J. B. Hindle, T. P. Wade, T. Kirby, S. Dobson, J. Ellis, H. Hoggard, W. Lacey, R. McNeil, J. Gaunt, and Mr. Hoare, with the Clerk (Mr W. Dodgson), the medical officer (Dr. H. Stevenson), the sanitary inspector (Mr. E. E. Moorhouse), and the surveyor (Mr J. S. Wilmot).

HIGHWAYS COMMITTEE.

The minutes of the Highways Committee showed that Mr England intimated that the Wakefield Light Railways Board had withdrawn, and he stated his Board had had under consideration the question of workmen's fares to miners and he proposed to agree to try and meet the complaint of workgirls having to walk home at night. He also stated that figures were being got out with regard to an extension to Oulton, on which he would write the Council. The Committee interviewed Mr Herbert Armitage in regard to Windmill Lane Private Street Works, and in Bell Hill. It was also resolved that a water cart be purchased for 45 per from H. Wadsworth, and that new if flushing attachment be included. The following tenders were accepted:—Macadam —Mountsorrel and Welsh Granite Co., and J. and Middlesex, Mountsorrel Granite Co., and J. N. Smith and Co. It was resolved that the tender of J. Farrar and Sons, Ltd., for flags, kerbs, setts, and paviors, be accepted, and a tender by Shaw, Hirst, and Harvey for kerbs, The Kirkheld Granite Co. for concrete flags. It was resolved that Mrs Gould's tender for stone leading in district No. 6 for 1/10 per ton cubic be accepted. A letter was read from the County Council consenting to the application for the paving in the Pontefract Road. It was resolved that the surveyor submit an estimate for paving the footpath from the Long Bridge to Haigh Park and Parson's Road to Town End, Lofthouse.

TRAMWAY FARES

Mr Lunn, in moving the minutes, called attention to the reference to the interview with Mr England with regard to tram-fares, and said perhaps it was the best interview and the most satisfactory they had ever had with the tramways men (Hear, hear). He could say with confidence that as a result they expected to have cheaper fares both for miners and workers and longer fares and better facilities for girls than there had been in the past. With regard to Windmill Lane, they had had an interview, and it was anticipated that, under Mr Gribbs' instructions, an understanding would be arrived at.

Mr Armitage asked what the work were on Bell Hill.

Mr Lunn explained that the Tramway Company were proposing to raise their track at the bottom of the hill, and they had written to the Highways Committee asking what the cost would be. He (Mr Lunn) said he thought it better that they got to know fully what the Company intended to do.

Mr Hirst said they were all pleased to learn of the interview with Mr England, and no doubt the day was not far distant when they would have a modification of tram-fares in the district. The minutes were passed.

FINANCE COMMITTEE

The Finance Committee minutes showed that the Clerk (in the absence of Guardians had considered his services in regard to an adult must in the county rate books.

Mr Lunn raised a question concerning the Clerk to the Rothwell Education Committee, he said, they spent considerable time in discussing matters relative to the education of the district as they affected the Council, but on reason why they could not get any satisfaction from the County Council was because the Clerk of Rothwell Council would not communicate direct with the Clerk of the Education Committee in the district. He (Mr Lunn) asked why it was, and added that the Education Sub-Committee were feeling a little sore on the matter.

Mr Hodgson (the Clerk) asked to what Mr Lunn referred.

Mr Lunn said it was in connection with an amount they had had from the Council for Higher education. Mr Argue (the Clerk of the Rothwell Education Committee) was the secretary for higher education in the district. A cheque from the Council had been sent to the County Council who had forwarded it to the proper quarter. Another matter was relative to the placing of a hydrant in Thorpe Council School.

Mr Chadwick said the point was this—that anything sent from the Clerk of the Council was sent to the County Hall instead of to Mr Argue, and naturally they felt he was being neglected.

Mr Dodgson replied that the reason why he had sent the cheque to the County Hall was because he had received a communication upon the same from the County Hall.

The Chairman, who is also a member of the Education Committee, said the application for grants together concerning the cheque made by Mr Argue, yet he himself had never received any answer.

Mr Dodgson said he was not aware that the matter was one which concerned Mr Argue.

The matter then dropped, and the minutes were passed.

SANITARY COMMITTEE

It was reported in the minutes of the Sanitary Committee that the Committee considered the draft agreement for the purchase of Lemonroyd from Major Calverley, and asked the Chairman to have certain alterations. It was resolved that an air shaft be erected at the top of Carlton. A petition from Carlton ratepayers was considered, asking that the flushing of the sewers should be done more frequently. It was resolved that the Committee be instructed to flush the sewers throughout Carlton. A notice was received from Hunslet Rural Council proposing to include a portion of Rothwell area in their town-planning scheme. The Committee were asked to give instructions to the inspector as to their minimum requirements when old property was reported unfit for occupation. It was resolved that the inspector notify the owners of 24 houses reported defective. The inspector reported that the house at Lofthouse Park was unfit for occupation, and unsafe. He was instructed to notify the Lofthouse Park Type Co., Ltd., that the house must not be occupied until the notice which was served in respect thereof was complied with.

In moving the minutes Mr Chadwick said the Waterworks Committee were willing to flush the sewers at Carlton if there was only more water.

Mr Lunn said he liked the idea of the Sanitary chims of this society will not be overlooked, and that the Mansion House Fund for the Distribution of Literature to the Blind (a most worthy object, as I have said already), and laudable object, as I have said already), would not divert assistance from a society which is chiefly concerned with saving the blind from unemployment, hunger, and misery.—Yours, etc.,

BARKSTON ASH FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION.

GARFORTH AND SOUTH MILFORD BOTHER

On Tuesday evening at the Station Hotel, Crossgates, the West Riding Appeals Board (Messrs Waterhouse and Beanty Hall) again had before them an appeal by Garforth W.R. against a decision of the Barkston Ash Football Association in a South Milford case.

In the first instance Garforth objected to a match standing owing to South Milford having played an ineligible man in Chilton, who, they contended, had not been properly transferred from Monk Fryston. The objection was disallowed and the deposit forfeited. An appeal was made to the West Riding Association, and it was upheld by the Appeals Board, who held that there was not sufficient time from the date of the application to complete the transfer according to the Barkston Ash rules.

South Milford asked the Board to reopen the case and submitted further evidence.

The Appeals Board did not reverse their previous decision, but they agreed that, having regard to the further evidence, the match between Garforth and South Milford should be replayed. The deposit from South Milford will be returned and the expenses of the Appeal Board will be the first charge on the "gate."

If the match is not re-played the expenses of the Appeal Board will be taken out of the deposit.

The Board recommended a re-arrangement of the Barkston Ash transfer rules.

MINERS IN THE DISTRICT CEASE WORK.

OPINION AT GARFORTH

The miners in the district, in common with the colliers in other parts of Yorkshire, have come out on strike. The dispute has arisen over the interpretation of Sir E. Clark's award as to payment for getting of the South Yorkshire Medium Wage Board. The award raised the minimum wage for colliers to one contract from 9s. 6d. to 7s. 3d. per day.

The first pay-day the men concerned found that instead of the expected extra 3s. they received less than before, the owners have interpreted the award as including the 4s per week, equal to 7½d. per day increase in the general wage, whereas the men's idea was that the 4s per cent. was additional to the minimum.

The first of the notices to expire in the district were over pay at the three pits belonging to the Garforth Colliery Company, where more than 1,200 miners are employed. The men on the afternoon shift finished on Monday night, and only went down to the pits on Tuesday morning to make up their final reckonings before the mines stopped working altogether. The rest of the colliers finished with the week's work on Wednesday afternoon, and after that the only work done was that of getting the horses out to the surface and other preparations for the stoppage, which it had been agreed between the management and the men should be completed before all the men left.

The men affected in the district number about 13,000, the principal collieries being the Waterloo Main, the Chandler's Fourth pits, the collieries at Middleton, Micklefield, Woodlesford, Garforth, and the Allerton Main pits.

There is a general expectation both among the men and the managers that the struggle will be a long and determined one. The men at Garforth, for instance, have no particular grievance of their own, with the exception of a little more than a year ago, when the reinstatement of a man who was said to have been injured in the pit, but, at the command of their union, they have cheerfully left their work to enforce the demands of the South Yorkshire miners.

At Garforth a reporter found a group of men whose notices expired on Monday night. They were taking their position very light-heartedly, and expressed themselves as quite pleased that the strike had at last begun. "Everyone agrees," said one, "that it would have been far better if the strike could have been avoided, but I don't see how it could have been, under the circumstances. Suspending the notices, as was suggested, would have done no good, for at the end of the suspension we would have just been the same. The men here, at Garforth, therefore, are glad to have got to grips quickly."

The men frankly admitted that they had no grievances of their own, and were striking purely out of sympathy, but none of them regretted the strike on that score. "It is the principle of the thing we are fighting for," said one. "If we allow the South Yorkshire men to be beaten, it will be our turn next, when we put our programme, which is now in course of preparation, before the owners. So far as the Garforth men are concerned, they are prepared to fight to the bitter end, rather than submit to unsatisfactory terms."

In any case, the prospect of a few weeks' holiday appealed to most of the men, who, during recent months, have been making very good money. Many of them already are looking forward to spending their time in angling.

Mr R. Routledge, the manager of the Garforth Collieries, said he was afraid this dispute would last for a long time. "We have been working on the best of terms with our men," he said, "and there is no feeling at all. Not to put even, of the men, I should say, really want to strike, but they have been led like sheep, and now they are out, I think they will stay.

Make your Soiled Clothes look new!

SQUIRE OF TEMPLENEWSAM AND UNEMPLOYMENT.

HON. E. L. WOOD'S SUGGESTIONS.

In the House of Commons on Tuesday Mr Edmund Harvey (Leeds) moved a resolution declaring that while trade was still good, further provision should be made for the planning of public work so as to regularise the demand for labour as well as for the organization, maintenance, and aid of training institutions, and other agencies for dealing with the problems of unemployment.

The Hon. E. L. Wood seconded the motion. He hoped Mr Hughes Samuel would be able to give the House and the country some definite information on the subject. There was, he believed, a general impression in the country that upon the whole Part 2 of the Act was working extremely well, and was a great practical success (Hear, hear). He hoped it was so. There was also, however, some uncertainty as to the figures in regard to the number of the compulsorily insured traders under this part of the Act. He had been given some figures, the accuracy of which he did not vouch for, which showed that the administrative expenses of Part 2 of the Act were about £30,000 a year, whilst the sum estimated to be paid as unemployment benefit was £300,000 a year. If these figures were approximately correct, then there seemed to be an enormous proportion of money spent in administration expenses compared with the sum distributed in benefits (Applause). It worked out at 1s. for the workman and 8d. for the official. The extension of this part of the Act could be brought about in either of two ways. It could be done by bringing more trades within the scope of compulsorily insured trades, or it could be done by extending and improving the conditions under which the non-compulsorily insured trades received the benefits of this part of the Act. If there were any doubt about the financial soundness of the compulsory side of the scheme, he thought the Government would be well advised to consider the extension by way of an enlargement of the provisions for the non-compulsorily insured trades. (Hear, hear). With regard to chronic unemployment he should be the last to minimise the importance of dealing with the problem through the child—(hear, hear)—but to deal with it through the men was unfortunately situated, if not the only way, presented undoubtedly the most pressing problem. (Hear, hear). Everyone who had studied the question was convinced that the only way in which to deal with what he might call the decasualisation of labour was by checking the influx of a certain class of labour into trades which were already overstocked with that type of worker. (Hear, hear). He had always thought it might be possible to do something in a small way, in so far as the unemployment was contributed to by discharged soldiers. He would appeal to the Government the possibility of making arrangements on a territorial basis with employers by which the latter would undertake always to keep a certain number of places in their works to be filled by discharged soldiers, and, in proportion as the employes were willing to do that, the Government should reciprocate that willingness in the shape of giving advantages by way of reduction in rating or taxation, etc. (Hear, hear). With regard to the question of graded establishments and trade unions he thought they should move very carefully in such a matter, because if they did not they would run a risk of breaking down the work of administration in the matter of selection. He would urge upon the Government seriously to consider the advisability of setting up a committee to enquire into the whole matter. (Hear, hear).

Mr Hughes Samuel (Secretary of the Local Government Board) pointed out that during the last eight years a great deal had been done by Parliament to relieve the problem of unemployment. The Labour Exchanges were finding work for 3,000 people a day on the average, 24 millions were insured against unemployment, and £300,000 a year was being paid out in unemployment benefit. The Presidents of the Board of Trade was now preparing orders for the extension of the Unemployed Insurance Act to other trades. Much had been done at the Post Office and by the Education committees to prevent juvenile workers drifting into the ranks of the inefficient, and that was a more hopeful work than any efforts to rescue adult inefficients. Labour colonies, although useful as palliatives, could not touch the mass of unemployment in times of depression. He agreed that every effort should be made by public authorities to equalise work so as to give the largest opportunities for employment when ordinary work was slack. The Road Board had a fund which would reach shortly a million pounds to be expended at a time of trade depression, and the Developments Commissioners had arranged to carry out large works of afforestation and reclamation at prices and trade conditions. They were accumulating a fund which would soon amount to a million pounds, to be released when the need arose. There were further accumulations in the hands of the Development Commissioners of nearly three million pounds for unemployment benefit, and all this money when put into circulation would advantage the whole community. The Treasury were appointing a Committee to consider whether any, and if so what, steps could be taken with a view to regularise the road demand for labour from year to year at passed Lilth Fenton, and re-crossing the Church Fenton Road marked their fox to ground on the Sidings, Ltd., Hull, and by subsequent amalgamation effected with the Jute Industries, Ltd., Hull. As the vessel left the ways she was gracefully named Admiral Craddock, by Mrs Cantwright, of Hessle.

Present at the launch and subsequent presentation were Mr Foster, managing director, and Mr. D. Foster, manager, were each presented with a handsome oak smoking cabinet. Mr C. Foster, the assistant manager, was made the recipient of a fine pipe case. Altogether about 200 employes have been at the mills. Since the firm's decision to close down, the workpeople have been good-nilly finding employment at other works. Mr E. J. Foster has found berths for a large number of the hands, and on Saturday assured them of his help at all times. The firm have given to each employee a sum of money in proportion to the wages they were receiving.

BRAMHAM MOOR HUNT SEASON CLOSED.

HUNTING IN ABERFORD DISTRICT.

Owing to the very open winter, hounds having been stopped only on three or four days, and the wet state of the country, the Boxing Day meet at Bramham on an early conclusion this year. The exceptionally dry February induced many farmers to sow corn, consequently masters of hounds have had a difficult job in preventing damage being done to the newly-sown corn.

The York and Ainsty brought their season to a close a week ago, and the Bramham Moor finished with a meet at the Cross Roads, Boroughbridge, on Tuesday, but confined themselves to woodland hunting, the ground being exceedingly soft. The meeting was most unpropitious, heavy showers of rain falling, but gradually this cleared off, and a pleasant day followed.

The season generally has been a poor scenting one, and although there were a large number of foxes in the country during the first month they have been very difficult to find on many days. Hounds have hunted on 112 days, and have killed 71 brace of foxes, and run to ground 30 brace, these figures including cub-hunting.

Three of the best runs are described below:—On January 5th they met at Butterside Bar, and ran from Cowthorpe Wood, over the York and Ainsty country, and into the Bedale country at Ripon, an 11-mile point, and the time three hours. Another good hunt was on December 17th, when they met at Riffa, and killed their fox at Gollingham Bridge, an 8¼ mile point, and the time 1 hour 35 minutes; while the third notable run was on November 24th, when they met at Arthington, found at Oyestone. While at Harewood Park, ran him to Rigton Moor, Scarcroft, Wike, Norwood Bottoms at Thorner, and on to Barwick, being given up in Black Ings amongst fresh foxes, after a hunt of 3 hours and 45 minutes' duration. The most consistent sport has been obtained from Bishop Woods, for only on rare days—and that a good many days—were they without a good gallop when they tried their covers. It would have been difficult for hounds to have hunted on many days but for the parties taken by the huntsman, Peter Farrelly, who is to lose the services of the head whip, Alf. Hoare.

The sport on Tuesday was tame. After meeting at Bramham Cross Roads, Hufferton was blank. A fox from Hazlewood was marked to ground in Black Fir Covers, and from through Hazlewood, and was marked to ground within reading for Jackdaw Crag. Another was viewed leaving Bullen Wood long before the pack got there, and hunting on a stale. Eine they took it across the Cock Beck, and were beaten on the road between Lotherton and Lead Mill. Parlington Park was blank. A fox from the Hollins crossed to Boot, Banks, and was there abandoned. Another from Becca Moor went over the York and Leeds Road, and after a turn or two of Black Fir Covers marked to ground. Newton Grove Willows, Smaws, and Oglethorpe being in succession drawn blank, a bad day's sport and a very moderate season ended.

MEET AT DEIGHTON BAR.

The day was gloriously fine when the Bramham Moor Hounds met at Deighton Bar on Friday. The Swinnow and Allerton Bywater Harriers met at Deighton Bank. A fox found at Spring Wood crossed to Heslock Field Rash, and was viewed down to Cowthorpe Village, where it was seen by a vixen, and hounds changed. Finding at Minster Hagg the pack run fast across Rudgate and headed for Tockwith Village, but soon bearing away to the right went over the Roman Road, crossed Marston and passing Bilton Hall hunted on through Bilton Wood to the Loft at Wighill. Here the fox was almost caught, but just managing to get clear, he doubled back, and running at good pace was pointing for the York Road when his strength sharply to the left into Bickerton Spring and was killed after a hunt of 25 minutes. The Wilbur Earth at Wighill was blank, as was Hall Parlet, Walton Whin and the Wighill Ings. The pack were not more successful at Thorp Arch Whin or Barnett's Wood, and returned to kennels after drawing the spinnies at Hall Orchards blank.

MEET AT BIGGIN.

The meet of the Bramham Moor Hounds on Saturday was at Biggin, and going straight to Bishop Woods they soon had a leash of foxes on hand, and one being viewed away Farrelly soon had Reynard on his back, and at a good pace hunted him up to the Selby and Cawood Light Railway. After a turn to the left and a second to the right, he crossed the line and ran to Cawood Willow Carrs.

Leaving Cawood village on the left, the pack hunted on past Paradise Lodge, over the Church Fenton Road to Meek Wood, and from it pointed to Old Park Wood, but turning to the left passed Little Fenton and headed for Bishop Woods.

Short of the Cawood and Sherburn Road, the fox bore righthanded, and going through Ash Row Wood nearly reached Sherburn Station, but now, turning again to the right, the pack Scarcroft Plantation and Reynard's Crag blank. Several gorse patches en route to Beckwithshaw were also drawn without a fox.

An outlyer, picked up near the Upper Boar Holes, ran through the covert and headed out to Carlisle Wood at Beckwithshaw was blank, and after drawing Sigton Moor without finding, hounds returned to kennels after a good day's sport, the only virtue of which being that it was not blank.

Roundhay Park will not be without its firstclass military bands this season, as arrangements have been entered into with the bands of The Scots Greys, the and Seaforth Highlanders (with pipers), and the Yorkshire Hussars.

MEET AT SWARCLIFFE HALL.

Swarcliffe Hall, the residence of Captain C. S. Greenwood, is one of the furthest meets from the kennels of the Bramham Moor Hounds, and the journey there on Monday was made by special train. Hounds began operations in the Swarcliffe Plantation and Reynard's Crag blank. Several gorse patches en route to Beckwithshaw were also drawn without a fox.

An outlyer, picked up near the Upper Boar Holes, ran through the covert and headed out to Carlisle Wood at Beckwithshaw was blank, and after drawing Sigton Moor without finding, hounds returned to kennels after a good day's sport, the only virtue of which being that it was not blank.

SHORT STORY

The train was three-quarters of an hour late, and Aunt Caroline had counted and recounted her luggage several times, besides drafting the rough copy of a letter she intended to write to the Directors of the Slowpuddle Railway on the back of one of their misleading handbills.

"Be sure and copy it legibly and neatly, Edith," she said as she handed a medley of very indistinct pencil characters to her long-suffering niece. "and post it in the General, for I am quite certain that postman forgets to clear the letter-box six times out of seven."

"Certainly, aunt," replied the girl, meekly, as she stole a furtive glance at the station clock.

Caroline Grayson had never been called "auntie" by anyone. Her personality was too angular to permit of being addressed by a diminutive. In the first place she would neither have understood it nor desired it, and yet, as years went on, she was conscious she had lost something undefinable in life.

"The train is signalled," remarked Edith, after another long pause.

"Recount my luggage," gasped Miss Grayson, as she struggled to disconnect her waterproof and her hat-box. "Two trunks, one small portmanteau, a hold-all and—what have you done with the—the umbrellas? Don't forget to see that the canary, and send me a postcard every day if it does not seem well."

Then the befuddled train steamed leisurely into view, and in another five minutes it had carried Aunt Caroline round a sharp curve.

Simultaneously, Fred Silverton appeared on the scene. He, too, felt annoyed with every official connected with the Slowpuddle Railway system for abridging what was becoming a daily walk.

He had been engaged to Edith Grayson for three years, when a kindly Fate had caused him to be transferred to Slowpuddle Bank.

Aunt Caroline's "home" was twenty-five miles away, but every year she paid a visit to Edith, who lived with her old nurse, who he was in communication on the Esplanade.

This visit was always paid on the way to stay with other relations in London, and Aunt Caroline insisted on having her canary, which Edith had to return when its owner passed through Slowpuddle on route to her "home."

It was a responsibility, and this responsibility weighed more heavily each year, for the canary did not grow any younger.

This time it grew more decrepid and limp daily, till one morning Edith found it huddled up in a corner of the cage.

"Dead as a door-nail," was Fred's verdict, and the two looked at each other in consternation.

"Aunt Caroline will never forgive me," sighed Edith. "She is always threatening to alter her will. Now it is inevitable. Whatever shall we do?"

Prospects certainly looked black. The wedding day, which, through force of circumstances, had never been fixed as yet, faded away beyond the horizon, and long years of morning teaching loomed in front of Edith.

Aunt Caroline had forgiven her for preferring to remain with her old nurse after her mother's death to becoming her unpaid companion, but the death of the veteran biped would doubtless be an unpardonable offence.

"I have an idea, Edie," exclaimed Fred. "Lend me the canary!"

"I was going to bury it," observed Edith dolefully.

After dark, Fred returned without the canary, but he took away the cage.

The next afternoon, after bank hours, he appeared for his walk, cage in hand. Within the cage was a bird.

It might have been "Dickie," resuscitated, and for a moment Edith gazed in silence, then she cried:

"What have you done?"

"Substituted a changeling," laughed Fred. "I spent all yesterday evening in trying to find a good match to the departed Dickie, and I flatter myself I have been fairly successful."

So Dickie II reigned triumphant, and as the days passed on, Edith almost forgot the fiasco.

In due course came a letter from Aunt Caroline. She would go train at Slowpuddle to-morrow, and bring the canary with you."

So Edith drove down in a ramshackle cab from the "Victoria" and Queen the best.

"Where's your canary?" she declared, "and I never noticed that block mark on its neck?"

"Perhaps it's a smut!" faltered Edith.

"Childlestick!!" retorted Aunt Caroline. "Whenever is that engagement of yours going to end?"

"When we can afford to marry," Edith ventured to suggest.

"I don't approve of it at all," snapped her aunt. "I will never encourage such folly."

Nevertheless, within a week, Edith received a cheque enclosed in several pages of dismal foreboding, good advice, and the following P.S.

"I am pleased with the improvement in the appearance of the canary."

"I can't accept it, Fred," sobbed Edith. "We cannot marry under such circumstances. I have felt deceitful and miserable ever since I handed the false canary to Aunt Caroline."

Fred laughed on his chair uneasily.

"I shall write and return the cheque and tell the truth," continued Edith firmly.

"Perhaps you are right," said Fred. "But, dear, I suppose we shall have to wait years and years, and after all it was only fun."

But Edith stuck to her guns, and after a good cry and two hours' hard work at how to word it, the cheque was posted it in the letter-box.

Not a word was heard for a month. Then came a bigger cheque, and a curt note enquiry "Was the engagement broken off?"

Of course it was not, and in reply to the cheque and query, Aunt Caroline received gratitude and an invitation to the wedding.

"I had no idea that the postman must have forgotten to clear the letter-box. Aunt Caroline always said he frequently did so," cried Edith, as she waved the cheque in front of Fred.

"Fred was sure on that point. However, like a wise man, he said nothing, and hummed a few bars of the Bridal March to hide his confiding emotions.

And the new canary sang a merry song befitting the happy occasion when Aunt Caroline ordered a new bonnet out of compliment to the bride and bridegroom.

SYMPTOMS OF FEVERS.

In the case of certain fevers the definite symptoms which mark their development are generally plainly discernible, says Dr. W. Wilson, in "Before the Doctor Comes." Thus in scarlet fever we expect to find throat affection represented. Pain in the throat, swelling of the glands, and the development of a membrane at the back of the mouth and upper part of the throat and windpipe would strongly suggest an attack of diphtheria. In measles we get all the symptoms of a severe cold in the head. Influenza, as is only too well known, begins by the development of pain in the muscles, particularly those of the small of the back and lower limbs, while severe headache and prostration accompany its onset. There is great danger incurred in attempting to fight the disease, and it has also to be borne in mind that the danger in influenza is not represented by the presence of the disease itself as much as in the sequelæ, or after-effects, which follow this annoying complaint. Such effects are found in troubles which may affect the heart, the lungs, the digestive system, or the nervous system. A safe rule for guidance in influenza is that the sooner the patient takes to bed and maintains his warmth the less likely he is to suffer from the after-effects in question.

CORRESPONDENCE.

ANOTHER SIDE OF THE QUESTION.

To the Editor.

Sir,—Like so many years I have been greatly interested in the sad lot of those who are blind, and have long had the privilege of subscribing to the funds and generally for their welfare.

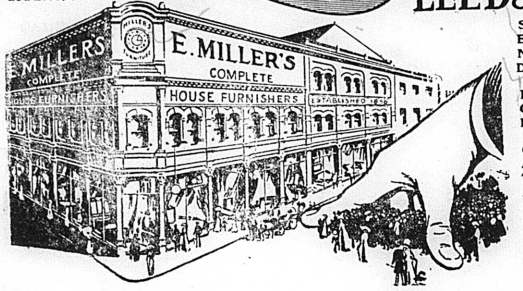
At the present moment there is a strenuous effort being made to supply blind persons with books in the Braille type. This effort is most laudable, and, I am sure, hope it may be crowned with success, but there are some aspects of the case which seem to have escaped public notice.

It was stated by Mr Wardle in the House of Commons on 19th March last that there were 34,000 blind persons in the United Kingdom.

"Out of these, 5,000 were in workhouses, 3,000 were receiving parish relief, and 7,000 were receiving pensions. Of the remainder, a considerable proportion were old people, who, by reason of the weather, a perpetual reproach to the nation at large."

If Mr Wardle's figures are, as I believe, correct, it is abundantly evident that something ought to be done, and done quickly, to meet the urgent bodily needs of the destitute blind. The first concern, in my opinion, should be to see that persons permanently raise them above their destitution by putting them to remunerative work. When we have rescued them from beggary, the workhouse, and parish relief, it will be time enough to provide for their mental needs and pleasures. It is hardly kind to offer them a book when they are asking for bread, even though that book be in Braille type, to the majority, for, as things are now, only a very small percentage of the blind can read the Braille type.

So large a number of destitute blind is our present condition, and national reproach. When this has been removed, then books for the blind have their place and their mission, but the blind man or woman who hardly knows where the next meal is to come from is in no fit frame of mind for literature, even if he can read the type.



The Association for Promoting the General Welfare of the Blind, 258, Tottenham Court Road, London, W., has for 60 years been endeavouring, with considerable success, to find employment for blind men and women; and, in spite of innumerable difficulties, a market for the sale of the goods manufactured.

It is sincerely to be hoped that the strong

LOVE'S CROSS ROADS.

CHAPTER III—(continued).

"One afternoon I was in the little drawing-room alone, when Tom Oswald entered. He seem alone. He hesitated for a minute, then he came forward, drew a chair up to my side, and sat down. I knew he meant to confide in me. I did not wish for his confidence, but I couldn't well prevent it. I was told me that I wouldn't well prevent it. He went on to say that he had to work hard and get was his but to have to work hard and get small reward for his toil. He said that all his life he had tried to be worthy of his brow, his life he had tried to be worthy of his brow, and that some years back a very unlooked-for disappointment was his. I asked him what he was talking of. He then said that he had always been led to expect that a large sum of money would be his when a very rich cousin of his died in England died. I did not suspect anything when he spoke, and asked him quite casually what was the name of his cousin. When he replied that it was Walter Coulthurst I could not help giving an astonished cry. He looked at me in amazement, and his manner changed.

"'Why, you know him—you know him!' he said.

"'Oh, no,' I answered, 'but I have heard the name.'

"I was injudicious of you to say that, Patricia," interrupted Paul.

"I couldn't help myself. Women are often injudicious, but they get on looking at me."

"Yes?"

"Then he said: 'You surprise me very much. But the name is not an ordinary one.'

"'I have nothing to tell you,' I said then, trying hard to recover myself, 'except that I have heard the name, and I even know people who hold the name; but you will forgive me, Mr. Oswald, when I repeat that affairs connected with my family cannot possibly concern you and will not be revealed to you.'

"He looked at me very sharply, then he got up and left me. That evening, after dinner, I saw him watching me, and in the same way talking in very low tones to his wife. Mrs. Oswald began also to look at me with great interest. She came up and spoke to me, but I did not give myself away. I remembered you, and Peter, and our secret. A few days went by. Again I was seated in the little drawing-room alone. I was amazed when the door was opened and Mr. Thomas Oswald came in, drew a chair forward, and said:

"'I am more frank with you, Miss Ransome, than you are with me; and I have, as a matter of fact, a very pretty little story to tell you.'

"'What is it?' I asked.

"'Well,' he said, 'it's about that cousin of mine, Walter Coulthurst, the man who should have left the bulk of his property to me. I am a comparatively poor man, and I want that money. It struck me the other night that you knew something of, or had a great deal—about the whole affair.'

"'Oh, you are mistaken,' I said.

"'Mr. Oswald shook his head. 'Women will tell lies to any extent when it suits them,' he remarked, after a pause. 'Never-theless, you have got to listen to me now, and I have a queer tale to tell. My wife and children and I came over from South Africa on purpose to investigate for ourselves the Coulthurst will. We were determined to work energetically, and not be in a hurry about anything. But after my chat with you, I re-solved to do a very simple thing, which had not occurred to me before. I would not employ lawyers, although I shall before long. My first step, however, was to go to Somerset House and just have a look at the old man's will. Well, Miss Ransome, I have done it'—his eyes shot fire as he spoke—'I have read the will,' he continued, 'and it is, in my opinion, the very strangest that has ever been put on paper.'

"'What's it like?' I asked. I had thought the best thing I could do would be to draw him on, for then I should be in a better position to guard you, Paul, and—and Peter.

"He said, 'I nearly learnt that will by heart, but the gist of it lies in this fact. My cousin has left a life interest in his very large property to a man who goes by the name of Paul Coulthurst, a distant cousin of his own. At death every penny of this great wealth is to go to Paul's only son, Peter—that is, provided I can give me your attention now, Miss Ransome)—provided he fulfils a certain condition.'

"'What is the condition?' I asked. I assure you, Paul, I was very careful then. I was knitting some stockings to send to a young friend, and I dropped a lot of stitches; but, bless you, he didn't notice that. He went on to talk about Peter and about the direc-tions were left in the will with regard to his upbringing. He was to go to Eton, then to Oxford, and after his Oxford career was fully completed—or at least before he was twenty-five years of age—he was to marry the only child of the old man's favourite niece—the girl who was but a baby at the time of the drawing up of the will; she was called Pamela.

"'Now, Miss Ransome,' he said, 'you will kindly listen very attentively, Paul, for this is the part of the will that so greatly excites Mr. Oswald. If anything should prevent this marriage, Peter Coulthurst is to be given ten thousand pounds as an absolute gift, and not another penny as much more out of the estate, and Pamela is to have a similar sum. The income from the remainder of the property is to be enjoyed by Paul Coulthurst during his lifetime, but at his death everything, except the twenty thousand pounds, goes to the Oswalds, without any re-strictions whatsoever.'

"'There,' said Mr. Oswald to me, 'that is the will. And now listen, Miss Ransome, the will is plain before me. I mean to cut-do Paul Coulthurst. I mean to have not one penny more than is absolutely necessary. But I am determined to prevent that marriage. I must get the property, if not for myself, then for my boy and my own girl. The boy, Peter, and the girl, Pamela, are never to marry. There are ways and means to prevent the consummation of such a tragedy for me and mine, and I mean to take those ways and means. I am not Tom Oswald for nothing. All his life I've dealt for nothing.'

"When Miss Patricia came to the last words she rose to her feet. 'That is precisely as I thought,' she said. 'That is what I have come to warn you about, and—oh! Paul, Paul, you will be very kind to me, won't you? I will let me see Peter face to face, I shall be better able to help you.' May I just arrive at the truth? and come and look into his eyes? Paul, you will need my help in this dangerous matter, but you must also help me with your love.'

"'Of course I will,' I said. Patricia, my dear, this is a terrible state of affairs, but the boy and girl will not be ruined. We must hurry on the marriage. We must save them at any cost.'

"Miss Patricia sat very still. After a time she said:

"'I cannot understand why I am to be kept out of this mystery. I want to be your friend, and your wife's friend. I do not wish to go back to that boarding-house and never to see you or Peter again. The Oswalds can do nothing, nothing whatever against you, now-ever kind you have been to Pamela. That he less Peter refuses to marry Pamela. That he will not do. Let me see him sometimes, Paul; give me that satisfaction. Bring him to see me at the boarding-house.'

"'But what excuse could I offer?' I said.

"'Say that I am an old friend of yours and of his mother's. That will be quite sufficient. You can easily do that.'

"Peter was much surprised that I have never mentioned you before.'

"'Young people quickly get over that kind of astonishment. They will be too much absorbed with himself just now to reflect on the feelings of others, and old people are not, for my own

KIPPAX DISTRICT EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

The monthly meeting of Kippax District Education Committee was held on Wednesday—Mr E. Parkin, J.P. (Chairman), presiding. The other members present were Messrs Arundale (Ledsham), E. Parker (Newton), A. Atack, T. Oral which were forwarded to the County Authority, had been sanctioned, and the increases to the school caretakers, Mr F. Smales (Kippax Council School), and Mr J. Lidbury (Great Preston) also received the assent of the County Authority.

Mr Watson, of the Swillington Papel School, sought the recommendation of the Committee for an increase of salary. Seeing that the committee had recommended an increase of salary to Mr Watson from £133 to £145 at a previous meeting the former resolution was agreed to.

The Clerk then explained a portion of the circular he had received from the County Hall relating to the physical defects of school children, and the appliances essential in those cases. Assistance can be given to parents in needy circumstances in the purchasing of spectacles etc., for their children, on the doctor's recommendation.

The Chairman: We have a small fund and we can use this for the same object.

The West Riding Technical Instruction Committee wrote advising the holding of a conference at some convenient centre for the purpose of discussing general questions relating to evening schools. Mr A. Atack and Mr T. Robinson are to attend as representing the Kippax Committee.

The average attendances at the Kippax evening schools during the winter has been satisfactory. The mining class held at Bowers Allerton has had a low average of attendances—only sufficient to cover expenses.

Mr Atack: It is daily there are not many of the students at the evening classes who could proceed to set for the examinations, and would it not be advisable to ask for an expression of opinion from the County Authority in relation to this.

Mr Hudson: The examinations do not appeal to the student. There are only about three who have set for the examination.

Mr Arundale: The game is not worth the candle. The only person who benefits is the teacher. Things can be made too easy for them. I do not believe in pampering.

SHERBURN PETTY SESSIONS.

MAN CHARGED WITH NEGLECTING HIS FAMILY

At Sherburn Petty Sessions yesterday the magistrates present were the Rev. B. Hemsworth (Chairman), Mr Walter Crosland, and Mr William Crosland.

A poor rate for Newthorpe of 1s. 1id. and 1old. was passed.

The Rev. E. J. Barry, rector of South Milford, applied for a stage play licence for April 19th and 20th for a play to be given at the County Council Schools. The application was granted.

John Neary, labourer, of Sherburn, was charged with having been drunk and disorderly on the 28th ult at Chapel Y rd, Sherburn. P.C. Parkinson proved the case, and said defendant was very drunk and violent. Fined 10s. and 5s. 6d. costs.

Ambrose Marshall, motor driver, Sunderland, was charged with exceeding the speed limit on the 19th ult. Defendant pleaded guilty. P.C. Holliday and Inspector Coatham said defendant had run over 32 miles per hour. Defendant said his speedometer was broken, and he did not think he was going quite so fast. Fined £1 and 7s. 6d. costs.

William Henry Charlesworth, motor driver, of Wakefield, was charged with exceeding the speed limit on the 19th ult on the Doncaster and Tadcaster Road, near South Milford. P.C. Holliday and Inspector Coatham gave evidence that defendant went at 30 miles per hour. There had been several accidents at the same place. Mr H. E. Chalker appeared for defendant, and said he had not been convicted before. Fined 10s. and 7s. 6d. costs.

William Newby Potts, labourer, Sherburn, was charged with neglecting his children on the 19th ult. Defendant pleaded not guilty. Mr Popplewell appeared for the N.S.P.C.C. The wife of defendant, Sarah Ann Potts, stated that they were married in November, 1899, and they had had 13 children. There were five living, aged 12, 11, 8, 5 years, and 1 month. He had used her cruelly throughout her married life. He had spent most away last year and came back to work at Micklefield quarries where he worked 7 months. He had £1 per week and coal allowed. He then left and worked with the threshing machine. He lived at home until about two months ago, when he went to Selby, where he got work, but she did not know what he earned. He came home at weekends. He had brought home about £4 altogether. She was confined on March 7th, and she had got the maternity benefit. She had kept the amount of money paid by her husband since September last, and the average was 4s. 11d. per week. She had 19 to keep on work. Her mother had to help her. Martha Addy, mother of Mrs Potts, stated she was a widow. She had seen Potts, her son-in-law, several times the worse for drink. She had found both food and clothes for her daughter and children during her daughter's confinements. Inspector Chas. Cooper Danby, of the N.S.P.C.C., stated he had made enquiries of the employers of defendant, and he had made £4 per week in one case and 24s. in another. After being formally charged the defendant said he had done his best for his children as far as his means would allow him. The defendant was committed for trial to the next Quarter Sessions at Wakefield.

MAINTENANCE OF A ROAD.—The much-discussed Station Road, Todcaster, was referred to again at the District Council meeting on Monday. The County Council were asked to assume responsibility for the repair of the portion from the Boston Road to the York Road, but they denied liability for the maintenance of Westgate and Kirkgate. The question was adjourned.

WETHERBY WOOD PIGEON SHOOT.—Farmers have suffered considerably from the depredations of the wood pigeons, and although late in the season a hurriedly arranged shoot took place on Saturday under the auspices of the Wetherby Chamber of Agriculture. Nearly all the landlords gave consent for their woods to be shot, and nearly every farmer who could fire a gun, and some of their friends, moved out at three o'clock, as did the gamekeepers. Few birds were seen until six o'clock, when they came to the woods in large numbers, and were received with a tremendous fusilade. Some of the big woods would have done with more guns.

NEST BOXES—HOW TO CONSTRUCT.

Though not imperative, I have always found nest-boxes more satisfactory; about 13in. square, and the same height, with solid tops, sides, and back, and meeting floor (if rats are prevalent), and the front unclothed wood, the remainder being either wire-netting, or, for preference, sacking. There or four 2in. holes in either side under the top for ventilation complete the nest-box, which can be readily constructed and at very little cost. The interior should be fine-sanded, the liquid spring supplied box; it is an excellent precaution against vermin to repeat this process once or twice during the hatching season. The box should be firmly placed on the earth, but if the building selected has a brick or boarded floor it will repay the trouble of making an earth bank to the depth of 10in. or 12in. for their accommodation.

THE NEST ITSELF

A spadeful of earth in the nest-box, patted with the hand till it assumes a slightly concave shape, is the finest nest I have used. Hay, chaff, straw, bracken, have all been used with more or less success, but the best results are usually obtain d from a plain earth nest, and undoubtedly it is the most approach to Nature. If the box has been placed on earth, as already suggested, the nest retains its moisture; but if there is a danger of its becoming very dry if the nest-box is placed on a boarded floor only.

TO DISTURB A BROODY HEN

It seems almost superfluous to draw attention to these, but it is apparent. The prolonged attendance at the nest only until it culminates in remaining there altogether; the immediate return after feeding; the disturbed condition if approached, and the general dislike of the plumage and loss of brilliancy in the comb are all signs that the hen does not to sit. When this condition is observed, place a few dummy eggs (pot eggs) under her for a space of days in order to ascertain whether this is a business, and that it is not merely a passing whim. Having done so, and found everything desirable, remove her, for preference after sunset, to the prepared nest, after most carefully dusting her with insecticide.

HOW TO USE INSECTICIDE

Insecticide is sold in the form of a powder; there is also an admirable little instrument known as the Jumbo Powder Gun for disseminating the powder. Charge the gun, and, holding the hen by the legs, head downwards, throughly force the powder through the plumage. Providing the insecticide is of good quality, this will thoroughly free the bird from all vermin. And here I would remark that I have seen more disastrous results in hatching through the verminous condition of the hen than from any other cause. Last season I was told of several deserted nests, the farmer coolly remarking that the hens were infested with vermin because the weather was too hot. Five minutes' attention and the outlay possibly of a penny would have prevented several failures in hatching. Now that gentleman will probably join the ranks of those who reiterate "Poultry don't pay."

It is a custom with many, and one to be commended, to again dust the hen with insecticide when removing her to feed about the eighteenth day. This renders her free from vermin prior to hovering her chicks, thus giving them a fair start without these pests.

THE BEST SITTERS

Every hen that becomes broody may not make a desirable sitter or a good mother. I prefer a short-legged bird of cobby size, and of quiet disposition—one that will not make a fuss when handled. You can nearly always detect them, though it is difficult to describe them on paper. The description might almost be summed up as those possessing a motherly appearance. Of breeds I prefer the Orpingtons, Wyandottes, Rocks, and Game; the Old Sussex also make excellent mothers. Dorkings, on account of the fifth toe, are very clumsy with their young. Brahmas and Cochins, though frequently broody early in the season, are generally very clumsy.

A HAREWOOD GOLDEN WEDDING—Mr and Mrs John Clarkson, of Harewood, celebrated their golden wedding on Thursday, having been married at Adel Church on April 2nd, 1864. Mr Clarkson has worked under the Lascelles family for over 50 years. Mr and Mrs Clarkson have had seven, three daughters, and ten grandchildren. They have received a number of beautiful presents in view of the celebration.

AMEY MEMORIAL.—A faculty was granted, in the York Consistory Court on Tuesday, to the Rev. John Solloway D.D., Vicar, and the churchwardens of the Parish Church of Selby, to erect a brass tablet on the north wall of the Abbey Church, and to insert stained glass in two windows of the south transept, bearing the inscriptions to the memory of the Rev. Maurice Parkin, during whose Vicarlate the Abbey was restored after the fire of 1906; and in honour of King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra, and as a memorial of Queen Victoria and Albert Prince Consort.

INDUCTION.—The Rev. Francis Albert Gumley, B.A., who has held a curacy at St. Hilda's, Middlesbrough, since 1912, having been Licensed by the Archbishop of York to the perpetual curacy of Gateforth, was instituted and inducted by the Bishop of Beverley at Gateforth Church on Saturday afternoon. The service was attended by a number of the residents of the Hambleton and Gateforth district. The Rev. T. Cheese, vicar of Brayton, was among the surpliced clergy present. The Bishop of Beverley preached the sermon. The newly appointed vicar of Gateforth, who is an Ulsterman, has held three curacies in Ireland, namely at Maryborough, Castlecomer, and Newcastle (county Down). In 1907 he became curate at St. Mary's, Halifax. He commenced to minister in the Diocese of York in 1908, when he accepted a curacy at Boston Spa, where he laboured four years. In 1912 he was appointed curate at St. Hilda's, Middlesbrough.

PARK LANES.—On Wednesday at a meeting of Leeds City Council some discussion took place upon a proposal of the Parks Committee that certain lands forming part of the Roundhay Park estate should be left open and unbuilt upon for ever. Alderman C. H. Wilson moved as an amendment that the question be referred back. He said that in addition to the 452 acres forming the Park, it was now proposed to dedicate and keep open for ever nearly 400 acres more, making close upon 800 acres altogether. He pointed out that in order to sell off building plots the Corporation had spent £40,000 in making roads, and suggested that if they sold the property proposed to be dedicated they would be able to recoup themselves. Mr A. E. Musser: What part of this land would you propose to build upon? Alderman Wilson: The whole of it. It is worth £100,000 of anybody's money. Alderman Ford seconded the amendment. Alderman Lupton, who opposed the amendment, pointed out that the part proposed to be added to the Park included the Roundhay golf course, and asked if any one proposed to build there. It that were done it would spoil the Park completely. Ultimately leave was given to the Chairman to withdraw the proposal.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT JOTTINGS.

In common with other miners in Yorkshire the men at Garforth, Micklefield, Allerton Bywater, Woodlesford, Rothwell, Bowers Allerton, and Middleton, came out on strike owing to a dispute as to the interpretation of an award, but one could discern no enthusiasm among them. Loyalty to their Union was their first consideration, and they obeyed. Could the trouble have been averted?. A miner, writing in a contemporary, says that it was "brought about by a piece of blind stupidity. We have had one case, which to any considerate man is a good illustration as to how this mischief might have been avoided if only the same means had been adopted. This was the case of the Lofthouse Colliery. The workmen there took their case into court to enforce the provision of the minimum wage award. They won their case, and have worked on comfortably ever since."

Certain members of Garforth Urban Council seem reluctant to order private streets to be made up, but they will only bring the district into disrepute if they delay any longer. If streets were kept in a sanitary condition no one would advocate the enforcement of the Private Street Works Act, but when property-owners neglect to provide even a good footpath for their tenants the Council cannot very well overlook it.

When the Garforth Council have a big bill for hospital expenses to pay they are a little sore about it, and some of them would kick against it if they could. But may they not be to blame themselves? They know perfectly well that insanitary streets are a prolific cause of ill-health, which means expense to the people both as ratepayers and as individuals. Allerton Bywater last year had the heaviest death-rate and the highest infantile mortality in the Tadcaster rural district, and Dr. Stedman, the medical officer of health, put down "the bad condition of the streets" as one of the contributing causes. The other week I quoted the experience of Sheffield, too, on this matter, and, in my opinion, the Garforth Council, or any other Council, have no right to endanger the public health by allowing bad streets to exist. If owners will not put them into proper order, the Council should do so.

Hilton in prehistoric times! Everyone with the slightest pretence to a knowledge of local history will admit that Hilton—supposed at one time to mean the Holy Town, although it has fallen sadly from grace long since—is an ancient place, but one was not quite prepared to believe that it had a prehistoric existence. A member of Templenewsam Ratepayers' Association, drawing upon a remarkable imagination, depicted the prehistoric children wandering hand-in-hand into the Primrose Valley and making posies of primroses for themselves, ere mother, alarmed by their disappearance, came out in search of them, and having deserted the plucking the primrose carpet of the valley, summoned them home. It was a delightful picture.

Unfortunately he did not describe the ladies' fashions of those days—the written record gives us a glimpse of the first effort at tailoring—so that the women of the district could have compared their creations with that of the prehistoric mother, who might exist only in imagination. Nor did he state that the prehistoric men—who probably never lived on the heights overlooking the Primrose Valley—were cultivators of the soil, because then the allotment-holders who till a part of the valley might have had a chance of comparing their efforts with those of the men of old. And the dear little prehistoric children, who probably never lived at Hilton, engaged in plucking primroses, might well make pressing day hours great with envy, seeing the valley has lost so much of its pristine beauty. Well, well, imagination does lead to the production of remarkable pictures sometimes.

Kippax Education Committee had a short discussion re evening classes at their last meeting, and it was stated that in some cases where the attendance was small, the work was not worth the cost. With that opinion I am inclined to agree. The young folks in the village set little value on education, and classes do not appeal to them, otherwise they would attend in larger numbers. No better work, however, could be undertaken if the youths and girls would show any appreciation of it, but I'm afraid that, as things are, a lot of money is absolutely thrown away. Truly, the West Riding Education Authority have met with little encouragement, and good work will never be done until attendance at evening schools is made compulsory.

Tadcaster District Council have been awarded over £1,200, the amount of the money expended in connection with Kiddal water scheme, and Garforth Council are wondering whether or not they are entitled to a share of it. The money was paid out of the common fund of the District Council, and I believe Garforth is the area which the work was begun, but it is doubtful that it is entitled to anything in view of the financial adjustment that has just taken place.

Barkston Ash and Rothwell district dairymen and cowkeepers are hedged round by laws and bye-laws, and sometimes the poor men may be pardoned for wondering if they are free agents. First of all, the cowkeeper is supposed to "keep cows," but he is not permitted to house them anywhere and anyhow; every cow-house must have a spring cleaning, and every cow must be allotted so many cubic feet of air space. Humans are supposed to have certain air spaces granted them, but they are not always fortunate enough to get it, although the cows are. This would seem to prove that cows kept for providing milk for humans are really more important than the humans, doesn't it?

Moreover, farmers are compelled to keep their cows under healthy conditions, and a certain degree of cleanliness, not always seen in humans, is demanded, so that here the cow scores again. Then, the dairymen are not allowed to adulterate milk with water, but on occasionally some of them take the risk and suffer for it. Thus it will be seen that running a dairy farm is not altogether an easy job. In Rothwell district some years ago fault was found with men with dirty hands milking cows—another hardship, but they have risen to the occasion, and now, it is said, they wash their hands before milking. Of course, this involves extra work, but the farmers are a long-suffering class.

The farmers and the farmers' men will probably have to make another concession. I observe that in New York milkmen have received orders from the Milk Commissioners to shave off their beards, which are declared to be prolific agents for the conveyance of germs, and opinion in this country may be influenced in a similar direction.

Barbers would, naturally, welcome the issuing of such an order in this country, but many farmer friends with fine beards might become active resisters. There is, however, another aspect of this important question. If it is dangerous for milkmen to have beards, is it not equally dangerous for cows to have hair, and the next order may demand the shaving of the whole bovine tribe.

Templenewsam Council, in the event of repairing Primrose Lane with ashes, are threatened with a surcharge. This is the opinion of a member of Templenewsam Ratepayers' Association who is very anxious that the road should be made possible. Why grumble at who does the work so long as the footpath is made? Primrose Lane is a private road, bordered on one side by fields and on the other by a few houses and fields, and so long as I have known it, has been in a dirty condition. If the parish "fathers" are inclined to take the risk of repairing it why should others trouble themselves about it? By and bye, it is said the road will be practically done away with when the brand new thoroughfare from Selby Road to Cross-gates Station is constructed, but that will be a little while yet.

Several months ago instructions were given as to making inquiries into the advisability of providing a town-planning scheme for Austhorpe and Scholes, but nothing further has been heard of it. No doubt Crossgates and Halton, and towards Scholes, and the Cross-gates town planning scheme takes as a small part of that ward. In order to protect the area the District Council should do better than the neighbourhood, for with all the land in that neighbourhood to build on, and it would ensure, were building operations commenced, of it being laid out on desirable lines. Hunslet Rural District Council are town-planning the larger portion of their area.

The intimation that an estimate of the cost of extending the tramway to Oulton is being got out, shows that the Tramway Co. have moved from the position they have taken up so long, and that is promising. And why should not a line to Oulton pay? And why should not a line to Oulton pay? At the new colliery 1,500 men are employed, and the greater portion of them reside in Leeds and elsewhere, many of them cycling to and from their work, so it may be assumed that a good many of these miners would patronize the tramway. Dog-lovers are being assailed by the residents with interest, and if they eventually get a tramway service they will have to thank the Rothwell and Hunslet Councils, who have decided to allow the Tramway Company to get out of their obligations.

Why not Garforth, Hunslet, and Rothwell Councils? It seems that at Knutsford, as at Garforth, Templenewsam, and Rothwell, there is a Ratepayers' Association, and at a meeting the representatives, after being described as a "set of duffers," were thanked for their services. By way of a joke it was suggested that the council should be entertained to dinner, and the idea "caught on," with the result that the function took place and was a great success. Garforth and Rothwell, in order to show their gratitude to their rulers, might very well follow suit.

At the last meeting of Templenewsam Ratepayers' Association some one suggested an excursion for the members, and the places proposed were Monk Fryston, "to see the monkeys," and Garforth Manor Farm, "to see the dairies," while one young man, with large ideas, suggested a trip to Paris. The members, however, did not seem to favour an excursion, and the question was dropped. One gentleman proposed a supper, and had the Knutsford function been known about, it is possible that a dinner for the Councillors would have been arranged then and there.

The Garforth Urban Council election result was no surprise. It was generally thought that Mr Routledge and Mr Gascoigne would be returned, Mr Breed has never before known defeat at Garforth—he has been very popular with all classes—and he has usually been returned near the top of the poll. In a measure, he was responsible for his own defeat. A recent ruling he gave on a minute dealing with a re-arrangement of the Council's staff—noted in this column at the time—was the cause of his undoing. Had it not been for that I believe he would have met with success on Saturday.

The new member is Mr E. R. Archer, who was at one time a member of the Council, so that he does not come to the work in Garforth without experience—in fact, he has served on public bodies elsewhere. Mr Yeandle, the other candidate, polled well, and it is possible that he will do better should he offer himself a third time as a candidate for Council honours.

Will the Corporation oblige Crossgates? Having settled their financial differences with Tadcaster District Council, who will get about £4,000 as the price of the old ward, the Leeds Corporation, a reader suggests, might now consider the advisability of providing a play-ground for the children of Crossgates. It is pointed out that Halton has a recreation ground and that Whitkirk has a possible chance of getting one, yet the bairns of Crossgates have not a yard of land, if the old quarry is excepted, where they may play their games. The boys may be seen playing football and cricket in the streets, and that is not desirable; in fact, it is dangerous, and the lads always run a risk of being prosecuted.

Wetherby race meeting usually attracts thousands of people from all parts of Yorkshire and beyond, and the steeplechases on Monday and Tuesday promise to provide excellent sport for all who enjoy this Eastertide outing. Capital entries have been obtained for all the races, and, as the course is one of the best in the North, patrons may depend upon seeing some exciting contests. Of course, many people go to Wetherby race meeting for the sake of the outing, having little interest in steeple-chasing, and they usually have a good time. All Barkston Ash and his wife, I suppose, will be there, and I hope they will have good weather.

AMUSEMENTS.

LEEDS EMPIRE PALACE.

At the Empire Palace this week Victoria Monks is at the head of the bill. It is a vision of a new Victoria Monks, in a charming drawing-room frock instead of a skirt to the knees, but there is the same voice and the same merry face. Her songs are good, but she gives nothing so good as "Moving Day." A clever sketch, admirably acted, is "The Girl," presented by Mr Brandon Hurst. The plot is unfolded in a humorous manner, and the anti-climax comes with startling abruptness. Mr Brandon Hurst and Mr H. B. Warne make quite the most of one of the best sketches seen here for some time. The patter of Friend and Downing would no doubt look very flat in cold print, but the utmost hilarity offered by the comedy partnership failed to send the whole "house" into convulsions. A few new jokes would be welcomed. One of the successes of the week is Alec Kendal, whose confidential urbanity appeals tremendously to the audience. Some smart and graceful trick cycling is done by the Tourbillon Troupe of lady cyclists, and Robb, Ivy, and Lynn appear in an artistic vocal scena. Made-line Rossiter is wonderfully clever with her feet.

Next week at the Empire R. G. Knowles, the famous raconteur, will give one of the leading turns, and the Four Londons will give a daring and sensational display. Others who will appear are the Real McKays, Scotland's representative juvenile artistes; Max and Lily, the tomboy and the clown; Rich Taylor, whistling ventriloquist; James Stewart, the original tramp at the piano; Thorpe and Coe, in the new comedy duologue "The 1st of the 4th"; and Fred Emney and Miss Sydney Fairbrother will submit the farce "A sister to assist 'er." Pictures on the bioscope will also be shown.

LEEDS HIPPODROME

At the Hippodrome this week the chief attraction is the revue "Go Ahead." At its opening night the company representing the great British Public among the audience is loud in his condemnation of present-day revues, jokes and comedians, and Father Time, in an endeavour to satisfy his desires, takes him back to the pre-historic days, but even the spectacle of the simple life of those days fails to appeal, so Father Time then transports him to Aldes, where, among others, the revue producer, Miss Ragtime, and others are despatched. The Great B.P. is still dissatisfied, but the closing scene, a representation of the seventh heaven of delight, attains its object. "Go-Ahead," indeed, does not belie its name, and there are numerous good songs and choruses, not to mention an abundance of good humour. Miss Roma renders her share of the "Three Beautiful Eyes." Ernest Ball takes the part of Father Time. Jimmie Leslie and Frank Hemming are ever present with their bobstering humour, and Billie Myles is also successful in the role of the British Public. In addition to the revue there are some good turns, which comedians, and Father Time, in an endeavour to satisfy his desires, takes him back to the pre-historic days, but even the spectacle of the simple life of those days fails to appeal, so Father Time then transports him to Aldes, where, among others, the revue producer, Miss Ragtime, and others are despatched. In addition to the revue there are some good turns, which include among which are Dolly Elsworthy, in character studies; Neilson Jackson, with songs; Carbrey Boys, international dancers; Linga-Singh, the mysterious Hindoo sorcerer; Parker and Price, instrumentalists; Randolph Sutton, light comedian; Rose Wylie, vocal comedienne and dancer. Hippodrome pictures will also be shown.

LEEDS QUEEN'S THEATRE.

At the Queen's Theatre this week Charles Deayoott's company are presenting the drama "The Heart Bowed Down," or "His Love for an Actress." The play, which is said to be drawn from true incidents in the life of an actress, deals with the love of two men for an idol of the stage. The one she elects to marry is disinherited in consequence, and, misfortune following, they are reduced to poverty. It is here that the rejected lover proves his loyalty, and this naturally brings about complications. Mr Alfred Maurice is good in the part of the French actor, and Miss Ruth Shepherd, as a model woman of the stage, is a popular heroine. Mr Charles Fancourt also does well as the actress's lawful husband, while the villainous roles are well sustained by Mr Victor Gordon and Miss Evie Conway.

Next week at the Queen's Theatre Mr and Mrs William Maclaren's Company will appear in Sir Francis Burnand's great play, "Proof," or "A Celebrated Case."

LEEDS CITY VARIETIES

At the City Varieties this week the best turn is that of the Two Readies, who present a roaring farce, entitled "Subdued," in which we see the wonderful transformation of a henpecked husband, who, accidentally noticing a quack advertisement, is suddenly buoyed with sufficient strength and vitality to withstand the nagging of a dozen members of the opposite sex. The ventriloquial novelty, "The Widow," contributed by Norman and Royce, is also both clever and amusing. The Sisters Lorne, who on Monday evening deputised for Coonie Mascot, are a couple of first-rate vocalists and dancers. Others appearing are Chas. F. Hill, in "Serving a Summons"; Eddie Walker, burlesque comedian; and the Rocheforts, vocalists and dancers.

Next week at the Varieties the principal turn will be that of Mart and Pep, who will present their speciality in hand balancing and tumbling feats, and Southan and Scott, described as the new American comedy duo, will introduce their latest novelty. In addition there will be a full star programme together with pictures on the Variescopes.

THEATRE DE LUXE.

At the Theatre de Luxe the "Cup Final Mystery," a very novel football film, introduced during some fine scenes taken at the Crystal Palace, was the "star" attraction for the first half of the week. "The Stolen Tapestries" reveals a clever detective story in some exciting scenes. The comedy element is unusually strong and burlesque is prominent. "What Happened to Pimple" is the latest cinema serial, and "Pimple, Gentleman Burglar" is one of the cleverest and funniest of these absurdities. "A Ride for a Bride" is very funny, and Pathe's Gazette proves most interesting. "Beauty Unadorned," a Vitagraph comedy in two reels, is a fine film for the latter part of the week.

SEQUEL TO A SALE AT WHITKIRK.

ALWOODLEY FARMER SUED.

An interesting case was heard at Otley County Court on Wednesday, before Judge Graham, in which George Henry Woodliffe, fish merchant, Moor Farm, Chapel-Allerton, claimed from Ernest Todd, farmer and cattle dealer, King Lane, Alwoodley, a sum of £20 15s. for damages for breach of warranty on the sale of a cow, or in the alternative, the like sum as damages for fraudulent misrepresentation on the sale of a cow.

Plaintiff purchased the cow in Whitkirk Auction Mart on October 6th, for £19, he being assured that it was sound and in good health. After a few days the cow, which had been very thin, developed a cough, and, found to be suffering from tuberculosis, was destroyed.

Mr Palmer submitted, first, that there was no warranty, and, secondly, that if there was a warranty there would have been no breach.

His Honour deferred judgment.

SHIRE HORSE PARADE.—There was a larger display of Shire horses at the horse parade in Selby, on Monday, when the second show was held in Park Street. The weather was very blustery, and materially interfered with the success of the gathering. The display of light horses was of an interesting character.

LIBERALISM.—On Friday evening a well-attended meeting was held in the Parish Room at Beckenham, under the auspices of the Barkston Ash Division Liberal Association. Mr H. Westwood, of Clifford, presided, and he was supported by Mr E. H. Foster, J.P., C.C. (prospective Liberal candidate), Mr Martin Harvey (President of the Barkston Ash Liberal Association), Mr F. W. Sutcliffe (Chairman of the Association), and Mr Stafford B. Whitby. Addresses were delivered by Mr Foster and Mr Whitby, and the usual vote of thanks was passed on the call of Mr Harvey, seconded by Mr Sutcliffe.

OUR GARDENS.

A Weekly Article specially Written for

Amateur Gardeners, Allotment Holders, &c.

By ALBERT CLARKE, Birkenshaw.

THE FLOWER GARDEN

The week before Easter is still looked upon as a horticultural landmark by many amateur gardeners. They "down tools" as soon as their garden is begun to look shabby in autumn, and active work is suspended until the following Good Friday. Old customs die hard, and we suppose there are gardeners who will continue as long as they live to sow their first batch of hardy annuals, plant shallots, and sow lettuce and radishes on or as near to Good Friday as possible. Easter occurs at a suitable time for seed sowing this year, and no doubt many of our readers will take advantage of the holidays and get their seeds sown. There are many kinds of hardy annuals which do not receive the amount of attention they deserve.

There is just time to sow sweet peas out-doors. The seed germinates rapidly at this time of the year, and care must be exercised to prevent birds devouring the young plants as they appear. Sparrows seem to take a mischievous delight in destroying young sweet peas, but may be kept at bay by stretching black linen thread alongside the rows. It should be fixed at such a height as to touch them as they hop towards the rows. Other annuals that may be sown now are mignonette, Shirley Poppy, Mathiola Bicornis, Candytuft, Clarkia, Calendula (Prince of Orange is very good), Eschscholtzia, Larkspur, Linum, Lupinus Nanus, Nasturtiume, Nigella, etc. Ornamental grasses are very useful for mixing with sweet peas in vases. Sow in a sunny position and thin early. Gypsophila elegans is grown for the same purpose. This does best when sown thinly in rows and kept erect by placing a few bushy twigs alongside.

HALF-HARDY ANNUALS

Stocks, asters, marigolds, scabious, tagetes, and almost all kinds of half-hardy annuals may now be sown. Use a light, sandy soil for the purpose and stand the boxes in a warm position. Shade until the seedlings appear and take every precaution to avoid allowing the soil to get dry. Those who have found it difficult to prevent stocks and asters damping off will do well to sow their seed in a cold frame. Growth will be slow, but the danger of damping will be much less. A sprinkling of powdered charcoal placed on the surface of the soil before pricking out the seedlings will do much towards preventing damping also. Antirrhinums, ageratums, and other seedlings which were sown a few weeks ago should be pricked off as soon as they are large enough to handle.

DWARF CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Many amateurs possessing a small greenhouse regretfully conclude that chrysanthemums are out of their reach because of their tall-growing habit. Under ordinary conditions the plants certainly grow too tall for the average greenhouse unless accommodation is made, but very late rooted plants may be flowered at heights varying from 2 feet to 3 feet 6 inches. Cuttings may be inserted in boxes of sandy soil and stood in cold frames. The boxes should be about six inches deep, and should be only half filled with compost. This will allow for a covering of glass to be laid on the box to prevent the cuttings drooping. Readers may remember that we said during the winter months that a covering of glass is unnecessary. The difference arises out of the fact that the cuttings are much more sappy now than they were earlier in the year. When the cuttings are rooted they should be potted on singly into 3-inch pots and returned to the cold frame. Keep the frame fairly close for a week or so after potting. When the young plants are about six inches high the tops should be pinched out to cause them to break. If large-flowered varieties are being grown, the side shoots may be reduced to one plant each plant. Decorative varieties may be allowed to carry three to a plant. Towards the middle of May a further batch of cuttings may be put in. These also should be rooted in the cold frame, but instead of dibbling them into boxes, they should be rooted singly in 3-inch pots. As soon as they are rooted the tops may be pinched off, and during July they will require repotting into 5-inch pots. The ball of soil should not be disturbed. Simply turn it out of the small pot and transfer it to the larger one without disturbing the roots. These late rooted cuttings make elegant little specimens, and the finer of several plants being grown in one pot in no way detracts from their beauty. The methods for striking cuttings, repotting into final pots, may be varied a little or so according to convenience, without appreciably affecting the result. It is important, however, that the plants whilst in the small stage should not be subjected to much coddling or they will get drawn and spindley, and thus defeat the cultivator's object. Single and decorative varieties are admirably suited for pot

TEMPLENEWSAM RATEPAYERS' ASSOCIATION.

HALTON ALLOTMENTS—A CHARITY

CONCERNING AN OLD LANE.

The monthly meeting of Templenewsam Ratepayers' Association was held on Thursday in the Assembly Room, Halton, on Friday night—the President (Mr. J. A. Armistead) presiding. There was a good attendance of members.

The President said that the last, we for- warded to the District Council the resolution passed at last meeting in regard to the repair of the footpath in Green Lane, Halton, and it had been attended to in a manner of fashion. It looked to him that it needed re-constructing, but he was betraying nothing when he stated that when the town planning scheme was sanctioned it would come under Green Lane as it now stands.

Mr. Armistead made a statement as to what he had endeavoured to secure a playground for the children of Whitkirk.

Mr. Young gave a report on the business done at the annual parish meeting, which was very poorly attended. In regard to the charity, which about £5 a year for the education of needy children, he said that for several years the money had been collected and placed in the Post Office Savings Bank now it was time for the deposit of the trustees. Two suggestions were made by the parish meeting for utilising the money, viz., the payment of the fees of poor children attending evening classes, and the provision of secondary education for one poor child.

In regard to the allotments he said that the allotment holders seemed to have a grievance owing to the accumulation of a certain sum which was more than they thought necessary. From last year there was a balance of £4, but there was an accumulated balance, and they did not get to know what it was. A resolution was passed that a statement of accounts should be submitted at next meeting of the Parish Council. As prudent business men, it was wise to keep a balance in hand, but they should determine what was a suitable balance, and then no doubt some of the fees for the benefit of the allotment-holders. They made that suggestion, and it seemed to be approved.

Mr. Cox said he had tried to get a statement and failed.

Mr. Cousins said that under the Allotment Act there should be no profit made.

Mr. Cox: There should be no loss.

Mr. Cousins said the balance in hand at one time was £13, and now it was £10. He said that it was distinctly unfair that the allotment-holders should have to pay the rents of persons who went away leaving rents unpaid. Why should they pay for debts caused by the bad management of the Council?

The President: We, as representing the Association, did our best to get a clear statement.

Mr. Cousins: This does not affect the ratepayers at all.

The President said that was so.

Mr. Young: I asked if there were any unpaid allotment rents.

The President: There were two.

Mr. Young said they were not bad debts. By dividing upon a reasonable balance sum-thing might be done for the allotment-holders. Mr. Firth said he suggested that something might be done in the way of giving a bonus to allotment-holders who paid their rents by a certain date.

Mr. Firth said it had been suggested that the money should be spent in prizes, but if they were done the best gardeners would get them. A bonus would, he thought, be a better plan.

The matter then dropped.

Mr. Firth called attention to the unsatisfactory condition of Primrose Lane, Halton. He had no doubt that in prehistoric days it was a most charming spot, and one could imagine the children going to the Valley to gather primroses. One could, in fact, imagine a great deal about that lane. If they examined it now they could imagine a glacier had run down it, for there were great holes full of water, and folks had to wade through it. If was the most neglected piece of property in the whole district, and that should not be the case. The land in the manner and the District Council had nothing to do with it, and the Parish Council had less, and it might belong to the ratepayers. The Parish Council put ashes on it and raised the footpath 5 or 6 inches, but since then it had become a ledge, and if any one succeeded in balancing himself on it he would get along 7 distance, and then fall into a puddle. (Laughter). It was a disgrace to someone, and something should be done to put the lane in proper order.

Mr. Firth said the Parish Council were to repair the path, but there was a difficulty in getting ashes.

Mr. Cox: The Parish Council have no right to do it, and if the auditor knows he will surcharge them.

The President said that Primrose Lane would be included in the town-planning scheme, and there would be a new road running from the Selby highway.

Mr. Cox: When?

The President said that the District Council were waiting for certain details before putting the scheme into operation.

Mr. Cox said it could not be a private road, because on-half of it had been repaired by the District Council, who had laid a kerb part of the way.

It was pointed out that the road was a private road up to the point where it had been repaired.

Mr. Cousins said the road had been ashed, but Whitkirk is destroyed by traction engine traffic.

Mr. Cox: If the British Council repair it and are surcharged they will be surprised. They have no right to do it.

No resolution was moved on the question.

The hon. sec. (Mr Wilkinson) said he had approached the Rev. R. Tuner about being waiters on to Whitkirk Cemetery, along with the trustees for the Nonconformist part of the graveyard, and he said that as soon as they were prepared to do anything he would go into it with them.

Mr. Nowell said that he did not know if any of the residents of Hedyshon Lane, Whitkirk, had had the same experience as he had had, but for the last two months the water supply at his house had been unsatisfactory. The force had diminished by half.

The Hon. Sec. said he thought it would get it reminded if he communicated with the Local Authority.

Intense excitement has been aroused in Vancouver over the murder of Mrs Charles Millard, a ticket agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Only after bloodhounds had been put on the trail was the body discovered hacked to pieces and then burned in a furnace. Charred human bones and rings were found when the detectives search the ashes. From bloodstains in the dining-room the dogs led the police down the stairway to the basement, where the remains were discovered. A seventeen-year-old Chinese servant has confessed to the murder. He says that she found fault with him during breakfast, and that he struck her with a chair and choked her to death.

GARFORTH GAS CO.'S ENTERPRISE.

PROPOSED GAS SUPPLY FOR BARWICK.

At a meeting of Barwick-in-Elmet Council on Monday night—Mr Arthur Booth presiding—letters was received from Mr Dymaine, secretary of the Garforth Gas Co., asking them to receive a deputation of the directors in connection with a proposal to give a gas supply to Barwick. It said that the Company's mains were now within a reasonable distance of Barwick, and the directors believed that a good many of the residents would be willing to take a supply of gas if it were available.

Mr Dymaine, who was accompanied by three of his directors, said that the gas main was now laid to Lawreak, and the Company desired to carry it forward to give a supply to Barwick. They proposed to charge 3s. 6d. to ordinary consumers and 4s. 2d. to slot meter consumers, being the same terms on which they supplied Aberford. They wanted to keep the feeling of the Barwick representatives on the matter. The Council would not, of course, incur any liability unless they adopted public lighting.

It was further stated that the Company intended to make a canvass of Barwick in order to ascertain if it was worth their while carrying the main forward.

The Chairman asked if gas would be supplied for cookers.

Mr Dymaine: Yes.

Mr Pemberton said if it meter rent was charged in addition to the gas.

Mr Dymaine: The charge is 2s per quarter. No charge, however, is made for slot meters.

Mr Pemberton: Do you make any charge for connections.

A director said that they did so only in cases where houses were a long distance from the main.

Mr Dymaine, in answer to questions, said the directors would be prepared to pipe a house, and he should advise them to put three lights in.

Mr Pemberton asked if they were prepared to supply Scholes.

A director said they could not supply Scholes without the consent of Crossgates Gas Co., of whose area it was, but he did not think there would be any difficulty about that.

Mr Wright proposed that the Council favourably consider the question of a gas supply to Barwick and that they give them all the support they could.

Mr Rayner seconded, and this was adopted.

A LEDSTONE APPEAL CASE.

COURT DISMISSES APPLICATION

In the Court of Criminal Appeal, on Monday, before the Lord Chief Justice, Mr Justice Bankes and Mr Justice Avory, John William Sherwood, who was sentenced at the West Riding Sessions to six months' hard labour for receiving stolen property, applied for leave to appeal against his conviction and sentence.

The Lord Chief Justice, in dealing with the appeal, said that the booking-office of the North-Eastern Railway at Ledstone was broken into on January 4th last, and two parcels were stolen. On the same day in the afternoon a man named Parker, who pleaded guilty subsequently to breaking into the office, went up to a policeman in York, and handed him a bundle containing the stolen property. The policeman was handling close by, and he was arrested. Upon him were found two boots and a scarf, part of the stolen property. Appellant's explanation was that he was walking along the road to his brother's house about four miles from Newton when he met the man Parker. The latter told him that if he could sell some property it would be all right, and the appellant said he would, and walked back with Parker to York, which was about 20 miles.

His Lordship said there was no reason why the Court should interfere with the jury's finding of conviction, and the appeal would be dismissed.

HUNSLET BOARD OF GUARDIANS.

A NEW MEMBER

An election took place in West Hunslet on Monday to fill the vacancy on the Hunslet Board of Guardians, caused by the death of Mr Edward Green. There were two candidates before the electors, Mr Henry I. Pulford, joiner, of Dawson Road, nominated by the Liberals, and Mr. Chas. R. Refson, goods checker, Government Terrace, representing the Labour party. The Conservatives did not bring forward a candidate.

The Labour party endeavoured to infuse some life into the contest, and made no secret of their desire to get one back at the local Liberals for their attitude in relation to the municipal strike.

The counting of the votes took place at the offices of the Guardians in Glasshouse Street, Hunslet, and Mr F. W. Mee was the returning officer.

The poll was declared as follows:—Pulford, 1514; Refson, 495.

MR LANE FOX IN PARLIAMENT.

QUESTIONS IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS

In the House of Commons on Monday Mr Lane Fox asked if the President of the Board of Agriculture would say what was the principle the Board in estimating the sale economic rent for a cottage which had cost £200 to build to yield interest at rate of one and a half per cent. after deducting rates, management, and repairs.

Mr Runciman: The general practice in the Commissioners of Woods has been to charge a rent equal to from 4½ to 5 per cent. per annum on the capital expended in building them, the rents taking into account the local circumstances and the class of house, but having always regard to the interests of the tenants also. In the case of purchase by sitting tenants a lower rate than 4½ per cent. per annum has, however, been sanctioned by the Treasury, but suitable cases, in which 3 per cent. represent interest and repairs, are seldom arising.

Mr Lane Fox asked the Secretary to the Treasury whether the rent regulations of the Insurance Commissioners prohibiting the making of Friendly Societies' premises were to be maintained, or were the Commissioners considering its withdrawal.

Mr Wedgwood Benn (Lord of the Treasury): As I have frequently stated in answer to questions, a proposal to restrict the use of licensed premises by Approved Societies in England at the end of the year was recently discussed by the Advisory Committee, but no regulations have been made or laid before Parliament, and no question of withdrawing them therefore arises, and in no case will such regulations be made without previous consultation with societies.

INDIGNATION AT SCHOLES.

N.E.R. CO. AND CHEAPER FARES.

Some time ago Barwick-in-Elmet Council made application to the N.E.R. Co. for the granting of cheap afternoon fares between Scholes and Leeds, a boon now enjoyed by Crossgates and Garforth residents. Considerable correspondence took place between the Council and the Company, to whom a petition signed by the residents was presented. At a meeting of the Council on Monday night the following letter was read from the N.E.R. Co.:

"Beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter as the 3rd inst., and in reply can only say that the Company have not seen their way as yet to issue cheap tickets to Leeds, as has been suggested by your Council.

Mr Wardham (Selby) said that he desired to protest against the action of the N.E.R. Co., inasmuch they had ridged the Council on. When they applied for a reduction on the fares they were long enough before they got anything tangible, and when they wrote again they said they were considering the question of Scholes along with other places, and they gave them to infer that they were considering it with a view to a reduction being granted. The N.E.R. Co. were a wealthy body, and he did not suppose they would take care of anything that was said there, but the people ought to know something about the way in which they had treated the parish. If they granted cheaper fares to Crossgates and Garforth they should grant them to Scholes. They should not give them not only to Scholes but to Thorney and other places. He did not think the Company had treated them fairly. They issued advertisements and put no nice views to induce people to come to the country, and what did they do when they got them?

The Chairman (Mr Booth):Put the fares up. (Laughter).

Mr Needham: I don't think they have met our views in a fair and straightforward way. If they had said they were considering about increasing the fares we should not have troubled to have got the petition up.

The Chairman: Can we do anything more in the matter?

Mr Needham: I don't think so, but I feel sore about the way they have led us on.

The Chairman suggested that the Clerk might write, saying the Council were the letter were definite, and ask them to keep the question before them.

Mr Pemberton: The best thing to do would be to ask for a better train service.

The Chairman: That has nothing to do with the question.

After further discussion the matter was allowed to drop.

CROSSGATES AND BARWICK CHARITIES.

NEW SCHEME TO BE PREPARED.

Crossgates, and its surroundings, having formed part of the parish of Barwick-in-Elmet, it still has an interest in the charities belonging to the ancient township, the chief of which is the poor estate. One of the trustees, Mr Needham, has been pressing for a new scheme to be prepared for the administration of the charities. A letter was received from the Board of Charity Commissioners, and it was suggested by the Council of Scholes (or Meadhall) that they should submit a scheme. Upon this Mr Needham said he considered a conference would be necessary, seeing that as it was the poor of the parish which would be considered, a conference with them would be desirable. He thought that they were doing right in asking for a new scheme, and he moved that the Clerk write to the Board of Charity Commissioners, London.

Mr Wright seconded, but Mr Otter said he thought it was for the Council to say how the money should be distributed. Under the present scheme the money was being allowed to accumulate. Any suggestions which might be made to the Commissioners should be made in the presence of the people, which would be impossible at present. He thought that they were doing right in asking for a new scheme, seeing that as it was the poor of the parish which would be considered, a conference with them would be desirable

MR. THOS. ISON,
OCULIST and AURIST.
THIS INSTITUTION WAS ESTABLISHED in 1871. The system of working is the provision of a patient paying a small periodical fee whilst under treatment, and they may, therefore, justly expect to receive the prompt care and attention which in many instances in charitable institutions is too often omitted. The treatment is of a mild and safe character, without operation or the use of Ear Drums, Ear Cornets or other mechanical or painful appliances. Another advantage appertaining to this dispensary is its system of treatment by correspondence, by which sufferers at long distances, and in isolated positions can have the advantage of Mr ISON'S advice and remedies forwarded through the post. No case is undertaken unless there be a reasonable hope of cure, or benefit to the patient.
Attendance at Leeds every Tuesday, from 10 to 5
On Alternate Saturdays, April 18 & May 2.
Hours 10 to 5. Other days by appointment.
TREATMENT WITHOUT OPERATION, ARTIFICIAL HUMAN EYES fitted from 15s.
SPECTACLES and EYE PRESERVERS, 3/6 to 10/6. Gold Frames from 20s.
Special Notice.—There are many cases of failing eyesight which can be speedily remedied by mild local treatment, thus dispensing with the use of glasses.

LEADING ARTICLE.

In almost every department of local administration expenditure is steadily rising, and ratepayers who have followed the course of events for the last decade seem to accept the increase as inevitable. It is perfectly true that in certain directions administrators could not have checked the advance, which has come about owing to circum-stances over which they have no control, but is the burden being placed on the proper shoulders? Education, which is a national service, is becoming increasingly costly, owing to the provision of proper school accommodation, the higher payments of teachers, who do not think their services are adequately remunerated, and the institution of school medical inspection, etc., and the people, as ratepayers in given areas, have a large share of the burden to bear. It might be impossible to make the charge for education the same for all parts of the country, because the facilities provided are so very different, but there should be some similarity between local charges. This can only be obtained by the State assuming responsibility for a larger share of the expenditure. In regard to highways, too, the burdens are unfairly placed. Motor traffic—motor cars, motor waggons, etc.—have within the last few years completely changed the methods of road maintenance, involving huge sums of money, and it is grossly unjust that the people of any area should have to meet charges for which they are in nowise responsible. Our roads were never constructed for such traffic, and, although the new users are taxed to some extent, it is obvious that a change in the system must be brought about if the ordinary ratepayers are to be treated at all fairly. People who own motor waggons may state that it is all for the good of trade, but it must not be overlooked that these new machines are being utilized to bring greater profits to individuals, and the question is whether they are made to pay for that. This, too, is a national question. Fortunately, the cost of the administration of the Poor Law is not going up, despite the fact that greater generosity is being displayed to the deserving poor by the Boards of Guardians. This fact is often lost sight of., While the old age pension has kept thousands of persons off the relief list, and thus saved money to the ratepayers, it has also resulted in numerous Boards of Guardians increasing their scale of relief, and this, of course, has meant more money. With this no one has any complaint to find, but how much would old age pensions have saved the ratepayers had the old scales been adhered to? Nevertheless, with better treatment of the poor, expenditure is not going up, and in some Unions it has decreased. Pauper lunatics have, however, become a heavier charge on the rates, due, we are told, to the higher cost of living. It is possible that these unfortunate people are not housed under the most economical conditions—that simpler and cheaper means of dealing with them might be adopted, but without special knowledge it would be foolish for anyone to dogmatize on this question. Owing to the pressure of business life, vicious habits, and physical inefficiency, the army of lunatics is growing—a lamentable fact, and as people would soon condemn any reversion to the methods of the old days, when the mentally afflicted were practically allowed to take care of themselves, the price for keeping them apart from the community must be met. Ratepayers generally could exercise an effective check on expenditure by evincing a little more interest in public affairs, because that would tend to make their representatives more vigilant in regard to money matters. The case of Leeds might be cited in illustration of this, but it is unnecessary, as in connection with almost every authority instances could be given of useless or extravagant expenditure.

The granting of specified hours of leisure to persons engaged in agricultural pursuits is admittedly a question of some difficulty, because the work on a farm requires attention at certain times, otherwise loss may result to farmers. But it is not a problem that is incapable of solution. In nearly every industry men have one half-holiday a week, but in farming it is not the recognised custom to give any such concession, and, so far as this particular district is concerned, the demand for it is not so keen as it is in some parts of the country. The older men, accustomed all their lives to work week in week out without a vacation, are perhaps not inclined to trouble themselves about securing more leisure, but the younger generation, with the example of the townsman ever before them, have a different outlook. Farmers are very conservative in their ideas and methods, they frequently fail to recognise the great forces that are at work, and in some parts of the country, owing to an utter lack of sympathy, a great cleavage has come about between the two classes engaged in the tilling of the soil. How soon the same feeling will dominate the whole of the agricultural population remains to be seen, but movements have a remarkable way of spreading, and when no effort is made to grapple with them, in order to maintain existing good or introduce immense mischief is done. Every often agriculturists blame people for pointing out certain things which are obvious to everybody but themselves, and accuse them of fomenting agitation, but observers simply state what they discern, and very often their deductions are accurate. It is a sign of the times surely when a conference of farmers has been called by a Unionist candidate for Parliament to consider the question of a half-holiday for farm hands. He recognises that the men are entitled to greater leisure, and he says that it would be much better for the farmers themselves to come to some arrangement, instead of allowing the Legislature to step in and interfere between master and man. Probably when making this statement he had the Shops Act in mind. Now this Act would not have been necessary—it should not have been necessary—had all shopkeepers been actuated by unselfish aims, but they declined to give a concession to employers until they were compelled, and the good employer suffered along with the selfish employer. It may be argued that no parallel exists between shop-keeping and farming, but the principle underlying the half-holiday movement is the same. Certain shops are open six days of the week, but the employees have conceded to them by legislation one half-holiday per week, and any attempt at interference with this right would bring punishment on offenders. Might not the half-holiday for the great agricultural community be settled on somewhat similar lines? Then there would be no interruption of the work on the farm, nor would any of the animals belonging to the agriculturist suffer. What about harvest times? Surely it is not impossible for human ingenuity to devise an arrangement suitable to these particular periods. On some farms the men are granted a half-holiday per week—leisure which they may utilize in the establishment of their own gardens or in recreation, and the fact that some agriculturists have made the concession absolutely shatters the argument that it is impossible to grant holidays to farm hands. Farmers have recently been counselled by their friends to make life in the country more attractive for young men, so that a supply of efficient labour may be maintained, and they would be consulting their own interests if they attempted to make their arrangements meet the needs of the times.

DRINK.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Jim Dixon, farmer, of Adel, was summoned for drunkenness at Adel on March 30th. P.C. Wilson said that owing to the man's condition he had to take him home. Defendant was fined 2s. 6d. and costs.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT NEWS.

In the second round of the Leeds and District N.U. Cup Competition Rothwell will play Normanton at Normanton on Saturday.

West Riding Quarter Sessions.—At the Quarter Sessions at Wakefield on Monday the local magistrates present were:—Ald. Isaac C. Brooksbank and Mr S. Brooksbank (Tadcaster), Dr J. E. Eddison (Adel), and Mr J. W. Morkill (Chairman of the Skyrack Bench).

Skyrack Petty Sessions.—The magistrates at the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday were Mr J. W. Morkill (in the chair), Mr R. D. Kitson, Mrs. Hudson, Mr C. Holliday, and Mr E. Parkin. Before commencing the business the Chairman announced that the next court would be held a week next Tuesday owing to the Easter holidays.

Patent list compiled by John E. Walsh, chartered patent agents, of 25, Royal Exchange, Boar Lane, Leeds, and Crossley Street, Halifax. Applications:—Louis S. Webb, Scarborough, improvements in dart boards; William E. Clark, Doncaster, improvements in mudguards for motor cars and other vehicles. Patents accepted —W. Crowther, Birkenshaw, an improved apparatus for washing, sterilising, drying, and mangling; J. W. Hyde, Bradley, and O. Wichtern, Lewis, an improved internal combustion turbine, applicable also as a steam turbine; J. Brunet, Paris, France, and H. Wood, Tadcaster, an improved apparatus for drying sewage sludge, etc.

Conservatism.—Mr Cecil Lister-Kaye, prospective Unionist candidate for the Normanton Division, addressed a meeting on Thursday night in the Mission Room, New Stanningley. Major H. C. B. Wilson presided. Mr Lister-Kaye dealt at some length with the Home Rule question. Before he concluded, he said he would be given to the people of Ulster, and all that the Unionists asked was that the question should be decided once and for all by the country. Some events in the past week had been most surprising, and one could not regard them as very creditable. The Government were still in office, and many people must be disappointed that they were remaining there at the sacrifice of their honour. The Minister for War had resigned his office, but it was difficult to see why he should do so any more than any other member of the rest of the Government. Col. Seely had to a certain extent been made a scapegoat inside the Cabinet. During the last day or two there had been, either more or less, a split in the Cabinet. Sir Edward Grey's speech, although it was most conciliatory in tone, it seemed that all the concessions were expected to come from the Tory party.

Serious Charge Dismissed.—The magistrates at the West Riding Quarter Sessions at Wakefield on Tuesday were occupied for several hours in hearing a charge against Joseph Ackroyd, a member of the West Riding Police Force, stationed at Barley, who was indicted for having feloniously assaulted a widow named Gertrude Annie Wilde, a domestic servant in the employ of Mr and Mrs Cawthorne, of Rutland House, Adel, on the 30th of January last, and with Mr Harold Newell defended. It was alleged that on the afternoon of February 30th, during the absence of her mistress and master, and in the absence of her husband, who was sold of Mrs Wilson, kissed her twice, and indecently assaulted her. The defence was a total denial. It was stated that on the afternoon in question Ackroyd, who was in plain clothes, called at the house going to Mr Cawthorne's house, and being suspicious, he followed, but lost sight of him. Seeing Mrs Wilson at the back door, he asked her if a man had seen a man. At first she denied having seen a man, but afterwards admitted that it was her sweetheart. The defendant never went into the house. Supt. Barraclough gave Ackroyd an excellent character. He had been in the police force twenty-two years, and there had been no complaint against him. The prisoner was found not guilty on the charge, but convicted of assault, and was, we understand, stationed at Rothwell some years ago.

Strike and Transformation.—Writing about the coal strike a reporter stated:—Considered aesthetically for a moment, the transforming influence of the strike upon the mining villages which cluster around the larger centres in Yorkshire, may appear to have created a very desirable improvement in rural conditions. The well to do characteristic mining community as is housed at Rothwell, to Stanley and Woodlesford, which are reluctantly yielding their natural beauties to the passion for pushing the bounds of the earth's crust, and one is reminded of a ditty in vogue many years ago which ended with the reiterated assurance that every day would be Sunday by-and-by. Perhaps it would not be more correct to suggest that the residents distributed over a considerable tract of industrial Yorkshire are experiencing weeks of Saturdays. In Rothwell alone over 2,000 colliers are taking an enforced rest, with more as less good grace, but with practically no conviction as to the propriety of their situation. At Woodlesford upwards of 1,500 men are spending an unusually long period above ground, while at Stanley about another 500 miners have leisure thrust upon them. Undeniably, despite the attractive weather, the bulk of these would be extremely glad to get the word to go back to the pits, for whilst gardening, football, cycling, and walking are pursuits eminently pleasing, strike pay by no means approaches the pecuniary fruits of labour.

The miners on strike in the Rothwell district received their first week's strike pay on Thursday.

Mr Abraham Armitage, stone merchant, of Lofthouse, was on the Grand Jury at the Quarter Sessions at Wakefield.

SALVATION ARMY.—On Sunday night Captain White, who has had charge of the local corps of the Salvation Army, "farewelled." The captain is ill-health, and will take a rest before proceeding to her new corps. Until the time of her removal, Lieutenant Blackwell will take charge. On Monday evening Major Lewis addressed a large congregation at a special service.

BOWLING.—Playing in the junior section of the Oulton and District Billiard League Rothwell Mechanics' Institute were defeated by Hopetown Rowing Room by 137 points on Saturday night at Rothwell. The total scores were Hopetown 1502, Rothwell 1403. Details (Rothwell team's first):—C. Berry (6) v A Gregory 100, H. Taylor 78 v. I. Ward 100, C. Wardly 36 v. F. Shaw 100, H Priestley 45 v R Booth 100, G Pawson 100 v H Bowser 40, and W Jepson 75 v W. Benton 100.

ALLERTON BYWATER

At a meeting of the Executive of the Northern Counties' Athletic Association in Manchester on Saturday night a permit was given to hold Allerton Bywater C.C. sports on July 25th.

OPPOSITION FOR SIR J. C. RICKETT.—At an I.L.P. meeting at Moorthorpe, on Sunday, Sir J. Compton Rickett, the member for the Osgoldcross Division, was severely criticised with regard to his attitude on the Minimum Wage Act, the London Electricity Bill, and other measures. Mr J. S. Potts said Sir Joseph was one of the country's millionaires, and immediately a man became a millionaire he became a danger to the State. The meeting confirmed the recommendation of the Goole Labour Council that the division be contested by Labour man at the next election. The selection of the candidate will probably be made from the following:—Mr J. S. Potts and Mr L. Burn, member of the Hemsworth Rural Council, and Mr J. Hough, of Featherstone.

IN THE RIVER.—An open verdict was returned at an inquest held on Monday at Castleford on James Adams (31), barman, Whitelock Street, Leeds, whose body was recovered from the river on Saturday. John Henry Adams, a brother, said that at times deceased was rather depressed, and only this year attempted to do away with himself by taking poison. Witness knew of nothing that should have induced him to commit suicide. His brother left his lodgings in Leeds on the 7th of last month. A juryman, named Thomas Johnson, was fined 10s. by the Coroner for failing to answer to his name. Johnson turned up later, and explained that he forgot all about the inquest, and when he remembered it he was "flabbergasted." The Coroner said that, under the circumstances, the fine would be remitted.

BARWICK

The annual meeting of Barwick-in-Elmet Parish Council will be held on Monday night, the 20th inst.

PARISH COUNCIL.—On Monday night a meeting of the Barwick Parish Council was held at Scholes, and the members present were Messrs A Booth (in the chair), R Wright, F Lumb, and A Robshaw (Barwick). J. M. Rayner, W. Weatherill, E. Pemberton, and — Needham (Scholes), with the Clerk (Mr H. R. Clark). The Chairman said he thanked the Council for the letter of sympathy they sent him in his illness. It was only at such times that one got to know who recognised what one did.—In regard to a telephone call office at Barwick, the contract manager wrote stating he was unable to give a decision on the matter, as negotiations were still in progress.

Mr Joseph Beeton, of Carlton, left estate valued at £1,191.

CROSSGATES

Whooping cough, mumps, and chickenpox are prevalent in Crossgates.

FARMERS' CLUB.—On Thursday night at the Station Hotel, Crossgates, a meeting of Crossgates and District Farmers' Club will be held, and an address on "Co-operation among farmers" will be delivered by Mr Liddle, of the Agricultural Organisation Society. See advert.

PROPERTY SALE.—Messrs W. B. Hindle, Son, and Lewis offered for sale by auction on Tuesday evening at the Station Hotel, Crossgates, the freehold dwelling-house, No. 12, Hollyshaw Lane, Whitkirk. The property was withdrawn from the sale at £385, but was afterwards sold to the last bidder for £400. The net rental was £27 per annum. Messrs Beeston, Son, and Muldrew acted on behalf of the vendor.

BAPTIST FELLOWSHIP.—On Tuesday evening at the weekly meeting of the Baptist Fellowship at the Hall, Whitkirk—Mr F. Hartop presiding—seven interesting papers on various subjects were read by Mr Crabtree, of Whitkirk, editor of the portfolio. The subjects dealt with were women's suffrage, the lack of the social element in Church life, the value of debates, recreation, etc., and the subsequent discussion was taken part in by Mr Hey, Mr Cousson was taken part in by Mr Hey, Mr Mills, Mr Hartop, Mr Morgan, Cox, Armistead, Rodgers, and others. A vote of thanks was passed to Mr Crabtree on the motion of Mr Jackson, seconded by Mr Elliott.

GARFORTH

PRESENTATION.—Mr Thomas Cook, a native of Garforth, who is well-known in the village, sailed on Thursday for Western Australia, where he will work on a Wesleyan missionary. On the night before a send-off meeting was held in the Wesleyan School at Long Preston, and the chairman (Mr A. Horrocks), on behalf of the Wesleyan trustees and Foothball Club, presented Mr Cook with a purse containing upwards of £8. He said that if Providence should call him back he was sure they would give him a hearty welcome. Mr Cook, in reply, said he would like to say how heartily that he would ever to lose the people there. He had always taken an interest in sports, and a man could not be a Christian in the field of sport, as well as in the Church. A Christianity was not worth a crack of the fingers.

PICTURE HOUSE.—At this attractive place of amusement the principal film on the first three nights of the week were "The House of Temperance" and "Jack of the Navy." On each of the week the bills pictures will be "The deathstone of India" and "The flames in the ashes." For the holidays the management have secured splendid programmes, and crowded houses should be the rule. On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday a splendid two-part drama of North-West Canada, entitled "The Trail of the Hypnotic Ring," should be an exciting one, and two other outstanding films will be "The Rattlesnake," a thrilling production, and "Pimple's Kissing Cup." On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday "The Prisoner of the Harem," an Oriental drama, will be screened, and it will depict struggles between a fioness and a man, and between a lioness and a tiger. Another good film—"The mysterious airship"—is promised, being with other pictures. For times and prices see advert

IN DARKNESS.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Thomas Benson, milk dealer, of Headingley, was summoned for driving a vehicle at Garforth without a light. P.C. Gough stated that he stopped the defendant on the Leeds and Selby Road at Garforth about 11 p.m. on Thursday, March 26th.—A fine of 5s and costs was imposed.

FOOTBALL.—Garforth White Rose will be represented in the Barkston Ash Cup final at Selby on Saturday by the following team:—Goal, Gent; backs, Bulmer and Atack; half-backs, Gibson, Pickersgill, and Prime (capt.); forwards, Hardcastle, Sedgwick, Pickersgill, E. Birch, and Howson. The same team will play Monk Fryston on Easter Monday.

THE STRIKE.—In the Garforth, Micklefield, and other collieries in the Leeds district, says a writer, the miners came out very reluctantly, holding the view that the strike should either have been confined to the South Yorkshire coalfield, where the trouble arose, or that a general strike should have been proclaimed in order to force a settlement. Some anxiety is also felt as to the continuance of strike pay should the dispute be prolonged.

THE LATE MR WILLIAM MOSBY.—A correspondent writes us as follows:—Mr William Mosby was born 80 years ago in a cottage that stood near Station Fee, Garforth, and he spent the first 47 years of his life in the village, so that he was well-known to all the old inhabitants, by whom he was held in the highest esteem. He then left Garforth, and went to Leeds, where he spent the next 30 years. Here, too, he was well-known, and greatly respected. He made many life-long friends by his geniality and kindness. He remained in Leeds until the death of his wife three years ago, and then returned to Garforth to reside with his sister, Mrs Hannah, of Moorhouse Farm. Mr Mosby was a devoted and consistent member of the Wesleyan Methodist Society for 63 years, a class leader for a good number of years, and a local preacher in the Leeds Brunswick Hill Circuit for 53 years, and he sometimes preached in two or three other circuits. He was a good, sound preacher, and well appreciated wherever he went. During the last three years he was obliged to curtail his services owing to his rapidly failing eyesight and advancing years, but whenever he was able it was his joy and pleasure to either preach or lead the Bible Class or Society Class. He was blessed with a retentive memory, and was remarkable for his knowledge of the Bible and the Wesleyan hymn book and poetry, and his mental powers remained unimpaired to the last. It was his one great object to minister to the spiritual needs of the people, and no man took greater delight in the services of God's house. As a leader of the Bible Class, he was greatly liked by the young people, and his influence over them was remarkable. He was loved by old and young alike, and no man was more highly esteemed and honoured by the ministers and local preachers of the Richmond Hill Circuit.

HALTON

Halton bowlers have joined Leeds and District Association, and have been placed in a division with Chapeltown, North Leeds, and Gipton in the Mayley Trophy Competition.

"A SAD CASE."—At the Hitchin Police Court on Tuesday Marjorie Vaughan, of Halton, wife of a Birmingham schoolmaster, was charged with the theft of jewellery while acting as a nurse to Mrs Stephenson, wife of the head master of the Hitchin Boys' School. Herts. Prisoner left on March 25th, and a quantity of jewellery was missed. Prisoner was arrested by Inspector Wright, of Leeds. She gave the name of Nurse Jones, and owned to taking a gold ring on a sudden impulse, and expressed regret. While at Letchworth prisoner stated she was the daughter of a well-known doctor. She was married only last year. Describing it as a sad case, the Magistrate placed her on probation for a year.

KIPPAX

RATES.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday eighteen persons of Kippax were summoned by the Kippax overseers for non-payment of the poor rate. The usual orders were made.

PARISH CHURCH.—The sacred cantata "From Olivet to Calvary" was given in the church on Sunday. Sermons suitable to the season were preached by the Vicar, Rev. E. B. Smith, to crowded congregations.

MINERS' STRIKE.—The miners are seemingly enjoying their enforced holiday. Gardening operations are in full swing, and the men who possess gardens are now very busy. Others take long cycle runs, and the third topics of the day—possibly the chief topics of the day—are the Home Rule question and the settlement of the strike.

KIPPAX CYCLING CLUBS.—The Kippax C.C. opens its season with an interview to Selby on Good Friday with the Castleford Wheelers, leaving headquarters at 10 a.m. Mr R. Pleas has been re-elected hon. secretary for the seventh successive year. The president, Mr J. Varley, has also been re-elected, and he hopes for a good muster on Friday. An innovation is the appointment of captain for each run, the first arrival at the meeting place being so honoured. The Kippax Road Club also open their season with an interview to Selby on Good Friday. Mr E. Knowles is hon. secretary of the club of 40 members, and a second team is to be formed. The club is one of the early fixtures.

LIBERAL ASSOCIATION.—A largely-attended meeting was held on the Cross Hill, Kippax, on Tuesday—Mr Atack presiding—and the principal speaker was Mr A. V. Reginald, of Castleford, who dealt with the Ulster problem, and the rumour which had gained currency amongst armament shares and ordinary shares at Rotherham that the Liberal member is reported to hold. Sir Joseph is to meet a deputation to consider this matter, and Kippax appointed two representatives—Mr W. Farrar and Mr J. W. Mee—to attend the meeting on Tuesday. Several questions were put to the speaker, and one, "Was the present member a director in the Coal Company at Rotherham?" was answered in the negative. A public meeting is to be held shortly at which the deputation is expected to give a report of the interview with the Member.

MISHAP ON THE RAILWAY.—A light engine, travelling on the joint Midland and Lancashire and Yorkshire Railways, on Tuesday afternoon, fouled the points at Methley Junction, and ran off the line, blocking the Lancashire and Yorkshire metals in both directions. The Doncaster to Leeds train, due at Leeds at 2.52, was then due to pass the spot, and the signals had already been dropped to admit it into the section, but by the prompt measures taken these were reversed, and the train brought to an abrupt stop just as it reached the signal post. The train was taken on the Great Northern line, via Ardsley, to Central Station. Traffic on the Midland line between Leeds and Sheffield was continued with delays, but it was not until a couple of hours later that the derailed engine was replaced on the metals, and traffic on the Lancashire and Yorkshire line resumed.

OULTON

Mr Thomas Waide, paper merchant, of Oulton, was on the Grand Jury at the Quarter Sessions at Wakefield.

Oulton bowlers are to compete for the Preston Shield, and they have been placed in a division with Hunslet, Morley, Hothers, Alfords, Oulton still also make a bid for the Morley Trophy.

DRINK.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday George Bean, greengrocer, of Leeds, was charged with having been drunk and whilst in charge of a horse and conveyance in Wakefield Road, Oulton. The horse was put up at a public-house, while Bean was taken to the lock-up. A fine of 10s. and costs was imposed.—James Marks, an engineer, of Leeds, who was with Bean, was charged with drunkenness. It was stated by P.C. Coldwell that Marks was leaning against the landau. A fine of 2s. 6d. and costs was imposed.

ROUNDHAY

HOCKEY.—On Saturday afternoon Roundhay and Ben Rhydding had a match, and chiefly through the efforts of Edwards, at centre half, Roundhay had the better of matters in the initial stages. Later, Ben Rhydding got into their stride, and Barker twice netted. In the second half the home team again pressed, but Barker scored his third goal for Ben Rhydding. From the succeeding bully, Roundhay entered the visitors' circle, and Jamieson netted. Shortly afterwards the same player further increased the visitors' lead, and from the next bully Roundhay's hay drew level through Jamieson. Towards the close Cochrane placed Ben Rhydding in front again. Result—Ben Rhydding 4 goals, Roundhay 3 goals.

A SOLICITOR'S AFFAIRS.—The first meeting of the creditors of Henry John Paletthorpe, solicitor, 7, Greek Street, Leeds, and "Cuckoostone," Lidgett Park Road, Roundhay, has been held in the Official Receiver's Offices, Leeds. The summary of the debtor's statement of affairs showed gross liabilities of £11,012, expected to rank at £2,000. The debtor has no assets; the deficiency, therefore, is £2,097. The difference between the gross liabilities and the figure at which they are expected to rank is represented by three creditors being fully secured for £1,495. The causes of failure alleged by the debtor were "Loss of income from profession since 1906, and alimony to wife and cost of separation Loss." No resolutions were passed at the meeting.

STOURTON

UNUSUAL PROSECUTION.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Chas. James Cousson, confectioner, of Hunslet, was summoned for failing to notify the vaccination of a child. Mary Jane Sedman, a vaccination officer to the Hunslet Union, proved the offence. Defendant said his wife had been to the doctor's five times before she obtained a certificate. The bench imposed a fine of 5s. and costs. Defendant: I shall not pay it. The Chairman (Mr J. W. Morkill): Or seven days.—Defendant: Very good, sir.

SHADWELL

FAILING TO REGISTER A CLUB.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday James Frederick White, chemist, of Leeds, was summoned for failing to register a club during January, according to the regulations. Defendant was the secretary of the Moortown Golf Club. Supt. Symonds stated that on examining the register of clubs on March 2nd he found that the Moortown Golf Club had not been registered in the usual way. Mr Curtis, who appeared for the defendant, said at the beginning of the season a new secretary was elected, and he did not know that it was his duty to make the return. The club, he said, was altogether different from a drinking club, and the offence was practically a technical one. The chairman (Mr J. W. Morkill) said the defendant had laid himself open to a heavy penalty, but he was willing to view the offence as a technical one. The summons was dismissed on payment of costs.

WOODLESFORD

On Saturday Woodlesford All Saints' football team were defeated by Leeds St. Paul's by three goals to one.

BERRIES.—A successful smoking concert promoted by the Pride of Woodlesford Lodge of the Leeds and District Order of Druids, was held in the Midland Hotel, Woodlesford, on Saturday night—Mr C. P. Wilson, of Swillington, presiding. An enjoyable programme of songs was gone through, those contributing numerous items including Mr Ben Britton and Mr Walters. The accompanist was Mr Ernest Hill, of Castleford. During the evening two presentations were made by Bros. Taylor and Hodgkinson, of Leeds, to Bros. Doggett and Coombs, of Woodlesford. Bro. Doggett's presentation consisted of a gold medal for long and meritorious service in the Order, and that of Bro. Coombs was in the form of a gold medal, a cold prize awarded to members of the Order in the district, for work in the initiating members. The first prize, by the by-laws, is a silver medal, the medal being won by Bro. Coombs with 1,000 points. A splendid evening's entertainment was brought to a close with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

The Earl of Londesborough has been re-elected president of the Selby Londesborough Cricket Club.

FARM WORKERS' PROTEST.—The housing conditions at Hambleton have become the subject of strong feeling amongst the local farm labourers, and at a meeting held in the village, under the auspices of the Workers' Union, a resolution has been passed protesting against the present state of things, and urging the immediate putting into operation at Hambleton of the Government's rural housing scheme. The resolution also points out that the half the houses in the village are owned by the farmers.

A FARMER'S MISTAKE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Harry Crisp, farmer, of Alwoodley, was summoned for failing to deliver up a swine movement licence. P.C. Otter stated that he called upon the defendant on March 21st, but did not receive the licence as required, and he said that he had been unable to do so as it was late when he got home from the auction mart. Defendant told the magistrates that he had acted quite under a misapprehension as he was of the opinion that he was allowed seven days to deliver up the licence. A fine of 2s. 6d., or, in default, 7 days.

LIBERAL MEETING.—Under the auspices of the Barkston Ash Liberal Association a meeting was held at the National Schools, Monk Fryston, on Monday evening, Mr Martin Harvey (President of the Division Association), was announced as Chairman, but he was prevented from being present, and Mr F. W. Sutcliffe (Chairman of the Association) presided. The meeting was addressed by Mr E. H. Foster, J.P. (prospective candidate for the Division), and by also answered a number of questions. On the motion of Mr Dixon, seconded by Mr Roberts, a cordial vote of thanks was passed to Mr Foster and the Chairman.

A VERY SAD AFFAIR.

MURDER AND SUICIDE AT STOURTON.

MOTHER AND BABY'S TRAGIC END.

IN LODGINGS AT ROTHWELL—GIRL'S LETTER

CORONER AND THE WITNESSES.

Whilst walking along the towing path of the canal at Stourton on Monday afternoon two young men found a woman's body and a newborn baby lying in the hedge-bottom just beyond Thwaite Mill. Attached to the hat was a note written in pencil. Taking their find to the police sergeant's wife at Stourton, the young men returned to the spot, where they were subsequently joined by the police, and grappling operations were commenced. About 4.30 the body of an infant was recovered from the water and ten minutes later that of a young woman was also brought to the surface. The bodies were removed to the mortuary at Thwaite Gate to await identification and a Coroner's inquest. A clue was afforded the police by the note, on the outside of which was written "Take it to Mr A. E. Nash, 4, Pepper Street, New Pepper Road, Leeds."

Later the bodies were identified as those of Lilian Nash, aged seventeen, and her infant child.

An inquest was held in the Stourton Wesleyan Sunday School on Tuesday afternoon by the West Riding Coroner (Mr P. E. Maitland).

The father of the dead woman, August Francis Nash, a miner, of 4, Pepper Street, Hunslet, Leeds, who is a widower, identified the bodies, and stated that deceased had not been living at home of late, she having left about seven weeks ago. Up to the time of leaving she had been employed by a firm of rag merchants at Hunslet. Her child, which was about seven months old, was born at the house in Pepper Street on September 16th. It was called Mary Jane. The father described the child as "a bonny baby," strapping young woman. He had heard that she was to be married two weeks after Easter to a young man named Thomas William Fox, of Rothwell, who was the father of the child.

The Coroner: Why did she leave your house?

Witness: Because she was of a quarrelsome nature.

The Coroner: Who has she quarrelled with?

Witness: With me, as a result of her staying out late at night.

Nash explained that she had left home three times in all, but had returned on the first two occasions. He had kept an open door for her, should she wish to return.

The Coroner: Her leaving home was not on account of the baby? You did not say the baby was in the way.

Witness: No. I offered to take the baby as mine.

Continuing, the father said he had not seen her since three weeks ago when she came to his house one Saturday. He asked her to come home again, but she said she would rather return to Rothwell, where she was in lodgings.

The Coroner: How did she live at Rothwell?

Witness: She was working somewhere, and she had never asked me for any money.

The Coroner: Was she receiving any money from the father?

Witness: Yes, on an order of the Leeds Police Court, she received 3s. 6d. per week. At first she did not receive the money until Fox had been sent to prison.

The Foreman of the jury: How many other children have you?

Witness: Five.

The Foreman: Has this girl ever appealed to you for help?

Witness: No, never.

The Foreman: She must have been a clever girl.

William Padler, miner, 2, Church Street, Rothwell, said the young women had been lodging with him and his wife for about six weeks. She was to pay eight shillings per week, but had only paid one full week's board, and that was last week. She had been working of late with an electric light bulb polishing firm in South Accommodation Road. His wife looked after the baby while she was away from the house. The baby was very healthy. The young woman had been introduced to him by his (witness's) sister, who knew the girl.

The Coroner: Did she never tell your wife why she left home?

Witness: No. The morning she left home she seemed very jolly. Her young man, who was his nephew, had often been to his house.

The Coroner: Perhaps that accounts for her leaving?

Witness: I took her partly so that she would not be turned out into the street. The young man appeared recently friendly with the girl.

Padler said he had never heard them talk of getting married. The young woman was very fond of the baby. On Monday morning she became downstairs about 9.30, dressed in her best clothes and ready to go out. He asked her where she was going, and she replied that she was going to her brother's to get her board paid, and the baby made up. She had no breakfast, and, after his wife had fed the baby, she went out, taking the child with her. He had no idea what time she would return, but he had expected her home to tea. When she left the house she made towards Leeds. He did not hear about the affair until about six o'clock in the night, when a police officer had drowned herself and the baby in the canal. He told the father of the child. It seemed to take it hard when he heard of it.

The Coroner: It has been mentioned about a marriage.

Witness: I have never heard that.

The Foreman: Has she ever said anything about unpleasantness at home?

Witness: No, I have heard nothing.

The Coroner: You have never pressed her for money?

Witness: No.

Mrs Emma Bedford, miner, 5, Lower Goslem, Pontefract Road, Stourton, said the deceased was his niece. He could not say why she had left her father's house. She called on o'clock on Monday morning she came to his house with the baby. She did not say she wanted anything. She left the house between one o'clock and two o'clock. She had nothing to eat. As she left she said she was going to her father's house. She appeared quite cheerful. That was the last she saw of her. The girl's mother had been dead nine years. She said she had been carried out of her lodgings on Saturday night, and that she had been taken back until she had sent a letter to her father asking him to come and fetch her back.

The father, recalled, said he received a note by hand on Sunday night. It said that where she was living they were "stalled" of her, and he had to be up at Rothwell by ten o'clock on Monday morning. The note, said the father, was delivered by a little girl who lived a few doors away in Pepper Street. The message was just scrawled on a piece of paper and there was no envelope. He took no notice of it.

The Coroner: Why?

Witness: Because I thought it was no use.

The Coroner: What do you mean?

Witness: I thought she would not stay when she did come home.

Padler was recalled and questioned regarding the note received by the father.

The Coroner: You said she was in arrears with her money, but you said she had never been pressed for it?

Witness: No, I never pressed her for it.

The Coroner: Did you turn her out on Saturday night?

Witness: No, it is a falsehood, and I can bring witnesses who would prove that she slept under my roof both on Saturday and Sunday night.

The Coroner: Was she sent out and then allowed to come back?

Witness: No, never.

The Coroner: You know she had written to her father that you were "stalled" of her and farms. H.M. Inspector of Mines for Yorkshire, that she had been taken back until she wrote a letter to her father.

Witness: It is untrue.

Continuing with the evidence of Bedford, the Coroner asked if she had asked him for any thing?

Witness replied she had not.

The Coroner: Did you not think she was on the ground?

Witness: No, although I told her she could have half of what was in the house.

The Foreman: Did she make any complaint beyond the note?

Witness: No. If I thought she had been going to drown herself I would not have let her go.

Answering further questions, witness said she seemed quite cheerful and asked his wife to put on the trifling machine, which played for about half an hour. Before she went she wrote a note, and he, in fun, asked her if she was writing a love letter, and she replied "No fear." She said she had no work as they were slack. She said she would come again.

Thomas William Fox, pit pony driver, the father of the child, who was in custody at Leeds in lodgings with his mother in Butcher Lane, Rothwell. He had been keeping company with the young woman since a year last Christmas. He had been paying for the child, and had been sent to prison for a month for non-payment, but had been bailed out at the end of the first week. Since then he had paid regularly, the last payment being made on Saturday. Nothing had been said about their getting married, neither had anything been said about the future of the baby. Last Wednesday the deceased girl had asked his mother to take the baby, but his mother said she could not take it. Witness last saw her at her lodgings on Sunday at dinner-time. He had been keeping company with her lately, but they had been on speaking terms.

The Foreman: Did she ever make any complaint to you about her parents?

Witness: No.

The Foreman: Has she ever asked you for any money?

Witness: No, but I have heard her say that her brother had made up her board-money.

The Coroner: Weren't you surprised when she came to live at Rothwell?

Witness: Yes, you asked her why, but she would not say.

Albert Stocks, is labourer at the Steel Works, Hunslet, and lived at the Yorkshire Street, Thwaite Gate, Stourton, deposed to finding the hat and fur-boa at 1.45 on Monday afternoon. After talking the things to the police-sergeant's house he went to the canal bank where they assisted in grappling. The body of the infant was found about 4.30, and ten minutes later the body of the young woman was secured about two yards away.

The Coroner read the note which was as follows:—

Dear Father,—I write these few lines to tell you that Lily and her baby is in the water, and it is from Thomas William Fox, who said he was going to have my baby, so I thought I would have him myself. So good bye from Lily, a kiss from baby and Lily to father, mother, and all.

The Coroner added that several crosses followed, and then "Goodbye." A book, in which the payments by the father of the child had been kept was found on the body of the girl, along with the maintenance order.

In summing up, the Coroner said it appeared from the evidence that the witnesses could tell them more if they would. With the exception of the story of the man Stocks, who found the things on the bank and helped in the recovery of the bodies, the evidence of the witnesses did not corroborate the other. He thought by the letter the girl had left and the evidence, that she had nowhere to rest her head, so to speak, and did not know what to do. As to the turning up of the body, they could not tell who was speaking the truth. The man Padler was emphatic in his details although the father and Mrs Bedford were coming to the point were "stalled" of her, but she had gone into a restless state. It was a great pity, as the mother appeared a fine girl, and the child looked a fine baby. It was a very sad case. She had evidently got into such a state that she could not see her way. In the case of the baby it was a case of murder against the mother; while in the case of herself it was suicide. He thought the jury should return a verdict of wilful murder against the mother and also a verdict of suicide whilst of unsound mind.

The Foreman agreed, and said he wished it to be recorded that it was a most distressing case. The other jury were sorry that so fine a young woman and child should be brought to this end.

As the witnesses left the Coroner's Court, the young man Fox was "booed" and "hissed" by a crowd of women.

The Wharfedale Rural Council on Friday resolved to call a conference to give assistance in respect of the water supply and drainage of a garden suburb scheme which is being developed at Cookridge.

REFORMATORY BOYS IN TROUBLE.—Two boys named George Ralph Hankins and John Leslie Horrocks were charged at Otley on Friday with stealing 23 packets of chocolate from an automatic machine at Otley on April 1st. When the lads were arrested they stated that they were from the Brambope Branch of the National Children's Home, but it was subsequently found that they were from the reformatory at Addlestone. The automatic machine, it was said, belonged to Mr T. Coates, confectioner, Otley, and was in front of his shop. Shortly after five in the morning the machine was found to have been broken open, and inquiries elicited the fact that the two lads had been seen in the neighbourhood. They were subsequently traced by means of the empty chocolate packets to Denton, about five miles from Otley. They then admitted the offence, and expressed their regret. Both boys were handed over to the care of the Reformatory authorities, who undertook to punish them.

THE KING AND A METHLEY HERO.

Mr Thomas William Embleton, of The Collars, Methley, the only survivor of the brave men who took part in the rescue work at the Oaks Colliery disaster in 1866, on Monday received a pleasant surprise when Mr T. H. Mottram, H.M. Inspector of Mines for Yorkshire, called upon him with the information that he had been charged by the Home Secretary to deliver to Mr Embleton:—

I am commanded by His Majesty the King to tell you that he has read with interest an account of the recent unveiling of a memorial at your home, and took part in the work of rescue after the great disaster at the Oaks Colliery in 1866, and of the presence of yourself, the only survivor of the rescuers, at the ceremony. The King was very glad to learn that, though nearly fifty years have passed since the disaster, you are still in health and strength, and to see, from the welcome given to you by the people of Yorkshire present, that the brave action by which you helped to save, at the risk of your own life, the only man left alive of the first party of rescuers is still remembered and honoured by them. The King sends you his congratulations, and trusts that you may yet live many years, enjoying the esteem of all who know you.

The Selby Guardians on Monday decided not to send delegates to the Yorkshire Poor Law Conference.

On Saturday afternoon Tadcaster had a League match with York St. Paul's, and it was drawn, no goals being scored.

Two freehold cottages situate in Westbourne Terrace, Selby, were on Tuesday night sold by public auction, and realised £415.

The Selby Rural Council on Monday, at their monthly meeting, unanimously resolved to adopt the Local Government Board model by-laws for the whole of their district.

The Lighter Knot, of York, while being towed by the Chinaman for the city on Tuesday afternoon collided with the Selby toll bridge and damaged the Selby pile.

On Saturday in connection with Wetherby Golf Club the competition for the monthly medal took place, and the result was:—H. Heap, 94, 20, 74; S. P. Parkinson, 84, 9, 75; J. P. Heap, 103, 24, 79.

A remarkable instance of longevity in a country parish is provided by the village of Carlton, near Selby. One resident is over ninety years old, and there are two who are more than ninety years old, and twenty-four have attained seventy-five and twenty-one have attained seventy years.

WETHERBY WATER CO.—The annual meeting of the Wetherby and District Water Company was held at Leeds, under the chairmanship of Mr A. H. Mc'ey-Thompson. The report showed that the profit for the year was £1,140 17s. 8d., as against £1,050 for the previous year. After payment of interest on debentures and Lloyds Bonds, a credit balance remained of £495 10s. 5d., and this sum had been mainly devoted towards providing a new boiler and making good wards providing a new boiler and making good wards the effects of the frost. The report was adopted, and Messrs T. G. Mylchreest and A. G. Lupton were re-elected directors.

PROPOSED NEW SCHOOLS.—A Sub-Committee of the West Riding Education Committee visited Selby on Tuesday and had a conference with the local Elementary Education Committee on the question of providing new school accommodation. As we announced a short time ago, the managers and trustees of the Wesleyan Schools at Selby are not prepared to make the required improvements to the school buildings. They are, however, prepared to convey the West Riding authority by granting them the loan of the buildings until new schools can be erected. At Tuesday's conference it was decided to recommend the Council to recommend the erection and provision of two schools—one in the Shipyard district, and one in the Paxley Road district, on the opposite side of the railway. The second scheme related to one large school to accommodate 750 scholars. The cost, roughly, would be upwards of £10,000. While no definite decision was arrived at with reference to the schools, immediate steps are to be taken to provide new schools at Selby.

NO SUNDAY CLOSING.—A well-attended meeting of all sections of the licensed trade in Yorkshire was held in Leeds on Tuesday, for the purpose of protesting against the Sunday Closing Bills now before Parliament. Major R. W. Gleadow, chairman of the Yorkshire Brewers' Association, was in the chair, and among the speakers was Mr W. Sykes (Tadcaster). A resolution was passed protesting against the Sunday Closing Bill, and expressing the opinion that "the existing facilities and conditions barely meet public requirements at the present day, and are not abused; and that if there is any spontaneous demand for change on the part of the public it is overwhelmingly for greater rather than for diminished accommodation." Further resolutions appealing to those interested to do all in their power to protest against and prevent these Bills becoming law, and pledging those present to bring the question of Sunday closing to the immediate notice of the members of their associations, and to utilise all available resources to prevent the suggested measures becoming law, were also adopted.

LORD HELMSLEY'S VIEWS.—On Monday evening an anti-Home Rule meeting was held at Thirsk, and a letter was read from Lord Helmsley, M.P., stating that owing to his Parliamentary duties, he could not attend. "I hope," he says, "the meeting will be a great success and will express its condemning this Government, which, for party purposes, and for purely party exigencies, has not scrupled to bring our country face to face with the gravest dangers and disasters."

FOOTBALL JOTTINGS

BARKSTON ASH CUP FINAL.

On Saturday afternoon the final for the Barkston Ash Challenge Cup will be played between Garforth W.R. and Cawood United at Selby, and the match will probably attract a good gathering of spectators. The ground is not a central one, but the Committee believe they will get a better "gate" at Selby than elsewhere, and I hope that their view will be justified. Cawood, the majority of whose players hail from Selby, are a robust, vigorous team, who have figured prominently in the Competition before, and they are no doubt full of confidence as to the outcome of the contest on Saturday. They, at any rate, present the stiffest hurdle set before Garforth, and, playing before what will be a crowd of well-wishers, they will not unlikely endeavour to show their best form. Garforth, who have dished Cawood before, have never won the Challenge Cup, and they are very anxious to secure it. They have assuredly a fine opportunity of winning the trophy, and if they can re-produce the form they exhibited against Aberford they will probably succeed. Of course, Cawood will offer a stouter resistance than Aberford, and the Garforthians may have a very hard tussle, but if they are on their best behaviour the probability is that the trophy will go to Garforth.

DEIGHTON SHIELD.—A DECISION.

The decision of the Appeals Board in the Garforth v South Milford case is a somewhat singular one, and will give satisfaction to nobody. It will be remembered that they sustained Garforth's appeal against the decision of the Barkston Ash Executive, and held that Chilton was ineligible, there not being sufficient time to complete his transfer from Monk Fryston to South Milford. This was the crux of the question. Was the transfer legal or illegal? They said that it did not comply with the Barkston Ash rules. South Milford were dissatisfied with this decision, and they asked the Appeals Board to reopen the case and hear further evidence, and they did so. They did not reverse their first decision, but they ordered the match to be replayed. In my opinion they have failed to please everybody, and thereby have failed to please anybody. When they had to decide whether Chilton was entitled to play with Milford, they, in effect, declared that Milford should have been dismissed, and the match allowed to stand, leaving South Milford to meet Wetherby in the circuit. If the appeal was a good one, the South Milford should have been dealt with according to the rules, inasmuch as the Board's decision was based on the Barkston Ash rules. It is rather funny for them to uphold their first decision, and then order the match to be replayed. South Milford, by this ruling, have another chance, but they are so dissatisfied with the decision that it is said they will not re-play the match. They may, how ever, change their minds.

On Sunday afternoon Wetherby had an enjoyable tich with Harrogate Methodists, and the Linton were delighted to hear goals to nil.

Milford Juniors' Church Institute played Rothwell Old Boys on Saturday afternoon, and in Allerton were in high goals scoring mood.

Rowland, Oulton and Garforth W.R. tried conclusions of the Garforthians scored victory by six goals to nil.

Stanley Park, who are a promising team, had a tough tich with Hunslet, and the latter were defeated by two goals to one.

Playing in the Workshops Competition, Middle's Gallery overcame H. R. Tower's Workers by goal to nil.

Cawood United played Acomb W.M.C. in the York League (Riley Smith Cup Competition on Saturday. Cawood won by two goals to nil.

ROTHWELL W.R. DEFEATED.

Rothwell White Rose were defeated at East Ardsley on Saturday, by two goals to nothing. Unfortunately Halton were without the services of Hayes, Speight, Lister, and Collis, their places being filled by good substitutes. Halton kicked off and immediately took up the attack, Caine just failing to ground. From the ensuing scrimmage Kenney secured, and, after a grand break away, passed to Todd, who knocked in with fine force at his mercy. It was pleasing to note that the Halton forwards, after their lapse of form, played with old-time vigour, and repeatedly got the ball out of the centre. From a cross kick by Mosby, Hartley followed up smartly and grounded under the posts, Burton failing at goal. At half-time the score was Halton a goal 1 try (5 pts.); Jack Lane, nil. Halton had done exceedingly well in the first half considering they had been playing a lad short, and Mc-Killerby coming into the team mode the side a full strength. On resuming the Halton backs posse d brilliantly, but the splendid defence of the ex-champions could not be pierced. Green dribbled finely for three quarters the length of the field, and Kenney completed the effort with a grand try under the posts, Burton failing at goal. The Lamers were not yet done with, however, for after a fine passing round, Norton scored a try, Fisher just failing to add the extra points. Sandy, who, by the way, was playing his first match, and defended well all through the game, dropped up the ball, and after a fine run, gave the centre pose to A. Killerby, who just failed to notch a try. The Lamers tried desperately to pull the game out of the fire, but W. Killerby, who had played a fine passing game, repeatedly gained applause by his plucky display of tackling. Halton won by 1 goal, 2 tries (8 pts.), to Jack Lane 1 goal, 1 try (5 pts.).

FUNERAL OF A SHADWELL LADY.

THE LATE MRS SAGAR-MUSGRAVE.

The remains of the late Mrs Sagar Musgrave, widow of the late Mr John Musgrave Sagar-Musgrave, of Red Hill, Shadwell, were interred on Monday afternoon at Bramley Church, Leeds, the officiating clergy being the Rev. J. P. Whitworth (vicar of Thorner), the Rev. A. Chadwick (vicar of Shadwell), and the Rev. F. Wolfe (vicar of Bramley).

The funeral cortege, preceded by the hearse drawn by four horses, left Red Hall about one o'clock, proceeding direct through the streets of Leeds to Bramley. The service in the church was fully choral, the hymns being "Rock of Ages" and "O God our help in ages past," and appropriate music was played on the organ by Mr G. F. Crosland, the selections comprising Gullmant's March, "O rest in the Lord," the Dead March in "Saul," and Chopin's Funeral March. The principal mourners were Colonel Sagar Musgrave, Mr E. H. Sagar-Musgrave (Brodsdale), Mr R. M. Sagar-Musgrave, Mr W. N. Sagar-Musgrave, Mr C. L. Sagar-Musgrave, Mr Walter Matthews, and Mr E. O. Simpson, with the male servants of the house-hold, Messrs Hyde and Preston.

Among others present were the Hon. G. H. Jackson, representing Lord Allerton, Mr Rupert Tinsley, Mr W. Musgrave Wilkinson, Mr R H Wilkinson, Sir William Nussey, Mr J. C. Sykes, Mr F. W. Tennant, Mr William Brotherick, Mr J. A. Stott, and other members of the staff of Sagar-Musgrave, Mrs. Castlehouse, and Mr R. H. Wilkinson, Mrs Nussey, Mr Charles Ryder, and Mr H. S. Childe sent their carriages. The remains were enclosed in a metallic coffin encased in finely polished oak with solid brass mountings, inscribed simply, "Clara Kate Sagar-Musgrave; Born September 4, 1840; died April 2, 1914." They were interred in the family vault on the south side of the church, the coffin being filled with narcissi and other beautiful white flowers.

A profusion of choice floral emblems were received during the day, including bedding-in tokens of affection from immediate members of the family, tributes from Mrs Brodsdale (Goldsborough), Mrs Herbfoots, Lord Allerton and Mrs Tinsley, Sir William and Lady Nussey, Mr and Mrs Morkill, the Rev. F. B. and Mrs Manners, Mrs Harper and Mrs Beddard, Mr R. H. Wilkinson, Mrs Chadwick, the Misses Nussey, Messrs Cooper Street, Leeds; Jones and Co., Mr J. Sykes, Mr and Mrs Armitage-Ledgard, Mr and Mrs C. F. Ryder, Mr and Mrs J. A. Stott, Mr and Mrs E. O. Simpson, Mr and Mrs Appleton (Rawdon House), Mr and Mrs Hutchinson (Red Hill), the staff of Musgrave and Sagar, the servants at Red Hall, and the servants at Oakhurst.

TRAVELLERS' BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION

The annual meeting of the County of York Bowlers' and Victuallers' Travellers' Benevolent Association was held at the West Riding Hotel, Leeds, on Saturday night.

The Secretary's report showed that the income from all sources during the past year amounted to £84 13s., and the expenditure (including grants to members), was £37 11s. 6d., leaving a net gain of £47 1s. 6d. to the funds, which now amounted to £220. For the second year so succession the committee reported that the Association had not lost a single member through death.

Officers were elected as follows:—Hon. President, Alderman Chas. F. Tetley, J.P.; hon. chairman, Mr C. P. Sayels; hon. vice-chairmen, Messrs J. Muelwood (Whitkirk) and H. Bell, M.P.; hon. treasurer, Mr D. Haigh, 33, Elford Grove, Leeds; hon. secretary, Mr E. Precious, 5, Hawthorne Street, Barnsley; deputy hon. secretary, Mr J. A. County, 13, Hillfoot Avenue, Chapeltown, Leeds; hon. trustees, Messrs S. T. Marshall, F. Harrison, and D. Haigh; committee—Messrs W. King, W. Steel, W. H. Best, G. Shoesmith, Hugh Williams, H. Bell, J. W. Lowe, J. Reid, and L. S. Collins (Tadcaster).

COUNCILLOR WHO ATE CONDEMNED PIG

A discussion took place at the meeting of the Otley District Council on Monday night, upon a representation by the Sanitary (Committee's minutes asking the Council to approve the action of the Sanitary Inspector (Mr F. Arnold) in prohibiting the sale of a partially unsound carcase of a pig belonging to Mr George Tate, a member of the Council, and regretting that as a member of the Council, he should have attempted to override the Inspector's authority.

In moving the minutes, Mr Allan Chew, chairman of the Sanitary Committee, said that for some months there had been friction between the butchers in Otley and the Sanitary Inspector. Efforts had been made to remove it, and it had been agreed that where the inspector's judgment was questioned the carcase of the animal concerned should remain in the slaughter-house until it had been examined by a veterinary surgeon appointed by the butcher and an independent inspector appointed by the Council. A fortnight ago a butcher bought a pig from Mr Tate, and his carcase was condemned by the sanitary inspector. Subsequently, Mr Tate took the carcase away, although the inspector told him he would do so at his own risk. Mr A. Stott seconded the minute.

Mr Tate denied overriding the inspector. The carcase was, he asserted, sound, and he told the inspector that it was fit enough for him (Mr Tate), and he took it home, and had had several good meals off it, and he was none the worse. He was not going to have £6 thrown down the channel. There was a clique in the Council, he alleged, but he was not afraid of any of them. He had been a farmer for thirty years, and knew as much about pigs as the sanitary inspector did.

The minute was carried.

A TADCASTER MAGISTRATE AND THE GRAND JURY SYSTEM.

ALD. E. C. BROOKSBANK'S VIEWS.

On Monday at the West Riding Quarter Sessions held at Wakefield, a resolution was moved by Ald. E. C. Brooksbank (Chairman of the Tadcaster Bench of magistrates), that it was undesirable, without grave reasons being given to the country, that the Grand Jury system should be abolished. The Judge at the last Leeds Assizes, at which the speaker was foreman of the Grand Jury, had suggested that the members composing the latter might express an opinion as to whether the system ought to be continued. Owing to lack of notice it was decided that the matter should be referred to the Quarter Sessions. From time to time, said Mr Brooksbank, he had heard remarks advanced for the abolition of the Grand Jury, the principal one being that witnesses were called twice at assizes and quarter sessions. These were witnesses, however, for the prosecution, whose duty it was to establish their cases. It might be possible for that unnecessary inconvenience to be got over by arranging for a certain number of cases to be brought forward on the first day, the remainder to be dealt with on the following day. The Grand Jury, he added, was an ancient institution, which certainly had an advantage to the person charged, because his case could be thoroughly reviewed before reaching the Court. It was not a bad school, either, for young magistrates, while Judges were also enabled through the Grand Jury to express their opinions on crime to the whole county. In present circumstances, therefore, he thought that the system should not be abolished.

Major T. H. Morris, who seconded the resolution, suggested that the present system possessed advantages which far outweighed any inconvenience that might be caused to witnesses. He agreed that the number of indictments should be limited on the first day.

The Chairman observed that it was a rather strong order to do away with such an old institution unless there were very good reasons for that action. He considered, however, that the administration of justice, as at present conducted, would go on very much the same without a Grand Jury. (Hear, hear). The Grand Jury was instituted to stand between the people and the Crown, several hundreds of years ago, when it was quite possible that a judge would be sent down by the King to stamp out what might have been considered to be high treason, or some other grave offence. It was a matter of history that common juries were intimidated into convicting, and therefore the Grand Jury stood between the Crown and the prisoner.

The resolution was adopted by a large majority.

ALLEGED STACK-FIRING NEAR FERRYBRIDGE.

A TAILOR'S CONFESSION.

Just before midnight on Saturday, the Pontefract fire brigade were summoned to an outbreak on the premises of Mr Frederick Smith, farmer, near the Ferrybridge bone mill. They found a stack of old hay, valued at £24, ablaze, and as they were no other property in danger, and no prospect of any salvage, they left the stack to its fate, and returned home.

Herbert Best informed Police Constable Kirkbride that he had fired the stack, and after being conveyed to the police-station, wrote out and signed a statement that he was a tailor and was tired of walking about in search of work.

At Pontefract on Monday, Herbert Best, tailor, of no fixed abode, was committed to the Leeds Assizes on a charge of having set fire to the stack.

Superintendent Aylroyd said prisoner had said he was going to "rough it" under the stack, but he set it on fire by smoking.

LOFTHOUSE MINERS AND THE STRIKE.

The strike of miners in Yorkshire is seriously threatening to stop other industries in the cities, unless it is brought to a speedy conclusion.

On the other hand, the importation of coal from other districts, with the object of keeping these industries going, is rousing keen resentment amongst the miners, and may lead to grave complications.

At a special meeting of representatives of Park Hill, Wrenthorpe, and Lofthouse Branches of the Yorkshire Miners' Association on Monday, the question of coal being sent from other districts into Yorkshire was discussed at great length.

The following resolution was passed:—"That this meeting strongly disapproves such a policy as that adopted by the executive of the Federation, and instructs the secretaries of the respective branches to send in a resolution to the general secretary of the Y.M.A., requesting a special Council meeting to be convened, with power to go on with the prohibition of coal in the Federated area and the transhipping of the coal in Yorkshire."

MR MEYSEY-THOMPSON AND MORLEY DIVISION

A meeting of the Morley Division Central Conservative and Unionist Association was held at the Conservative Club, Morley, on Monday night, to consider the question of the selection of a candidate for the next general election. Mr E. S. Belben (South) president of the Association, presided, and was supported by Mr H. C. Meysey-Thompson, barrister-at-law, of York (who had previously been approached with a view of his being invited to become the candidate). Each township in the division was well represented, and the meeting was most enthusiastic.

Mr Meysey-Thompson (who was introduced by the President) had an enthusiastic greeting. He said he wished to make a general statement with regard to the Union of Conservative and Liberal parties in electioneering speech, and he proceeded to deal with three matters—the present political situation; the attitude to Liberal legislation, present and prospective; and the economic proposals for that future legislation. He submitted with regard to Home Rule that the measure was a bad one. England was to contribute money to Ireland, and have no say in the spending of it; and at the same time Irish members were to sit in the Imperial Parliament and vote on purely English questions. The Ulster resistance was a solid fact; and referring to the Radical attempt to raise the cry of "the Army versus People"

THE LADIES' COLUMN.

A KITCHEN WRINKLE.

Where oil stoves are much in use for cooking, it is a good plan always to have a box of sand—an old biscuit tin will do—fixed close near by, so that in the event of a sudden fire a few handfuls of the sand can be thrown on the flames; this will quickly extinguish them. Have a wooden box full of salt near the kitchen fire. A handful thrown on burning spilt fat will soon subdue the disagreeable smell.

NICE DISHES.

CREDY SOUP.—Ingredients: Carrots, turnips, celery, an onion, a few thin slices of ham and butter. The vegetables must be peeled, washed, and cut up small, and put in hot water for a quarter of an hour. Then drain and put them into a saucepan with a good piece of butter, some thin slices of ham, pepper and salt, and let it boil gently over a slow fire. Moisten it with beef broth. When all is cooked put the vegetables and the stock round about. Strain them through a colander with the broth that has been under the pulp of the vegetables. Put them back over the fire and let the whole boil gently during two hours. Skim it, and pour it over some crusts of bread fried in butter, and serve it.

ROMAN PIE.—For a rather large pie heat as much macaroni into short pieces as will two tablespoonfuls (six ounces or seven ounces). Throw it into plenty of boiling salted water, and cook it until the macaroni has become perfectly soft, then drain away the water, and put the macaroni into a saucepan with a good piece of butter, some thin slices of ham, pepper and salt, and a little sugar, and let it boil gently over a slow fire. Moisten it with beef broth. When all is cooked put the vegetables and the macaroni round about. Strain them through a colander with the broth that has been under the pulp of the vegetables. Put them back over the fire and let the whole boil gently during two hours. Skim it, and pour it over some crusts of bread fried in butter, and serve it.

LOOSENING GLASS STOPPERS.

You have seen people try all sorts of tricks to get the glass stopper out of a bottle. Sometimes they will try to pry it loose with a shoe-horn or a pair of scissors, or they will hit it against the edge of the mantelpiece, and in many cases they will crack the bottle before they can loosen the stopper.

The thing that makes the stopper stick is that the neck of the bottle is too tight, and if a bottle filled with anything warm has a cold stopper put in it, there is sure to be trouble getting that stopper out again. The way to get the stopper out is to make the neck of the bottle larger, and the smallest fraction of an inch will do—so small that no human eye could see it.

Glass responds very quickly under the action of heat or cold, which is why a sudden change of temperature will crack a glass dish so easily. But if you want to make the neck of a bottle expand just enough to loosen a stopper, moderate heat quickly applied is the thing.

The trick is to heat the neck and work the stopper loose before the heat reaches the stopper and swells that up too. Some per sons use a match, druggists use an alcohol flame, but the safest thing is a rag rung out of warm water and wrapped round the neck of the bottle.

CLEANING PICTURE GLASS.

Instead of using water when cleaning picture glass or mirrors, steep a pieces of cotton wool in methylated spirit, and wipe the glass carefully over, but avoid the spirit coming in contact with the frame, for if French polished it will damage the surface. Polish afterwards with a piece of clean chamois leather or soft tissue paper.

LOVE AT SECOND SIGHT.

A girl's romantic notion that 'love, if it is to come at all, must come with a blinding rush at the earliest instant of meeting, does not always hold good, says the Girl's Own Paper. Many a love—like its opposites and its enemies, hatred and jealousy—has grown by what it fed upon. The first and surest foundation for lasting affection is a friendship based on congenial tastes and common aspirations. The acquaintanceship that ripens in a steamer over a bottle of boiling water, and let it steam for three hours with the steamer closed covered. As soon as it is done turn it out of the mould. Eat it hot or cold; and what is made of sugar and butter and the white of an egg whipped together and flavoured with a little nutmeg, or serve it with sugar and cream.

On Saturday afternoon Lofthouse (Sheffield) had a tackle with Bentley Rovers, and Lofthouse were easily by ten goals to one.

HOW TO TREAT OILCLOTH.

Many housewives, among them some who should know better, make the mistake of scrubbing oilcloth as they would scour a wood floor. If you want to preserve the pattern, rub the oilcloth clean with a piece of flannel wrung out of warm water, then polish dry with a cloth of soft linen. A little pure linseed oil will restore the shine, preserving the oilcloth and preventing it from cracking. Melted beeswax and turpentine will also answer this purpose.

LOVE'S CROSS ROADS

By MRS. L. T. MEADE

Author of "The Orchid Room," "The Medicine Lady," "From the Hand of the Hunter," "His Masonic," "Little Wife Hester," &c.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.—The story opens at Comop Grange, the charming country residence of Paul Colthurst, on all appearances a very wealthy man. The relationship at the Grange is somewhat peculiar. Both Paul Colthurst and his wife have been twice married. Peter Lennox, Mrs. Paul's son by his first marriage, while Pamela Lennox is Mrs. Colthurst's daughter by a former marriage. Peter and Pamela are deeply in love with each other, and one night they gleefully proclaim the fact that they are engaged. Paul Colthurst and his wife are delighted at the news, and Paul tells his son that Walter Colthurst, a relative of his, had long years before arranged that the young couple should marry when they came of age if they didn't, then things would be very much different at Comop Grange. Their fortune would go elsewhere. Peter learns this with much annoyance, and confesses to the fact that the marriage, having been planned, takes the contract off the boy's shoulders. While speaking a caller—Miss Patricia Ransome—is announced. Paul shows great concern on hearing the name of his visitor.

It appears that Peter is not Paul Colthurst's son; Patricia Ransome had been Paul's first wife's mother, and Paul had taken the boy and passed him off as his own. Patricia warns Paul that a family of Oswalds are in London making inquiries about old Walter Colthurst's will. The Oswalds succeed in getting Colthurst's money in the event of Peter and Pamela not marrying.

CHAPTER V.

Ten days after Anna Colthurst had died Paul went to see Miss Ransome in the little house at Highgate, where she lived with Peter, who was then five years of age. Miss Ransome was a gay-looking, bright woman. She was not old then. She was comparatively young. Her face had a satisfied expression. Her life seemed full.

She came down the narrow path of her little garden to meet Colthurst, and a beautiful, fair child with curly locks and big blue eyes turned and looked at the boy with the love in her eyes which motherhood bestows. He smiled back at her, shouted in a very confident manner, and ran away to play. Then Colthurst told her what had happened about the child's birth.

Her face turned deathly white. She did not speak at all for a few minutes. Then she point blank refused to part with the boy.

"No," she said; "I won't do it. He was brought to me as a little baby. He was delicate. Over and over I thought he would die. I spent nights battling with his baby illnesses; I spent days and nights battling with my sorrow at the thought of losing him. I won't give him up; she had no right to ask it."

"The right of a mother," said Colthurst.

"No, she forfeited all her rights. I had the rights, when she brought the boy to me."

"At least read her letter," said Colthurst.

"I won't. Take it away. I won't read it."

He looked at Miss Patricia with eyes full of indescribable pity. "I can understand how frightfully you must feel this," he said. "I will leave the letter, and come again to-morrow."

"No," she called after him. "Never come back; I will never change my mind."

She came back, for he was wise enough to know better than she knew herself. In the interval between the first visit and his second, she had read the letter, had wept her heart out, had struggled until she nearly lost her reason, and then, at last, turned to take the boy and gave him to the man.

"You are right," she said. "She explained everything, and told me what you have done, how good, how great and noble—she told me everything. I will give him up. You will take him to-day, for if Colthurst don't take him at once, I won't be able to stand it."

So Colthurst took the boy, and arranged to provide for Miss Ransome, for even then he was exceedingly well off. The boy was charming. He was the gayest, the happiest, the most delightful specimen of babyhood that this man had ever come in contact with. It was a delight to look into his face. He became a considerable likeness to his mother, and if he resembled his father Colthurst did not detect it. He had never seen Peter. Little Peter was very affectionate, and he had not been a month with his new father before he gave up his baby heart to him.

Colthurst was a solitary man. He had very few friends. He took a house, though not asking Miss Patricia to come and keep house for him and look after the boy, but on second thoughts he decided that it would be wise. Soon his grief for his wife was merged in love for his son. He called the child his son. He made himself so to regard him. He was Anna's son, therefore he was his. The boy called him dad. The dad was the idea that he was anything but his real father. At the age of five we forget very quickly, and little Peter forgot Miss Patricia as his delight at the charming presence of Paul Colthurst.

The boy had been six months with Colthurst when, one morning, Colthurst received an urgent summons to go and visit his cousin, Walter Colthurst, who lived in a very quiet part of Yorkshire, and was supposed to be dying. Beyond the fact that he possessed this name and long years before given him a thought. But at this urgent summons to attend his death-bed he recollected that the man was considered and exceedingly rich. He wondered vaguely why he was sent for. He had sufficient money for his needs. He was the only son of his parents, and a barrister. The wishes of the dying, however imperative, and he arrived at the old house and was ushered into the hall at the end of the evening of that same day.

His heart was aching for little Peter. This was the longest of all hours when he played with the boy, when he cast aside his mantle of stern and dignified reserve, and was simply a child himself. He told stories innumerable. He played leap-frog and other wild, silly games that delight super-infants, and enjoyed himself as much as did the merry and happy child.

As he stood in the gloomy old hall, he wondered what reason there could be to take notice of him for so many years would not seem long. A fire was burning on the broad hearth, and he went and stood by it. Presently an elderly gentleman, with the look of a superior servant, a doctor, came down the broad stairs. He was accompanied by a young woman in nurse's uniform, and a servant preceded him to open the front door. The doctor said in a low voice to the nurse:

"We may pull him through this time; on the other hand we may not."

The nurse glanced in the direction of Paul Colthurst, and he returned her gaze. He did not look away, and the nurse went up to the young man.

"My patient is very ill," she said. "He cannot last many days. He wants to speak to you. Will you be as careful as possible not in any manner to cross him. Appear to agree to his proposals, whatever they may happen to be. If you do that, we may keep him with us for a little longer. Opposition or annoyance at this stage of his complaint would certainly kill him. Do you understand?"

"Yes," replied Colthurst. "I understand."

He thought of that dying bed where he had knelt a few months ago; of his wife and her agonies, and especially of her last words, her struggle; of her struggle; of his yielding; of her peace. Was he to go through a similar scene again? He had never yet in all his life had anything to do with Walter Colthurst of Brabazon Hall.

The nurse led the way, and he followed her. She opened the door of a little room on the first floor and entered with the quiet, firm step of the well-trained nurse. An old man was lying in the centre of a great four-poster bed. He was well propped up with pillows. His breath came quickly. His face had a sort of grisly appearance. He looked the reverse of beautiful. Colthurst thought of how Anna had looked before she passed away, and shuddered at the appearance of the old man.

"Mr. Colthurst," said the nurse, "I have brought this gentleman, Mr. Paul Colthurst, to see you. You know the doctor's orders—that you are not to worry yourself about anything. Just say what is necessary for you to say to Mr. Paul Colthurst in as few words as possible. Then I will come back and give you your nourishment, and you must rest for the night. I will leave you now, sir; but I shall be within call in the next room."

The nurse's curious addition to Colthurst, and immediately retired. He was alone with the dying man. The dying man opened his eyes very wide, and fixed them on Paul Colthurst's face.

"You are," he said, very slowly, "the son of Algernon Colthurst, and of Agnes, his wife?"

"Those were the names of my father and mother," replied Colthurst.

"You are, therefore," continued the old man, "my direct heir in the male line. Your father was my first cousin; you are, therefore, my first cousin once removed. The relationship is not very near, but there is nothing between you and the property if I choose to continue it in the male line."

Colthurst stood very still. After a minute he bent down. "Long ago, when I was a child," he said, in his low, beautiful, modulated voice, "I heard my father speak of you. Why should we trouble about money matters? I never saw you before, but I have heard of you."

"Have you?" said the old man. "It was nice of Algernon to remember me—very nice of him. Well, we play together as boys. His father and my father were brothers. Going into the past like that makes relationship seem to come quite near. I dislike the idea of leaving my money in the female line. I am as perhaps you are aware, a rich man."

"Honestly, sir, I have not thought about it; but doubtless you are rich, as you say so."

"Young man," said the old man, "I have an enormous amount of money to leave behind me. The death duties will be gigantic." He smacked his lips as though in anticipation. "The heir need never put hand to work again. He can live on me—yes, on me his dad says. And yet I am not alone. I have known nothing about me all during your life up to the present—are my nearest heir in the male line."

"I want you, please, clearly to understand, Colthurst," continued the old man, "that I have no expectations whatever from you. The fact that I am your nearest relative cannot come between you and whatever I may elect for in life."

"There is one woman I still care for. She has been with me for some little time. She was brought up in this house. Her name is Mary Lennox." Her name was Mary Colthurst. Had her father lived, he would have been in the direct line and a nearer heir to the property than you are, Paul Colthurst. But he died, and he left no son. Mary is somewhat a good-for-nothing creature. She left me. He took her away to the other side of the world. His wife died. She came back, a widow with one child—a daughter. If her child had been a son, I might possibly not have troubled you. I think you must understand."

Colthurst bowed. He did not speak. "Is there anyone here I can see your face," said Walter Colthurst.

The other man sat down.

"Turn the shade of that lamp a little, I want the fullness of the light on your features."

Colthurst obeyed.

"Ah! you have a look of the family," said the old man. "That is good; that gives me confidence. Mary is unlike the family, and her child—she has a little daughter—her child takes after the father. She is not one who has the family features. Paul Colthurst."

Paul sat very quiet and still.

"I want you now to have done with yourself. Tell me what sort of man you are?"

"I am a man in no sense above the ordinary," said Colthurst. "I am, at the present, I have tried to live righteously and according to the laws of Heaven. I am not specially clever. I am not specially stupid. Other than I have just ordinary abilities. I am not poor, for I make sufficient to live on in my profession."

"And what is that?"

"I have been invited to the Bar, sir."

"Ah! uphill work, that. Do you get many briefs?"

"Of late years I have got quite enough to keep me going comfortably."

The old man moved restlessly in his bed. "Call the nurse," he said.

Paul rose, and went to the door of the dressing-room. The nurse came back at once.

"You are tiring him. I told you not to," she said, looking reproachfully at Paul.

"I am doing little or nothing," replied Colthurst. "I am only listening to what he says to me."

"Come here; I want you, nurse," said old Walter.

He spoke in a half-choking voice. He was evidently distressed. The nurse gave him a restorative. She rearranged his pillows. She raised him up further in bed. Then, with a smile, she left him.

"You won't keep the gentleman long, will you, Mr. Colthurst?"

"No, I won't keep him long."

The nurse disappeared.

"I don't want to die yet," said Walter Colthurst. "I shall certainly not keep you long. I am a sensible man. I have always had my life here—Brabazon Hall—about as dull as it could be. I ought to be called uncommon sense! It ought to be called uncommon sense in this world of foolishness. Now, you speak of yourself as a man possessed of sense, and in consequence I die now worth a vast lot of gold. If I could take it with me, I could spend a considerable part of it in the best life that I can't; it isn't allowed. As the gates of death close behind me, my gold stays here. I am left naked, and alone. I am the world—I naked, and alone. I want at least to leave a record behind, and I will use gold to leave a record behind. I will spend money like water. Money is a curse. Well-spent money is a blessing. Mary Lennox is my favourite relative, but she has no more idea of how to spend money than an inhabitant of Mars would have if he visited our globe. She has always had enough. We don't leave the money to her she would marry again, and her second husband would squander it in less than a year. There's no fortune that cannot be disposed of within a year. You, I understand, are married?"

"Yes," said Colthurst.

"What sort of woman is your wife?"

"My wife, sir, was the best of women; but she is dead."

"Ah! if she had been a worthless sort she would have been the very one for me. I'd have given her the money, and she'd have spent it—oh, don't you think so?"

"I am afraid I do, sir."

"You have a son, I understand. I am anxious to hear about your son. Tell me all about him. How old is he?"

Colthurst felt something clutch at his heart. Should he tell?

"Why don't you speak? How old is he?"

"A little over five years old."

"Ah! Little Pamela isn't yet a year. It is no little of her. And she takes after Mary Lennox. She is a girl, and she takes after Mary Lennox's husband, that worthless fellow who died. Now, what is the name of your boy?"

"Peter."

"Ah! Peter. Why Peter?"

"His mother took a fancy to giving him the name."

"But it isn't a family name. I have never heard of Peter Colthurst. The Pauls in our family, and the Algernons, and the Walters, and the Agneses, and the Annas, the air we like myself—are they Peter Colthurst? Why didn't you call the boy Algernon? You ought to have asserted your authority and insisted on the boy being called Algernon! You ought to have done it. You ought to have thought of your own father. Why, that—that hurt me to pour own father. Why, that—that hurt me. But—Peter!"

"A man generally gives way to his wife in matters of that sort, sir."

"Yes—yes, I see; and, after all, it isn't of the slightest consequence. Peter Colthurst may bring a new lease of life to the old place, there's no saying. Brabazon Hall wants a new lease of life. It wants youth, and merry voices, and gaiety, and the strength of the young, and the joys of the young, and it wants heaps of money. I'm not going to bother to put the old house in order, but my heir who comes after me can do it. Is that Peter of yours a sturdy sort of chap—manly, and all that?"

"Yes, sir, he is very manly."

"A boy ever inch of him, eh?"

"Yes, a boy, every inch of him."

The old man chuckled. "This won't please Mary, but, never mind. He is five years old?"

"Yes, sir."

"I am very much obliged to you for coming, Paul. You have pleased my mind. You will take great care of the little fellow. You will look after him. His life is of great importance. Now you had best retire. Your words have given me consolation."

Paul bent down, took the old man's hot hand, pressed it silently, and left the room. He was passing through the hall when a merry, childish laugh caused him to turn round. He saw a young woman standing just beneath the shadow of a portière curtain. She was fair, and pretty, and dimpled, and she carried in her arms a black-eyed baby, with hair as dark as night, a little face full of dimples, a pouting mouth, and that delicious smile which only very young babies have. The smile went straight to the heart of Paul Colthurst. The young woman came up to him eagerly.

"Do tell me—are you Paul Colthurst?"

"I am. Are you Mary Lennox?"

"Of course I am; and this is Pamela, my little daughter."

The little daughter stretched out two fat arms to Paul. In the next minute she was clasped to his breast.

"Pam, how forward!" said her mother. Then she looked at the man whom she was standing near.

"You are a regular son of the house," she said. "You have but to go along the picture gallery upstairs to see replicas of yourself all through the centuries. Now, I am not the least like any of the Colthurst, and Pam—bless her!—takes after her father. Well, how do you find the old man?"

"I fear he is very ill."

"You will come into the drawing-room and have a cup of tea with me?"

"Thank you; I should like to."

They entered the room together, the child's arms clinging round the man's neck.

"It is odd how Pam takes to you," said Mrs. Lennox.

"I have a natural love for all little children," said Paul.

"It is true, Mr. Colthurst, that you have a child of your own?"

"Yes—Peter."

"And you are a widower, Mr. Colthurst?"

"My wife died about seven months ago," He turned his head aside.

Mrs. Lennox rang for tea.

"How old is Peter?" she asked presently.

"Five years old."

"Is he pretty?"

"Very."

"Do you think Pamela will be handsome when she grows up?"

"I can't say, Mrs. Lennox. I can only say she is charming now."

"Pam, you are very free in your manners to men," said her mother, for Pam was scrambling over Paul Colthurst's face with soft baby kisses.

"Would you like me to send her away?" she said, a minute later.

"No, let her stay; I like to keep her."

He drank his tea with the child sitting on his knee. Mrs. Lennox watched him with those bright, pretty, shallow eyes which were her marked characteristic. It was late when he went away. Pamela shrieked as he said good-bye to her. She shrieked and kicked out her legs, and showed admirable baby temper.

Colthurst got into his train which was to take him back to Peter.

"I am a dastard," he said, under his breath; but he did not repent of the lie he had told.

CHAPTER VI.

The doctor and the nurse were right, Walter Colthurst got great relief from his interview with that apparently upright gentleman, Paul Colthurst. The next day he was better; in a week he was up and about again. After that came mysterious and long interviews with his lawyers.

They came from the next town to see him. He was always waiting for them. These consultations often lasted for hours. By-and-bye, an important will was signed, and it was witnessed by the solid butler and his wife, people who for many years had lived at Brabazon Hall.

"You'll be all right, my love," said old Walter Colthurst to his niece as she stood by his side.

She had wondered what he meant, but, in her way, she was a timid little woman, and she did not dare to ask him what his intentions were with regard to the future.

Meanwhile, the lovely child, Pamela, grew and prospered, and won every heart in the place—even the adamantine heart of old Walter Colthurst.

Some months later the old man was found dead—quite dead in his bed. He had been cheerful and like himself the night before, and had gone to sleep happily; but he passed from that sleep which knew no awakening. Then there came urgent messages to Paul Colthurst, who had by this time almost forgotten the existence with old Walter.

He was very busy making money in his profession. He had not time to waste. But there was that object. His love for the child grew greater day by day. He had furnished a little house very near to Comop Grange, and had engaged a nurse and the boy, and evening after evening he played with him and drew out his baby heart, and really came to love him. Little Peter was happy as the day was long, and Paul thanked Anna for having given him the child, and really came to think that he often forgot for days that he was not Peter's real mother.

Paul was present at his cousin's funeral, after which the very remarkable will was read out. He was only read to a few. Walter Colthurst had not many relations living in the country. The substance of the will was always kept secret. It was to have a life interest in the whole of his cousin's property. To him was to be given Brabazon Hall, and the land in Surrey called Comop Grange, for his life. There was money unlimited in funds, in stocks, in shares in various companies. All considered. He said to his lawyer:

"I must take it all for granted. I cannot realise that I am a rich man."

"You are one of the richest men in England," was the reply.

There was, however, a codicil to the will, and this was not read aloud at the time of the funeral. It was next day the lawyer, Mr. Jenkins, came to see Paul Colthurst in his chambers.

"I want you to read the codicil now," he said. "It is a letter with the will."

Paul read it in amazement. In this codicil Walter Colthurst had stated his intentions with great plainness. Peter was his heir. Peter, when he came of age, was to inherit all his property, and not Pamela, who was to have a life interest in the whole of his cousin's property. To him was to be given Brabazon Hall, and the land in Surrey called Comop Grange, for his life. There was money unlimited in funds, in stocks, in shares in various companies. All considered. He said to his lawyer:

RECHABITES CONFERENCE AT ROTWELL.

PRESENTATIONS TO OFFICERS.

The half-yearly conference of the Juvenile Section of the Leeds District of the Independent Order of Rechabites took place at Rothwell on Saturday.

In the afternoon a procession, consisting of the members and officers of the Rothwell Good Hope Juvenile Tent, and representatives and visitors from nearly all the Tents in the district, headed by the Rothwell Temperance Band, paraded the town. The juvenile members were then entertained at a picture show, and later they were provided with refreshments. The entertainment was kindly provided by Mr J. P. Crook, district secretary.

The conference took place in the Council Schools, Carlton Lane, Rothwell, and was opened by Bro. J. Limbert, D.S.J.T., supported by Bro. R. Robinson, D.C.R., Bro. R. Dawson, P.D.C.R., and Bro. A. J. Shaw, district trustee. The District Secretary, Bro J. P. Crook, read the report of the sub-committee, in which he reported that the challenge shield had been won for the second time in succession by the White Rose Tent (Dewsbury Road). Pride of Ardsley had won the second prize, and the percentage prizes were won by the Alberton and Glasshoughton Tents. A new Tent had recently been opened at Armley. It was reported that arrangements for the juvenile treat to Morecambe on June 28th were in progress, and already 6 trains had been arranged to take the number expected to go.

Bro. Cassé, D.S., submitted to the conference a scheme forming a Central Medical Fund which, it was calculated, would remove certain difficulties with regard to medical benefits which had arisen through the inauguration of the Insurance Act.

The following resolution was passed:—"That a District Medical Fund be formed, making membership optional, the District Executive to prepare rules, etc., in connection with the same."

It was decided to hold the next conference at Castleford.

A very interesting presentation took place at the close of the meeting, when Bro. H. Howson, P.D.S.J.T., received a handsome silver-plated tea-service. Bro. Robinson, in very appropriate language, made the presentation, and Bro. Howson suitably responded.

Tea was afterwards served in the Council Schools, and it was partaken of by a large number. A social took place in the evening, and dancing was engaged in to music provided by Miss A. Blackburn, pianist, the M.C.'s being Messrs James and Armitage Lunn. A concert was held in an adjoining room, and there was a very large attendance, the chairman being Mr I. Robinson, D.C.R., of Woodlesford. The following artistes took part:—Miss Nellie Roberts, of Leeds; Miss Rose Ellis (soprano), Rothwell; Miss E. Cornforth, of Leeds; Master Will Lord, of Rothwell, and Mr Sam Thackray, humorist, Leeds. Mr Edgar Wilson, of Rothwell, was the accompanist. At the close of the concert, the presentation of Past Chief Ruler's emblem were made to Bro. Thomas Taylor (P.C.R., Adult Mob Tent), Miss L. Sunderland (P.C.R., Advance Pyramid Tent), and Miss Nellie Goddard (P.C.R., Juvenile Tent), by Bro. I. Robinson, D.C.R., of Woodlesford. A presentation of a framed address, executed by Master Albert Blackburn, was also made to Bro. Roberts, which he acknowledged in a few interesting remarks. At the close a vote of thanks was accorded the artistes and officers who had assisted towards making the conference a success, on the motion of Bros. A. Blackburn and B. Smith. The secretarial duties were efficiently carried out by Bro. Geo. Hartley.

TRAGIC DEATH OF MR W. D. HOLLIS.

FORMERLY OF GARFORTH AND WHITKIRK.

Mr Waldie Dawson Hollis, one of the best known men in the district, died suddenly in the train at Holbeck Station, on Tuesday evening, under peculiarly sad circumstances. Mr Hollis, who was 60 years old, had apparently been hurrying to catch the five o'clock train for Pool-in-Wharfedale, where he lived. He entered a compartment, it is stated, just as the train was about to start, and, as his health was not of the best, it is thought that a seizure was brought on, from which he died in the few minutes before Holbeck was reached. Dr Exley was summoned, but Mr Hollis was beyond medical aid.

Mr Hollis was in business for the greater part of his life as an auctioneer and valuer, and had not long been set up on his own account when he went into partnership with Mr J. Stenson Webb in the old-established firm of Hardwick and Young. The business grew and prospered in their hands, and under the new style of Hollis and Webb became one of the best-known concerns of the kind in the North of England.

Since the days of his youth Mr Hollis's chief interest outside his professional engagements was in religious and social work. He was a zealous supporter of the Church of England, and identified himself with the movement for securing the greater influence of the laity in ecclesiastical matters.

A native of Leeds, he was the son of Mr John Marsden Hollis, who was manager of the Garforth Colliery under the late Col. Goodrich. In his youth he sang as a choir boy in the Parish Church. Then at Garforth, he served for nine or ten years as churchwarden at the Parish Church, and here and at Whitkirk, where he lived for some time, he gave active help to the various Church agencies. He often spoke, too, at the Sunday services in the Holbeck Mission Room. In a wider sense he was doing good work as a member of the Ripon Diocesan Conference, and from the Conference he was elected to the House of Laymen.

At the Diocesan meetings he occasionally contributed papers in favour of the self-government of the Church and increased powers of the laity. He had been a member of the Conference for fifteen years, and of the House of Laymen for about half that period, and he always entered upon his voluntary labours with painstaking energy, regulated by fervent thought. Mr Hollis gave generously for church extension purposes, and was a real helper to his private charities. Quite constantly he took up a good deal of extra duty as treasurer for the Diocese in connexion with the last Pan-Anglican Conference. In the spring of 1909 his health gave way through nervous overstrain, and he was obliged, under doctor's orders, to take a six months' voyage to Australia. From this attack he never fully recovered, and he gave up his interest in the firm with which he was so long associated.

Mr Hollis married Miss Woodhead, the daughter of a Garforth seed merchant. His wife, three sons, and two daughters survive him. One of the sons is a member of the firm, and the eldest is acting as curate-in-charge of Sutton, near Hull, going there from St. Martin's Church, Pottern gate, Leeds, where he held a curacy.

The death of Mr Hollis was investigated on Wednesday afternoon by the City Coroner (Mr J. C. Mahaldn). Mr A. T. Perkins represented the family of Mr Hollis.

Robert Hollis, a son, said he had been informed his father left business in a hurry, with little time to catch his train to Pool.

Mr Alfred Sharper, of Arthington, a confidential clerk in the employ of Messrs Tetley, brewers, said he travelled by the 5.40 train from Leeds on Tuesday night, and Mr Hollis was the last person to enter the compartment just as the train was about to leave the platform. The train had not been in motion a minute before a lady in the carriage touched witness, and said "Oh, look at that gentleman." When witness turned his head, he saw that Mr Hollis, who was seated opposite him, had fallen on his right side, and was making a gurgling noise in his throat.

Witness released Mr Hollis's collar and shirt neck, and laid him gently down. As soon as Holbeck Station was reached he was carried to a waiting-room, and Dr Exley telephoned for. In seven minutes he arrived, but could only pronounce life extinct. Mr Hollis died without a struggle—"perfectly quiet, like a child."

Dr Rumbold, whose patient Mr Hollis had been for many years, said he had been in very poor health recently. Witness attended him three months ago. He was suffering from fatty degeneration of the heart, and Rabb at any moment to such a seizure. Witness had advised him not to rush for trains. The excitement of catching the train had evidently brought on heart failure.

Dr Exley agreed as to the cause of death.

The jury found a verdict of "Heart failure," and, along with the Coroner, expressed sympathy with the family.

Mr A. T. Perkins suitably acknowledged this expression on their behalf.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A COMPLAINT FROM CARLTON.

To the Editor.

Sir,—On behalf of myself and others, I should like, through the medium of your paper, to bring to the notice of those who are responsible, the disgraceful state of affairs that exists in the Carlton district of the Rothwell Urban area with regard to the removal of the refuse from the ashpits.

Why it is allowed to lie about from midnight until 9 a.m., and even later, I cannot even conjecture. In these enlightened days, when public health should be the first consideration, such an obnoxious practice should be discontinued. In civilised towns all traces are obliterated while the worthy citizens are in the land of oblivion. Could not this method be advantageously adopted in this district, instead of adhering to the insanitary ways of by-gone ages.—Yours, etc.,

KIPPAX COMMITTEE—"PAMPERING" THE TEACHERS.

To the Editor.

Sir,—Your last week's report of the monthly meeting of the Kippax Education Committee makes interesting reading. Speaking of the attendance at the evening school classes, one member, Mr Arundale, said "The game is not worth the candle. The only person who benefits is the teacher. Things can be made too easy for them. I do not believe in pampering."

The inference is clear. Because evening classes contain fewer students than the overcrowded classes in the elementary day schools, therefore, the teachers are under-worked and over-paid, i.e., pampered. It is evident that Mr Arundale and Mr Atack think that schools and classes have been started and are kept up simply to provide employment for teachers. Are they aware that when appointing head teachers the West Riding Authority at Wakefield often make the willingness or otherwise of the candidates to undertake evening school work the deciding factor in the selection of the head-teacher? In the mining districts of the West Riding, owing to the shift system, it is extremely difficult to get a big average attendance at the continuation classes. This is why in so many districts the evening classes have had to be dropped in despair. All the greater honour, therefore, to Kippax for keeping the flag of advanced education flying. I believe Kippax has the credit of having the highest average attendance of any evening school in the local area.

The paucity of candidates who sit at the voluntary examinations is quite a minor consideration, because the evening classes are visited, orally examined, tested or inspected, from time to time during each session by the Government and County Council inspectors. Were the work not satisfactory or were the average attendance to drop below a certain specified minimum, the County Authority would stop the grant and the classes would have to be discontinued. Messrs Arundale and Atack seem to forget that the classes they are criticising are a financial success; that is, they pay for themselves in the agent earned, and so are no extra burden to the local ratepayers.

Mr Arundale's talk about pampering the teachers is simply nonsense and ill-natured nonsense at that. Are a few sensible, plodding students to have their chances of educational progress and social advancement chopped off absolutely on leaving the day-school at thirteen, because we don't "spoil" to see an evening class working under sensible, and, as regards numbers, under ideal conditions? Mr Arundale can be no democrat at heart, or he would know the necessity, in secondary and Grammar Schools and colleges small classes are compulsory in order that the sons and daughters of the rich may receive detailed individual attention.

Big classes are the bane of the poor, transforming our elementary education into a system of driving or shepherding children along in unwieldly gangs of sixty and over. Teaching is not preaching, or otherwise classes of 500 would constitute an encouraging assembly.

I trust these few common-sense remarks may help in educating and broadening the outlook of our local education administrators. We have all to live and learn. Pampering is bad for scholars, teachers, or Education Committee members.

Perhaps after reading this Messrs Arundale and Atack are in a sadder but a wiser frame of mind! "Sweet are the uses of adversity," and possibly this bit of apparently adverse criticism may supply these gentlemen with educational nutriment. Man lives not by bread alone, and the widely-read columns of the "Skyrack Courier," sometimes constitute a continuation class for many of your adult readers, not excluding even the members of local Education Committees. He who runs may read, and in a newspaper, as elsewhere, he may find "Tongues in trees, books in the running brooks, Sermons in stones, and good in everything."

—Yours, etc.,

POOR OLD JOE.

THE ORIGINAL AMERICANS.

On the eastern slope of one of the peaks of the Great Smoky Mountains in Eastern Tennessee, where the first rays of morning sun strike, is an ancient burying-ground; and such another burying-place could not be found, though the world be searched, for not one grave is more than 3ft. long. The tombs are 2ft. beneath the surface, and are formed of cement and flat stones, and have defied the efforts of time to cause them to be destroyed. Most of those examined contained a vase, a few beads, and a human skeleton, which was never more than 3ins. long, and was that of a full-grown person. The natives have a beautiful legend of the place, and say none were interred here excepting Indian children, while naturalists declare that the skulls had reached their full growth.

But the most interesting account, says Spare Moments, is that of the red men who held that country when first settled by whites. They claim that when they came to that section of country, it was peopled by a race of small, fierce men with red hair; that these dwarfs waged a long and sanguinary war with the Indians, but were finally all killed; that this burying-ground was used long before they came into the country, and those killed in war were never buried.

Coffee derives its name from Kaffa, a district of East Africa, south of Abyssinia.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT JOTTINGS.

The medical officer's report on Templenewsam, Oulton, Woodlesford, and Middleton is a highly satisfactory one, and the unsatisfactory under-most Templenewsam and Middleton, both on the fringe of Leeds, is probably about the lowest in Yorkshire. This is a tribute to the efficiency of the local administration, and the residents will not get better results were they under the jurisdiction of Leeds Corporation. The infantile mortality, too, is low, although as the precious year's figures are exceeded. Oulton and Woodlesford are the "black spots" in the district, and the residents must endeavour absolutely to place those townships in a line with Middleton and Templenewsam.

The figures for the local Rowaster Steward show that a considerable proportion of the convictions are for offences on Sunday, and the bulk of the delinquents are non-residents. To deal with this problem a curtailment of the hours of opening of public-houses on Sunday is proposed, but this does not seem to meet with the approval of certain people connected with the "trade." Not a few indeepers, I know, would be glad of the Sunday rest, and in some cases licences have, on application, been reduced from seven days to six days. In this matter why should not every community be allowed to settle the question? That would be no easy way of settling it. If the people required the facilities they would say so, and if they did not want them they would vote for a restriction.

Scholes people are indignant at the N.E.R. Co.'s treatment of them. They petitioned the directors for cheap afternoon fares to Leeds and they evidently believed, from the correspondence that ensued, that the privilege would be granted, but they have at last been disillusioned. The Railway Co. state that they "have not seen their way" to grant cheaper afternoon fares, and from this one would judge that their officials are of opinion the giving of the boon would not bring increased returns to the exchequer. Scholes people have a grievance, because the N.E.R. Co. should not have given them any ground for thinking they would obtain a concession had the intention not been to give them one.

The attitude of the Railway Company, however, is easily understood. The object of the officials is to increase the returns without unduly taxing the travelling public, and the reason they have given cheap afternoon fares to Crossgates and Garforth is to induce a larger number of people to travel by rail, or to induce them to go more frequently to the city, in order to increase the revenue. Crossgates station is in the centre of a population of about 7,000 people, and Garforth has over 4,000 residents, whereas Scholes has a small population. It may not be fair to withhold from Scholes privileges enjoyed by people a couple of miles distant, but the N.E.R. Co. will assuredly consider things from their own point of view.

Templenewsam allotment-holders are disappointed because the local Council are piling up a balance at their expense. The ratepayers cannot be made responsible for any loss that may occur on an allotments' scheme, and the Council are justified in keeping a few pounds in hand, in order to safeguard themselves, but why should this balance be utilised for making good rents which persons have not paid. It seems very unfair if, as is alleged, this is done. If the Allotments Association were responsible for the management of the land one could easily understand the members being made responsible, but surely some system could be devised whereby every man who takes an allotment should be made to pay for it.

It is unfortunate that the question of Boroughwide Elmete charities was not settled when Crossgates was annexed by Leeds, but I suppose the Charity Commissioners would not have allowed this to be done without their consent. Now it has become necessary to prepare a new scheme to suit the changed conditions. As part of the ancient parish Crossgates is entitled to its share of the revenue accruing from the charities, but, seeing that Crossgates has preferential rating for fifteen years, it does not appear to me that the residents will materially benefit by the charities, because the amount due to them would go into the city exchequer, unless the Charity Commissioners otherwise order.

The amount of the income payable to Crossgates is, I think, the chief question which Barwick and Scholes people should concern themselves about. Without doubt, when the charities were formed Crossgates was non-existent, and the donors never contemplated that the income would be used for the reduction of the rates of Leeds residents. This view should be urged upon the Charity Commissioners so that Crossgates, Barwick and Scholes may be safeguarded. On the other hand, if the allocation of the income is to be left with the trustees—two appointed by Barwick and one by Leeds City Council—they will see that the people of the ancient parish do not suffer by any rearrangement.

Garforth Gas Co. will make it possible, provided the residents agree, for the old-world village of Barwick to enjoy the advantages of public lighting. Before gas is carried to the place, however, a canvass of the residents will be made, and if a sufficient number of customers is obtained the Gas Co. will go ahead, but, on the other hand, if the response is such as to make the undertaking unremunerative mains will not be laid to the village. Some years ago a fine lamp was erected on the Cross, and it gave a splendid light, but the generosity of the donor received a check when the lord of the manor ordered the removal of the lamp. Barwickers have now a chance of helping themselves. Will they do it?

Following the example of Tadcaster Board, the Whitkirk Guardians have decided on a revaluation of property in the Union, and their action will, I hope, be justified. It is little use, however, spending a large sum on valuing property unless the Assessment Committee are prepared to stand by the awards of the valuers. Cases have occurred where Assessment Committees have reduced valuations to such a figure as to render the valuer's work of little use, and that is simply throwing away public money. The Assessment Committee system, however, is absolutely out-of-date, and such an important question should only be dealt with by independent experts, whose unbiassed decisions would give confidence to the public.

Why will be Chairman of Garforth Urban Council? When the Council was formed it was understood that no member should hold the chairmanship for more than one year, but this agreement has not been adhered to, for there has been one case—I need not refer to it—in which one representative had a two years' lease of the chair. According to the custom of the Council, Mr. R. Routledge, jun., the vice-chairman, should receive promotion, but it is possible that another member may be proposed. My own view of the matter is that the best qualified member should be given the chairmanship, but, of course, this opinion does not commend itself to many people. Its advantages, however, are considerable; it ensures of the business being conducted in a proper manner, and of fair play being given all-round, while it conduces to harmonious working among the members.

Wetherby District Council, it is suggested, should undertake two improvements in roads in the town. What is known as Carrier's Corner, where the Leeds road joins the Great North Road half a mile south of Wetherby, opposite the entrance to Wetherby Grange, is (says a writer) dangerous to negotiate, and would not be an expensive improvement, seeing that there is only a stone wall to remove and a few yards of land to negotiate. The fourth neck in the centre of Wetherby should be removed or reduced, but with licensed premises on both sides its expenditure appears to be too heavy for the local authorities to attempt any improvement."

It is evident the Leeds Corporation are determined that, at all hazards, Templenewsam must go into the city, and the extension of the tramway to Halton is one means by which they intend, if possible, to accomplish their object. They actually threatened to drop this part of their Parliamentary Bill if the Rural Council did not waive their right to purchase the tramways, but this was sheer bluff. The Council had no power to use such power of purchase, because to work such a short length of line would have been enormously expensive, and probably out of the question. It is doubtful that the line will pay the Leeds Corporation, but they do not mind a loss, I suppose, so long as they can rope in Templenewsam and smash the rural area.

In consequence of the excellent attendance at the Barkston Ash Football Club final on Saturday afternoon the funds of the Association will be placed on a very satisfactory basis, and it must be admitted that the policy of the Executive in effecting the match has been thoroughly justified from a financial standpoint. A "gate" of £21 is not often secured nowadays. Much was made of the fact that every player in the losers' team was a Garforthian—a highly creditable state of affairs—and that not a single Cawood man was in the winning eleven, but with one possible exception, all the players in both are residents of Barkston Ash Division, and it is possible for any club to cast the net very much wider, according to the rules. It is not, therefore, advisable to act on this phase of the question.

The passing of Mr Walter D. Hollis, who presided for many years at Garforth and Whitkirk, has removed the most prominent church worker the district has produced for many years. He was great on Church reform, whereby laymen would be given more power in the Church, but the movement did not make much headway, and several years ago an incident occurred in one of our villages which clearly showed the attitude of at least one clergyman towards it. Mr Hollis, at his invitation, attended a parochial gathering, and addressed the people, placing his views clearly and convincingly before them, but when he had finished the clergyman ascended the platform and actually declared that he did not agree with a word Mr Hollis had said. Naturally, Mr Hollis was indignant, and, to say the least, the clergyman's action was very tactless.

Apropos of the production of plays in unlicensed premises, I notice the trustees of Cullingworth Wesleyan Church have been prosecuted, so that it is evident the Keighley police are looking out in the West Riding, and the Skyrack police may soon be active. The minister at Bingley pleaded that it was a "simple little piece" in a children's play—but the magistrates indicated that the regulations must be adhered to. If, therefore, it is intended to have sketches or children's plays at Halton, Garforth, Kippax, Bowers Allerton, Rothwell, etc., it will be advisable to get a stage play licence, otherwise there may be trouble. It seems ridiculous that such a licence is necessary for a children's "piece" or a short sketch, where no scenery is used, but the law must be complied with. At bazaars it is usual to have a children's day, when a musical play is performed, but that will have to be cut out of the programme now or a licence taken out.

Whitkirk folks will be surprised to learn that the district is suffering from a "plague" of rats. It appears that about a dozen rats got out of their depth in a drain and were drowned, and because of this it was announced that there was a "plague." Residents of Whitkirk have certainly had their premises raided by rats, and they may be surprised some morning to see an army of the rodent tribe marching down Hollyshaw Lane in order to take complete possession of the hill.

AMUSEMENTS.

LEEDS EMPIRE PALACE.

At the Empire Palace this week there is an excellent programme, and the principal turn is given by the ever-popular R. G. Knowles, the famous raconteur. The modern Mrs Gamp, who flings about her aspirates, interspersed many Malaprop-isms, and has a drop of gin whenever "dis-posed," is cleverly pourtrayed by Fred Emney in a brilliantly acted little sketch "A Sister to Assist 'Er," which is one long series of laughs. A dainty performance is that of the Real McKays, whose turn has matured wonderfully in the passing years. The boy has become a clever little comedian, and the girl a demure maiden equally at home in song and dance. The four Lowdas give an thrilling and finished an exhibition of acrobatics as has been seen at the Empire for many a long day, some of their feats being the "last word" in daring. Thorpe Lee gives a comedy duologue, a noisy, but effective, little effort, James Stewart gets many laughs by his extravagant antics at the piano, and Rich Taylor is a ventriloquist with much new business.

At the top of the bill on Monday next at the Leeds Empire, is that popular light comedian, Whit Cunliffe. Cunliffe is popular to-day because he was, for the simple reason that he gives the right touch to his light comedian business, and one is carried away by his bright and lively action, and fine singing. In one of his numbers he tells the audience, in his own inimitable way, of his persistency in following one of the fair sex "everywhere," while he will no doubt also give the amusing ditty "Mr Cupid." The latter is one of his old numbers, but there is nothing suggestive of staleness about it, as sung by Whit Cunliffe. Other very excellent turns on the programme include Wisto and Whyss, a pair of clever balancers, introducing plenty of comedy; the great Weland, comedy juggler; Irene Dillon, American comedienne; Bert Harrow, the rum comedian; James Fawn, the ever popular comedian: Carl De Marest, novelty violinist; and the American Bioscope.

LEEDS HIPPODROME.

At the Hippodrome this week capital fare is provided. Jack and Evelyn, who are to be numbered among the most popular of modern vaudeville artistes, appear together in a distinguishing scena, a sort of pot-pourri of singing and burlesque acting. They work hard, and their business is clever. Especially good is the short but-sare-a film dance, on idea which they might further develop with advantage. Fregolia is quite one of the best of the small army of quick-change artistes. Some of her changes are executed with truly remarkable rapidity, and with an attention to detail which is no astonishing as it is unusual. Her performance suffers slightly, however, by reason of her imperfect English. The Carbrey Boys give "Linga-Sigh, "a Hindoo sorcerer," appears in a number of mystifying illusions. His show is remarkably well staged, and his numerous tricks are executed with neatness and despatch. He concludes with the extraordinary weird feat of pulling a four-wheeled carriage by means of steel strings held in his eyes. Others in the bill are Randolph Sutton, light comedian; Parkes and Price, instrumentalists; and Rose Wylie, comedienne and dancer.

At the Hippodrome next week a great attraction will be Messrs G. Ray and Jay Turner's seaside revue "Splash Me," in two scenes. In the beach scene 20,000 gallons of real water are used in introducing a water polo match by a team of lady players. Besides the water polo there will be shooting the chute and a great pole contest. It will be submitted by a full London company of artistes, including Messrs Clarke and Mostol, Alec. Regan, Fred Wallis, and Horry Payne, and Misses Enid Harcourt, Alec Pearce, Dorothy Gibbons, and Peggy Hope. Others in the bill are Josephine Langley, lady ventriloquist; Sisters Sprightly, popular burlesque artistes; Will Hay, the schoolmaster comedian of "Bend down" fame; The Ketos, comedy acrobats; The Royal Bartle Quintette, with their golden concertinas; and Martin Adeson and Miss Clara Bernard, in the clever farcical absurdity "Dr. Maud's First Patient."

LEEDS QUEEN'S THEATRE.

At the Queen's Theatre this week "Proof," Sir Francis Burnand's well-known drama, pays a return visit. Mr and Mrs William McLaren's Company present the drama in a telling way, and it is attractively staged. Mr Robert Gilbert plays Pierre Lorrance, the long-suffering, wrongly accused husband, in a way which wins him the sympathies of the audience, while the Count de Laval of Mr Hy. Dean is a painstaking and clever character study. Miss Mildred Hudson is an emotional actress of considerable charm, which she uses to advantage as Valentine, and Miss Amy Hardcastle is a winsome Adrienne. Mr Colbeck sustains the comedy role of Chamberon with marked ability.

Next week at the Queen's Theatre the attractions will be the favourite actress, Miss Ethel Van Praagh and her celebrated Repertory Company.

LEEDS CITY VARIETIES.

At the City Varieties this week Mott and Pep, who are at the top of the bill, are clever handto-hand balancers and tumblers. Their work is neat and clean, and they have had a capital reception. Southall and Scott, a new American comedy duo, have some smart business, and they ought to do well over here. A sensational act is given by the Great Gomez, and Archie O'Neil, a one-legged rag-time dancer, goes through a smart show. Others appearing successfully are Hugh McCusker, Irish comedian and dancer, and Helen Martin, the "medley" girl, who gives a really fine performance. The pictures this week contain both humour and drama.

Next week at the City Varieties the chief attraction will be the racing revue, "What You See," introducing Will Netta's Jockeys. Others in the bill are Patti Loftus, comedienne and toe dancer; Fred Leyton, comedy light comedian; Maud and Morison, com-dy trick cyclists; Kitty Stewart, in original novelty songs, including her farmyard and laughing ditties; and Phyllis and Vernon Mellon, in "A pleasant disappointment." Pictures will also be shown.

LEEDS THEATRE DE LUXE.

Splendid programmes are presented at the Theatre de Luxe, and the packed "houses" during the week, are testified to the great popularity of this well-appointed house. "A Game of Cards" was a fine dramatic film, and the acting of Sydney Drew and Ned Finley was a great feature. "His Father's Boss" taught a strong lesson in a convincing manner; and "A Love of '61" was a new Civil War episode. "That Suit at Ten" and "Gen. Burbles Victory" abounded in humorous situations; and "His Circus Friends" and "Sammy's Double Rose" provided further laughs.

"Quicksands of Sin," a powerful film with a powerful plot, will be screened on Friday and Saturday.

GARFORTH DISTRICT EDUCATION COMMITTEE

NURSING SCHEMES—ABERFORD AND GARFORTH.

The monthly meeting of Garforth District Education Committee was held at the Education Offices, at Garforth on Wednesday evening—Mr John Wordsworth (Chairman) presiding. The other members present were the Rev. B. Sharp (Aberford and Walwyn (Aberford), Messrs J. B. Breed, T. S. Slater, H. Gascoigne, and H. Chappel (Garforth), with the Clerk (Mr. H. A. Dowell).

The Clerk reported that the percentage of attendance in Garforth district for February was the highest in the West Riding. The percentage for last month was also good, being over 90.

The attendance returns for the various schools in the area showed that Scholes had the highest percentage, the average attendance being 96 out of 31. The percentages were:—Garforth Council, mixed, 86.53 against 92.44 in March last year; Garforth Council, infants, 86.44 and 87.38; East Garforth Council, 93.24 and 81.88; Scholes Council, 96.77 and 94.44; Garforth Parochial, mixed, 93.05 and 86.07; Garforth Parochial, infants, 86.13 and 74.13; Garforth R.C., 92.86 and 72.50; Aberford Church, 90.05 and 76.42; and Barwick Church, 86.45 and 91.08. The percentage for the district was 90.01 against 84.52.

A report by H.M. Inspector on Scholes School was received, and it was regarded as very satisfactory.

The County Council scheme for appointing school nurses and nurses under the Births Notification Act was then discussed.

The Chairman: I suppose you've taken in this matter? Very little, I think.

The Clerk stated that when Nursing Associations existed it was the intention to work in connection with them, the County Authority to pay a proportion of the cost.

The Rev. B. Shepheard Walwyn said that a Nursing Association had been started at Aberford, and if they were assured of a grant from the County Council it would facilitate matters.

The Clerk said that the County Council would pay for their proportion of the work, and he explained how such a scheme would operate. They would get a grant from the Board of Education for the school nursing scheme, and they would have better health among the children and better attendance.

The Chairman said that there was no Nursing Association in Garforth.

The Clerk said he did not know that they could get subscription & PAID U. SHARES. in Garforth.

The Chairman said that several years ago an effort was made to start a nursing scheme in Garforth, and only class promised £60 if the working classes would give £30, and they could not get it.

Mr Chappel said the reason for that was that it was said at a meeting the course they wanted was a lady to associate with the class who gave £60, and the working-classes did not like that.

The Chairman said that if a nurse had been engaged the working-classes would have had preference as regarded her services, otherwise it would have been a failure from the beginning.

Mr Chappel: It was for social life that they wanted a nurse. That was the idea that prevailed at the meeting. And if the workingclasses got that idea they would not sympathise with the scheme.

The Chairman: Can you entertain such a foolish notion?

Mr Chappel: They get the idea they would be neglected while she was attending social festivities.

Mr Slater: She would have spare time, and she could associate with other people.

The Chairman: The scheme was taken up for the benefit of the artisan population. There is no need for a nurse in better class homes.

Mr Chappel: That is so.

The Chairman said there were four Councillors present. Did they think the Council would make a grant of £30.

Mr Gascoigne: The Council have not discussed it.

Mr Slater said that if the thing were started there was no doubt they would get something up each year for it.

The Chairman said he wished the Council would consider the question of making a grant. Mr Slater said that if the Council saw the thing was going to be worked they might give something.

Mr Chappel: The Chairman wants to know if we are prepared to help to inaugurate the scheme.

The Chairman suggested a guarantee of £25 or £30.

The matter will be further discussed at next meeting.

LOVE'S CROSS ROADS

CHAPTER VII.

The next morning Miss Patricia Ransome came downstairs as usual to breakfast. She was tired after her unwonted exercise of the day before, but was excited. After long years, she had taken the initiative, and did not know what the day might bring forth.

She was living in a boarding-house kept by a Mrs. Luck and her daughter. Mrs. Luck was the sort of person who is supposed to have seen better days, and who flaunts the flag of those better days in your face every moment, who speaks on to other subject, and, in consequence, gets a vast amount of attention which otherwise would not be bestowed upon her.

She was a good manager, however, and 10, James-street was always full of guests. Mrs. Luck would have been ashamed to hear her house spoken of as an ordinary boarding-house. It was the select of the select, and let only those enter who were known to her or her friends. Miss Patricia was her sister's friend, and had been a guest in the house. The Marshalls, without a moment's thought as to paying guests in the house, and after the Oswalds disappeared, made room for Miss Patricia. Hattie found themselves alone with Miss Patricia.

"Really," said Mrs. Luck, "it is quite too bad. I will say it, Hattie, whether you like it or not."

"Mother, I wasn't uttering a word."

"I daresay you were not uttering, but you were looking a thousand words. If I am good enough to keep paying guests into the house, I expect to press them, so to speak, to the very last penny, and they must pay me as they were boarded, and lodged."

"It's the way with paying guests, I am afraid," said Hattie—"that is, always except dear Miss Patricia Ransome."

"Oh! of course, we are not looking of you, dear child. That son is a terrible creature; don't you agree with me, Miss Patricia?"

"He is very uncouth, certainly, poor boy," said Miss Patricia; "but I am sure he can't help himself."

"Oh, yes he can," said Mrs. Luck. "Any man who tries can be a gentleman, that I am sure of. Just as any woman who wishes it can be a lady. Now, look at Hattie. Could you ever, in the West End, see a more stylish young person?"

Hattie simpered at the trifle, and the colour came into her cheeks. "Mother," she said, "don't be silly."

"I can't help admiring you, Hattie," said her mother; "I think those freckles of yours are very distinguished."

"I wish you wouldn't, mother. I'd give anything in all the world to have dark hair and a pale face; whereas I've got rather a red head, and—"

"Red hair!" said Mrs. Luck. "It's golden hair, that's what yours is. Hattie, you have the colour of red gold, and what could be more glorious? But, dear, dear! I've let a lot of time slip over your attractions, Hattie, my child. What with your hair, and your charming manners, and good-looks, and that lovely voice of yours, and your power over the piano, I couldn't keep you long if I had many gentlemen in the house. At the same time, it's gentlemen who pay—that's what I have been always told. Haven't you been told that, Miss Ransome?"

"I am glad you are here again," said Mr. Thomas Oswald.

When he spoke to a lady he had a habit of bending forward as though to make his remark more confidential. He also dropped his voice, so that those who were quite close could not catch his words. This he also considered very fetching.

"Dear lady, I am glad you are here again," he repeated.

"I have not been absent long, Mr. Oswald, I don't quite know what you mean," said Miss Patricia.

"Not absent!" he replied. "But excuse me, you have been absent. You were not here to breakfast yesterday, nor to tea, nor to supper. How I do wish our dear friend, Mrs. Luck, would make that meal a supper! It is so much more appetising. It would give a sort of cachet to the house if it were known that we had late dinner every night. Supper is so plebeian."

"Nonsense!" said Mrs. Oswald, whose voice was harsh and somewhat grating. "You know perfectly well, Tom, that we never had anything but a substantial tea, plain supper at that, in South Africa."

"Oh, my dear," said Mr. Oswald, "it doesn't matter what we ate in South Africa."

A flash of annoyance rose to his healthy cheeks. His son Tom gave a laugh which was anything but polite or refined. Laura said, "Don't, Tom, don't! Why should you annoy father? Why shouldn't he have his little joke?"

"It isn't a joke, and he knows it perfectly well," said Tom Oswald.

While the Oswald family were more or less wrangling one with the other, Miss Patricia cast longing glances at a letter which lay unopened by her plate. By-and-bye, Mr. Thomas Oswald observed the direction of her eyes.

"Dear lady," he said, "why this hesitation?"

"Why—what?" she asked.

"You want to read your letter. Read it; I beg of you, acquaint yourself with the contents. Ease your mind; it's not a good thing to do. I have eased my mind; I assure you, I feel a totally different person since I went to Somerset House. You, dear lady, must get at the contents of that letter. Well, my good friend, get at them. Unfasten the envelope. Take out the sheet of paper. Read the contents."

"I will take your advice, Mr. Oswald," said Miss Patricia.

She did so. The contents of the letter were sufficiently startling to cause her to change colour—to assume one of the word "Oh!" and then hastily to slip the letter into her pocket.

"You seem disturbed," said Mr. Thomas Oswald. "Are you in trouble, dear Miss Ransome?"

"Far from that. I expect some friends, some very dear friends, to have tea with me this afternoon."

"Tea—with you? Where? Here?"

"Yes, they will come here."

"That delights me! Will you tell us all about them?"

"Yes, do tell us about them, please, Miss Patricia," said Laura. "We so seldom hear anything interesting. Dad does nothing, nothing at all, and Tom does about enough which he says ought to come to him if somebody or other who does exist didn't exist. Do turn out these friends of yours, dear Miss Patricia, we should like to hear about your visitors," said Mrs. Oswald.

"As for me, I am quite indifferent," said Tom. He got up as he spoke, pushed back his chair, upset some of the coffee on the tablecloth, and left it out of the room.

Mrs. Luck looked at her daughter Hattie. They exchanged glances of anything but approval. Still, those people who took in paying guests—dear friends who added to the family purse—must not be too particular.

"A clean cloth will take fourpence out of our profits," thought Miss Hattie.

She sighed, for the terms were of the lowest, and their profits, in consequence, the most meagre.

"Now, you will tell us about your friends, won't you?" said Mrs. Oswald.

"I have nothing to tell you. Some old friends are coming to see me this afternoon."

"Will you have a private sitting-room? If not, we, of course, could be persuaded to go, we should make a point of it."

Miss Patricia made no remark. Mr. Thomas Oswald looked at his wife and nodded. Laura gave a sigh. Miss Patricia looked at Laura. Laura, in some vague sort of way, reminded her of Anna when she was a young girl and had come to her for help. She would have liked to invite Laura to meet her friends, but Peter and Pamela that evening, but she did not dare.

"Come, come, my child," said Thomas Oswald, springing from the table. "We are going out; your mother and I mean to spend the morning at the British Museum. We haven't half explored that stupendous collection of all sorts of treasures belonging to the great past. For my part, there are few places in London I prefer to the British. You can get there from here so nicely; no charge for admission, no exposure with omnibuses or conveyances of any sort, and here we are in the midst of the British."

Mr. Oswald, his wife, and daughter disappeared from the breakfast room. There were also present a Mr. and Mrs. Marshall, two elderly people, who all day kept very much together and never met friends with whom they could converse. At this special time, the four Oswalds, Miss Patricia, and the two Marshalls were the only guests in Mrs. Luck's house. The Marshalls withdrew a moment after the Oswalds disappeared, and Mrs. Luck and her daughter Hattie found themselves alone with Miss Patricia.

"Really," said Mrs. Luck, "it is quite too bad. I will say it, Hattie, whether you like it or not."

"Mother, I wasn't uttering a word."

"I daresay you were not uttering, but you were looking a thousand words. If I am good enough to keep paying guests into the house, I expect to press them, so to speak, to the very last penny, and they must pay me as they were boarded, and lodged."

"A clean cloth will take fourpence out of our profits," thought Miss Hattie.

She sighed, for the terms were of the lowest, and their profits, in consequence, the most meagre.

"Now, you will tell us about your friends, won't you?" said Mrs. Oswald.

"I have nothing to tell you. Some old friends are coming to see me this afternoon."

"Will you have a private sitting-room? If not, we, of course, could be persuaded to go, we should make a point of it."

Miss Patricia made no remark. Mr. Thomas Oswald looked at his wife and nodded. Laura gave a sigh. Miss Patricia looked at Laura. Laura, in some vague sort of way, reminded her of Anna when she was a young girl and had come to her for help. She would have liked to invite Laura to meet her friends, Peter and Pamela that evening, but she did not dare.

"Come, come, my child," said Thomas Oswald, springing from the table. "We are going out; your mother and I mean to spend the morning at the British Museum. We haven't half explored that stupendous collection of all sorts of treasures belonging to the great past. For my part, there are few places in London I prefer to the British. You can get there from here so nicely; no charge for admission, no exposure with omnibuses or conveyances of any sort, and here we are in the midst of the British."

Mr. Oswald, his wife, and daughter disappeared from the breakfast room. There were also present a Mr. and Mrs. Marshall, two elderly people, who all day kept very much together and never met friends with whom they could converse. At this special time, the four Oswalds, Miss Patricia, and the two Marshalls were the only guests in Mrs. Luck's house. The Marshalls withdrew a moment after the Oswalds disappeared, and Mrs. Luck and her daughter Hattie found themselves alone with Miss Patricia.

"Really," said Mrs. Luck, "it is quite too bad. I will say it, Hattie, whether you like it or not."

"Mother, I wasn't uttering a word."

"I daresay you were not uttering, but you were looking a thousand words. If I am good enough to keep paying guests into the house, I expect to press them, so to speak, to the very last penny, and they must pay me as they were boarded, and lodged."

"It's the way with paying guests, I am afraid," said Hattie—"that is, always except dear Miss Patricia Ransome."

"Oh! of course, we are not looking of you, dear child. That son is a terrible creature; don't you agree with me, Miss Patricia?"

"He is very uncouth, certainly, poor boy," said Miss Patricia; "but I am sure he can't help himself."

"Oh, yes he can," said Mrs. Luck. "Any man who tries can be a gentleman, that I am sure of. Just as any woman who wishes it can be a lady. Now, look at Hattie. Could you ever, in the West End, see a more stylish young person?"

Hattie simpered at the trifle, and the colour came into her cheeks. "Mother," she said, "don't be silly."

"I can't help admiring you, Hattie," said her mother; "I think those freckles of yours are very distinguished."

"I wish you wouldn't, mother. I'd give anything in all the world to have dark hair and a pale face; whereas I've got rather a red head, and—"

"Red hair!" said Mrs. Luck. "It's golden hair, that's what yours is. Hattie, you have the colour of red gold, and what could be more glorious? But, dear, dear! I've let a lot of time slip over your attractions, Hattie, my child. What with your hair, and your charming manners, and good-looks, and that lovely voice of yours, and your power over the piano, I couldn't keep you long if I had many gentlemen in the house. At the same time, it's gentlemen who pay—that's what I have been always told. Haven't you been told that, Miss Ransome?"

"Of course you have, poor dear! I remember, you had a sweet little home of your own."

"I had that—"

"And then you came to me," continued Mrs. Luck, "and I mothered you."

"You had been kind to me," said Miss Patricia, thinking of her miserable attic where the rain would pour in, notwithstanding every effort to mend the roof.

"I want to be kind to you, dear. And now, is there anything I can do? Please, if there is, command me in any way the word. You know perfectly well that I can't stand those Marshalls another day; they're dreadfully dull and tiresome; and that man keeping on all the time saying that he is on the wrong side of the hill, and wishing out a case just to annoy people and to excite curiosity."

"He will stop, I think, if we take no notice," said Miss Patricia.

"That is it, ma. That's what I say!" exclaimed Miss Hattie. "Let's take no notice, and he'll stop."

"But I can see for myself that the Marshalls object to their visit. Mrs. Luck, I shall be sorry to lose my best guests. They've got the drawing-room sitting-room, as well as all that belongs to themselves. They pay quite handsomely, and give a sort of air to the place. They must at one time have seen very good days."

"They seem remarkably reserved," said Miss Patricia.

"I don't know that it is reserve," said Mrs. Luck. "When I am alone with them, they're quite chatty. I think that both he and Miss Marshall write for the Press. I am not certain, but I rather imagine it. However, keep that to yourself, won't you, dear?"

"Certainly," said Miss Patricia. "I never repeat things."

"Well, that's right. It's a comfort to talk to you. And now, is there anything I can do for you?"

"I am expecting some friends to come here to tea to-day."

"It's sixpence a-head extra for each person who comes here for tea," said Miss Hattie.

"Yes, that's quite correct. I can pay anything that is required," said Miss Patricia. "I shall probably like to have a private room. Do you think you can let me, Mrs. Luck?"

"Well, now, how awkward. The room at the back of this would have been just the thing for you, but the Perkinses, I heard from them this morning, and they are coming in time for supper, and they particularly begged that I would let them have the back dining-room as their private sitting-room. I don't really think I have any private room to give you; but you can have it at a special table in this bay window, and anything you like to order. What would you like for tea, Miss Ransome?"

"I should particularly like to have a private room. You are sure you can't get one for me?"

"You know I would if I could."

Mrs. Luck looked frown. Miss Patricia was always very subservient to her frown. She said gently:—

"We will have tea a little early, I think, and I will go out and buy a few cakes myself. I have some of my own to bring, you don't mind my bringing it out, do you?"

"Why, of course not," said Mrs. Luck.

"It will give me the opportunity to get—"

"And your silver spoons," said Miss Patricia, "and my little tea-pot? I'd love to see them, for one part," said Miss Hattie.

"You can bring any of your own things you like," said Mrs. Luck, "and tea shall be ready and on the table at half-past three o'clock. If you want a special tea, you'll have to order it, Miss Ransome, and in any case it will be sixpence a-head extra, and then whatever you like to order besides."

Miss Patricia thought for a few minutes. She then ordered strawberries and cream, some cress sandwiches and a certain kind of some cress sandwiches she went out. She was going to buy flowers. She loved flowers, and guests were few who would think a great deal more of flowers than they would of what they had to eat.

Mrs. Luck and her daughter were left alone.

"I wonder who these grandees can be," exclaimed Hattie. "They must be wonderfully grand people for Miss Ransome to go to all this expense, for you know, mother, she's awfully poor."

"I like Miss Ransome," said Mrs. Luck, "and I wish we had no end of Miss Ransomes in the house. I'm fond of the women of her sort. They would never intrude themselves. They'd always make the best of things. As it is, it's grumble, grumble, all day long. I wish we could get rid of those Oswalds. There's nothing spreads like discontent. The Oswalds are certain to make up to the Perkinses—I know the sort of people the Perkinses are, don't you, Hattie?"

"Yes; I wish they weren't coming. I hate them," said Hattie.

"We can't possibly refuse them, my dear, there are four of them in all, and they require a private sitting-room."

"Mother, I think they are quite awful," said the girl. "You know, each of them plays a different musical instrument, and not one of them has an ear, and the discord is something appalling. Of course, they know they wouldn't be received in any other house in London."

Mrs. Luck smiled. Then she stood up and pinched her daughter's round, fat arm.

"When I tell you, Hattie, that each charge them threepence a day each for the use of their instruments, you see I have created a peace by bribing our neighbours."

"That's true enough, mother; all the same, it isn't very fair, and I do think that we ought, at least, to charge them what we might have a more refined sort of boarding-house."

"Hattie! What do I hear you say?"

"Well, mother, I have said nothing."

"You call this private establishment—this house—a boarding-house?"

"Well, mother, it is; you know it is."

"It is not. I receive a few dear friends as paying guests, you know I do, and Miss Patricia thinks any the less of a lady for having paying guests in her house."

"Of course not, dear; times rather have honest boarders, or even lodgers," said Miss Hattie. "But what I was going to say, mother, is this, mother, I think you'd have more paying guests if you changed the dinner hour to half-past seven, and let us have cold lunch. The early grumble at our suppers, and in particular the Oswalds."

"Well, mother," said Mrs. Luck. "I'll have to think of the lesser of two evils—the departure of the Oswalds or the early dinner. Miss Patricia, my dear, dear Jones. I'm extremely likely to get some more P.G.'s, but it would be impossible to change the dinner hour to-day. Well, we'll see what we can do."

"Well, mother, I have said my piece. Give me a list of the things we want to buy now, and I will go out and get them."

Mrs. Luck and her daughter then turned to matters domestic.

It was just about three o'clock that same afternoon. Miss Patricia had put on her very best dress—a pale lavender, trimmed with a perfect of its own shade. The sort of dress which suited her better than any other—when Paul Colthurst, Peter, and Pamela arrived. Miss Patricia's preparations had been made for these distinguished guests. The little parlour-maid—Lucy by name—and mistress of all work, whom Miss Patricia had herself had bought for her. The visitors were shown into the drawing-room, which, as Miss Patricia's great delight, was at that moment empty. She had given strict directions to Lucy to let her know at the very minute of tea there o'clock. She would then try and get her guests out again before the Oswalds and Marshalls had finished. It was impossible to say what might not occur. She would offer to go out with them. She would have them entirely to herself. The poor lady felt a queer trembling as she went forward now, raised her voice of yours, and your power over the piano, eyes, and looked full into Paul Colthurst's face.

CHAPTER VIII.

To see people of the sort represented by Paul Colthurst, by Peter, by Pamela, by anything else belonging to Mrs. Luck's home for paying guests was, as it were, to let in the sunlight. The little maid, Lucy, grew quite excited when she saw them. Miss Patricia's heart seemed to leap into her mouth. She felt the colour coming and going in her cheeks, the sensation of faintness oppressed her for a minute. Then it passed.

She looked straight from Paul to Peter. Peter had not seen her once upon a time, only a long time ago, laid his curly head on her knee and cried his heart out. That was long time ago, her lips had pressed her old cheeks and his sweet, starry, baby eyes had looked into hers. Peter was a man, as her child, her boy, had grown and ever, for ever and ever, and her heart had been full, as the heart of a mother is full, for Peter, her child, her own, to her breast. He was the same Peter, the very same, and yet—how altered! He had not thought her, but she, his unconscious intuition, knew him.

She thought of course, she could not have done so—that even in a crowd she would have recognised him. He seemed in a way to fulfil her dreams. He seemed, after a fashion, to be greater than her dreams. He was tall, he was manly, and splendidly handsome, and he had such a gracious, kindly smile as he took stock hands with her once just as though he had known her. Then he turned and introduced Pamela, and, and, in a flash, Miss Patricia knew of her, of which people thought he inherited from Paul Colthurst that Pamela was to be his wife, and that he was glad to bring home his wife, and that he was glad to bring home his wife to see Miss Patricia.

"We did want to come quite awfully," said Pamela. "And, indeed, may I kiss you? You are known father—of course, I shall call my father now; but, then, he has always been like a father to me—more than my own father for a very long time, haven't you?"

"Yes, my child," said Miss Patricia.

"Peter was born," said Miss Patricia.

"It's rather nice in this room," said Pamela, trying to make the best of things, and to put the dreadful drawing-room with her even lookers. She was quick and she had taught in them which made her unlike any other girl. "I am glad you've got it," said Miss Patricia, "now, you will all come downstairs and—"

"Oh, I do hope the other paying guests will come in—I mean, that you'll give anything some in the world to see them. I've read such lots of books in which they always make such always wonderful, charming people—out in the common, you know, and with some interest in life, which will be to us, too, Miss Patricia."

"We are having tea a little early, so perhaps they won't," said Miss Patricia.

"I do hope they will. Don't you want to see them, Peter?"

"I'm afraid I am indifferent," said Peter. "I've left my sentimentalism behind me in Africa. Miss Ransome. He took from him a little parcel, unconsciously the gist of her right-hand. He raised the kettle to fill the little teapot. He put it on the spirit lamp to keep it hot. He handed round the cakes and delicacies which Miss Patricia had provided. Then he chatted and laughed a good deal, and the whole party alive.

Pamela sat next to him. She was as merry as Peter. She was enjoying herself vastly. And occasionally she glanced at the clock, and occasionally at Miss Patricia; but Miss Patricia avoided her eyes. She felt that Paul Colthurst was too many in that group. Paul knew Peter's tree story. Miss Patricia knew Peter's secret, and shared a secret between them—a secret which, if divulged, would ruin the prospects of this man whom most people considered a great man. She dare to look at each other because of the secret which pressed upon their hearts. Paul Colthurst, the great scientist, Miss Patricia could have enjoyed a chat with Pamela and Peter. The young people, having no secrets, were full of the happy. They chatted, and laughed, and made fun of things, and Pamela said, in her pretty voice:—

"Oh, if I didn't live at Connop Grange, I really should like to be a P.G. in the house of Mrs. Luck, wouldn't you?"

As she uttered the words the door was flung open, and Thomas Oswald, accompanied by his wife, son, and daughter, entered. The girl's clear voice fell upon Thomas Oswald's ears. He was certainly not a shy man in order. Nothing pleased him more than the chance that they were living along a path towards a definite goal by a man who knows his way.

In controversial speaking, think always of what your opponent will say, and so frame your speech as to anticipate his answers and give little opening for his criticism.

Always reflect beforehand upon the kind of audience you are likely to have.

Never despise those whom you address, whatever you may think of their intellectual attainments. You need not talk over their heads. But you will find it politic as well as polite to respect them.

HINTS FOR THE HOME.

TO THOSE WHO WEAR GLASSES.

So many people nowadays artificially wear eyeglasses; and those who travel much—barristers and others in course of business—often find their sight considerably impaired owing to the cloudiness of their glasses, which is due to atmospheric conditions. To such the following recipe (given by an optician of note) will prove invaluable: Take a pinch of water, alcohol, and toilet ammonia; mix together, and put into a glass bottle, keeping it well corked. Spray the eyeglasses every morning with a little of the mixture, and then rub with a soft cloth, polishing finally with tissue paper. The glasses will be kept clear, and declared a boon by many who had previously suffered severely from eye strain.

THE RIGHT WAY TO REST.

It is a good plan to lie down for a little time after the midday meal. You must take off your corsets and put on a loose wrapper every one, and then, on a loose wrapper, lie down. Instead you are slipping through the bed; lie heavily, letting each muscle relax. Look at your fingers, move your hands as little as possible. This relaxation and resting for the tired housewife is better than the biggest bottle of tonic you could buy.

BANANAS AND TYPHOID.

After a long experience with typhoid patients a foreign specialist maintains that the best food for them is the banana, says the Family Doctor.

It is said that because the lining membrane of the small intestines becomes intensely inflamed and engorged, eventually ulceration is caused, and so by leaving well-defined ulcers, at which places the intestinal walls become dangerously thin. Now, a solid, if taken into the stomach, is likely to produce perforation of the intestines, dire results naturally following, and this is the reason why solid food of those containing a large amount of innutritious substances, are to be avoided as much as possible. But bananas, though, as may be classed as a solid food, contain only 25 per cent. of solid matter, and possess sufficient waste to nutritious matter to form a concentrated food, easily taken into the stomach, is likely to produce perforation of the intestines, dire results naturally following, and this is the reason why solid food of those containing a large amount of innutritious substances, are to be avoided as much as possible. But bananas, though, as may be classed as a solid food, contain only 25 per cent. of solid matter, and possess sufficient waste to nutritious matter to form a concentrated food, easily taken into the stomach, and being left without food. Get tea, my good girl, and be quick."

Pamela left her strawberries untasted. "I think I have had enough," she said, and rose abruptly from her chair.

"I will take you up to the drawing-room," said Miss Patricia. "Lucy, the drawing-room, I said Miss Patricia.

"Capital!" exclaimed Paul.

They left the room.

"Oh, Peter, those are the people whom Miss Ransome calls her friends. Mighty smart, I must say. And what a tea! I think I could stand some of those strawberries. They'll be put on for supper, you'll see, and Mrs. Luck will get the best of them. Why shouldn't we eat them? I see no reason."

He went up to the spoke, took a large berry from the dish, and placed it in his mouth.

"Oh, father, you oughtn't!" said Laura, in a voice of shocked expostulation.

"Why shouldn't I? I think I ought not to do a thing, I will come to you to let me know. Nice times, when children speak to their parents as you are doing."

Lucy hurried in with a table-cloth and a tray full of tea-things.

"Lucy, where are strawberries for our tea, Lucy?"

"No, Mr. Oswald. Miss Ransome bought those strawberries for her visitors."

"Do you happen to know who the visitors are, Lucy?"

"Yes, Mr. Oswald."

"Oh, do tell us their names," said Laura, in a very interested voice. "I never saw such a lovely girl."

"I remember their names quite well," said Lucy, "because Miss Ransome told me that I was to pronounce them distinctly when I ushered them into the drawing-room, so she ushered them over to me two or three times, only——"

"Yes, Miss Ransome, what is it?"

"Come here, Lucy."

Miss Ransome was now in her outdoor things. The guests were standing in the hall.

Lucy ran into the hall. "Yes, miss; what is it?"

"Lucy, you are not to say who my visitors are."

"All right, miss."

The next minute Miss Ransome, Paul, Peter, and Pamela were seen passing the windows of the dull little boarding-house.

"Well," said Oswald, "well?"

He flung his chair to the table as he spoke, pulled a plate of bread and butter forward, and began to help himself to it.

"Here you are, Lucy," he said. "Now, what is their name?"

"Please, sir, I don't know, sir."

"That's nonsense, Lucy. You know quite well. You were just telling me."

"I don't know. I have forgotten, sir."

"That's nonsense," said Thomas Oswald, who now became deeply interested. Friends of Miss Ransome—a girl, a young man, an elderly person—who did not belong to their world; people who lived in the country; people to whom money was an entry; people to whom money had ever and always been at their bid and call. "Lucy," said Tom Oswald, "you look here. The guv'll give you half-a-crown if you'll tell us their names."

"It's the sounding of the kind," said Thomas Oswald, who, curious as he was, did not think it worth his while to give half-a-crown for the information he required.

"I am not going to tell," said Lucy.

She left the room, feeling further would be inquired. And Miss Patricia might have kept her guests to herself, and a good deal of her time, but Miss Ransome followed, if Peter Colthurst had not at that moment been seen running up the steps of the house and ringing the bell at the front door.

"That fine young gent!" exclaimed Thomas. "I think I see a way. One minute's excuse me."

He sprang from the table and left the room. Before Lucy could appear he opened the front door himself.

"Did you want anything, sir? I saw you coming."

"Yes. I have come for Miss Lennox's parasol. She left it behind her. I think it's in the drawing-room. Oh, don't trouble! I may I pass?"

"I will go and look for it," said Thomas Oswald, in a voice of the stairs, murmuring under his breath, "Lennox, Lennox—when did I hear the name of Lennox before? Why, it flashed across him—a lightning, blinding flash. The name was in the will!

(To be continued).

PUBLIC SPEAKING.

In "University and Historical Addresses" (Macmillan) the Right Hon. James Bryce gives some admirable little hints to speakers and writers. Here are a few of them:

Always have something to say. The man who is known never to speak unless he has a message to deliver is listened to in a deliberative assembly or wherever there is business to be done.

Try to have at most only two or three points to make. Never say none too common—have two or three relevant ones.

Say what you mean to say. If your own mind is muddled, much more muddled will your hearers be.

Always arrange your remarks in some sort of order. Nothing pleases an audience more than the sense that they are being led along a path towards a definite goal by a man who knows his way.

In controversial speaking, think always of what your opponent will say, and so frame your speech as to anticipate his answers and give little opening for his criticism.

Always reflect beforehand upon the kind of audience you are likely to have.

Never despise those whom you address, whatever you may think of their intellectual attainments. You need not talk over their heads. But you will find it politic as well as polite to respect them.

DISTRICT BREVITIES

Harewood Park, it is stated, consists of 1,800 acres.

In Templenewsam there are 327 houses; Oulton-with-Woodlesford 750, and Middleton 201.

Wetherby is trying to compete with Knaresborough. A Water Carnival is to be held in August.

Owing to the holidays there was no meeting of Tadcaster Guardians and District Council on Monday.

So apathetic are the members that there is a prospect of Wetherby Tradesmen's Association going to the wall.

Tadcaster will be invaded! Sunday, May 10th, has been fixed for the holding of Military Sunday at York Minster.

The inquiry into the proposal to have a joint cemetery for Oulton-with-Woodlesford and Rothwell takes place to-day (Friday).

The Unionist "Daily Graphic" forecasts a Conservative Cabinet, but the place is given in it to Lord Helmsley or Mr Lane Fox.

What have Wetherby Council to say? Ingleton's water supply is in danger, a local writer says that the result of the Giggleswick to Buttersyke Bar is one accession of pot holes.

The Labour men in Osgoldcross are shouting! They say they will oppose Sir J. Compton Rickett, M.P., at next election. Wait and see.

How it accumulates! No fewer than 3,849 loads of rubbish were removed from ashpits in Knaresborough and Oulton-with-Woodlesford last year.

At a meeting at Crossgates it was stated that the demand for school lectures on temperance in the district is increasing. Is this a sign of the times?

Not in a hurry! The authorities have not introduced the telephone to Barwick yet, although months have elapsed since negotiations were begun.

It is suggested that in Hunslet rural area refuse should be treated destructively in lieu of the present cost of getting rid of refuse at present is £417.

Why should not the Corporation endeavour to obtain a portion of Manston Lodge Park at Crossgates as a children's play-ground? It is in a central position.

It is suggested that the Templenewsam Parish Council should give houses to allotment-holders for doing what they ought to do—make prompt payment of their rents.

It's a pleasure to observe (says a writer) that one or two of the northwest and most awkward portions of the road between Harewood Bridge and Pool have been widened.

Bishop Quirk, acting as Commissary on behalf of the Bishop of Sheffield, has licensed the Rev. Thomas Percy Spendlove Curtis to the living of John Henry Jennings, lately Vicar of Masborough.

The medical officer reports that at Oulton-with-Woodlesford there is a scarcity of houses, but this is likely to be remedied "to some extent" by the erection of working-class dwellings which are in hand.

Mr Harold Blackburn accomplished a fine flying performance on Thursday night. He left Lofthouse Park at 6.30 p.m. with Mrs Hatley (Keevil as passenger), and arrived at Sheffield in 17 minutes—a record speed for the journey.

A rather boisterous wind prevailed in the Selby district on Friday, with occasional showers, followed by bright intervals. A fairly large number of visitors and cyclists passed through, but the uncertain weather diminished the traffic. A number of cycle clubs from Castleford, Knaresborough and the Leeds district visited the town.

A good story is told of an old couple who lived near Bramham. Before retiring to rest, one night, the old man said—"Ah say, Sally, we've nobbut yan pig i't sty, an' we've nobbut yan cow i't shed; ah think we'd better allow sh'goes to sleep, an' see if they be reight uns." He did so, and was somewhat astonished next morning when he could not find a match to light the fire.

The attendance returns for the twenty-four schools in the Wetherby education area for March show a percentage of 84.46, against 85.07 in February, and 84.07 in March, 1913. The Bardsdown (Clifford) schools have topped 90 per cent., but four fall below 80. The figures for each school per 100 are given below:—Long Newton 95.83, Walton 95.83, Bardsey 92.06, Wike 91.30, Thorner Council 89.65, Clifford Council 89.47, Tockwith Church 89.09, Harewood 87.96, Tockwith Wesleyan 87.50, Bilton 86.51, Spofforth 85.71, Clifford Roman Catholic 85.58, Boston Spa 85.71, Clifford Roman Catholic 85.58, Thorner National 84.31, Spofforth 84.15, East Keswick 82.35, Wetherby Council 80, Sicklinghall 79.31, Boston Spa 78.67, Kirk Deighton 77.01, and Thorparch 76.66.

Has the Kippax Ratepayers' Association fizzled out?

Harewood has gone the wrong way. In the 15th century it was much larger than it is now.

Hambleton farm hands are on the warpath. They want 10s. a-week and to build cottages for them.

Templenewsam at one time had stocks in front of the inn at Whitkirk and on Stocks Hill, Halton.

It is stated that there is coal for the digging in Wetherby district. Why not start a colliery?

In view of the opposition to the Member for Osgoldcross, the Liberals of Kippax are showing increased activity.

In the eighteenth century the cattle market at Harewood was one of the best in the district. Now Wetherby and Tadcaster have the pull.

Of 102 births last year in Templenewsam, Oulton-with-Woodlesford, and Middleton, only three were illegitimate. Twenty infants died.

The provision of some shelter for inhabitants of infected houses during disinfection is suggested by the medical officer of Hunslet rural area.

Beamsley Moor was at one time famous as a race-course, and Queen Anne presented a gold cup in 1702 as the prize in a race for 4-year-old horses.

One of the sanitary officials of the Hunslet Rural District Council says there is a plague of rats at Whitkirk. Why not look up the Pied Piper?

The stocks and pinfold at East Keswick have been removed about forty years; the former stood by the blacksmith's shop and the latter at the head of the street.

Among the most distinguished residents of Newton Kyme was Admiral Fairfax, who built the new hall and planted the fine avenue of trees across the park in 1722.

Let local "golf caddies" note! A Wilsden magistrate told a golf caddie, who was charged with theft, that his occupation was the most demoralising a boy could be engaged in.

Last year the heatherite for Hunslet rural area was 1½d. The figures for the parishes were—Middleton 8.37, Templenewsam and Thorp Stapleton 9.5, and Oulton-with-Woodlesford 15.07.

Why not? A Scholes man says that, to be fair, the N.E.R. should give Thorner, Scholes, and other places on the Wetherby line cheap afternoon fares, seeing the privilege has been given Garforth and Crossgates.

HOUSES FOR WOODLESFORD.

The monthly meeting of the Hunslet Rural District Council was held at the Council Offices, Lea Street, Hunslet, on Thursday afternoon. Mr. H. T. Eastnes (Chairman) presiding. Other members present were Mr. P. S. Marsden (vice-chairman), Mr. D. Hargreaves, Mr. G. Armitage, Mr. W. Verity, and Mr. J. Flintoft, with Mr. Cook (Mr. W. B. Pinday), the medical officer (Dr. J. Budd), the surveyor (Mr. J. Nuttall), and the sanitary inspectors (Messrs. W. White, and P. C. Higgins).

LEEDS AND THE DISTRICT.

The Clerk reported that he had received a letter from the Town Clerk of Leeds inviting the members of the Council to meet the Improvement Committee on the previous Tuesday. He had written stating that he had been unable to make arrangements with the Council, but would bring the matter before them as soon as possible. His reason for the invitation was the Council's objection to having the site of the Hallas sewage works included in the Leeds tour planning scheme. It was decided that the Clerk arrange for the meeting to take place on April 23rd.

Another letter was read from the Town Clerk of Leeds in reference to the proposed tramway to Halton. The letter stated that if the Hunslet Rural District Council still objected to the insertion of the "purchase clause" in the Leeds Corporation Bill, the City Council would have to abandon the scheme.

The Clerk said the letter was not quite accurate in regard to the "purchase clause," as the Council had considered the matter before the clause was inserted, as it was, by the House of Lords. It was the custom to insert such a clause in bills of this type, but if the Council passed a resolution waiving their objection to the purchase clause the Bill would go forward without it.

Mr Marsden: We don't want to lose the trams.

Mr Verity: And we don't want to purchase.

A resolution was passed waiving an objection to the "purchase clause."

HEALTH OF THE DISTRICT.

The medical officer's report for the last four weeks showed that twenty-one births had been registered. Of these thirteen occurred in Oulton-with-Woodlesford, five in Templenewsam, and three at Middleton. During the same period there had been four deaths; two in Oulton-with-Woodlesford, one in Templenewsam, and one in Middleton. Three cases of infectious disease, all scarlet fever had been notified. One had been at Woodlesford.

The Clerk said Templenewsam would become a health resort. (Laughter).

Mr Hodson also presented his annual report, which appears in another column.

ESTIMATED EXPENDITURE.

In considering the estimates, the Clerk said the Council would notice that they were considerably less than last year; £250 less was asked for on account of the general expenses. The special expenses were also less. At Oulton and on the special expenses were £170 as against £200 for the last half-year; at Oulton and Woodlesford the special expenses were £550 as against £580; and at Templenewsam £450 against £500. With regard to Oulton and Woodlesford the rates levied by the Council last year were the lowest in the £1 for the past fourteen years. Last year the total rates, general and special, were 2s. 11d. in the £1. They had never been less than 3s. in the past fourteen years.

The proposed calls for the various parishes were as follows:—Middleton £612, Oulton-with-Woodlesford £800, Templenewsam £872, and Thorpe Stapleton £6—a total call for the district of £1,990. The estimates were passed.

COMPLAINTS FROM OULTON-WITH-WOODLESFORD.

The Clerk read a letter from the Clerk of the Oulton and Woodlesford Parish Council complaining of the ashpits in Alma Street, Woodlesford, and asking the Council to inspect the same and see if they consider them satisfactory.

Mr Whitehead (sanitary inspector) said he had examined the ashpits in the district complained of, and he had found only minor defects.

Dr. Buck said he had made a house-to-house inspection, and with the exception of one case the ashpits were practically empty. In the case of the one which was full, the tenants of the house had a water closet. It was, he said, an exaggeration to say that they wanted emptying.

A letter embodying the resolution of protest passed by the Oulton-with-Woodlesford parish meeting with regard to the Clerk's salary was read, but no action was taken in the matter.

RAT "PLAGUE" AT WHITKIRK.

Some amusement was caused at a report as to a "plague" of rats at Whitkirk which appeared in the monthly report of Mr P. C. Higgins. It was stated that on the occasion of the gulley's last being emptied, half-a-dozen rats were found drowned.

The Clerk asked if Mr (Mr Higgins) could define it as a plague or was it only a case of a few.

Mr Higgens said that the fact that half-a-dozen rats had been found, showed that there must be others.

The Clerk: If there were 1,000 rats there might be a plague.

Mr Verity: Or if they met you on the road. (Laughter).

Mr Hargreaves said he knew for a fact that 150 rats were killed at one time in Oulton-with-Woodlesford within the last month, so there must be a plague there.

HOUSES AT WOODLESFORD.

It was reported that in connection with the fire at Oulton, Mr Higgins had applied to the insurance company and their claim compromised the lot, which was spelt whilst helping to extinguish the fire, but his claim of £2 had not been upheld.

It was decided to allow Mr Higgins one half of the amount asked for.

Plans were passed for eleven houses to be built by Messrs Briggs on Woodlesford. These are the first with four previously passed, will make fifteen houses which Messrs Briggs propose building.

A pathetic discovery was made in Sheffield on Saturday in connection with three maiden sisters, who had lived together in a small house in Thistle Street on the east side of the city. A few months ago one of the sisters died, and last Thursday, a second passed away. The third, Miss Elizabeth Stafford Hale, overcome with grief, went into the bedroom, took a last look at her dead sister, and then cut her throat. She was found dead by a cousin.

THE LATE MR W. D. HOLLIS.

FUNERAL AT POOL.

The interment of the late Mr Walter Dawson Hollis, of Pool-in-Wharfedale, formerly of Garforth and Whitkirk, took place on Saturday afternoon in Pool churchyard, in the presence of many old friends with whom, before ill health diminished his powers, he was associated either in business or in social or religious work. Covered with beautiful wreaths from the widow and children, the coffin was borne from the house in a glasscoach drawn, and at the churchyard gates the carriage was met by the officiating clergy—the Rev. H. A. Kennedy, vicar of Harewood, the Rev. D. M. M. Hatchard, vicar of St. Mark's, Leeds; and the Rev. J. Sheldon, vicar of Pool. The principal mourners were Mrs Hollis (widow), the Rev. Walter Hollis, Mr H. Hollis, and Mr J. M. Hollis (sons), Miss Flora and Miss E. W. Hollis (daughters), Miss E. and Miss M. Hollis, Sheffield, Mrs Stanton, Helmsburgh, and Mrs Webb, Newton Kyme (sisters), Mr Harry and Mr Jack Hollis, of Otley (brothers), Mr J. R. Weatherhead (brother-in-law), Mrs J. K. Woodhead, Miss M. and Miss J. Woodhead, East Keswick (sisters-in-law), Mr Gerald Scurrah, Mr Richard Webb, Mr H. K. Woodhead, Miss Barbara Oxtoby, and Mr J. Scrosser Webb, the late Mr Hollis's partner.

Among others who attended were Mr John Hopper, Mr John Town, the Rev. C. R. Sutton, vicar of All Saints', Leeds; the Rev. J. Hubbard, rector of Leathley; the Rev. J. Bu barn, vicar of St. Thomas', Leeds; Mr Edward Dalton, Mr Claude Dalton, Mr A. T. Peirse, Mr and Mrs Middleton, Mr John Pearce, Mr Stephen E. Smith, Mr H. Meadhurst, Mr W. W. Mapheson, Dr Sydney Rumbell (Leeds), Mr J. E. Kitchen, who represented the Council of the Incorporated Estate Agents' Institute; representatives of the Yorkshire branch of the Institute, including Mr Hopper, Mr Robert Lovitt, and Mr J. W. Dunn; Mr T. Ambler, Mr E. H. Middlebrook, and Mr A. M. Wootton, representing the Zetland Lodge of Freemasons; representatives of the Leeds Permanent Benefit Building Society, among them Mr W. A. Hobson, Mr H. Whitfield, Dr Rumbell, Mr Robert Lovitt (solicitor), and Mr O. Hunsley (surveyor); Mr G. W. Hebden (Leeds), Mr R. J. Fawcett (Pinfield), M. L. V. Sharp, secretary of the Leeds Liberal Organisation Society; Mr C. E. Montgomery and Mr F. A. Booth, of the firm of Hollis and Webb; Mr W. Townend (Newcastle), Mr Richard Dobbs, Mr G. W. Jessop (Rawdon), Mr W. Cathey (Wetsley), Mr Henry Child (Whitkirk), Mr J. Richardson, (Guiseley), and Messrs Hockney, Oxtoby, and Elliott, representing the late Mr Hollis's old Bible Class at Whitkirk and Hebden.

During the service the hymns "On the Resurrection Morning" and "Jesus lives" were sung, and Mr W. K. Dalton played "O rest in the Lord" as the body was carried from the church. The grave was lined with evergreens, arum lilies, and narcissi.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MR E. H. FOSTER AND REBELLION IN THE ARMY

To the Editor.

Sir,—Mr Foster in the House of April 3rd is reported to have said "The second rebellion was that of the officers of the regular army who declared that they would refuse to obey orders to move against the Ulster volunteer force."

These statements are absolutely untrue, and one cannot understand a gentleman like Mr Foster making them, in the face of the explicit statements to the contrary made in Parliament by Lord Morley and Sir Edward Grey. On March 9th Lord Morley, in the House of Lords, said "There has been no disobedience to orders in connection with recent events by any officer or man in Ireland. The conduct of the troops generally has been exemplary."

On March 31st Sir Edward Grey was asked in the House of Commons whether the instructions to Sir Arthur Paget gave the option to officers who were not prepared to carry out operations against Ulster for conscientious or other scruples, to send in their resignations and to be dismissed the Army. He replied "Yes." He was also asked "whether Lord French and the other officers have exercised that option offered them by the Secretary of State for War were guilty of any act of disobedience in so doing." He replied "No." And yet, after these definite statements from Cabinet Ministers, Mr Foster has the impudence to talk about rebellion in the Army.

The outstanding fact of the whole business is that the Radical Party have, for the first time in modern times, tried to use the Army and Navy for party purposes. To do what? Not to maintain the law of the realm, but to help them (the Radical Party), by force of arms, to make Ayrshot Ulster accept the Nationalists of Ireland as their masters and governors.

The Army and Navy belong, not to the Liberal Party, but to the whole Empire, and I think that moderate men of all shades of opinion will feel that those Ministers who have tried to force the Army and Navy into taking sides politically have disgraced their trust.—Yours, etc.,

ARTHUR LEE.

CHILDREN ALL LIKE ZAM-BUK.

UNEQUALLED FOR SOOTHING AND HEALING PAINFUL SORES AND WOUNDS.

Zam-Buk has endeared itself to the hearts and homes of its wonderful soothing and healing powers. No common ointment can do them the same good as this pure herbal balm. Worthless imitations should for safety's sake be rigidly avoided.

ITCHING ECZEMA CURED.—For eight weeks Doris M. Ford was kept away from school by eczema. "It started with blotches on her face," writes Mrs E. Ford, of 182, Tiverton Road, Selly Oak, Birmingham. "The sore broke, and the skin round it was very bad. She was always very badly and Doris was in great distress. Week after week passed without the eczema showing any signs of stopping. Then I put Zam-Buk on and used Zam-Buk. This rich balm soon removed the irritable sores and left Doris's skin clear and healthy. She is back at school again, quite cured by Zam-Buk."

POISONED KNEE FROM A FALL.—Clifford A. Kemp fell in the playground and bruised his right knee. He pulled his stocking over the broken skin and blood-poisoning was thus set up. "Clifford's knee swelled and got very inflamed," writes Mrs E. R. Kemp, from Church Street, Rochester, Kent. "Painful sores broke out on Clifford's leg. Ointments and salves failed to heal the sores, but Zam-Buk cleansed and healed my boy's leg beautifully. The new skin Zam-Buk grew is quite healthy."

SAVED HER GOLDEN LOCKS.—Our little Kathleen, aged 4, had ringworm on her head," writes Mrs A. E. McFarlane, 21, Queen's Road, South Farnborough, Hants. "It started with small patches of smarting and itching sores which spread across the child's scalp. When I discovered and all her beautiful hair would have to be cut off, we were greatly distressed.

"Zam-Buk, however, saved the child's lovely hair. All inflammation and itching were soothed, the ringworms gradually disappeared as I persevered with Zam-Buk. Kathleen is now completely cured and her golden locks are once more beautiful."

CROSSGATES AND DISTRICT BAND OF HOPE UNION.

ATTITUDE OF THE CHURCH TOWARDS TEMPERANCE MOVEMENT.

A special general meeting of the Crossgates and District Band of Hope Union was held in the Crossgates Wesleyan School to receive the Visitation Committee from the Yorkshire Band of Hope Union. Mr W. Popplewell (Stanks) invited all the delegates to tea, and about 60 attended.

At the meeting Mr W. Dibb (Garforth)—presided, and Mr J. Wilson (Morley), a veteran of 75 years, spoke, telling of the formation of the Band of Hope by the Rev. Jabez Tunnicliffe. He also said that the Church, starting by being antagonistic, had not yet got much beyond the stage of tolerance and indifference to the Band of Hope movement, and failed to see the great opportunity this movement gave of reaching a class of children untouched by Sunday School or other section of church work.

The returns of the Crossgates Union show that fully half of the children attending the various Bands of Hope have no other connection with the Church.

Mr T. Booth (York) gave many instances of the work done and good results from Band of Hope efforts, and particularly the day school teaching.

Mr Crabtree (secretary of Yorkshire Band of Hope Union) spoke of methods of teaching, grading, visitation, etc., urging the great need for thorough and efficient temperance teaching to the children, who would be the voters and law makers of the coming years. Scotland would have the opportunity in 1920 of locally reducing or removing the drink traffic, the rest of the United Kingdom might probably have the same powers within a few more years, and now was the time to train the voters. He also spoke of the much better reception of the day school lecturer by the various Education Committees, so that now there was a demand for more lectures than three lecturers could give, and the Yorkshire Union was only able to keep one at present.

Next year is the jubilee of the Yorkshire Union and great efforts are being made to extend the work and lift Yorkshire into the first place amongst the English counties for its interest in Temperance.

Miss Diggle sang "My Testament" and "Ye that are weary."

Mr H. Johnson was accompanist.

Questions on methods, etc., were asked and answered, and a very profitable evening closed with a vote of thanks to Mr. Mrs. and Miss Popplewell for their kind hospitality, proposed by Mrs R. H. Carr, and seconded by Mr Hodgson.—This was received too late for publication last week.

NEW ROMAN CATHOLIC SCHOOL AT SELBY.

The ceremony of blessing the new Roman Catholic Schools at Selby was performed on Tuesday by the Bishop of Leeds (the Right Rev. Dr. Cowgill), who was accompanied by the Right Rev. Monsignor Collingwood, V.G. (Hull), the Very Rev. Canon Dawson (Cliffe-ford), Canon Foley (Halifax), Canon Hewison (Scarborough), Canon Worthy (Selby), the Rev. Robert Van Zon (York), Rev. (Scarthingwell), Bradley (Tadcaster), and R. J. Dunford (Selby). A procession marched from the church to the schools, preceded by the Boy Scouts with their bugle, drum, and fife band.

The schools have been erected at a cost of about £2,500, in memory of the late Father Burns, priest at Selby for 50 years, and Canon Burns, priest at Selby for 50 years, and Canon Burns, priest at Selby for 50 years, and Canon

MR. THOS. ISON,
OCULIST and AURIST.
THIS INSTITUTION was ESTABLISHED in 1874. The system of working is the provident one, each patient paying a small periodical fee whilst under treatment, and they may, therefore, justly expect to receive the prompt care and attention which in many instances in charitable institutions is too often omitted. The treatment is of a mild and safe character, without operation or the use of Ear Drums, Ear Cornets or other mechanical or painful appliances. Under advantage appertaining to this dispensary is its system of treatment by correspondence, by which sufferers at long distances, and in isolated positions can have the advantage of Mr. ISON'S advice and remedies forwarded through the post. No case is undertaken unless there be a reasonable hope of cure, or benefit to the patient.
Attendance at Leeds every Tuesday, from 10 to 7
On Alternate Saturdays, April 18 & May 2.
Hours 10 to 7. Other days by appointment.

Rothwell Courier & Times

SATURDAY, APRIL 18th, 1914.

It is high time all workers turned vegetarians. The labour unrest in the country has caused great inconvenience and enormous loss to the nation, and anyone who has a remedy for it must be hailed as a public benefactor. A doctor, in London, has a very easy solution for the problem, but we are afraid that it will not be received by the people whom it is intended to benefit with anything approaching gratitude. His opinion is that the labour troubles, the strikes, and agitation of to-day are caused by the diet of the men engaged in them. Working-men, as a rule, are big meat eaters, and, as a consequence, mental, as well as physical, uneasiness is developed. He advocates fruitarianism (which includes vegetarianism) as a remedy for all the ills that labour is heir to. If his opinion is right, it would have paid Mr. C. H. Wilson to have provided the Corporation workers with a fruitarian diet all last year and thus have averted the strike and its huge cost to the ratepayers. If the meat diet is responsible for agitation it may be at the bottom of the Suffragette trouble, and the Government might find it an inexpensive way of dealing with these women by locking them up for six months and forcibly feeding them on fruit and vegetables. Then all desire for agitation would have, according to the theory, disappeared, and no more windows would be smashed, pictures damaged, churches and mansions burned down, nor ministers assaulted. A beginning might be made with the Pankhurst family. In regard to labour disputes, it might be necessary to feed both employers and employees, but cheapness again would be the ruling consideration, and the pugnacious spirit on both sides would be allayed, and satisfaction, in some way or other, would be given to all concerned. The remedy might be applied to politicians, too, for there is, as a rule, agitation before legislative proposals are given effect to, and compulsory fruitarian diets might be brought into operation like free education, with no age limit. The possibilities of the diet business are great, but many people will be surprised to learn that the stomach is at the bottom of the bother.

Throughout the country the Brewster Sessions reports early in the year furnished evidence that people were exercising greater self-control, but it was stated at the time that decreased convictions did not necessarily mean a diminished consumption of alcoholic liquors, and, as a matter of fact, the national drink bill, according to the estimate made by Mr G. B. Wilson, of the U.K.A., from official figures, was greater by £5,128,000 than that of 1912. It would appear that expenditure on intoxicants varies according to the state of trade, and the national prosperity of last year is reflected in the drink bill. "Last year," Mr Wilson remarks, "was one of great prosperity, and the weekly wage bill of the nation was probably higher than it had ever been before, so that it is not surprising, though regrettable, that a certain proportion of the increased earnings was expended in the purchase of intoxicating liquors. It is encouraging, however, to note that the consumption of alcoholic liquors, as measured by the figures of "per capita" consumption, is still much lower than it was during the periods of trade activity which culminated in 1874 and 1899. . . . If the consumption in 1913 had been at the rate of 1874 the cost to the consumer would have amounted to £242,000,000, whereas I estimate the actual expenditure in 1913 at £166,681,000. This is an increase of £5,128,000 over the figures for 1912. Spirits show an increase of £1,097,000 on an increased consumption of 11,207,000 gallons, beer £3,007,000 on an increase of 1,002,000 standard barrels, and wine £118,000 on an increased consumption of 151,000 gallons." The improvement as compared with 1874 is satisfactory so far as it goes, but since then temperance has made substantial headway among the people, and the figures, therefore, require some explanation. In 1913 the average expenditure per head was £3 12s. 5d., and per family of five £18 2s. 1d., as compared with £3 10s. 9d. per head and £17 13s. 10d. per family in 1912. It is estimated that there are in the country fourteen million children under 15, and the great majority of these are not responsible for any of the expenditure, and, in addition, there is the great army of men and women who are wholly or practically abstainers to be taken into account. It may be assumed, says Mr Wilson, that the average per capita consumption of those who take intoxicants is much above the general per capita figures; that the consumption of the men who drink is much larger than that of the women who drink; and that the consumption of dwellers in urban areas is much larger than that of the rural population. England and Wales spent more money on drink than any part of the United Kingdom, the figures being £137,041,000, or £3 14s. 2d. per head, while for Scotland the bill was £15,815,000, being £3 6s. 9d. per head; for Ireland £13,823,000, being £3 3s. 1d. per head. What effect has the club movement had on the liquor bill? It is pointed out that there was last year one licensed house to every 330 persons, and, in addition, 9,295 clubs paid duty on £2,273,160 worth of intoxicants purchased by them for distribution to their members, with an actual drink expenditure through the clubs of (say) £3,300,000, or less than 2½ per cent. of the national drink bill. The "club evil" is probably not so great as many people thought, but a disquieting feature is that as the number of licensed houses is diminished the number of clubs grows. A public house may, on compensation being awarded, be closed one day, and it may be opened the next day as a club, supplied with liquor by the very firm who owned the public-house. Legislation is required to deal with this phase of the licensing question. It is quite evident from the figures adduced that a large proportion of the increased expenditure was made by the working-classes, who utilized their increased earnings in purchasing what they might describe as luxuries, and this is a depressing fact. It shows that many people have no thought for the morrow, and that in the day of prosperity they waste their substance instead of keeping it against the evil day that must inevitably come.

Boy Scouts.—A detachment of R.P. Scouts belonging to the wireless telegraph section of the N.E. Leeds troop, spent the Easter holidays under canvas in Parlington Park. Scoutmaster Hall was in charge.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT NEWS

ROTHWELL.

SUNDAY LETTERS.—Rothwell can now boast a Sunday postal delivery, thanks to the stand taken by the Urban District Council and to Mr S. R. Chadwick, who was the prime mover in the matter.

By a vote of 27,259 against 11,393 the miners of Yorkshire have decided in favour of accepting the proposals of the Joint Committee of the Coal Conciliation Board and resuming work at once.

SCARLET FEVER RIFE.—Scarlet fever is again very rife in Rothwell and Carlton, and the medical officer's report, which will deal with various matters relating to public health and prevent the spreading of infection, and which is to be discussed at the annual meeting of the Council on Monday evening, should be interesting reading.

SALVATION ARMY.—An enjoyable time was spent at the Salvation Army on Saturday evening, when a lengthy programme of songs and music was provided by the ladies of the Rothwell Band of Hope. Tea was provided, and all left highly delighted with the audience and the effort was a success. On Sunday afternoon a musical service was given by the Lofthouse Quarrydale Party.

AN HONOUR DESERVED.—In presenting the Rothwell Charity Cup to the winners (Rothwell White Rose), the Chairman of the Charity Cup Committee (Mr J. H. Rennie) said he was sorry Rothwell Parish Church (the losers) had not won the Cup, as it would have been the third successive time they would have won it, and it would have been a great honour to Rothwell and to the White Rose team.

PICKWICKIAN SOCIETY.—The second session of the Rothwell Pickwickian Society was brought to a close on Thursday night, when an enjoyable time was spent by the company. Mr. B. Smith was in the chair, and Mr G. W. Nodding, who has acted as secretary throughout the two sessions, read the "Rothwell Weekly Papers." The evening closing with the dissolution of the Pickwick Club. A vote of thanks to Mr Nodding was heartily carried, on the proposition of Mr. P. Rawlings, seconded by Mr Ormonde, a member of the Inner Temple, and also a member of the Dickens Fellowship. Mr Ormonde, who proved a delightful speaker, gave a reading from "David Copperfield," which was followed with the friendly song, "Auld Lang Syne." Pickwickian enthusiasm a flow of good punch was served, and a toast coupled with the name of Mr Ormonde was proposed by Mr. H. Rawlings and drunk with great heartiness. Mr Ormonde, in replying, said "Gentlemen, there was a large gathering of the club members to watch the finalists, Mr Herbert Taylor and Mr James Hirst. During the game Hirst made two twenty breaks and was in the seventy-five mark when his opponent had but forty-five. Taylor, however, managed his cue splendidly, playing a fine uphill game, and he soon reached the ninety-seven. After another visit to the table by Hirst, Taylor was able to add only another two points, one short of the winning mark, and Hirst, who was also at ninety-nine, finished the game by scoring off the white. The Cup was presented by Mrs Newsome, who had been an interested spectator throughout the game. She was introduced by Mr A. Dawson. In acknowledging the presentation Mr Hirst complimented upon the closeness of the game, and said it was the third year he had tried for the trophy, which is only retainable for one year. He also received a medal. Mr Taylor also spoke, and, in sportsmanlike terms, congratulated Mr Hirst upon his success. A vote of thanks to Mrs Newsome was heartily carried, on the motion of Mr A. Batty, seconded by Mr Palmer.

PRIMITIVE METHODIST CHURCH.—On Sunday afternoon the choir of the Rothwell Primitive Methodist Church rendered the sacred cantata "From Manger to Cross." The Southwaite choir, who then lately assumed the duties of choirmaster, conducted the singing. The principal parts were taken by Mrs. Bedford (contralto), Miss Hulme (soprano), Mr. Jennings (tenor), and Mr. J. Ward (bass). Mr. J. C. Harrison was the organist. Mr. Willie Lunn presided over a large gathering, and at the close a collection was taken for the funds of the choir.

ALLERTON BYWATER

FOOTBALL.—On Saturday afternoon Allerton Bywater were defeated by Clarence Ironworks by a goal to nil, and Lock Lane Woodville overcame Waterfront Y.M.I. by three goals to one. Allerton Bywater Church Institute played Wheldale, who were beaten by four goals to one.

WEDDING.—The wedding took place at St. Saviour's Church, Brownhill, Batley, of Mr. Fredrick Cockerham, of Allerton Bywater, and Miss Simpson, of Batley, formerly of Allerton Bywater, the Rev. Hy. Williams, vicar of the church, officiating. The bridesmaids were Miss Sutcliffe, of Barnsley, Miss Muriel Simpson (niece of the bride), and Miss Rose Smith (niece of the bridegroom). The bride, who was given away by her father, Mr. J. Simpson, formerly under-manager at the Allerton Collieries, was attired in a dress of cream hollywood, trimmed with broche, while Miss Sutcliffe wore a dress of cream whipcord and black lace, and the dresses of the other bridesmaids were of champagne colour and hats to match. Mr. Charles Sourney was best man. Many useful presents were received by the bride and bridegroom.

BARWICK

The annual vestry meeting for Barwick was called for Easter Monday evening, but owing to the small attendance—some three or four parishioners only putting in an appearance—no business was transacted.

DRAMATIC SOCIETY.—The Barwick-in-Elmet Dramatic Society won fresh laurels as their entertainment given in the schoolroom on Tuesday evening. Seeing that many of the members possess vocal ability to a considerable extent, they ventured to give demonstration of their powers in the operetta "The Girton Girl and the Milkmaid," written by Mrs Catherine Adams, and set to music by Alfred J. Potter. The girls' and choir characters are those named in the title. The "Girton Girl" has graduated in all the 'ologies and dockrees she has a "superior brain," with, of course, the natural result that she says "Men are poor creatures, very poor creatures, indeed." The "Milkmaid" is equally competent at either baking and cooking or nursing an infirm or peevish patient, and she admits she is quite content with her lot. Miss Patty Eaton, in her cap and gown, was a typical "Girton Girl," and she was quite natural in the manner she assumed the intellectual aim so necessary to the correct representation of the character, while Mrs Hy. Jones was vivacity personified as the "Milkmaid," and treated with supreme disdain any suggestion that she was one whit beneath the girl from Girton. The connecting choruses of "Milkmaids" were well sung by Mrs Drake and the Misses Milner, Lumb, Smith, Helm, and Hewitt, who were prettily attired in the old English milkmaid style, and made quite a charming picture. Altogether the production was a marked success, which should prove very encouraging to the members in their first venture into opera. Mr Frank Pullan was a very effective accompanist. The rest of the evening's bills was taken up with the dramatic sketch "The Chimney Corner." This was one of the first productions of the Society. The caste was—Solomon Spry, Mr. Ben Robshaw; Patty (Peter's wife), Miss Eaton; John Probity (son of Peter), Mr. Leighton Smith; Mr Probity (son of Peter), Mr W. A. Bramley; Chesty (the lawyer's clerk), Mr W. A. Bramley; Grace (the ward of Peter Probity), Miss Amy Mosby, and the private detective, Mr H. Jones. The piece proved quite as acceptable as on a former occasion, and the good opinions then formed were further enhanced. Between the opera and the sketch Mr Wm. Reed contributed several rag-time songs, which were loudly applauded.

BOWERS ALLERTON

On Saturday afternoon Bowers Allerton had a Leeds and District Football League match with Kippax Woodville, and the latter won by a good to nothing.

"FOCUS ON THEIR VALUE."—A women's meeting was held in the Mission Schoolroom on Wednesday evening, when Miss Reiff, County Council lecturer, gave an interesting lecture on "Foods and their value" to the 40 women present. Mrs Jones presided. Miss Reiff commenced by showing how that in the human system a waste of muscle, tissue, etc., was constantly going on, and to repair this waste a variety of food was necessary. No one food contained within itself in proper proportion the needs of the body. Miss Reiff had with her models of the bones, breads, peas, lentils, and potatoes, various articles of food, and stated the kind and amount of material each supplied to the body. She explained that some of the most nutritious foods were very cheap, and with careful preparation made palatable dishes. Under this head she mentioned oatmeal, peas, lentils, herrings, etc. Miss Reiff enlarged upon the value of fruits and vegetables, and said if more were eaten there would be a large amount of drugs and pills taken would be unnecessary. Mrs Jones expressed thanks to the lecturer for so kindly coming from Wakefield to address them. The lecture had been a very practical one and should be specially helpful.

CROSSGATES

Mr H. E. Haswell, of the Crossgates Club, was first in the class for sidecars in mostly hill-climbing competitions at Saxton H.B. near Ganton, on Monday afternoon.

SOCIAL EVENING.—In connection with the Crossgate Baptist Fellowship a "social" will be held in the Lecture Hall at Whitkirk on Tuesday evening. The services of a number of well-known artistes have been secured, and an excellent programme is promised. See advt.

ACCIDENT.—Mr John S. White, Chesnut Avenue, met with an accident whilst motoring at Sherburn, E.R., on Sunday. He had occasion to call at Sherburn, and it appeared that at Sherburn he had difficulty in passing a motor-car, and went into the hedge. He was badly cut about the head, and after medical treatment was taken to the Scarborough Hospital.

CROSSGATES BOWLING CLUB.—This club's green was formally opened on Good Friday morning by the President, Mr C. Holliday. The opening was preceded by the presentation to the President by Mr J. H. Wood, on behalf of the club, of a silver-mounted "jack." In acknowledging the gift, the President referred in a pithy speech to the old days of the club, when the green, with its "bump," was only about half the size of the present one. He attributed the growth and success of the club to the excellent spirit and good-fellowship which existed among the members. The green, which has been specially treated during the close season, was in excellent condition, and a good number of members availed themselves of the opportunity afforded by the favourable weather to have their first "throw" of the season.

A PROMISING VOCALIST.—Miss Ivy Easton, of Halton, who is only fifteen years of age, is to give a high-class concert in the Y.M.C.A. Hall, Leeds, on Saturday, the 25th inst., and the event is a particularly interesting one. The young lady, who has a remarkably fine contralto voice, has appeared on local concert platforms and has created an excellent impression, and there is no doubt she is a socialist of much promise. She will be supported by well-known artistes at Carlton for over forty-two years. He was a great temperance advocate and was an active worker in the cause. Mr Soffby preached from the text: "O death where is thy sting? O grave where is thy victory."

BILLIARDS.—The junior representatives of the Carlton Temperance Hall played their last match of the season in the Oulton and District Billiard League last week, when they met Rothwell Temperance Hall Juniors. The latter won by sixty-six points, the scores being Carlton Temperance Hall 483, and Rothwell Temperance Hall 549. Details (Carlton names first):—G. Priestley 100 v. Atkinson 67, W. Turpin 100 v. Lunn 82, D. Dixon 41 v. Edwards 100, S. Dobson 95 v. Taylor 100, E. Scholy 82 v. Billings 100, and E. Ward 95 v. Armstead 100. Turpin made two breaks of twenty-five each, and Armstead made a break of twenty-one.

PRIMITIVE METHODISM.—A successful tea and concert were held by the Carlton Methodists on Good Friday. Over one hundred sat down to tea. The concert proved most enjoyable and was well attended. A good programme was arranged by Mr Thos. Hampson and party. Mr G. H. Lunn, organist, opened the programme with an organ solo, after which the following items were rendered:—Song, "The sun, birds on the wing," Miss Kate Ellis; recitation, "Asleep at the switch," Miss Harrison; duet, "Look and Work," Messrs. Hampson and Sandy; song, "Sing, sweet bird," Miss Bowes; reading, "Cuddle's curtain lectures," Mrs Hampson; duet, "Life's dream is o'er," Mrs Mathews and Miss Bowes; song, "Wonders of the deep," Mr Hampson; recitation, Miss Harrison; song, "A voice is calling," Mr Knox; duet, "Watchman, what of the night," Miss Bowes and Mr Hampson; song, "Virgo McDonald," Mrs Mathews; quartette, "Night, lovely night," Mrs Mathews, Miss Bowes, and Messrs Hampson and Knox; song, "The Skipper," Mr Hampson. Mr Richard Ward was the chairman. The effort, which was in aid of the trust funds, realised over £3.

GARFORTH

The first meeting of the new Urban Council will be held on Wednesday, the 22nd inst.

MUSICAL SUCCESS.—In connection with the recent examination of the London College of Music Elsie Bond, of Garforth, aged ten, took successful part in gaining a first-class certificate (eight-four marks out of a possible hundred) in the intermediate section.

HE WONDERED.—A reporter visited Garforth on Monday, and he wonder—One wonders—particularly at a union—where the no-meticks were, for scarcely a gossipy group was to discovable. The youngsters, too, seemed to have taken to the idea in a kindly sympathetic. Public-houses have done good business during the strike, but it has not been the rowdy business of the colliery villages of old. As an inspector of police remarked on Monday evening to some other other gentlemen non-strikers." This change is reflected in the fact that though notoriously miners do not know "the value of money," they have on this occasion not been dependent upon their 8s. 6d. per week strike pay immediately a strike was declared.

FOR THE MEDICAL CHARITIES.—On Tuesday afternoon a match was played for the benefit of the medical charities between Garforth White Rose and a team of old players. Councillor E. R. Archer set the ball in motion, and the White Rose were the first to score, through Howson. Then the old players had a look-in. Jones passed to Duffield, and, after running half the length of the field, he returned the leather to Jones, who passed to Brownridge, and the latter scored with a capital shot. S. Haigh got another goal, and the old players won an interesting game by two goals to one. In the evening the players and their friends had a "social" at the Gascoigne Arms Inn, and a very enjoyable time was spent. The players on both sides have decided to play two matches for the medical charities, one in September and the other in April, and it is hoped the public will support the efforts.

VESTRY MEETING.—The annual vestry meeting in connection with Garforth Church was held on Monday evening—the Rector (Rev. T. E. Wilkinson, M.A.), presiding. All the officials were re-elected as follows:—Churchwardens, Messrs J. W. Conner and W. Armitage, B. Braham, B. Chadwick, J. Domain, J. Dale, E. Hodgson, S. Matthews, W. Roberts, J. H. Smith, and Geo. Wilson. On the motion of the Rector, seconded by Mr Silberry, the churchwardens and sidesmen were thanked for their services. It was reported that on the church expenses account there was a balance in hand of £4. 7s. in hand, and, on the motion of Mr J. Neal, seconded by Mr B. Braham, a vote of thanks was passed to Col. Gascoigne for a donation of £25. A discussion ensued in regard to raising money for the diocesan finance scheme, and it was agreed that the church officials should raise the £14 necessary. A vote of thanks to the Churchwardens on the call of Mr Peele, seconded by Mr Braham.

PICTURE HOUSE.—Capital programmes have been submitted at the popular Picture House this week, and the principal films for to-night and Saturday are "The Prisoner of the Harem" and "The Mysterious Airship," which first attention from first to last. Other good pictures will be screened. For next week the management have again secured some specially fine pictures, and patrons of the house will no doubt thoroughly appreciate their enterprise. On the first three nights of the week will be shown a detective drama, will be an outstanding attraction. It will show the exciting and thrilling adventures of an English detective in tracking down a band of French criminals, and the feature is a race between an aeroplane and a motor-car. "The Broken Oath" will depict an exciting struggle on a cliff edge, and "Oh, Rosie O'Brien" will cause roars of laughter, while "Dare devil motor-racing" on a half-mile track in America should provide some exciting moments. On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday a drama "A Fight for a Fortune" will be an outstanding film, and, with its exciting situations and hair-breadth escapes, will provide interesting enough for anybody. "The Children of Destiny" is a pathetic child study, and "Mabel's new hero" and "Sunset on an Indian Ocean" (a delightful picture) will also be shown. For times and prices see advt.

THE MINERS' STRIKE.—Balloting took place throughout the Yorkshire coal fields on Tuesday on the question as to whether the men would accept the proposals of the Coal Conciliation Board and resume work at once. As was anticipated, the poll at the various centres was scanty. At Garforth, for instance, only about a hundred miners met at the Liberal Club. They heard an address from their delegate, recorded their vote, and departed, vowing that they had voted against a settlement. Other miners in the district heard the same way with considerable animation. The vote was begun to see the possibilities of the situation. But they refused themselves to the conclusion that the Leeds men will save us out of the "Hole." The Miners' Institute, in York Road, Leeds, was a centre to which many a delegate and official from the surrounding districts brought the ballot boxes, into which his district men had previously placed their voting papers. So many miners live in Leeds and work outside the city that it is impossible to complete a ballot at the polling-booths alone, for the benefit of their families.

GREAT PRESTON

SPECIAL SERVICES.—Very appropriate services have been held at the church of St. Aidan's during Eastertide, commencing with the giving of the sacred cantata, entitled "Olivet to Calvary" on Palm Sunday afternoon by an augmented choir. Mr G. Bill was organist and Mr Dyer's string band. The Rev. J. Gregory conducted. A large congregation attended. During the week special evening services were conducted, and also on Good Friday there was a celebration at 8.30 a.m. and 10.30 a.m. In the evening of Good Friday a very instructive Lantern service was held, the subject being the "Crucifixion," and it was well attended. The church was suitably decorated for Easter Sunday, when Holy Communion was administered by the Rev. J. Gregory to over 100 communicants at 6.30, 8.30, and 10.30 a.m. On Sunday afternoon a very interesting children's service was held, and at the evensong the anthem "King of Kings" was well sung by the choir. A record collection was taken.

PARISH COUNCIL.—The annual meeting of the Parish Council was held in the Bowers Allerton Church Schools on Wednesday, and the members present were:—Messrs. Blackburn, R. (chairman), W. Bullock, B. Evans, J. Stockwell, and A. Simpson, with the Clerk (Mr W. Blackburn). The officers of the past year were re-elected as follows:—Chairman, Mr J. W. Blackburn; overseers, Mr R. W. Bower and Mr W. Longbottom; vice-chairman; Mr W. S. Blackburn; treasurer, Mr J. Longbottom. It was mentioned by the Clerk that only one person had applied for the lanes for grazing purposes. "Probably it is owing to the dust on the grass and other disadvantages" said Mr Bullock. "The motor traffic" said Mr Bullock. The Chairman: There hasn't much motor traffic in this parish and in several of the lanes there is none. To anyone in need of a bit of grazing several of the lanes are a very cheap farm, especially Fleckingley Beck Lane. Mr Simpson said he thought a motor danger signal should be placed at the Infant School. The school stood back from the road and motorists could not see it until they got to it, and the children attending the Infant School were not old enough to realise the danger. The Chairman thought that not many cars came down that road. Mr Evans: I have counted as many as 20 in a day. On the motion of Mr Evans, seconded by Mr Neville it was decided to ask the District Council to provide a danger signal above the school with a plate attached bearing the words "school." Mr Simpson also suggested that the N.E.R. Co. be asked to fix a rail fence to prevent persons running into the Kippax Station Bridge corner. Mr Bullock: People don't run into it. People walk very carefully past that corner to prevent colliding with it. The former monopolised half of the causeway, and the latter the other half. To put a rail was the duty of the Railway Co. The Chairman said the same question had been before the Council several years ago, but nothing had been done. Unfortunately, the railway people were very difficult to deal with. However, it was unanimously decided, on the motion of Mr B. Evans, seconded by Mr Simpson, that Mr Scott be written to for advice as to the steps necessary to be taken.

HALTON.

Dr. Fred W. Pogson, of Halton, left estate valued at £3,252.

On Saturday afternoon, playing in the Church Football League, Whitkirk G.M.I. were defeated by Leeds St. Hilda's R.C. by two goals to nil.

On Thursday evening a Primrose League whist drive and dance will be held in the Parochial Hall. Lieut. Boughey, R.N., will give an address. See advt.

DRAMATIC ENTERTAINMENT.—On Wednesday performances of the "Prisoner of Zenda," which will be preceded by a short play, which will be given by the Leeds Girls' High School, will be given in aid of the funds of the New Guinea Mission. See advt.

LIBERALISM.—On Saturday afternoon, the 25th, the annual meeting of the Barkston Ash Division Liberal Association will be held at Halton, and in the evening a public meeting in the Parochial Hall will be addressed by Mr W. M. R. Pringle, M.P., and Mr E. H. Foster, J.P., C.C. See advt.

KIPPAX

PUBLIC WORSHIP.—Divine service will be held in this church on Good Friday morning, when the Rev. B. B. Farlow, circuit minister (Castleford), was the preacher. The chapel anniversary services will take place on Sunday and Monday, when the Rev. W. R. Bird (London), a former minister in the circuit, preach morning and evening to good congregations. A Sunday-school service in the afternoon, when an address was given by the Rev. W. R. Bird, and special music was rendered by the choir. A public tea was provided in the schoolroom on Monday, and a meeting followed in the evening, when a report was presented by Mr W. H. Wilkinson, and the Rev. W. R. Bird gave a capital lecture on "W. E. Gladstone," before a fairly large audience.

MINERS' MEETING.—Meetings were held on Tuesday morning for the men employed at the various collieries in the district to consider the proposals drafted by the Conciliation Board, as to ballot for a settlement of the miners' wage dispute. The proposal for the grouping of collieries, other than those at which the minimum wage can be got most easily, has the advantage of having thicker coal seams, etc., for the purposes of the fixing of the minimum, did not meet with the approval of the men, their contention being that the proposals involved in the operation of a minimum wage agreement, viz., that of making provision for those men who are compelled to work under conditions that make the earning of the minimum impossible, was likely to be interfered with. The reply given by the delegates to this was that the minimum wage now obtaining is each separate district would not be adversely affected. A resolution to accept the proposals issued by the Conciliation Board and submitted to the meeting of the Garforth No. 2 branch, found few supporters on principle, but seeing that these proposals were on the ballot forms, a vote given in favour of going back to work, which idea seemed to be appreciated, was stated to be equivalent to agreeing with the proposals.

UNITED METHODIST CHURCH.—Special services were held in this church on Sunday, when Mr W. Sawyer, of Castleford, was the preacher. In the afternoon the choir gave a creditable rendering of the cantata "Christ our Redeemer," the solo parts were taken by Miss Halliday, Miss J. Snowdon, Mrs Townend, and Mrs. Irving Goodall (soprano), Mrs Hammond (contralto), Messrs R. and D. Smith (tenor), Mr J. Ratcliffe, Mr Jas. Farrant and Master H. Hollhead (bass). Mr W. Halliday played the organ accompaniments, and Mr J. Ratcliffe conducted, while Mr G. Plows presided. A public tea was held in the church on Monday, and this was followed by an excellent concert given by a number of the Sunday School children, under the direction of Mr Jas. Farrant.

FOOTBALL.—The Kippax Wesleyan footballers had their annual Easter outing to Carlton, near Barnsley, and had as their opponents the Carlton Wesleyans. A goodly number of lady friends accompanied the team. Miss Dawson (formerly of Kippax), and a late member of the Kippax concert party put the leather in motion before a good "gate." A six-a-side game was witnessed, and the visitors were defeated by 4 goals to nil, but this hardly represented the general run of play. The Kippax team were strong in attack, but lacked finish, and in addition were up against a sound defence. A pouring rain made the players very unproductive. The Kippax team was as follows:—Goal, H. Fawcett; backs, A. Parker and B. Fletcher; halves, G. Dickenson, H. Tebb, J. Sharpe, E. Eastwood, A. Billings (captain), and T. Hopkinson.

ST MARY'S CHURCH.—On Easter Day the festival of the Resurrection of Christ was most appropriately and thankfully kept by the Churchpeople of Kippax. The Holy Eucharist was offered at 7, 8.30, and 10.30 a.m., and the number of communicants exceeded last year's total at the same festival. The other services during the day were attended by very large congregations. The Rev. D. J. C. Swinny (of present residing at Kippax Park) preached an appropriate sermon in the morning, whilst the Vicar was the celebrant. At 2.30 p.m. the Vicar conducted a children's service, which was attended by about 200 of them. At the great importance of Easter. On Easter Tuesday a social was held in the Church Sunday School in connection with the sewing meeting. There was a very good attendance, and at the interval refreshments (provided by Mrs Smith and Mrs Carr) were served by the members of the sewing meeting. Mr H. W. Smith gave a numerous monologue, entitled "The 11.69 Express," which was accompanied by Miss E. M. Smith. After a short speech by the Vicar, Mr G. Green proposed a hearty vote of thanks to Mrs Smith and Mrs Carr, and it was carried. Mrs Smith suitably replied on behalf of herself and Mrs Carr. Mr Nowell, of Preston, acted as M.C. for the dancing.

LOFTHOUSE

BOXING.—A fairly large gathering of sportsmen witnessed an interesting series of boxing bouts in the Hippodrome, Wakefield, on Monday afternoon. The chief item was a ten two-minutes rounds encounter for a purse of £15c between Harold Little wood, Lofthouse, grimer's assistant, and Leo Ruddick, Leeds. The Lofthouse man had the advantage in weight, height, and reach. The first round was Ruddick's, but in the subsequent rounds Littlewood showed the fight in hand. Close in-fighting was freely indulged in in the second round. In the third round Littlewood caught his opponent on the point with a hard left hook, which sent him to the boards. The count was proceeding when Ruddick rose, but was immediately rushed to the ropes and knocked through them. He again found his feet, and this time Littlewood, fighting like a tiger, knocked his man down on the ropes, which gave way and caused Littlewood to fall on Ruddick. Before the count had expired Ruddick was once more on his feet, with Littlewood after him. Ruddick was again brought down, and the bell saved him. He made a marvellous rally, and fought the remainder of rounds pluckily. Both men tried for a knock-out but failed. Littlewood was declared the winner amid applause.

MIDDLETON

The body of a man recovered from the colliery pond at Middleton has been identified as that of Walter Shivell (58), slater, of Williams Yard, Hunslet. Shivell left home on March 25th, and has not been seen since again. He had been in failing health for some time.

METHLEY

THE LATE MR H. E. O'DWYER.—Mr Henry Ernest O'Dwyer, the second son of the late Mr Alfred C. O'Dwyer, of Burtonsin-Kendal, Westmorland, died at Methley, on Good Friday. Mr O'Dwyer, who was 42 years of age, was a son of the late Mr Henry Briggs, head of the firm of Henry Briggs and Co. (Ltd.), Leeds, and a cousin of the late Mr Arthur Currer Briggs, a former Lord Mayor of Leeds. He was associated with Messrs Henry Briggs, Son, and Co., Ltd., Normanton, for about 37 years. He came of a talented family, who combined sterling business qualities with skill in painting, etc. Another brother, Mr E. O'Dwyer, was for a number of years secretary for the Shap Granite Works.

MICKLEFIELD

CHOIR ANNIVERSARY.—Mickl field Wesleyan Church choir anniversary was celebrated on Sunday, and the preacher was the Rev. A. H. Peck, of Selby. In the afternoon the choir gave a most excellent rendering of the cantata "The Rock of Ages" (Witty), and the soloists were Mrs Rowe and Miss E. Taylor (sopranos), Mrs W. H. Sutton and Miss H. Taylor (contraltos), Messrs J. Wallis and S. Wallis (tenors), and Messrs C. Nicholson and E. Simpson (basses). All the parts were taken effectively and artistically, and the choruses were given in a manner, and the choruses were splendidly sung. Mr John Lund, of Glasshoughton, presided, and, in a few appropriate remarks, complimented the choir on recent successes. The Rev. A. H. Ripley preached in the evening to a large and appreciative congregation, and Miss E. Taylor, Miss Kippax, sang "Beyond the Down" and "Jesu Lover of my Soul" very effectively, while the choir rendered the chorus "Awake, awake." Mr J. T. Wallis presided at the conductor, and Mr W. H. Sutton presided at the organ.

MOOR ALLERTON

A MOOR ALLERTON BEAUTY.—A wedding of considerable interest took place in Moor Allerton took place at the Mill Hill Chapel, Leeds, on Wednesday afternoon. The bride was Miss Constance Ward, daughter of the late Mr Richard Ward, of Ward Lawson, of Moor Allerton, and the bridegroom Mr Douglas Blair, son of the late Dr. Blair, of Goole, and Mrs Blair, of Hazelside, Harrogate. The marriage is the result of a romance of the amateur stage, both parties having played a prominent part in productions of the Harrogate Society. The bride, who was given away by her step-father (Mr Joseph S. Lawson), was dressed in a corsage of crepe ninon, trimmed with lace and pearls. The draped skirt was of satin charmeuse, with panels of Crepe ninon and lace and pearls to match the corsage. The train, which hung from a big bow at the waist, was of silk tulle edged with lace, embroidered in pearls and diamanti. Miss Ward's attire of Brussells net, held in place by a wreath of orange blossom and white heather. Her bouquet was a shou of Madonna lilies, and she wore turquoise earrings, the gift of the bridegroom. There was but one bridesmaid—Miss Mary Blair, sister of the bridegroom. She was in a pretty gown of rose taffeta, with French knot collar and cuffs, and draped skirt with double pouffe caught up with gold and blue roses. Her hat was of biscuit-coloured straw, trimmed with roses and velvet ribbons. The Rev. Thos. Hargreave officiated at the ceremony, and music was played by Mr A. Farrer Briggs. Mr Percy Barker, of Harrogate—a well-known local amateur—was the best man. After the wedding a reception was held at Potooley's Rooms, and later in the day the happy couple left for Paris. The bride's going-away dress was of blue serge suiting, with draped skirt, and short coat finished with cabouchons of tartan ribbon at the waist.

OULTON

RATES.—The following rates for the township of Oulton-with-Woodlesford have been passed by the magistrates of the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions:—Poor rate 2s. 8d., special expenses rate 1d. The rates are now 2s. 4d. in the £. The latter is a reduction of twopence in the special expenses rate.

PRESENTATION.—An interesting event took place on the Oulton and District Bowling Club Green on Easter Monday morning, when Mr J. Wright, ex-setting of a silver rose bowl, was made the secretary of the club, Mr R. Wood Higgins, as a token of esteem from the members, and in appreciation of the services he has rendered to the club since its formation in 1901. The presentation was made by the Rev. W. R. Capel-Cure (vicar), one of the honorary members of the club, who was introduced by Mr E. Boothroyd. The latter referred to Mr Higgins' association with sport for so many years, he being one of the founders of the Oulton Cricket Club thirty-four years ago. The Vicar, in making the presentation, alluded to the position which Mr Higgins held with regard to the club, and spoke in high terms of the respect shown to him on all sides. Mr Higgins, who has been secretary of the club for five years, in acknowledging the gift, gave a short outline of the formation of the green, and a list of the committee and guarantors who assisted in its making. He also mentioned the strenuous efforts which would have to be made during the season by the club in connection with the Leeds Bowling Association League, and urged the members to get all the practice possible if they wished to win one of the two trophies.

ROUNDHAY

AT THE PARK.—The lovely and easily accessible Roundhay Park was the rendezvous of the usual crowds on Monday, and with signs of the advancing spring visible in the delicate green of leaves or buds on the trees and shrubs, the great expanse of the park formed a pretty sight. Ball games seemed to be popular with nearly every other group one came across, and boating was enjoyed by many. All the boats were comfortably in use, and the launch made trips round the large lake carrying bands of happy children. Paddling was indulged in to some of the smaller little ones. In the afternoon an appreciative crowd listened to a band performance.

SEACROFT

SUNDAY SCHOOL ANNIVERSARY.—On Sunday the Sunday School anniversary was celebrated at Seacroft Wesleyan Church. The preacher in the afternoon was Mr Andrew, of Leeds, and in the evening the Rev. Owen Jones occupied the pulpit. Mr Harry Johnson, of Crossgates, was the organist at both services. The collections were for the Sunday School funds. In the afternoon the Halton Wesleyan choir, assisted by the Seacroft Wesleyan choir, gave an anthem during the service, under the leadership of Mr Walbank, while Mr A. Bell was the organist. Mr Jenkinson presided, and Mr Andrew gave a short address. A vote of thanks was passed to the Halton choir on the call of the Chairman. The collection was for the choir funds.

VESTRY MEETING.—At the annual vestry meeting held in Seacroft School on Easter Monday the Vicar—reappointed Mr Wm. Carpenter as his warden, and Mr J. Roberts was elected people's warden. The following were re-elected as sidesmen:—Messrs D. B. Wilson and Mr G. Wraghy (vicar's), and Messrs G. T. Guest, H. H. Dyson, Arthur Lumb, and W. Thompson (people's). Mr J. Townend, junior, was appointed auditor. The churchwardens' accounts were presented and passed, there being a balance in hand of £9 os 11d. The following resolution was passed:—"That this vestry, being conscious of the unwarranted interference on the part of Parliament with the liberties of the Church, and the disenfranchisement clauses as set forth in the recent Welsh Bill, and the Bill for the disestablishment of the Church in Wales, and that the majority of the Bishops in the House of Lords be requested to reject the Bill."

STOURTON

BAZAAR.—A pretty floral bazaar was held in the Primitive Methodist Schoolroom on Monday and Tuesday. On the first day the opening ceremony was carried out by young men of the Rev. W. S. Spender (minister), presided, and he was supported by Councillor Elliot T. P. Wade and Councillor Robinson, of Leeds. Miss Elliot T. P. Wade contributed 50s., which, added to with the donations of Mr T. P. Wade and Mr T. Ellis 5s., brought the opening total up to £2 15s. On Tuesday the bazaar was opened by a number of children of the Sunday School, who handed in a sum of £5 which had been collected by them. These, taking part were: Gladys Crossley, Emily Gaskell, Hardy Bosomworth, Doris Wheeler, Pearl Radmore, Mabel Newton, and Edith Brady, and Harry Taylor, and James Watts, George Taylor, and James Robinson. The bazaar was declared open by Gladys Crossley. The children's purses were received by Mrs. Ellis. The Rev. W. S. Spender presided, and he was supported by the Rev. E. Barrett (a former minister), Councillor W. Wade, and Mr K. Fraser. Mr and Mrs W. Wade each gave £1, and Mr K. Fraser subscribed £1. There were numerous attractive stalls, which had been tastefully decorated. The total takings for the two days were over £35.

WHITKIRK

On Sunday there were large congregations at Whitkirk Church, and the offertories realized about £24.

Lady Dorothy Wood has kindly promised to lay the foundation stone of the new Church of England School building, which are to be erected at Belby parish of Hayton-cum-Belby, on a new site in the centre of the village on Wednesday, 22nd inst, at 4 p.m.

WILLIAM BOLTON, farm foreman, of Burn, was at Selby Petty Sessions on Monday fined 5s. and 9s. costs for drunkenness while having charge of three horses and a waggon.

EXHIBITS FROM ABEL.—The 17th annual conference of the National Association of Manual Training Teachers, which was held at the Technical College, at Beckett's Park, Leeds, was opened on Monday. In connection with the conference, a most interesting exhibition of specimens of the handiwork done by pupils in the various types of schools had been arranged, from the Adel Reformatory, in addition to many splendid exhibits in metal and wood carving, there were specimens of much articles of wear as hats, boots, shoes, and clothing.

SIR JOHN WILLIAM RAMSDEN, of Byram Park, died on Wednesday at his Buckinghamshire seat. He was in his eighty-third year, and had succeeded his father for no less than seventy-five years, having succeeded his grandfather in the baronetcy and in possession of the estate, which included nearly the whole of Huddersfield, in 1839. Just four years ago he transferred the estate to his son. The deceased baronet at various times represented several constituencies in Parliament, including the old borough of the West Riding, and afterwards Osgoldcross, as a Liberal. On the introduction of the Home Rule Bill in 1886 he became a Liberal Unionist, and at the following election was defeated.

WHIST DRIVE.—A very successful whist drive and dance, promoted in aid of the Aberfora Cricket Club, was held in the schoolroom on Monday evening, and 14 tables were occupied. The first inners of the Ladies' prizes were:—1, Miss Mary Simpson, 2 Miss M. L. Young, booby Miss Tomlinson. The winners of the gentlemen's prizes were:—1, Mr A. Nutton, 2 Mr C. Connell, booby, Mr F. Walkup. Mr Blakey presented the prizes. There was a good attendance at the dance, which was kept up till a late hour. A Council and Ably officiated as M.C.'s, and Mr W. Worsley supplied the music. The effort realised a profit of over £3.

CONFESSATION CASE.—At the Tadcaster County Court His Honour Judge Temple Bompas heard application case before him, in which William Killington, Hazlewood, wood seller, sued John Green, who was represented by Mr A. Coombe, Wakefield, for instalment of £2 10s. The plaintiff had lost a slight portion of one toe, and a part of a second one, but that there would be no permanent disability. A vote of £2 10s. was passed, and defendant was ordered to be paid weekly contribution, but offered £25, exempting out of thus plaintiff to pay the claim of the Board of Guardians and his own costs.—Dr. Satchard said he had performed the operation. Two toes were badly crushed, necessitating partial amputation. He did not expect that defendant would be permanently crippled.—Plaintiff accepted the offer of £25.

ACCIDENT.—An accident which happily involved no serious damage of any sort occurred on the N.E.R. system near Church Fenton Station on Monday morning. About ten o'clock while some goods waggons were being shunted two or three of them, from some cause not at present known, ran off the rails, with the result that the main line from Leeds to York was for the time being rendered useless. A good deal of north traffic had already gone over the line, but two excursions from Leeds to York had to travel via Selby. The work of clearing the line was soon undertaken after it was two o'clock before the track was clear for through traffic. The line from Leeds to York was in no way injured by the occurrence. Under the rolling stock immediately over the permanent way suffered any serious damage, and no person was injured.

INSURANCE AND RELIEF.—The Wharfedale Board of Guardians recently sought an increase in their annual grant from the Insurance Committee of their decision to disallow extra maintenance to insured persons who were in receipt of out-relief. At the meeting of the Wharfedale Committee was that it was not desirable that insured families should be granting the same sort of assistance to the same person, and, accordingly, they had resolved that in any case where the Poor Law relief was being received extra nourishment should not be granted by the Insurance Committee. Further, they considered that when relief was granted it should be at a definite rate, the circumstances of the case. The action was taken.

"DONE TO THE WORLD."—A verdict of "Found drowned" was returned at the inquest held at Acaster Malbis, on Saturday, on Tom Smith, aged sixty-five, lodging-house keeper, living in North Street, York, whose body was taken from the river on Thursday last, and who had been missing since March 13th. Deceased, it appeared, had been given, and D tective-Inspector Bennett said that he saw him on March 13th. He was very bad, and said he was "Done to the world." He had bronchitis very badly. He said he was a ruined man, as he had lost all his money, and was practically penniless. Witness found he had been pressed for money. The witness added when he went to Mrs and he visited Smith's premises to see if he could find some brass which he believed to be there. Smith refused to allow witness to go into the shop which he rented and witness produced a magistrate's warrant. When he searched the house, the witness could find no brass, but there was a lot of iron in the shop. He thought this matter had affected Smith, who, he had reason to believe, expected another visit from him. The medical evidence was to the effect that death was due to Surely in all the row of little houses down Leafy Lane, there was none so pretty as the one with the diamond panes in the windows, the sweet-scented curtains over spotless, the door short enough to open without stooping, and the steps white as country stone—but even so, usually splattered with smart new dresses or carelessly left umbrellas were remarked by Leafy Lane people. But all this was due to Peggy Jim the maid. Nobody kept two maids in Leafy Lane, and many kept none, but just did their own work, though they would not like to say so. Certainly, their work was of a different look since a pride in making things shine came under Peggy's hands.

"Hullo, Peggy!"

Two old maid-servants from the first of a much-admired row of villas had just stopped for a gossip in passing. Peggy was standing on the doorstep, and was just beginning to polish the brass knocker, when the two friends hailed her. Both were in their Sunday clothes—but it had loved—were displays in her cheeks—but she had loved—were doubly visible. Yes, there was a "she" in the case, and not so very long ago either, and the pessy and not so very long ago either, and the pessy and not so very long ago either, and the pessy

THE FLOWER GARDEN.

SPRING-FLOWERING BULBS.

The prevalence of high winds at this time of the year makes it imperative that daffodils, hyacinths, and tulips should be supplied with suitable supports to prevent them getting damaged. If each one is secured the flowers are kept clean, the stalks intact, and the flowering period is considerably lengthened.

Crocuses have just about finished blooming, and we take this opportunity of drawing our readers' attention to the fact that no greater mistake could be made than cutting away the foliage before it turns brown. The leaves are now performing an important function in building up the corm which will produce in turn next year's display of flowers. If the leaves are cut away before they have finished their task, the flow of sap ceases and the young corms are left incomplete and consequently weak. The lifting of bulbs for ripening purposes is often recommended, but we have no hesitation in describing it as a bad practice. There is no horticultural teacher like nature, and it is certainly unnatural to lift the bulbs out of the ground and subject them to a course of drying for the sun. The daffodils, snowdrops, and wild hyacinths flourish better in our woods than they do in any cultivated plot, and they never receive "ripened." Many of our spring-flowering bulbs are very impatient of removal and should always be planted in positions where they can be allowed to remain undisturbed for years. Noticeable instances of this may be found among the scillas, chionodoxas, and dogstooth violets. If left alone they will improve year by year.

WEED KILLERS.

Lovely-constructed garden paths are almost invariably weedy, and unless properly attended to are apt to become both a nuisance and an eyesore. The use of a reliable weed-killer at this time of the year is of great help in keeping the paths clean later on. It should be applied on a fine day, but whilst the paths are fairly moist from recent rains. If a thorough dressing is given there will be no further trouble from weeds this year, unless the summer turns out to be very wet. It must be remembered that the weed killer is destructive to all kinds of plant life, and care must be taken to prevent it coming in contact with grass edgings, or plants growing at the walk sides. Dogs, cats, and other household pets should be kept under control for a few days after using the weed killer, as it is invariably a deadly poison.

HARDY ANNUALS.

In gardens where greenhouse and cold frame space is available it is extremely easy to grow a quantity of half-hardy annuals for bedding purposes. Those who are not fortunate enough to possess these valuable adjuncts to a garden are faced with the alternative of either buying their plants or contenting themselves with hardy annuals. Under careful treatment a garden filled with hardy annuals may be made to look almost as effective as one containing the choicer half-hardy and tender plants. The seed is very cheap and we fear this is rather a disadvantage than otherwise. If it were dearer, a little care would be exercised in sowing it, but instead of the plants being grown in a compact mass, as we see them at present, they would each be allowed sufficient space to develop. It is to be feared that in many gardens the seed is scattered about indiscriminately, with the result that the ultimate effect is far from satisfactory. A little forethought is required to height, colour of bloom, and season of flowering, would be a help towards obtaining more gratifying results. The seeds should be sown thinly in the first place, and should be thinned out before they crowd each other. Dwarf varieties, such as Virginian stocks, may be omitted from this rule, but a fast apace is not to be made for such subjects as Shirley poppies, clarkias, godetias, cchcolzias, etc.

VEGETABLES.

KIDNEY BEANS.

French, or as they are commonly called, kidney beans, are a profitable crop and deserve careful attention. The end of April, or early in May, is quite soon enough to commence operations outdoor in this part of the country, if where early supplies are required, a few weeks may be gained by sowing a quantity of seed in pots in a cold frame now. A fairly rich compost should be used and this should be made moderately firm in 5" or 4-inch pots. Sow two seeds in each pot, and if both germinate, remove the weaker seedling when small. Grow the plants on in a light, cold frame, and treat them exactly like bedding geraniums. This will prepare them for being planted out about the end of May, and they should be given a sunny, sheltered position. The rows should be two feet apart, and the plants may be allowed a foot of space each in the rows.

MINT.

To keep up a clean, healthy stock of mint, it is advisable to make a new bed every second year. Some growers prefer the old method of lifting and replanting the roots, but experience has taught us that the best results are obtained by striking a quantity of cuttings; the best time to do this is while the young shoots are comparatively tender. They may be taken when about six inches long, and should have a small piece of the old root attached. Dibble them in separately in rows, and if a little sand can be placed at the bottom of each hole they may be placed about six or eight inches apart, and should be well watered immediately they are put in. If hot, dry weather follows, it will be necessary to syringe them every day to prevent them drooping badly. A semi-shaded or a sunny position suits mint equally well.

PLANTS UNDER GLASS.

The time has arrived when such plants as geraniums, fuchsias, marguerites, centaureas, etc., that have been growing in heated structures, must be gradually hardened off. If the other occupants of the greenhouses will stand it, it is a good plan to reduce the heat of the house for a few days first. The bedding plants may then be transferred to the cold frames, and when this is done extreme care must be taken when giving ventilation. Cold draughts should be carefully avoided, and water must be given sparingly until the plants get accustomed to their new quarters. Close the frames early in the afternoon for a week or two. This will conserve the sun heat and help to sustain the growth, and if frost threatens the frames must be carefully matted over early in the evening.

PANSIES AND VIOLAS.

Pansies and violas that have been subjected to the usual hardening process should be removed from the frames without further delay. It is a great mistake to allow them to remain in the frames until they get crowded and their roots grow across each other. If at all possible they should be planted straight away into their flowering quarters. If this is not convenient they may be planted six inches apart in nursery beds, but, and this cannot be impressed on the mind of the soil is dry they should be given a good drenching of water immediately after planting. This is very important, as newly-planted violas never flourish if dry at the root.

HERBACEOUS CALCEOLARIAS.

These charming plants are now commencing to bloom and should be provided with suitable supports before they fall over.

Insect treatment they have been subjected to during the last few weeks should have prevented green fly from obtaining a firm foothold. When the plants commence to bloom, however, the atmosphere must be kept dry, and this is usually followed by a sharp attack of the insect pest mentioned. As soon as the first few flies are noticed give them a few fumigations at intervals of three days. This will effectually clear out the pest. If really large specimen plants are required, it is obvious that a long season of growth must be given. Seed sown now will produce plants 4 feet across a year hence. They may be sown in a cold frame and given cool treatment until next autumn.

CINERARIA.

Cinerarias for Christmas flowering is a rather alluring proposition, but is one which may be looked upon with some suspicion. All the atmosphere must be kept dry, and this is usually followed by a sharp attack of the insect pest mentioned. As soon as the first few flies are noticed give them a few fumigations at intervals of three days. This will effectually clear out the pest. If really large specimen plants are required, it is obvious that a long season of growth must be given. Seed sown now will produce plants 4 feet across a year hence. They may be sown in a cold frame and given cool treatment until next autumn.

VINES.

The persistent removal of superfluous growths has a good deal to do with the successful growing of grapes. It is a great mistake to allow the latent and subsidiary growths to grow for a long length and then cut them out as if they were fodder plants. The shoots should be removed while they are quite small. This diverts the energy of the plant into building up the fruit, and allows light and air to do its share also. Mealy bug is likely to be very active now that the sun is so powerful. We have not yet heard of a better remedy than the persistent use of a good paint brush soaked in methylated spirit. This destroys the nests of eggs, crushes or otherwise kills a quantity of the living bug, and undoubtedly reduces the danger of the fruit being spoiled.

A man of seventy-eight, James White, was sent to penal servitude for three years at London Sessions for burglary.

UNION RE-VALUATION.—In the annual report of the Wharfedale Assessment Committee, presented by the Clerk (Mr E. C. Newstead), at the meeting of the Wharfedale Board of Guardians, the attention of the Committee was called to the increasing difficulty of obtaining a sympathetic hearing in respect of an appeal against the county rate because of the want of uniformity in the system of assessment in the Wharfedale Union. As the result of careful investigation, he had come to the conclusion that in most of the townships—both urban and rural—the property was not assessed at its true rateable value, and he suggested that it would be wise to appoint a qualified valuer to reassess the whole Union. Mr Hornsby Jackson (chairman of the Assessment Committee) said there was a great need for more uniformity, as there were serious discrepancies. The cost of a re-valuation would be considerable, but it was proposed that it should be spread over three years. It was left with the new committee to come to a definite decision.

A SUCCESSFUL BREEDING SEASON.

[Readers are particularly requested to note that this series of Articles commenced with the first issue in January. In order to obtain their full value, the earlier articles should be read in conjunction with the current one].

A CASTLE HINT WHEN SETTING HENS.

During the breeding season annoyance and loss are frequently caused by having hens bring off only small batches of three or four chicks, when there is unavoidable waste of eggs, but unavoidable waste of hens, and addlet they are sitting they are not laying.

To obviate this, don't set one hen at a time, but endeavour to put down four or five at once. On the fifth or sixth day of incubation, the fertility of every egg can be easily determined by the aid of an egg-tester. While the hens are feeling, remove the eggs, test them, replacing only those that are fertile, completing each nest, and if possible placing a new setting under one of the hens. For example, if we have sitting on sixty eggs, thirteen prove infertile, the remaining forty-seven eggs are placed under two hens, and the fifth can then be given a new setting, or if this is not desired, place her in a broody coop and afterwards return her to the laying flock. Remember Nature does not teach a hen to sit exactly twenty-one days, but she suddenly clings to the nest for quite a longer period, hoping to receive her reward of maternity.

An egg-tester can be obtained from any firm who deal in poultry appliances for a couple of shillings, with directions for use.

TO CURE BROODINESS.

I cannot allow this opportunity to pass without condemning as forcibly as possible some of the remedies advocated and practised to cure a hen of broodiness; for, it is difficult to believe in the cruelty enlightened age that such barbaric and wicked customs can obtain. I refer in particular to starvation, whirling birds round in the air, and cold-shrinking. Not only are they needlessly cruel and inhuman, but they also involve pecuniary loss to the owner, as birds subjected to such treatment can never afterwards be the same source of profit. In what does the remedy consist? Simply by affording the hens plenty of exercise. Voluntarily she will take none, nor insolent, but she is simply sitting; in fact, the majority will be perfectly content with a roughly-formed nest and half-a-dozen pebbles for eggs. Some advocate a cup of baths for a bottom, so that the hen cannot set. Personally I have found all that is necessary is an ordinary market flat, suspended by a cord in the centre. The bird, when placed in the flat, soon loses her equilibrium, and there is a constant scrambling on her part to regain and retain it. A few hours is sufficient in nearly every case to cure her, and this method is unnecessary cruelty to the bird, labour or inconvenience to the operator, and loss to the owner.

CONCLUSION OF THE HATCH.

My personal opinion is that the more a hen is left alone at the conclusion of the hatch the better are the results; it is true that chickens are sometimes extricated from the shell before they are ready, but if they are interfered with and disturbed this calamity is generally contemplated. Again, assistance in removing the shell in rare and isolated cases is advocated, and though I grant you an extra chick or two may occasionally be obtained by this method, I do not believe that it ever repays the trouble. Let the hen alone, and nature occupies one's attention to the detriment of the others, and finally it dies. No, the hen is hatching the eggs; don't usurp her prerogative, and it is a provision of Nature that the waster fails to extricate itself. As soon as you see the hatch is completed, remove the hen and chicks to the coop you have already prepared and for one night leave them alone. Food is unnecessary, in fact positively harmful during the first twenty-four hours of their existence.

HEALTH OF HUNSLET RURAL DISTRICT.

MEDICAL OFFICER'S ANNUAL REPORT.

TEMPLENEWSAM, OULTON, WOODLESFORD, MIDDLETON.

At the monthly meeting of the Hunslet Rural District Council held at the Council Offices, Lark Street, Hunslet, on Thursday, Dr. J. Buck (the medical officer) presented his 39th annual medical report, which was as follows:—

Births.—There have been registered in the whole district 185 births—98 males and 87 females. Of these, Oulton-cum-Woodlesford contributed 90, Templenewsam with Thorpe Stapleton 63, and Middleton 26. Estimating the population to midsummer, 1913, at 8,024, this gives a birthrate of 23.06 per thousand of the inhabitants, against 24.24 for 1912, and 26.73 for the quinquennium 1908-1912. The birthrate for England and Wales for 1913 is 25.9. There illegitimate births are included in the above.

Deaths.—During the corresponding period there have been registered in the whole district 85 deaths—44 males and 41 females. Of these, Oulton-cum-Woodlesford contributed 40, Templenewsam with Thorpe Stapleton 29, and Middleton 16.

Eight deaths (not included in the above) occurred in persons said to belong to the district, but dying in institutions outside, viz., 5 in Hunslet Union Infirmary, 1 in Leeds General Infirmary, 1 in Rothwell Isolation Hospital, and 1 in Beer Lane, Leeds, respectively.

Exclusive of these 8 deaths, the uncorrected death-rate for the whole district is 10.59; inclusive of these, the corrected death-rate is 11.58, and the uncorrected death-rate (calculated by means of the Registrar General's factor for correction) 11.70. The death-rate for 1912 was 10.22, for the quinquennium 1908-1912, 12.64, and for England and Wales in 1913, 13.7. It will thus be seen that though the death-rate for the year is above that of 1912, it is considerably below the average for England and Wales.

Summary of ages at deaths.—Under 1 year 20, over 1 year and under 2, 3; over 2 years and under 5, 4; over 5 years and under 15, 3; over 15 years and under 25, 5; over 25 years and under 45, 13; over 45 years and under 65, 19; and over 65 years and upwards, 25—total 93.

Causes of death.—Scarlet fever 1, diphtheria 3, erysipelas 1, pulmonary tuberculosis 8, tuberculous meningitis 1, cancer 4, organic heart disease 10, bronchitis 3, pneumonia 3, other respiratory diseases 4, diarrhœa and enteritis 2, appendicitis 1, nephritis and Bright's disease 5, congenital debility and premature birth 11, violent deaths 2, other defined diseases 24, and diseases ill-defined or unknown 3—total 93.

Infantile mortality.—There were registered 20 deaths in children under 1 year of age, being at the rate of 108 per thousand births registered, that of 1912 being 31, for the quinquennium 1908-1912, 77, and for England and Wales in 1913, 109. The causes of death were:—Tuberculous meningitis 1, convulsions 2, diarrhœa and enteritis 2, congenital defects and premature birth 11, other causes 3—total 20.

The infantile mortality rate is considerably above that of 1912, which was a remarkably low one, being the lowest for rural districts in the West Riding. It is still below the average for England and Wales, which is also considerably higher than in 1912. The climatic conditions of 1913 were unfavourable to a low infantile death-rate, and when it is stated that 11 deaths were registered of the 20 deaths were in children under 4 weeks of age, that only 2 deaths were registered from epidemic diseases (diarrhœa), a very large proportion of the 20 deaths were congenital defects were responsible for more than half, the rate may be considered on the whole very satisfactory.

The Midwives Act of Births Act has not been adopted in this district, owing partly to the absence of any excessive infantile mortality, and partly for want of some method to enforce it. Until the Act for adoption is rendered compulsory after April, 1914, it will be incumbent upon the Council to render the Act effective, either by the appointment of a permanent officer, or through the medium of the West Riding combined nursing scheme.

Zymotic diseases.—There were 8 deaths registered from the principal epidemic diseases:—Scarlet fever 1 diphtheria 3, erysipelas 1, and diarrhœa 3. The zymotic death-rate is 0.99 per thousand of the population, that of 1912 being 0.12, and that of England and Wales for 1913, 1.20. There were no deaths registered from measles, whooping cough, or enteric fever, and only one death from scarlet fever, notwithstanding the marked incidence of the disease in the district throughout the year.

Notification of infectious diseases.—There were 133 cases of infectious diseases notified, against 52 for the preceding year, inclusive of 19 cases of pulmonary tuberculosis and 9 of other forms of tuberculosis.

There were a number of cases notified, Oulton-cum-Woodlesford contributed 72—12 diphtheria, 4 erysipelas, 38 scarlet fever 1 enteric fever, 9 pulmonary tuberculosis, and 8 other forms of tuberculosis; Templenewsam with Thorpe Stapleton 57—14 diphtheria, 2 erysipelas, 33 scarlet fever, 7 pulmonary tuberculosis, and 1 other form of tuberculosis; and Middleton 4—1 diphtheria, and 3 pulmonary tuberculosis.

The increase in the numbers of scarlet fever and diphtheria is owing to these diseases having been more or less prevalent during the year in Oulton-cum-Woodlesford and Templenewsam.

Infectious diseases hospital.—Of the infectious diseases notifiable for removal (including phthisis), there were notified 27 cases of diphtheria, 71 of scarlet fever, and 1 of enteric fever. Of these, 16 diphtheria and 59 scarlet fever were removed to hospital, i.e., 73 per cent., a very large figure, considering the fact that at times, owing to the general prevalence of these diseases in the hospital area, patients could not be admitted on the day of accommodation. One death from scarlet fever, belonging to this district, occured in hospital.

Infectious diseases notified during the last eight years:—

	1906	'07	'08	'09	'10	'11	'12	'13
Scarlet Fever	75	37	12	31	31	7	28	71
Diphtheria	4	3	6	8	3	3	3	27
Enteric Fever	3	1	2	1	2	2	1	1

There is a marked increase in the scarlet fever and diphtheria figures, owing to the general prevalence of these diseases throughout the West Riding, and the district, but throughout the West Riding.—On the other hand, enteric fever is gradually becoming eliminated.

Scarlet fever.—There were notified 71 cases, against 28 in 1912. Of these, 59 occurred in Oulton-cum-Woodlesford, 33 in Templenewsam, and none in Middleton. Fifty-six cases were removed to hospital, and 1 death was registered from this cause.

The disease was prevalent throughout the year, and at Oulton it was deemed advisable to anticipate the holidays in July, and close the schools, more with a view to prevent further spread than on account of the number of children infected. The disease was throughout of a mild form. Much carelessness has been exhibited by parents in exposing infected children, and by indiscriminate visiting. More stringent measures by way of legal proceedings are necessary in the more flagrant cases.

Diphtheria.—Twenty-seven cases were notified —12 in Oulton-cum-Woodlesford, 14 in Templenewsam, and 1 in Middleton. A sudden outbreak occurred at Whitkirk in the beginning of the year, traceable to a neighbouring area of direct contact. On terms of prompt removal to hospital, isolation, disinfection, and careful observation of contacts, the disease was speedily checked. In other parts of the district, the cases occurred at intervals throughout the year, and did not assume an epidemic form. Three deaths were registered from this cause. The outbreak at Whitkirk was the subject of a special report.

Measles, whooping cough, and mumps.—These diseases were more or less prevalent throughout the district, during the year, but not sufficiently marked to render school closure necessary. There were no deaths registered from these causes.

Erysipelas.—Six cases were notified—4 in Oulton-cum-Woodlesford and 2 in Templenewsam. One death, in Oulton, was registered from this cause.

Disease.—Although climatic conditions were favourable to this disease, it did not assume any epidemic character, three deaths only being registered from this cause. Better housing conditions, the exclusion of all living wages, the abolition of privy middens, the paving and rendering impervious of back streets and yards, and the education of mothers as regards the feeding of infants, are all important items which cannot fail to have a salutary effect on this disease, which is such a potent factor in excessive infantile mortality.

Tuberculosis.—The notification of all forms of tuberculosis became compulsory this year. Twenty-eight primary notifications were received, as under form A, by medical practitioners, and 2 under form B, by school medical inspectors; 2 cases were notified under form C, on admission to sanatorium, and 1 under form D, on discharge from sanatorium. Of the 28 primary notifications, 19 were of the pulmonary type—9 in Oulton-cum-Woodlesford, 7 in Templenewsam, and 3 in Middleton, and 9 of other forms—5 in Oulton-cum-Woodlesford and 4 in Templenewsam. Four cases were removed to sanatorium, the remainder either being advised or refusing to go. There were 8 deaths registered from pulmonary tuberculosis and 1 from tuberculous meningitis.

Records of all cases have been taken, including the inspection of homes and surroundings, advice given, action taken, and, in case of death, disinfection of houses and bedding.

Sanatorium treatment as a curative agent is, in my experience, very disappointing.

The deathrate from pulmonary tuberculosis is 0.99, thousand, against 0.88 for 1912.

Cancer.—There have been 4 deaths from this cause 4 deaths—3 in Templenewsam and 1 in Middleton. The death-rate is 0.49 per thousand, against 0.73 for 1912—a very favourable figure.

Diseases of the respiratory organs.—Ten deaths were registered from bronchitis, pneumonia, and other diseases of the respiratory organs, the latter showing a considerable increase of 4 deaths—3 in Templenewsam and 1 in Middleton. The death-rate is 0.49 per thousand, against 0.73 for 1912—a very favourable figure.

Diseases of the respiratory organs.—Ten deaths were registered from bronchitis, pneumonia, and other diseases of the respiratory organs, the latter showing a considerable increase of 4 deaths—3 in Templenewsam and 1 in Middleton. The death-rate is 0.49 per thousand, against 0.73 for 1912—a very favourable figure.

Diarrhœa.—There were 6 inquests held in the district—3 in Oulton-cum-Woodlesford, 2 in Templenewsam, and 1 in Middleton. Of these, 2 were due to accident and 4 to natural causes.

Water supply.—There have been no changes in the water supply during the year. The supply continues plentiful and the quality satisfactory.

River and stream pollution.—The beck at Oulton has shown evidence of pollution, and complaints continue to be made. A joint meeting of this Council and Rothwell Urban District Council was held in January, with a view to the adoption of some measure for the better disposal of the sewage, but the matter remains in statu quo.

Milk supply and other foods.—There are 37 cowkeepers in the district, 17 of whom are milk-sellers, and 4 purveyors of milk. The number of cows and 2 in milk and of the 17 inspections were made. The general condition is satisfactory, especially as regards structure of the cowsheds; there, however, is much carelessness as regards the cleanliness of the sheds and the grooming of the cows. No particular circumstances has arisen during the year to necessitate the intervention of a veterinary surgeon, and there has been no inspector or action, to my knowledge, in connection with the milk supply, by outside districts.

No samples of milk or other food have been taken, nor have there been any legal proceedings under the D. C. M. orders. The above orders, samples under the Food and Drugs Acts is to be explored, and more activity in this direction is very necessary.

There are 7 slaughter-houses registered in the district, all of which have been found as satisfactory as structure and surroundings will admit; but as the district becomes more urban in character, the necessity for public abattoirs is much more obvious.

The cattle sales at Whitkirk are regularly attended, and any suspicious animals reported and kept under supervision.

Drainage and sewerage.—A scheme for the extension of Templenewsam sewage works at Halton is in hand and will be carried out in order to cope with the increasing quantity of sewage, and to render the treatment more efficient. Storm-water sewers have been laid to the extent of 470 yards, 84 yards of defective sewers and 27 yards of storm-water sewers still requiring improvement.

Two sink-wastes have been disconnected, 7 have been trapped, 5 still need disconnection, and 2 are untrapped.

Closet accommodation.—There are in the district 832 water-closets, 1 waste weir, 204 privies 1 combined with dustbin, 1 privies with open privies have been reconstructed as w.c.'s, and 31 other forms. Sixteen additional closets have been provided during the year, 2 only of which were water-closets as strictly necessary, and that of 1912 being 0.12, and that of England and Wales for 1913, 1.20. There were no deaths registered from measles, whooping cough, or enteric fever, and only one death from scarlet fever, notwithstanding the marked incidence of the disease in the district throughout the year.

Notification of infectious diseases.—There were 133 cases of infectious diseases notified, against 52 for the preceding year, inclusive of 19 cases of pulmonary tuberculosis and 9 of other forms of tuberculosis.

There were a number of cases notified, Oulton-cum-Woodlesford contributed 72—12 diphtheria, 4 erysipelas, 38 scarlet fever 1 enteric fever, 9 pulmonary tuberculosis, and 8 other forms of tuberculosis; Templenewsam with Thorpe Stapleton 57—14 diphtheria, 2 erysipelas, 33 scarlet fever, 7 pulmonary tuberculosis, and 1 other form of tuberculosis; and Middleton 4—1 diphtheria, and 3 pulmonary tuberculosis.

The increase in the numbers of scarlet fever and diphtheria is owing to these diseases having been more or less prevalent during the year in Oulton-cum-Woodlesford and Templenewsam.

Infectious diseases hospital.—Of the infectious diseases notifiable for removal (including phthisis), there were notified 27 cases of diphtheria, 71 of scarlet fever, and 1 of enteric fever. Erysipelas.—Six cases were notified—4 in Oulton-cum-Woodlesford and 2 in Templenewsam. One death, in Oulton, was registered from this cause.

Disease.—Although climatic conditions were favourable to this disease, it did not assume any epidemic character, three deaths only being registered from this cause. Better housing conditions, the exclusion of all living wages, the abolition of privy middens, the paving and rendering impervious of back streets and yards, and the education of mothers as regards the feeding of infants, are all important items which cannot fail to have a salutary effect on this disease, which is such a potent factor in excessive infantile mortality.

Tuberculosis.—The notification of all forms of tuberculosis became compulsory this year. Twenty-eight primary notifications were received, as under form A, by medical practitioners, and 2 under form B, by school medical inspectors; 2 cases were notified under form C, on admission to sanatorium, and 1 under form D, on discharge from sanatorium. Of the 28 primary notifications, 19 were of the pulmonary type—9 in Oulton-cum-Woodlesford, 7 in Templenewsam, and 3 in Middleton, and 9 of other forms—5 in Oulton-cum-Woodlesford and 4 in Templenewsam. Four cases were removed to sanatorium, the remainder either being advised or refusing to go. There were 8 deaths registered from pulmonary tuberculosis and 1 from tuberculous meningitis.

Records of all cases have been taken, including the inspection of homes and surroundings, advice given, action taken, and, in case of death, disinfection of houses and bedding.

Sanatorium treatment as a curative agent is, in my experience, very disappointing.

The deathrate from pulmonary tuberculosis is 0.99, thousand, against 0.88 for 1912.

Cancer.—There have been 4 deaths from this cause 4 deaths—3 in Templenewsam and 1 in Middleton. The death-rate is 0.49 per thousand, against 0.73 for 1912—a very favourable figure.

Diseases of the respiratory organs.—Ten deaths were registered from bronchitis, pneumonia, and other diseases of the respiratory organs, the latter showing a considerable increase of 4 deaths—3 in Templenewsam and 1 in Middleton. The death-rate is 0.49 per thousand, against 0.73 for 1912—a very favourable figure.

Diarrhœa.—There were 6 inquests held in the district—3 in Oulton-cum-Woodlesford, 2 in Templenewsam, and 1 in Middleton. Of these, 2 were due to accident and 4 to natural causes.

Water supply.—There have been no changes in the water supply during the year. The supply continues plentiful and the quality satisfactory.

River and stream pollution.—The beck at Oulton has shown evidence of pollution, and complaints continue to be made. A joint meeting of this Council and Rothwell Urban District Council was held in January, with a view to the adoption of some measure for the better disposal of the sewage, but the matter remains in statu quo.

Milk supply and other foods.—There are 37 cowkeepers in the district, 17 of whom are milk-sellers, and 4 purveyors of milk. The number of cows and 2 in milk and of the 17 inspections were made. The general condition is satisfactory, especially as regards structure of the cowsheds; there, however, is much carelessness as regards the cleanliness of the sheds and the grooming of the cows. No particular circumstances has arisen during the year to necessitate the intervention of a veterinary surgeon, and there has been no inspector or action, to my knowledge, in connection with the milk supply, by outside districts.

No samples of milk or other food have been taken, nor have there been any legal proceedings under the D. C. M. orders. The above orders, samples under the Food and Drugs Acts is to be explored, and more activity in this direction is very necessary.

There are 7 slaughter-houses registered in the district, all of which have been found as satisfactory as structure and surroundings will admit; but as the district becomes more urban in character, the necessity for public abattoirs is much more obvious.

The cattle sales at Whitkirk are regularly attended, and any suspicious animals reported and kept under supervision.

Drainage and sewerage.—A scheme for the extension of Templenewsam sewage works at Halton is in hand and will be carried out in order to cope with the increasing quantity of sewage, and to render the treatment more efficient. Storm-water sewers have been laid to the extent of 470 yards, 84 yards of defective sewers and 27 yards of storm-water sewers still requiring improvement.

Two sink-wastes have been disconnected, 7 have been trapped, 5 still need disconnection, and 2 are untrapped.

Closet accommodation.—There are in the district 832 water-closets, 1 waste weir, 204 privies 1 combined with dustbin, 1 privies with open privies have been reconstructed as w.c.'s, and 31 other forms. Sixteen additional closets have been provided during the year, 2 only of which were water-closets as strictly necessary, and that of 1912 being 0.12, and that of England and Wales for 1913, 1.20. There were no deaths registered from measles, whooping cough, or enteric fever, and only one death from scarlet fever, notwithstanding the marked incidence of the disease in the district throughout the year.

Notification of infectious diseases.—There were 133 cases of infectious diseases notified, against 52 for the preceding year, inclusive of 19 cases of pulmonary tuberculosis and 9 of other forms of tuberculosis.

There were a number of cases notified, Oulton-cum-Woodlesford contributed 72—12 diphtheria, 4 erysipelas, 38 scarlet fever 1 enteric fever, 9 pulmonary tuberculosis, and 8 other forms of tuberculosis; Templenewsam with Thorpe Stapleton 57—14 diphtheria, 2 erysipelas, 33 scarlet fever, 7 pulmonary tuberculosis, and 1 other form of tuberculosis; and Middleton 4—1 diphtheria, and 3 pulmonary tuberculosis.

The increase in the numbers of scarlet fever and diphtheria is owing to these diseases having been more or less prevalent during the year in Oulton-cum-Woodlesford and Templenewsam.

Infectious diseases hospital.—Of the infectious diseases notifiable for removal (including phthisis), there were notified 27 cases of diphtheria, 71 of scarlet fever, and 1 of enteric fever. Of these, 16 diphtheria and 59 scarlet fever were removed to hospital, i.e., 73 per cent., a very large figure, considering the fact that at times, owing to the general prevalence of these diseases in the hospital area, patients could not be admitted on the day of accommodation. One death from scarlet fever, belonging to this district, occured in hospital.

Infectious diseases notified during the last eight years:—

	1906	'07	'08	'09	'10	'11	'12	'13
Scarlet Fever	75	37	12	31	31	7	28	71
Diphtheria	4	3	6	8	3	3	3	27
Enteric Fever	3	1	2	1	2	2	1	1

There is a marked increase in the scarlet fever and diphtheria figures, owing to the general prevalence of these diseases throughout the West Riding, and the district, but throughout the West Riding.—On the other hand, enteric fever is gradually becoming eliminated.

Scarlet fever.—There were notified 71 cases, against 28 in 1912. Of these, 59 occurred in Oulton-cum-Woodlesford, 33 in Templenewsam, and none in Middleton. Fifty-six cases were removed to hospital, and 1 death was registered from this cause.

The disease was prevalent throughout the year, and at Oulton it was deemed advisable to anticipate the holidays in July, and close the schools, more with a view to prevent further spread than on account of the number of children infected. The disease was throughout of a mild form. Much carelessness has been exhibited by parents in exposing infected children, and by indiscriminate visiting. More

PRIMITIVE METHODIST BAZAAR AT ROTHWELL.

NEW ORGAN TO BE BOUGHT.

A successful bazaar promoted by the members of the Rothwell Primitive Methodist Church was held in the Council School, Carlton Lane, on Easter Monday and Tuesday.

The object was to raise £200, £100 for the new organ fund, and £100 for debt reduction, renovation, and the necessary expenses which will be incurred by installing the new organ. It is into the trustees commenced raising funds for a new organ to cost £2,000. Over £500 has been backed, and promises made will bring this up to £700. As the trustees wish to avoid increasing the debt they are waiting till the new organ fund reaches £1,000, before proceeding with the project, which would leave £300 to be to be raised by the opening services.

On the first day the opening ceremony was performed by twenty-old scholars, members and friends. Mr. J. B. Blackburn presided, and introduced by the Rev. W. G. Scaife (minister).

The following ladies and gentlemen took part in the opening ceremony:—Mrs Bulmer, Mrs Crouch, Mrs Handforth, Mrs Harrison, Mrs Kilburn, Mrs H. Lunn, Mrs Saddley, Mrs South-wort, Mrs Varley, Mrs. T. Ward, Messrs R. Batty, E. and J. Harrison, B. Illingworth, Joppling, A. Kilburn (jun.), H. Lunn, H. Milner, R. Naylor, C. Tiffany, Eli Ward.

Mrs. John Harrison spoke on behalf of the Ladies, and Mr R. Naylor acted as spokesman for the gentlemen. The contributions from the ladies were received by Thomas Tiffany, and those of the gentlemen by Charlotte Lunn.

A vote of thanks to those who had taken part was heartily carried on the proposition of Mr W. Thurwell, seconded by Mr G. Bramley.

On the second day the opening ceremony was performed by a number of children, who gave a choral cantata, entitled "The White Kariboo." The children, who had been trained by Miss Brown, Miss Bulmer, and Miss I. Thurwell, and Mr C. Tiffany, did their part well. Those who took part were:—Ethel Addison, Lottie Armitage, Percy Asleve, Harrison Belford, Dorie Bland, Stanley Asleve, Harrison Belford, Dorie Broom, Gwennie Buckley, Gladys Churchill, Emily Churchill, George Claybourgh, Roy Claybourgh, Mrs Crowther, Gladys Crowther, Mrs Dobson, Sarah Ellis, Mary Dobson, Horace Dobson, Sarah Ellis, Mary Dobson, Horace Dobson, Wilfred Evans, Evelyn Foss, Eva Goddard, Wilfred Hampshire, Maude Hepworth, Reginald Hill, Rose A. Holmes, Marjorie Jennings, Annie Rose A. Holmes, Marjorie Jennings, Annie Kilburn, Harry Kilburn, William Kilburn, Kilburn, Harry Kilburn, William Kilburn, Willie Lord, Charlotte Lunn, Fred Lunn, Sidney Lunn, William Lunn, Herbert Milner, Harry Lunn, William Lunn, Herbert Milner, Harry Naylor, George A. Naylor, John Naylor, Walter Sidebottom, Clifford Gertrude Parkin, Walter Sidebottom, Clifford R. Softley, Hilda Southwart, Elsie Smith, Eva Strangway, Frederick Strangeway, Albert Taylor, Rowland Taylor, Nellie Thurwell, Evelyn Thurwell, Clifford Tiffany, Olive Tiffany, Nellie Todd, Annie Walker, Emily Ward, Ivy Ward, John Ward, Tom Ward, Gwendolyn Williams, Marion Williams, and Horace Wright.

Mr F. Williams accompanied the musical portions.

The scholars contributions were received by Mrs W. Mackay, and a vote of thanks was moved by Mrs W. Thurwell, and seconded by Mrs A. Thurwell.

The stall-holders were:—Drapery (No. 1)—Mesdames Harrison, Adamson, and S. Sibley. Drapery (No. 2)—Mesdames W. Bulmer and Bramley. Apron Stall—Mesdames Harriman and L. Thurwell. Choir Stall—Lady members of the choir. Crockery Stall—Mesdames Thurwell, Handforth, Dobson, W. S. Taylor, and H. Taylor. Mixed Stall—Mr and Mrs T. Ward and family. Sweets and Fruits Stall—Mrs Southwart, Mr J. Wright, and the scholars of the 2nd Sunday School Classes. Wood Stall—Messrs W. and Mrs. Thurwell, and Mrs A. Warin. Miscellaneous Stall—Mrs. Illingworth, Miss Johnson, and Miss Ward. Refreshment Stall—Mesdames Lunn, Ward, Brown, Townend, A. Kilburn, J. Ward, Williams, H. Taylor, Bulmer, Milner, Bough, Evans, Taylor, Thurwell, Clifford Tiffany, Olive Tiffany, Chadwick, and Churchill. Hot Potatoes—Mr J. C. Harrison and other. Hot Peas—Mesdames R. Bulmer, H. Taylor, and others.

Concerts were provided each evening. On Tuesday the Rev. W. G. Scaffey announced that the total bazaar receipts amounted to £172 12s. 2d., which included the donations of £25, also similarly checked by Boyes. From a subsequent corner Appleby made no mistake in netting the fourth goal. A fifth was not long in forthcoming. Receiving a pass, Abrams made a smart dribble down the right wing, and he soon outpaced his opponents. A short kick put the leather beyond Boyes, who attempted to frustrate the movement, and, regaining possession, Abrams carried the ball within easy range and netted, the shot completely beating Nunns. The sixth goal was scored from a scrimmage in the goal mouth.

After the match the Cup was presented to the captain of the White Rose team by Mr J. H. Rawlings (Chairman of the Church's Cup Committee), Boyes received the medals on behalf of the Parish Church team.

On Monday at Selby Jobs Cullen, labourer, Birdby, was fined 1s. and 7s. 6d. costs for riding a bicycle without a light on Ousegate, Selby, on the 1st inst.

RATES.—Councillor T. S. Ullathorne presided at a special meeting of the Selby Urban District Council, on Monday. The general district rate of 9s. 8d. in the £ was made and sealed. The rate is the same as last year.

"THE WETHERBY CROWD."—Between twelve and one o'clock on Monday at Leeds (says a writer) the throng was immense, and it was a period it was no easy matter to get into the New Station, let alone secure a ticket. The Wetherby race crowd were, of course, largely in evidence about that time, but they by no means formed the bulk of the crowd. There was as gay a crowd as one could wish to see, and judging from the affectionate manner in which some of the neatly-dressed girls—to say nothing of the over-dressed ones—who hung on the arms of the "nuts" and "super-nuts," a quiet walk in the country or by the sea appeared likely to form as big an attraction as the horse at Wetherby. There is more than one way of spending a holiday.

IMPROVEMENTS AT WETHERBY RACE-COURSE.—The promoters of the race meetings at Wetherby have reaped a rich harvest as the result of the enterprise they have shown in the conduct of their gatherings, and it is pleasing to learn that the commendable policy which has brought such excellent results in the past is not to be departed from. Since the last meeting the motor enclosure has been considerably enlarged, but even now it is not big enough, as was proved on Monday, when there were close upon 500 vehicles of all descriptions on the course; and it has been decided to make a further addition of two acres. Another scheme under consideration is the making of a new road leading from the back of the grand stand, through the town to the station. This is a most desirable improvement, as those who had to make use of the road along the side of the course on Monday can testify.

DEMONSTRATION AT BOWERS ALLERTON

PARADE AND CONCERT.

The popularity of the Temperance cause at Bowers Allerton was well proved on Good Friday, when in the afternoon the large body of Hope sang hymns especially written for the occasion, assisted by about eight violinists, and conducted by Mr Richard Bullock (president of the Society), at various points in the village. A collection was made, and, in spite of the industrial stoppage, it was better than any of the previous nine annual collections. An excellent tea was provided for the parishes of by the 173 scholars and 20 teachers.

In the evening a very good concert was thoroughly enjoyed by the parents and friends of the members, the room being crowded. Mr Parker (vice-president) presided, and expressed a feeling of satisfaction at working towards the cause, raising up of a generation of more temperate, and, therefore, better citizens. The recitation "Opening Speech" by Miss Daisy Robinson, and afterwards the duet "Song of the Blacksmith" by the rousing glee "Song of the Blacksmith" by the rousing glee "Reading time at Daisy Farm," which Master James Bullock recited "When shall we win." The musical sketch "Heroes of the nursery rhymes" was well appreciated, as "Song of Sixpence," "Mouse Trap," and "Under the Old Umbrella" were excellent action songs. In the "Ribbon dance" 11 girls performed very creditably, and Miss Rhodes sang "I'm so shy."

Mr I. Robinson, on behalf of the committee, moved a vote of thanks, in which he included the parents and friends who had so generously given the provisions for the tea, Mrs Bullock and the friends who had again so well served the room, and the President Mr Richard Bullock, and Misses Robinson and A. Parker, who you taken so much care of the training of the children, while the parents were also included for kindly providing the necessary dresses and accessories for the charming out of the concert. Mr C. C. H. Boood briefly seconded, and it was carried.

The concert was resumed with a "Tambourine dance" by 12 girls, and was followed by the duet of the smallest children in nightdresses, with candles, and their dollies, and was very amusing.

WORK-A-DAY WONDERS.

I.—TELLS HOW A CLEVER WOMAN UNDECEIVED THE NEIGHBOURS.

"Yes," said Patty, "I've always been fond of experimenting. Directly I hear tell of a likely thing I want to try it—and that's how I came to use Diamond Dyes.

"I had been disappointed ever so many times before, and had come to the conclusion that the way that looks too easy at the beginning generally turns out pretty hard in the end. So when I read that if you want to dye a woollen coat you must use a proper silk-and-wool Diamond Dye, and when you want to dye a cotton frock you must use a cotton Diamond Dye, then I said to myself—Now, Patty, get on with your experiments. Take the same serge skirt that you spoilt with the one-tablet-for-everything dye, and do it all over again, and if it comes out like new—show it to the neighbours!

"I got down the poor patch-dyed skirt and looked at it; then I went out to the stores and bought a sixpenny packet of Diamond Dye for wool. They gave me a first-class instruction book with pictures and full directions, and I followed the rules to a T. I got my skirt dyed a most lovely deep blue, and when it was dried and pressed I asked the neighbours to come and inspect it inside and out—so you may guess how it looked!

"They had had the laugh at me before, but the tables are turned now and no mistake, for Mrs Finch—the most part-collar lady in our street—has asked me if I will kindly Diamond-dye her best silk blouse!"

RAILWAYMEN'S FESTIVAL.—On Good Friday the members of the Milford Junction branch of the Railway Union of Railwaymen made their annual effort in aid of the Widows' and Orphans' Fund. The Milford Junction Silver Band performed selections, South Milford, Monk Fryston, and Hillam, and collections were made en route. Fine weather prevailed, and a large number of people from the surrounding district gathered at Monk Fryston, where a public tea was provided in the Concert Hall. A committee of ladies and gentlemen had made excellent arrangements, under the capable direction of Mr J. Stockdale, branch secretary, and the following ladies presided at the tables:—Mesdames Askew, Atkinson, Agus, Beaumont, Britton, Beckham, Hill, Clarke, Skelton, Stockdale, Stephenson, Dickenson, Newby, Thompson, and Misses Beaumont, Cawthorne, Agus, Baker, Terry, Walker, Levitt, Hester, Stockdale, and Pinder. In the evening the Rev. B. Hemsworth, M.A., J.P., presided over a crowded gathering, and a service of song, entitled "Amy Howard's Reward," was admirably rendered by the Milford Junction N.U.R. Choir, assisted by an Orchestral Band, under the conductorship of Mr John Hemingway. The Chairman said it gave him great pleasure to be present at such an important gathering. It was a pleasing duty to him to help such a worthy object, and he was glad to see others doing the same. He hoped the Union would get increased support. The annual report was presented by Mr J. Stockdale. The descriptive readings of the service of song were excellently given by Mr J. Coldwell, and the accompanist was Mr H. Batty. On Sunday evening the service of song was repeated before a large gathering, and the Rev. W. M. C. Clarke (Vicar of Monk Fryston) presided. Collections were taken both on Good Friday and Sunday. It is expected that the proceeds are in advance of previous years.

BARKSTON ASH FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION.

APPEALS BOARD'S AMAZING MUDDLE.

On Wednesday evening at a meeting of the Deighton Shield Competition of the Barkston Ash Football Association, held at the Station Hotel, Crossgates, the muddle in the following case was brought about by forth v. South Milford, case brought about by the West Riding Appeals Board (Messes Waterhouse and Brunt) was again under consideration. Mr J. R. Botty, of South Milford (President), was in the chair, and the other members present were Messrs. A. Flowith (hon. treasurer), W. A. Osborne (hon. secretary), Alf Johnson, Inman (Aberford), and T. S. Slater (Garforth).

The Hon. Secs. in answer to a question, said that Garforth lodged an objection against South Milford playing Chilton, who they held was ineligible, but the Barkston Ash Executive overruled it. Garforth then appealed against the decision, and the West Riding Appeals Board (Messrs Waterhouse and Brunt) sustained the objection, and ordered a replay. Garforth appealed. The case was subsequently reopened, and the match was ordered to be re-played, also stated that Chilton, by that decision, was eligible to play for Monk Fryston.

The Hon. Sec. said that he afterwards wrote to Mr Brunt on the matter, and he replied that Mr Waterhouse ruled that Chilton was eligible to play for South Milford. On Monday he (Mr Osborne) came across Mr Waterhouse, and he asked him what his ruling really was, and he would not give him an answer. He met him again on Tuesday, and asked him where they stood. If, he put it, Chilton was eligible to play for South Milford why replay the match, but, on the other hand, if he was ineligible, it was Garforth's match. He (Mr Waterhouse) told him he ruled that the match stand as played. He promised to let him have that decision in writing, and he likewise told him to wire Mr Brunt his decision. He telegraphed to Mr Brunt the decision given by Mr Waterhouse that the match stand as played, and he had received a reply confirming Mr Waterhouse's decision.

The President: They have simply played and fooled about with it.

Mr Slater: It wants to go to the West Riding Association, and that is what it will do.

Mr Binns: Why should a matter like this be dependent upon one man's word?

The Hon. Sec. said the Appeals Board consisted of three members and one did not attend.

Mr Binns proposed that the whole of the evidence be placed before the West Riding Association and that their decision be asked upon it.

Mr Slater said that if they accepted the third division either club could appeal to the West Riding Association.

Mr Inman: We took the Appeals Board's decision that the match should be re-played as final at first meeting, and we decided that there should be a replay. Why should it come on again?

The Hon. Sec.: We have had all this correspondence since.

Mr Inman: It is a great muddle. They have undone their own work and they have undone ours, too.

Mr Flowith seconded the proposition.

A long discussion ensued, and eventually Mr Binns's proposal was withdrawn.

Mr Flowith then proposed that the decision of the Appeals Board that the match between Garforth and South Milford stand be accepted, and that South Milford meet Wetherby in the final at Tadcaster on Saturday.

Mr Heap seconded.

Mr Slater said that they could pass that resolution if they pleased, but Garforth would appeal to the West Riding Association. He then left the room.

The motion was put to the meeting and agreed to.

At York on Tuesday George Bentley (30), Tadcaster, drayman, was fined 10s. and costs for being drunk whilst in charge of two horses and a dray in Bishopgate Street the previous evening.

AN INCIDENT AT WETHERBY RACES.—James Schofield, alias Alfred Moore, was sentenced to a month's imprisonment at Wetherby, on Thursday, for loitering at the races with intent to commit a felony. Prisoner, against whom there were 46 previous convictions, was seen by the detectives to tap an elderly gentleman's pockets and to lift up his coat-tails.

SHERBURN PETTY SESSIONS.

FENTON, ABERFORD, AND MICKLEFIELD CASES.

At Sherburn Petty Sessions on Thursday the magistrates present were Lol. Gascoigne, D.S.O. (Chairman), Rev. R. Hemsworth, Mr. Walter Crosland, and Mr Wm. Crosland.

The temporary transfer of the licence of the Crossed Bible, Saxton, from W. E. Warrington to John Swaingrove, was granted.

Mr Cyrus Dixon, Red Bear Hotel, Sherburn, applied for an hour's extension for the 23rd of April for a concert and presentation. It was granted.

The following poor rates were allowed:—Saxton 2s. and 1s.; Lead, 2s. 4d. and 1s. 2d.; Sherburn, 2s. and 1s., and special expenses, 6d.; Lotherton, 2s. and 1s., and lighting rate, 1½d.; and Micklefield, 1s. and 1½d.

Thomas Mattinson, miner, Boderton, was charged with having been drunk and disorderly on the 26th ult. at Brotherton. Fined 10s. and 5s. 6d. costs.

David Townend, miner, Aberford, was charged with using obscene language on the 4th inst. Defendant pleaded not guilty. P.C. Cooper stated he was at Lotherton Park Farm sale, and the defendant used very bad language there. John Oldfield, a witness for defendant, stated he never heard him use obscene language. Fined 5s. 6d. and 12s. 6d. costs.

Harry Oldfield and Ernest Cooper, of Lotherton, were charged with gambling with coins on the 4th inst. P.C. Cooper stated he saw the defendants at Lotherton Park Farm, and they were playing at "pitch and toss." Fined 2s. 6d. and 5s. 6d. costs each.

Thomas Hodgson, farmer, Little Fenton, was charged with having a dog without a licence on the 29th ult. at Biggin. P.C. Whitehead stated the defendant had applied for the licence, but he had not got one. Defendant said he applied for an exemption, but he had not got one. It was stated the dog was a terrier.—Fined 1s. and 7s. 6d. costs.

Robert Standbig, labourer, Little Fenton, was charged with keeping a bear pig for sale. Prisoner without being registered, on the 29th ult. The defendant pleaded ignorance. The Chairman said as it was the first case they had had under the Act, they would dismiss it on payment of costs, but warned defendant as to his future conduct.

Cyril Parsons, a small boy, from Micklefield, was charged with cruelty to a cat on the 29th ult. Defendant pleaded guilty. P.C. Cooper stated that, from information received, he visited defendant's father's house, and he saw a Mr. defendant's father's house, and he saw a Mr. defendant's father's house, and he saw a black cat which had been cruelly ill-treated by defendant. Its eye protruded and its head had been battered in with a stick. The Chairman said that on account of defendant's youth they would dismiss the case on payment of costs, but warned defendant as to his future conduct.

ROTHWELL CHARITY FOOTBALL CUP FINAL.

CRUSHING DEFEAT OF ROTHWELL P.C.

The final for the Rothwell Charity Football Cup(Hook plate at Rothwell High on Tuesday afternoon, the contesting teams being R thwell Parish Church, who have been in the semi-finals of the Cup for the last two seasons, and Rothwell White Rose. There was a good crowd to witness the struggle, and the colours of the respective teams were gaily sported on all hands. The game was controlled in an able manner by the referee. Both teams were confident of success.

The match was a run-away affair for the White Rose, and, after the first three goals were scored, the Church team were a beaten side. Nunns, their custodian, had practically no chance of stopping the shots put in by the opposing forwards, who were a dashing combination. Heaton, the White Rose goalkeeper, had a comparatively easy time, and throughout the whole match was not called upon more than three or four times.

The teams were as follows:—Rothwell P.C.—Goal, Nunns; backs, J. Boyes and F. Stringer; halfbacks, J. Gregg, G. Woodhead, and G. Hilldesley; forwards, Taylor, W. Taylor, Hudson, J. Kelly; forwards, Taylor, W. Taylor, Hudson, J. Lunn, and H. Shires.

Rothwell W.R.—Goal, Heaton; backs, Dawson and Ripley; halfbacks, Tiffany, Holmes, and Taylor; forwards, Hughes, Wrigley, Parfitt, Appleby, and Abrams.

Taylor, the White Rose captain, won the toss, and placed his men with the breeze. Dawson and Hitch'n kicked off for the Churchmen, who at once attacked, but they met with the Rosebuds gained much valuable ground from a free kick awarded for a foul by Stringer. A corner was forced, but nothing came of it. The Churchmen played a plucky game with the sun in their eyes. The first incident of note was a brilliant run down the right wing by Hughes, who recovered the ball from a throw-in about midway. The tactics of Stringer, who followed close at his heels, caused him to overrun the leather, and the ball rolled dead. For the next five minutes the Churchmen penned their opponents in their own half, and their efforts looked promising until a clever pass by Parfitt put his side out of the danger zone. The ball was followed up well by Appleby, who escaped a shot which was only saved by Nunns, resulting out of goal. It was now the White Rose's chance, and they played with a decided keenness. Obtaining possession well up in the Churchmen's half, Abrams centred the ball, which was kicked about in a startling fashion right in front of the goal mouth, but Boyes managed to secure it and kicked it clear. Still the Rosebuds pressed, and a neat dribble up the field was made by Appleby, who passed to Abrams, but once more Boyes proved a stumbling block. A run by Hughes yielded the first goal. He got the ball well up and cleverly centred to Parfitt, and that player headed into the net. His success was followed by a loud roar from the supporters of the blue and whites. The Rosebuds again attacked determinedly, and after another five minutes' play Parfitt again scored, from a well-timed pass from Hughes. The Churchmen thereafter retaliated, and a corner was forced, but it was without result. Behind the interval Hughes scored a third goal from an awkward angle, and soon afterwards a fourth. In the second half the Churchmen had a hopeless task. Try how they would, they were unable to penetrate the stronghold of the Rosebuds, while to render matters worse, Kale was obliged to leave the field of play. Off-side play by the Churchmen left the opposing forwards well up, and Appleby started a promising movement, but he was smartly checked by Boyes. From a subsequent corner Appleby made no mistake in netting the fourth goal. A fifth was not long in forthcoming. Receiving a pass, Abrams made a smart dribble down the right wing, and he soon outpaced his opponents. A short kick put the leather beyond Boyes, who attempted to frustrate the movement, and, regaining possession, Abrams carried the ball within easy range and netted, the shot completely beating Nunns. The sixth goal was scored from a scrimmage in the goal mouth.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT JOTTINGS.

A little straight talk does good sometimes, and I want those engaged in local administration in Tadcaster, Selby, Wetherby, Hunslet, Rothwell, and Garforth areas to make a note of the remarks of the medical officer of Rothwell district. He states:—

It is little good preaching about ventilation and fresh air when windows wont open, or talking of the danger of fly-infected food and milk when the house is absolutely devoid of even any pretence of pantry accommodation and it is futile, indeed, for a health visitor to attempt to teach mothers how to rear healthy children when walls are damp, or to eloquently discourse on the manifold blessings of the presence of sunlight in a home when the windows are so small that unless carefully looked for their very presence may easily remain undetected. It ought to be remembered that germs, like most evil things, love to lurk in darkness, and it ought to be borne in mind that sunlight is one of the very finest germ destroying agencies we possess, and if we wish to have sunlight in our houses we must obviously provide a sufficiency of window space.

The medical officer points out that if we are to have healthy children, and also if such diseases as consumption are to be stamped out, then we must have people living under healthy conditions.

The cry of the children! The medical officer of health for Rothwell states:—

"In these days when the only playgrounds left to the children are the side streets and yards, it becomes increasingly necessary that such places should be made sanitary and not be left as quagmires, as many of them undoubtedly are in wet weather."

What about the private streets of Garforth?

The great ambulance parade, promoted in connection with the Aberfoyle League, should attract thousands of people to Monk Fryston Park on Saturday, May 2nd. The bazaar itself will be held in the picturesquely pointed Alpine Hall, and the Countess of Scarbrough has promised to perform the opening ceremony. Monk Fryston Park is an ideal spot for a function of this character, and the gathering should be the most attractive local event of the year. Have you seen "Bonnie Stocking?" In that picturesque scene maypole and Morris dancing will take place, the maze will permit people to lose themselves for a time, and the wonderful collection of wild birds and animals to be ringing together in the Squire will prove of interest to visitors to the place. Among the other attractions promised are entertainments by the Cherry Society and Pierrots, dramatic sketches, magical illusions, rifle shooting competitions, chiromancy, etc. A delightful afternoon may be spent at Monk Fryston Park, and I have no doubt that the bazaar will prove the great success its promoters hope it will be.

A story which is now going the rounds looks like an old friend in a new dress. It is as follows:—"Prince Arthur of Connaught is telling an amusing experience that happened to him a few Sundays ago. He was present at service at a country church some little distance from his Yorkshire home (Hutton Hall, Marston, near Tadcaster), when, just before the service commenced, everyone suddenly rose in their seats. His Royal Highness could not see the reason for this and inquired of those about him. The lord has arrived," was the surprising whisper he got in reply. Subsequently, however, he found that the lord and lady of the manor had entered, but, as he confesses, he received a bit of a shock at first."

Not content with a largely-increased rate, certain members of Barwick Parish Council are determined apparently to cut down administrative expenses, and the first victim proposed is the assistant overseer. One member suggested that £500 or £1000 per annum might be saved in seven or eight years on this official's remuneration, but he has only £80 a year all told, so that if such a sum were saved the work would have to be done for practically nothing. The assistant overseer has a house at the offices at Scholes, but that is largely for the convenience of the Council, and he is in the position of a caretaker.

It was stated that the assistant overseer's work had been reduced by half owing to the withdrawal of Crossgates—but figures do not substantiate that assertion. In 1911-12 Barwick, Scholes, and Crossgates had a rateable value, according to the Guardians' year book, of about £22,000, and the figures for Barwick and Scholes are now about £14,000. The assistant overseer has certainly less work, but on the other hand, he has had additional duties in connection with the management of the parish property to carry out. The irony of the situation is that the assistant overseer was offered a position equally good in other work, but he preferred to remain loyal to the Council. In regard to making the job a part-time one, the difficulty of a man living at Scholes getting suitable employment and at the same time giving to the parish work the attention it requires, is obvious. There is, however, no call for it. Allerton Bywater, with a rateable value of £15,000, and Kippax, with £12,000, employ assistant overseers, and is Barwick to lag behind?

Remarkable evidence was given the other day by the police to the great improvement in the mining population of the district, when an officer stated that "miners are gentlemen nowadays." The old, hard-drinking class of colliers is fast dying out, and in visiting such places as Garforth, Rothwell and Kippax, one could not distinguish the miners from the better class artizans of the towns and cities. No more are the Sundays spent in drinking and rioting, and a good many of the men are actively engaged in religious and social work.

In the old days when the Munston Collieries were in full swing, and when policemen were not as plentiful as they are now, the miners used to congregate on Sunday mornings at the Horse pub—now an ordinary dwelling house—in the Primrose Valley at Halton, and settle all their differences with their fists. Old miners in Garforth and Kippax have told me that the men, on pay days, generally went home with greatly curtailed wages, a considerable sum having been spent on a few hours' carouse. No doubt these men gave the class an evil name, and to this day many ignorant people have a great contempt for the mining population. Education has worked wonders in the improvement of the class, and if they will only avail themselves of all the facilities provided there is no doubt that their children will make greater advances. Never were there greater opportunities for well-educated men among the working-classes.

Young fellows detest sermonising just as much as the older fellows do, and it would ill become me to assume the role of person, but a word to the young men of Barkston Ash Division, who are probably no worse than the young men elsewhere, might be opportune. Many of them possess a vocabulary—rare and rich it may seem to them—which they picked up neither in the Day School nor the Sunday School, and they exercise it with a fluency that might make a politician green with envy, but their words are so many ears—and this is the point they overlook—offensive and annoying. By using plain English words they could express themselves just as forcibly, and, with their fluency, they might make an impression on their fellow mortals.

One does does expect a football crowd to be as quiet as a church congregation, but there are limits even to exuberance of spirits. Leicester on Saturday, excited partisans indulged in such picturesque language that they made many people quite uncomfortable. Had they been heard by their children in the streets of the town the magistrates would no doubt have had something to say to them, and it is abundantly evident that public are required on football fields to keep excited youths under control. The worst offenders came from the South Milford and Micklefield districts, and if these young fellows do not wish to go to gaol I hope they will use language that is likely to be more appreciated in future.

The folks of Templenewsam are fortunate. Two or three years ago the young squire (Hon. E. L. Wood, M.P.) practically presented a cricket field to Halton, and he generously gave the Whitkirk Cricket Club an excellent ground, so that he has looked well after the recreation of the parish. The children of Whitkirk, however, but no play-ground, so he secured to members of the Ratepayers' Association that Mr Wood might give consideration to their needs. Their case was placed before him, and he has met it in the most generous manner, setting aside a field on the hill for recreative purposes. Mr Wood is a name for life of the Templenewsam estate, and he cannot very well make a finer gift of the land, but he has done the next best thing—made a charge of a rental of 1s. per annum.

Kippax and Garforth should be encouraged by the example set by the Hon. Edward Wood, who has shown such a kindly consideration for the children of Templenewsam. Neither in Kippax nor Garforth have the children and youths of the town any place where they can play their games, and it is difficult to foster cricket, for instance, when families are about to leave the village now, especially when the roster traffic has become so common on the roads, the children should have a place where they may enjoy themselves without fear of conveyances, and the people of Garforth should have a cricket pitch where they may learn the great summer game.

What the authorities which have the administration of the Rothwell and Oulton-with-Woodlesford areas are actively engaged in fighting all manner of obstacles to longevity, they are not oblivious of the fact that mortals must come to the bosom of mother earth some time, and they are preparing for their reception by forming a joint cemetery. No doubt the residents will appreciate their foresight and enterprise in connection with this grave scheme. One almost expected the Leeds Corporation to offer opposition to it, but they probably think they will not only be shown such a kindly consideration for the children of Templenewsam. Had the people at that time shown less prejudice and acquired as to the value of nursing schemes elsewhere, they would assuredly have been more sympathetic towards the proposal, but they could not get rid of suspicion and the scheme was wrecked. All this was attributed by some good people, anxious to explain away the reason, to the independence of the mining population, but was it really independence? In Rothwell district, where there is a large mining population, the leaders of the working-classes have for years been clamouring for the appointment of a nurse or health visitor, so that she could advise and guide working-class mothers, and they have at length secured the services of a lady. Now, what is the result? The Garforth? Now, what is the result? The health visitor, instead of being regarded by mothers as a matter of domestic espionage and interfering busybody, is welcomed into the homes of the people as a friend, and she is a real friend, because she gives help when it is most required—in the hour of need. Garforth's fame exercises will impress nobody.

Congratulations to the Garforth and Rothwell education areas. For some time the school attendance in Garforth district has been steadily rising, and it has secured first place in the West Riding several times. Last month it again came out at the top, while Rothwell district was placed third. Whether or not parents are beginning to realize the value of education, they are sending their children regularly to school, and one very encouraging feature is the Eighteen-day of the work of the school attendance officers. Whatever opponents may say regarding the education policy of the West Riding County Council, they cannot shut their eyes to the enormous improvement in school attendance generally, and, of course, this must all be for the benefit of the children.

AMUSEMENTS.

LEEDS EMPIRE PALACE.

At the Empire Palace this week Whit Cunliffe is one of the attraction in a capital bill of fare, and his songs his songs with his accustomed vim and good style. Carl de Marcel, described as a comedy cyclist, has had a fine reception. His acrobatics are undoubted, and his unconventional ways entertaining. James Fawn is a popular artiste, who has received excellent encouragement. In Hickey's spanish circus there is an unridable mule, and the efforts of those who would master him are most laughable. They do their part very cleverly. Wasie and Wayn have a good balancing turn, and the light-haired light-weight partner is a good antidote to the serious side of the business. Others who contribute include Irene Dillon, American comedienne; Gevay Weiland, comedy juggler; Countess Clarze, comedienne; and Bert Harrow, comedian.

The story of revue is undiminished. At the Leeds Empire on Monday next there will be seen a production, the author of which was part author of "Hullo, Ragtime!" and "Hullo, Tango!" namely, Albert de Courville. It is called "Hullo, Everybody!" and has been produced at a cost of over £6,000, which constitutes a guarantee of excellence of production. Special scenery is said to have been written by Joseph Harrison, while the music is by the famous Italian composer, Leoncavallo. To Leoncavallo's music special numbers have been added by Mr. Clutsam and Mr. Neale. Leoncavallo stands out as one of the greatest composers of our time. His "I Pagliacci" opera remains a standard classic. This is, for instance, the latest effort of light and airy music. Lyrics have been specially written by Edgar Wallace and Alexandre Dume. To the variety portion of the programme Lil Hawthorne, the popular Anglo-American comedienne; Nightingale and Stigant, in a comedy duologue, "Two Sides of a Wall"; "The Tiverd Bakers," featured by Lecardo Brothers; and Jenny Castelle, comedienne, will contribute.

LEEDS HIPPODROME.

At the Hippodrome this week the seaside revue "Splash Me" provides capital entertainment. There are pretty girls, who, clad in nothing costumes, do their part in the chorus admirably, and finish up with a polo match in a tank. "Splash Me," however, owes its success to Tommy Mostol, a live comedian who's never present with delightful gags, and Dan Clarke, a duck about whose ordinary. Miss Alice Pearce puts plenty of dash in her rendering of "My Boy" and "Get out and get under," as does Miss Enid Harcourt in "Popsy" and "Take me in your arms." Another good item is that provided by the Royal Bartle Quartette, all of whom are adepts with the concertina. The Sisters Sprightly are very smart, and Martin Hessels, assisted by Miss Clara Bernard, gets musical scores in his farcical absurdity. "Doctor Mack's First Patient," Will Hay, the schoolmaster comedian of "bent down" fame, adds something original in his patter. Miss Josephine Langley contributes a capital contralto solo turn, and the Kelros also do some clever feats in their comedy acrobatic turn.

Next week at the Hippodrome Harry Burns will present his latest rollicking revue "They're off," in which a company of over forty clever artistes will appear. The artistes will include "Tubby Edlin," as "Boatman Bill"; Miss Hessels Bourke, Miss Betty Bernard, Mr Freddy Rigby, Mr Henry Curates, Mr Kelso Henderson, The Eight Dainty Babties, and full Lyndon chorus. Others billed to appear are Fred Lincoln, eccentric coon; Bellew and Stock's company of entertainers, "The Romps," in a daintily and refined musical scena; Bert Williams, assisted by his cheeky, chatty college chum "Ted"; the great Cuban wonder, Maximo, the inebriate on a slack wire; and Arthur Page, comedian. Pictures of the English Cup final will be shown on the bioscope.

LEEDS QUEEN'S THEATRE.

At the Queen's Theatre that popular actress Miss Ethel Van Praagh had a hearty reception on Monday from large audiences, the play being "Under Two Flags," from "Ouida's" famous novel. In the part of Cigarette, a messenger in a famous French regiment, Miss Praagh is allotted a part which suits her immensely, providing, as it does, ample scope for this gifted actress to display her fine qualities in both the emotional and humorous departments. And by it said, neither is ever overdone, but accomplished in her usual excellent style. Supporting Miss Van Praagh is Mr Guy P. Ellis, who, in the dual role o' an Engish Guardsman, and afterwards a French Corporal, plays the part in fine style, and both are assisted by an exceptionally capable all-round company. "Under Two Flags" forms the attraction for Saturday, but on Friday that pathetic drama, "The Power of Gold," is to be staged, with Miss Van Praagh as Meg Judson the heiress.

At the Queen's Theatre Miss Ethel Van Praagh will, by special desire, remain one week longer. The play on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Saturday will be "The Eyes of the World," a domestic drama of modern society, and on Thursday and Friday "Camille" will be played.

LEEDS CITY VARIETIES.

At the City Varieties this week is a first-rate programme is head by Will Nevins's Jockeys who occupy the boards in a capital racing scene, entitled "What You See." They occupy the boards for twenty-five minutes, and contribute a liberal supply of comedy, interspersed with some clever dancing. The novelty act, entitled "A Pleasant Disappointment," supplied by Phyllis and Vernon Melbon, is a sketch well worth seeing. Kitty Stewart is prominent in her farmyard and laughing ditties, and also contributes another catchy song. Amongst others appearing are Fred Lyston, a comedy light comedian; Patti Lattore, comedienne and toe dancer; and Maud and Morison, comedy trick cyclists.

Next week at the City Varieties Darnell described as the "real magic show," will be the leading attraction. Campbell and Brady will appear in a club juggling speciality, another entertainers will include Della and Pley comedy boxing scenes; The Four Bachelors, harmony vocalists and entertainers; Carl Osmonde, the Welsh Nightingale; and Two Weymans, in a refined dancing act. The pictures to be shown are "Our Baby," and "At Midnight."

LEEDS THEATRE DE LUXE.

At the Theatre de Luxe a very fascinating picture has been shown this week. It was named "Mary Jane," and it was a thrilling representation of the famous Red Barn mystery of 1826. As the story was enacted at the identical spot where the tragedy occurred a most realistic effect was obtained. "Pimple in the hands of London Crooks" was all that could be desired in the way of comedy, and other items included "Girls Ned," a drama, and "No Flies on Sis," comedy.

"Through Flaming Paths" will be the chief attraction on Friday and Saturday.

INQUEST.—On Wednesday at a Selby inquest it was duly alleged to be shot of John Moran, of Hull, was identified by Mary McGrail, of Selby, as Thomas Mulligan. A youth from Hull named Wilfred Morton said deceased was John Moran (31), his uncle, who was his father's brother. He last saw him alive seven years ago. Dr. Todd said death was due to syncope and chronic kidney disease. The jury decided that the body was that of Mulligan, and the medical opinion was accepted.

MISS RAMSDEN'S WILL.—Miss Selina Frances Ramsden, of Oulton Hall, Tadcaster, left £468,6. Testator leaves £20 to her late footman, Alfred Shemmith; £20 to her coachman, Francis Taylor; £10 to Jane Mason, housekreeper; £10 to Henry Hartley, cowman; £10 to Ernest Watson, stableman; £10 to Edward Noble, footman; £10 to Thomas Simmonds, butler; £10 to George Wright, joiner; £10 to each other maid of three years' service; £10 to Catherine Watson Weir, housemaid; and £50 to the Girls' Friendly Society.

GOLF AT WETHERBY.—In the foursomes competition at Wetherby on Saturday the results were:—Capt. A. Bird and T. Beith, 89, 13, 76; S. F. Parkinson and S. Pearson, 91, 14½, 76½; N. H. Medhurst and W. H. Crosthwaite, 87, 10, 77; R. Lee and H. G. Gilbert, 101, 21, 80; W. Heap and C. E. Whitaker, 106, 22, 84; W. Graydon and S. Fallding, 160, 14½, 85½; Dr. W. F. Steele and P. Pulleyne, 103, 16, 87. Monthly Bogey—S. Fallding (handicap 18), all square; C. E. Foulds (18), 1 down; R. Bird Jackson (12), 2 down; W. H. Crosthwaite (12), 4 down; W. D. Pearson (16), 4 down; W. N. Christie (9), 5 down; P. Pulleyne (18), 5 down; H. Armitage (13), 7 down; Dr. W. F. Steele (14), 7 down; J. Pearson (20), 7 down; H. G. Gilbert (22), 8 down.

A FURNITURE SALE.—At Leeds on Saturday—before Mr F. R. Spark and Messrs. George Brown—Herbert Edward Selves (27), of Roundhay Road, and who, it was stated, had also been living at Wetherby, was charged with obtaining £32 9s. 2d. by false pretences. Mr Kitson, who appeared for the prosecutor (Mr Edward Philip Doudney), a local auctioneer, stated that Mr Doudney received instructions from prisoner to sell some furniture. He did so, and later gave a remarked that he intended going to the West Coast. Prisoner was remanded, and granted bail in his own recognisances of £20 and one surety of £20.

THE FLOWER GARDEN

LAWNS.

The work of mowing the lawn should be delayed no longer. The spell of showery weather experienced during the early part of April has left the turf rather soft, and this is of course, makes the Labour harder. The roller should be used as often as circumstances will allow at this time of the year. Later on, when the surface gets baked hard by the sun rolling is of little or no use. Where worms are troublesome the grass should be thoroughly swept before the lawn mower is used. Lawn seeds may still be sown. Choose a calm day for performing the task and dress the seed with red lead before sowing, or birds get most of it.

GLADIOLI.

It is quite safe to plant Gladioli bulbs out-doors now. They are seen at their best when grown in large masses, and if only the scarlet breeds or hybrids is grown it should be associated with some white-flowered plant of somewhat similar height. A large bed filled with tall white antirrhinums and this variety gladioli gives a gorgeous effect. A rather light, deep, rich sandy soil suits the gladioli family best, and if these conditions do not obtain naturally specially-prepared beds should be provided. If early supplies of bloom are wanted the corms may be potted into four-inch pots and started into growth in the greenhouse. Harden off and plant out early in June.

PROTECTING TENDER PLANTS.

At this time of the year, when raw, cold winds are apt to spring up any day, it is advisable to have a quantity of protecting material at hand ready for use. It is very disappointing, after spending several months growing such subjects as sweet peas, bushy plants of Nice stocks, cereopsis or shrubby calceolarias, etc., to see them practically destroyed in a few hours when cutting winds come along. There are various ways of providing protection, but nets or mats made of spruce fir answer the purpose admirably, simply stuffed them bushy growths of evergreen stuck in the ground on the windward side. Mats, canvas, or similar material may be used in such a manner as to answer the same purpose, and other means will suggest themselves to those really interested.

BEAUTY OF NICE STOCK.

We have repeatedly drawn our readers' attention to this wonderful variety of stock. The mild winter has been very favourable to plants in the cold frames, and we have about ten in a pot, amazing which we have not noticed a single miss. The hardening-off process should now be completed as quickly as is consistent with safety. It is important that the plants should have a chance to establish themselves in the beds before flowering commences. Dr. Jeyes' Sanitary Fluid, used at the rate of 1 oz. to a gallon of water, is said to be excellent for the soil when forked in. Clay's or Thompson's manure is also said to be good. It is obvious after the plants have been growing in the pots all winter that very little nourishment will remain in the soil, and by giving a few applications of liquid food the roots are stimulated to renewed energy. The beds or borders intended to accommodate the plants during summer should be dug deeply and heavily manured. A position getting morning and evening sun suits them admirably. The middday sun is rather powerful for them. Plant out about the first week in May.

HARDY ANNUALS.

There is perhaps no more favourable time than the present for sowing hardy annuals. It is not generally realised for many of the subjects treated as half-hardy can be sown outdoor late in April, and will give excellent results. Under this system of cultivation the flowering season is about a month in many instances the plants are sturdier and more floriferous. The annual chrysanthemums are an excellent example. The Morning Star variety is very popular for early outdoor sowing. Imaderum Bridal Robe is also good. Asters are less liable to canker when sown outdoor, and a mixture of the finest French Marigolds can have seed sown raised on a shovel bed in the open.

HANGING BASKETS.

A few baskets of plants suspended from the roof of the greenhouse give a decidedly improved appearance. Many kinds of plants may be utilised for this purpose, anything that is of pendant habit and graceful growing will do. The Spanish moss is useful for the sides of the baskets, which should first of all be well lined with spaghnum moss. It is advisable to make the soil very firm, as this reduces the danger of it getting very dry during the hot days of summer. Campanula isophylla, Tolmiea Menziesii, drooping varieties of begonias, ivy-leaved geraniums, Japanese honeysuckle, tradescantia variety, asparagus sprengeri, drooping coleus, and nephrolepis ferns are but a few of many which may be used for the purpose.

PELARGONIUMS.

There are few showier greenhouse flowers than the regal pelargonium when well grown. Cuttings rooted after flowering last year should now be growing freely. If large plants are desired they should be stopped a few times to encourage them to branch. When this system is practised it is also necessary to re-pot before the plants get root-bound, or they will develop few leaf buds before they are wanted. Grow in a cool house on shelves near the glass and a fairly buoyant temperature. Give a weak liquid manure occasionally, but not too much, as this encourages rank growth at the expense of flowers. Stand the pot in cover with a sheet of glass. Stand the pot in a warm, light position, but shade from direct sun. Under this treatment the cuttings root quickly, and the glass may then be gradually removed. Pot off as soon as rooted into small pots. The roots of this class of begonia are very delicately constructed and it is advisable to pot lightly, and use a light, open compost. Fibrous loam (with the smallest particles riddled through), peat, leaf mould, charcoal, and coarse sand will suit the young plants, and at subsequent re-pottings the same ingredients, with the addition of some thoroughly decayed manure, will grow them well. During the summer months the plants should be syringed freely, and grown in a warm, light house. They are immensely benefited by strong sunshine and must be shaded from the midday sun. All flower buds should be picked off as they appear until the end of September. When the flowering pots fill with roots liquid manure may be given about twice a week, and spraying must be discontinued on the approach of autumn.

THE VEGETABLE GARDEN.

POTATOES.

The planting of potatoes should be completed as quickly as circumstances will allow. In districts where the tops of early sorts have appeared above ground it will be necessary to run the hoe and rake over them. Potato ground that had to be trampled during wet weather should be forked up between the rows.

BROCCOLI.

Seed of this useful vegetable may now be sown out-or. The practice of delaying sowing until warmer summer does not commend itself to our mind. The plants require a long season of growth, and it is an advantage to have a good-sized, strong plant to face the winter with.

WEEDS.

The fact must not be lost sight of that the improved cultivation which causes cultivated plants to grow has the same effect upon weeds. Hoeing is by far the most effective and simplest method of keeping weeds down. The soil should be hoed or pricked out whilst quite small, and the shoots should be treated in such a way as to allow them to get full benefit from all available sunshine. Slight applications should be given to the roots are noticed on the surface, and a warm, moist atmosphere should be maintained. Stop the shoots at the first joint past the fruit, and cut the fruits as soon as they are large enough to use.

"SEPH (10) came home from school with a sore head," says Mrs. L. Stanley, of 26, North St., West Kirby, nr. Liverpool. "Scurfy patches grew into painful inflamed sores, and often caused his hair to fall away.

"Home-made remedies only increased the soreness and irritation. The disease kept spreading until I used Zam-Buk. This cooling balm stopped Seph's aching. "Perseverance with Zam-Buk removed every sore and left Seph's head sweet and clean. The boy is at school again, thanks only to Zam-Buk."

Zam-Buk Medicated Soap is unsurpassed for the treatment of eczema, ringworm, scalp sores, and other itching and inflammatory diseases.

A SUCCESSFUL BREEDING SEASON.

PERIODS OF INCUBATION.

The period of incubation is determined by the freshness of the egg and the application of the heat; a week-old egg with a close sitter will frequently hatch out on the nineteenth day, whereas a comparatively stale egg and a poor sitter may take twenty-one days to produce the chicks; the average, however, is twenty to twenty-one days. It might prove useful here to mention the periods of incubation with other varieties of domestic and wild fowl. Ducks, Muscovy excepted, thirty days excepting the thirty-five days, according to the variety. Muscovy blood. Geese, thirty to thirty-one days. Turkeys, twenty-eight to thirty days. Guinea fowls, twenty-six to twenty-eight days. Pea fowl, twenty-four days.

INCUBATION OF DUCK EGGS.

The foregoing remarks are equally applicable to duck eggs; ducks as a rule are good sitters but full as mothers, consequently it is advisable to set the eggs under a hen. The best con of to set the eggs under a hen. The best con of the nest should be a damp one, and it has been found beneficial towards the end of the hatch to sprinkle the eggs with warm water, and to assist the 23 fed square, where she is protected from the gander and other-geese.—Attention must be given very tough it when dry, preventing the duckling from breaking through.

GEESE EGGS.

It is the practice with many to allow geese to incubate their own eggs; if this is done it is advisable to erect a small compartment of about 2 feet square, where she is protected from the gander and other-geese.—Attention must also be paid at hatching time to remove the shells of the birds left liberated, so that they cannot "cap" the other eggs, rendering it impossible for the later ones to hatch. The eggs are often placed under hens, but in my opinion a turkey hen forms the ideal sitter for geese eggs.

TURKEY EGGS.

The best location for a turkey to sit is the original nest in which the eggs were laid. It is advisable, therefore, to remove the first few eggs she lays, replacing by dummies, until the hen becomes broody. Always hatch turkey eggs under turkey hens if possible, for young poults under turkey hens if possible, for young poults under turkey hens if possible, for young poults

BARKSTON ASH UNIONISM.

SPEECH BY MR LANE FOX, M.P.

REPLY TO MR E. H. FOSTER—THE ARMY QUESTION.

A large gathering of the Unionists of Selby and district was held on Monday night in connection with the opening of an excellent new hall, which has been established as part of the club premises at Selby. The Unionist organisation of both Barkston Ash and the neighbouring district of Hensall-cum-Brotherton is now complete, and it was attended by Mr Lane Fox and Col. Harrison-Broadley, the Parliamentary representatives of the two constituencies. The new hall is to be used for meetings and social gatherings, and as it will hold six hundred people the club will be more than ever a convenient centre for Unionist workers. Some additions have also been effected in the accommodation of the club, the total cost being about £1,000, and a generous response has been made in the way of subscriptions.

Col. Hewett, Chairman of the Selby Unionist Association, presided, and besides the members of Parliament, there were present the Hon. Mrs. G. R. Lane Fox, Mrs Hawdon, the Rev. Dr Sellwood, Dr. H. D. Todd and Mrs Todd, the Rev. A. Cowsley Goulder, Mr W. D. Foster, Mr J. J. York, Mr W. N. Cheesman, Mr J. T. Mortimer, etc.

At the beginning of the proceedings Mr Lane Fox formally declared the hall open, and at the same time unveiled a portrait of Colonel Hawdon. There was an inscription on a brass plate on the frame, which ran: "Presented to the club by the Workingmen's Mess Conservative Association, in recognition of his able efforts in behalf of our cause," and the unveiling was honoured by a flourish by the Selby Prize Band, and the singing of "He's a jolly good fellow."

The Chairman briefly acknowledged the compliment. He observed that it was forty years since the club came into existence, and during the whole of that time it had been a source of pride to the county. Selby had changed very much in the last few years. He was told the population had increased 50 per cent., and he believed that a greater proportion of Unionists was included in that increase.

MR LANE FOX'S SPEECH.

Mr Lane Fox was greeted very heartily when he rose to speak. He congratulated the club and the Unionists of the town on their new hall which they had acquired, and said he believed Unionism was stronger in Selby to-day than it had ever been. (Applause). It must be present to everybody, as things were going just now, that the Government, with their they liked it or not, were coming close to a General Election. (Hear, hear). The Government seemed to be tied up with their own legislation. They had passed the Parliament Act, which some moderate orators said was the only way to get through the Liberal legislation, and under it the Home Rule Bill was to be pushed through. Now, no matter what they wanted, the Government could neither alter nor withdraw the Bill; they dare not alter it or they would lose the benefits of the Parliament Act; and they could not withdraw it because their Nationalist allies would not let them. They were pledged to vote for it, because they knew perfectly well they would not carry it out. What apparently the Liberal party were waiting for was a good pull upon which they could go to the country. The Liberal campaign was supposed to be going to bring them the desired support, but it had fallen flat. They were, therefore, driven to the end of their tether, and were bound to want the cry of the Army versus the people. It seemed to him that if the Government persisted with this cry they would find that the people of the country were not to be caught by it. A more remarkable thing had happened in the House of Commons a short time ago. A speech had been made by Mr John Ward, a gentleman who hovered between the Liberal and Labour parties—[laughter]—in which he definitely attacked the Army and the Crown, and said that the House of Commons as should break and that the House of Lords as should break and that the House of Lords as should break and that the House of Commons as should break and that the House of Commons as should break and that the House of Commons

THIS INSTITUTION was ESTABLISHED in 1874. The system of working is the provident one, each patient paying a small periodical fee whilst under treatment, and they can, therefore, justly expect to receive the prompt care and attention which in many instances in charitable institutions is too often omitted. The treatment is of a mild and safe character, without operation or the use of Ear Drums, Ear Cornets or other mechanical or painful appliances. Another advantage appertaining to this dispensary is its system of treatment by correspondence, by which sufferers at long distances, and in lingering positions can have the advantage of Mr ISON'S advice and remedies forwarded through the post. No case is undertaken unless there be a reasonable hope of cure or benefit to the patient.

Rothwell Courier & Times

SATURDAY, APRIL 25th, 1914.

If the local authorities co-operate actively with the County Council in carrying out their nursing schemes a wonderful transformation will be effected in the West Riding in a few years. When the medical inspection of school children was inaugurated it met with bitter hostility in some quarters, and the usual talk about interference with the rights of parents and so forth was indulged, but these people failed to discern that, apart from the national advantages, it was the natural sequence of a system of compulsory education—that if children were compelled to attend school the authorities should see that they were physically fit to receive the education paid for by the State and the community. The greater consideration, however, was the raising of a more vigorous and virile race—more important even than education itself, and it is only by systematic inspection that the defects of children can be discovered and rectified. Where are the opponents of medical inspection now? They have been absolutely silenced by the results of the work, and, indeed, many of them have become its most enthusiastic advocates. In medical matters, unfortunately, prejudice and suspicion are frequently allowed to wreck or retard the carrying out of much-needed reforms —reforms which from a purely commercial standpoint are essential to progress, but a remarkable change is gradually being brought about, and a thought is now being given to the condition of the people as a whole. The cost would at one time have been considered an insuperable barrier to the carrying out of schemes for improving the public health—it was always money against health and life, and the foolishness of such a policy has proved dear to the country. Not only is it economically unsound, for it is more costly in the long run than a heavy expenditure on remedial measures, but it is unwise, because it allows, by withholding the necessary funds, the destruction of health and life, which are of infinitely more value to a nation than its material wealth. It requires little imagination to discern what could be done by the application of business methods to social problems. The County Council, in carrying out the medical inspection of school children, came to the conclusion that they were not getting full returns for their money owing to the fact that defective children were not always attended to, and they have decided to employ fully qualified nurses in connection with the work. The Board of Education recognise this as a necessary part of the education system, and they are prepared to make grants towards the cost, so that the whole of the expenditure will not fall upon the ratepayers. By means of the doctors and nurses working together, it is confidently anticipated that the return, as far as is humanly possible, will be full, and it is surely wisdom, from a business point of view, to spend more money in order to achieve that end, instead of making a certain expenditure and having results which are not altogether satisfactory. The County Council as well as local authorities have adopted the Notification of Births Act, and under this scheme every birth has to be reported within a given time, and a nurse, if necessary, will promptly render all necessary service in behalf of the mother and child. By this means it may be possible to reduce the infantile mortality in the Riding, and the extra care bestowed on infants will tend to make them more healthy and vigorous. These schemes, it will be seen, are primarily for the benefit of the children, and the County Council will pay for the work, but they are exceedingly anxious to assist ground-people, too. In order to do that they are seeking the co-operation of nursing associations, and it would be a splendid progressive step were such an institution formed in every populous parish. These associations are maintained by voluntary contributions, and the nurses are paid out of the funds thus raised. In many of the local villages excellent work has been done by nursing associations, which are supported by all classes, who readily discern their value, but there are populous places where no such institution exists, owing to the unenterprising attitude of the people or a failure to raise the funds necessary to keep such an association going. The County Council scheme will make a nursing association possible in every populous parish, for the contribution made by them for the work done for the children will be a sure item of income, and the remainder of the expenditure would not be difficult to raise by voluntary means. The villagers must, therefore, co-operate with the County Council if they are to get the greatest benefit from the nursing proposals. We understand that where nursing associations undertake the County Council's work there will be no interference with their management, so that the local people will have their interest maintained. This is a wise plan, because if a local institution is to be made a success the responsibility must be placed on local people, and they must not have their management supervised. All the County Council will ask will be the discharge of the duties in regard to the two classes of children, for which they will make a contribution to the funds, and the association's work will go on as usual. In the villages where there are no nursing associations people interested in the welfare of their neighbours should begin themselves and endeavour to bring about the formation of such institutions. They need not apologise nowadays for seeking to take such a step, because the nursing association is coming to be regarded as necessary to village life, and evidence of its usefulness can be obtained from a score of places in the Barkston Ash Division. Funds might not be very readily forthcoming at the outset, but as soon as the people saw the benefits accruing to them from an association they would show no reluctance to giving it financial support. In parishes where no nursing associations exist the County Council will simply do their own work, but we believe that when the proposals are thoroughly understood no large village in the district will be without its own nurse.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT NEWS

ROTHWELL

PASSENGER TRAIN.—A passenger train was started at the Rothwell Station on Wednesday afternoon. The train, which was made up of two carriages, conformed to the railway officials. There is some talk of running the 'buses in connection with the train from the Rothwell Station.

LEEDS WEST RIDING PETTY SESSIONS.—The magistrates at the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday were Mr. J. W. Morkill (in the chair), Col. A. M. Sugden-Musgrave, Mr. R. D. Kitson, Mr. J. R. Cross, Mr. J. Hirst, Mr. E. Parkin, Mr. S. Hudson, Mr. J. B. Breed, and Mr. J. Braithwaite.

DISTURBANCE AT THE WORKHOUSE.—There was a sequel to a Monday night disturbance at the Hunslet Workhouse, Rothwell, when an inmate of the institution named Thomas Hebden, described as a chimney sweep, was charged at the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday with having been drunk and disorderly and with doing wilful damage to a window. The workhouse master, Mr. Cheetham, stated that prisoner was allowed special leave on Monday and returned to the institution about 6.20 p.m. the worse for drink. He was seen at the female side amongst the young women, and he was brought across and ordered to go to bed, but after a few minutes had elapsed he became violent and threatened to break in the door with the ashpan. He broke the window with his fists. Asked if he had any questions to ask, prisoner said he was not so much the worse for drink; it was only the smile of the master. The Chairman said that prisoner had to be punished. He used obscene language. P.C. Womack gave evidence as to receiving Hebden into custody from the master. Hebden was asked if he wished to speak as to the general character of the man, and he was allowed to do so. Tony had had the man in the house for years, he said, and he was a very good example to the young women, who were well conducted. Hebden was sent to prison for one month on each charge.

FOOTBALL.—Rothwell White Rose are now in the field for the Rothwell Shield. On Saturday they played New Wortley Gas Works in the semi-final at Rothwell, and won by four goals to two. New Wortley had brought a somewhat different team to that which opposed the White Rose on Easter Monday, when they lost by five goals to nothing. In the first half the homesters did not seem to be up to their usual form; they had not free a penalty still fewer, but the passing might have been much better. Parfitt started for White Rose, who were the aggressors for the first few minutes, but had capably checked by the wind. Wortley soon gained the upper hand, which resulted in Broughton registering the first goal. Dilsford play followed, until an opening was afforded Parfitt to equalise, which he did with a fine shot. A similar opportunity occurred almost in the next minute, Hughes had possession, and after passing the ball to Parfitt in the centre the latter dribbled up until within easy range of the sticks and shot in. The goalie bungled matters in trying to save, and the ball went into the net. On the game being set in motion, the visitors were quick to assume and commenced a dangerous movement which Taylor failed to stop, but offside robbed the visitors of a chance. Before the interval Wortley had again taken the lead with a goal by Whitehead, who scored with a long shot from the half-way line. Soon after the commencement of the second half the homesters gained the advantage from a free kick, and Abrams shot in, but the Wortley custodian had no difficulty in saving. A fruitless corner followed. Dewsbury then pulled up for more offside play. From the free kick which followed Parfitt gained possession of the leather, and again dribbling up scored the equaliser. The third goal for the homesters was the outcome of a breakaway by Hughes, who centred for Parfitt to score. Wortley were afterwards pressed in their own territory, and Hughes attempted a shot at the goal, but the goal-keeper saved by rushing out and clearing. Parfitt scored the fourth goal.

ROTHWELL P.C. DEFEATED.—The Rothwell Parish Church football team brought the season's fixtures to a close on Saturday, when they were at home to Horsforth. The visitors were the better team, and won by two goals to nil.

On Sunday night Lieut. Blackwell, who has latterly had charge of the Salvation Army at Rothwell, bade farewell to the Corps. The officer will take up duties at Harrogate. The new officers to the Rothwell Corps are Ensign and Mrs Bristow, who come from Gosforth.

DOGGY CASE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Percy Clegg, a pony driver, of Hunslet, was summoned for having a dog without a collar bearing the owner's name. P.S. Metcalf stated he found the dog at Rothwell. Clegg was fined 1s. and costs.

DISORDER.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Thomas Jeffries, miner, of Rothwell Haigh, was summoned for having been drunk and disorderly in Marsh Street, Rothwell, on Friday, April 3rd. P.C. Bosomworth proved the case, and defendant was fined 5s. and costs.

AFTER THE STRIKE.—The miners in the Rothwell district have all settled down to work once more. Last Friday and Saturday were busy days for the officials at the pitheads when the men signed on. It is said by a well-known official of Messrs Charlesworth that at the Newmarket Pit more men signed on than ever.

MUSICAL SUCCESS.—At the London College of Music examination held in Leeds on Thursday, the 16th inst, the following students, who are under the tuition of Mr. T. A. Idle, L.L.C.M., were successful:—Roland Charlesworth (A.L.C.M.), Albert Wilcock (advanced senior), Tom Wild (senior), and Henry Parker (intermediate).—Advt.

PRIMITIVE METHODISM.—In aid of the new organ fund of the Primitive Methodist Church the united people's augmented choir bringing to the Wesleyan Church rendered the cantata "The Home at Bethany." The soloists were Miss Bessie Hopper, Miss E. Varley (contralto), Mr. E. Knee (tenor), and Mr. R. Firth (bass). There was a good attendance. Mr. W. Robinson presiding, the proceeds being for the duty to be levied on organs.

DRINK.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Herbert Dacre, miner, of Rothwell, was summoned for being drunk on the licensed premises. P.C. Bosomworth stated that about 7-45 p.m. on Sunday, April 12th, he was in Commercial Street, Rothwell, when he saw the defendant who was in a drunken condition. After the Coach and Horses Inn. A few moments later he followed, and found the landlord trying to put the man out. A fine of 5s. and costs was imposed.

Patent List compiled by John E. Walsh, Chartered Patent Agent, of 25, Royal Exchange, Boar Lane, Leeds, and Crossley Street, Halifax.—Application—William Pulkin, Leeds, sectional roofs for haystacks and other temporary erections; Carlton C. Mitchell, Wakefield, improvements in organs; post Henry Parker, Barnsley, non-slipping horse-shoes and bars for making same. Patent accepted—Dr. A. F. Dimmock, Harrogate, improvements in golf balls (patent of addition).

THE STRIKE SETTLEMENT.—In regard to the settlement proposals of the Joint Committee of the Conciliation Board, Mr. Charles Duncan, M.P., general secretary of the Yorkshire Miners' Association, stated that a copy of the terms had been sent to the secretaries of the branches for submission to the meetings of the men. Mr. Duncan explained that "all collieries . . . under Sir Edward Clarke's award of January 30th, 1914, the men were paid from 7½d. per day to 9d. per day, according to the number of days they put less than 7½ per day, and that the ascertainment of the average for the purpose of the bonus and the payment of a higher rate of wages continues and the payment of a higher or lower minimum. Any arrears of wages found to be due at any colliery can be paid from the 1st of March to the date of Sir. Edward Clarke's award of January 30th, 1914. It was, therefore, agreed that the men return to work as the earliest possible date in their respective districts, and that the 20th inst., and as far as possible all men shall return to the employment in which they were engaged at the date of the strike began."

CRICKET.—On Wednesday afternoon Leeds City Tramways met Rothwell Wednesday on the final round of the Hall-Holiday Cup Competition on the Arcadia grounds, Hunslet. The Tramway team, who had to face both sun and wind, combined better than their opponents, and quite held their own in the first half, but had no luck with their batting efforts. The total was twice netted as a result of capital combined work by Billiards, King, Burton, Wood, and Goodeham, but no great stand was made by any batsman. Rothwell had their full share of attacking, Ellis, Taylor, and Elliott steadily working hard at the bowling. Both sides had a narrow escape from defeat, the Tramways being all out for 84. Rothwell and Leeds goals were speedily defended excellently, however, and 40 minutes had elapsed before Taylor and Elliott, Rothwell with a decided advantage, with Bennett in the second half the Tramways team had much the better of the argument, but 10 minutes after the resumption King got out, and the scores, after the final ball, had been equalised. After a fruitless free kick by Rothwell in the Leeds goalmouth, the Tramways from rank broke smartly away, and Mortimer equalised, by scoring with a low shot. Result—Leeds City Tramways 1 goal, Rothwell Wednesday 1 goal. The H.R. Jones, a life member and secretary of the Half-Holiday League, presented the cup to the winners.

ROTHWELL CHICKEN BUTTS.—Rothwell ballringers have, with the exception of one given up pugnacious habit, it is said, to now confine their fighting to the Victor. The belfry fees being imposed by the Vicar. The belfry have recently been repairing through the benefactions of the parishioners, and a few weeks ago the bells were rung for the first time after a silence of two years. Six of the former ringers were obtained, and all went well until the bells were inforced that a fee of 2s. per man per year. Before the bells were repaired the ringers received 2s. 6d. each, which meant a yearly income of £12 to be divided amongst them. Under the new conditions the men would receive £12 to be divided amongst the six, which is a loss of £6 as compared with the old order of things. This harmony fell upon deaf ears. One of the ringers, who has had a thirty years' experience, in conversation with our representative, spoke of more trouble had nothing to do with the fees, but the money, as they were not satisfied with the former arrangement of £2 a bell. The dissatisfaction was due to the charge which had been enforced. He recalled how in past years as many as ten men had been rung in the £16. The men, however, were not inclined to continue ringing under the changed conditions, as they felt their services were not being appreciated. The fees in former years had been made up half from the church funds and the other half by subscriptions. Since the bells have been repaired a number of young men have been practising during the week, and now they are being conducted by the one former bell-ringer. However, their skill at present does not allow a proper peal to be rung. On Sunday the bells did not call the people to service.

ALLERTON BYWATER

LANGUAGE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Albert Ed. Harris, miner, of Allerton Bywater, and James Scott, of Great Preston, were summoned for using obscene language at Great Preston on April 11th at about 10.15 p.m. P.C. Eadon proved the case, Harris was fined 10s. and costs and Scott 2s. 6d. and costs.

BARWICK

At the adjourned vestry meeting held on Monday evening Mr A. Sykes and Mr John Thorpe were elected people's wardens, and Mr John Robshaw was nominated as Rector's warden.

BOWERS ALLERTON

SUCCESS.—At the recent examinations held at Leeds in connection with the London College of Music, Albert Smith, of 4, Hollinhurst, gained an honours certificate in the elementary section for violin playing.

CROSSGATES

WEDDING.—In another column the announcement is made of the silver wedding of Mr and Mrs Barley, who now reside at Headingley. This marriage was the first that was solemnized in the Crossgates Wesleyan Church, now used as the schoolroom.

CAUGHT IN A POLICE TRAP.—On Tuesday at Leeds Police Court—before Mr H. Marshall (the Stipendiary Magistrate)—it was stated that Harold Dewhirst, of Wellington Lodge, Scarcroft, was driving a trap in Scarcroft village and past a school at 29 miles an hour, and in ordering him to pay 40s. and costs the magistrate remarked that it was a very dangerous offence. When caught the defendant told the officer he had "slacked down in the village because of complaints."

THE LATE MR W. HOLLIDAY.—After a long illness Mr William Holliday, a well-known resident, died at the age of 62 years at his residence in Austhorpe Road on Friday. The deceased, who had lived in the village for many years, was prominently identified with the Wesleyan Church, and for a long time he discharged the duties of chapel steward in an eminently satisfactory manner. He took no part in the public life of the district. Mr Holliday, who enjoyed the esteem and respect of a wide circle of friends, leaves a widow and family to mourn his loss.

VESTRY MEETING.—The annual Vestry meeting at St. James' Church, Manston, was held on Monday night—the Vicar presiding. The churchwardens' accounts showed that the offertories for the year amounted to £107 12s. 7d., as compared with £115 9s. 7d. in the previous year. The total receipts were £199 2s. 7d., as against £117 5s. 4d. Mr A. Chadwick was nominated vicar's warden and Mr Harry Mann was appointed the people's warden, in place of Mr J. R. White, who is going to reside at Scarborough. A resolution expressing appreciation of Mr White's long and valuable services to the church was passed. The following gentlemen were appointed the Church Council, viz., Messrs Brandfield, Read, Walton, Dearnley, Harland, E. White, Flather, Mather, and R. C. Williams.

GARFORTH

FOOTBALL.—It was understood that the appeal by Garforth White Rose Club against the decision of the Appeals Board was to be heard by the West Riding Association on Saturday night, but it did not come before the meeting. Mr Brunt has written to Garforth asking the grounds for their appeal, and a reply has been sent.

CONNER'S OFFENCE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday John Conner, a bye-workman, of Garforth, was charged with having been drunk and disorderly on the Wakefield Road, Garforth, on Monday, April 13th. He refused to go away when spoken to by P.C. Jackson, and had to be taken to the lock-up. A fine of 5s. and costs was imposed.

LANGUAGE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Hugh Blackhouse, pelthandle, and Jesse Parish, labourer, of Garforth, were summoned for having used obscene language at Garforth on Sunday, April 12th. P.C. Abercrombie proved the case, and said he heard the defendants using the language complained of in Kippax Lane. Both defendants were fined 5s. and costs.

AFTER FIFTY YEARS.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday John Taylor, of Garforth, was summoned for not keeping a pig which he had purchased isolated in accordance with the regulations. The case was proved by P.C. Jackson. Asked how long he had kept pigs, the defendant replied that he had kept them for fifty years, but did not know the rules. The defendant was ordered to pay a fine of 5s. and costs.

PICTURE HOUSE.—Interest in the meritorious programmes at the Picture House has been well maintained, and the audiences have thoroughly appreciated the fare provided. It should be noted that for to-night and Saturday the principal attractions will be "A fight for a fortune," and "The children of the gipsy," films of a very high order. For next week capital programmes are promised. On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday "A Friend of His" (a powerful story of intrigue and mystery), and "Rock of Ages," a beautiful picture inspired by the well-known hymn, will be the two principal films. On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday "The Queen of India," a powerful story of intrigue and love, and sensational fights and breathless escapes, and "Estrellita," a stirring incident of the Peninsular War, will be outstanding features. Other films, humorous and dramatic, will complete the programme. For times and prices see advt.

THE LATE MR THOMAS TEALE.—We regret to announce the death of Mr Thomas Teale (55), of Swarcliffe, one of the best-known residents of Garforth. Deceased had had an apoplectic seizure, and lived on Saturday morning. Mr Teale, who was employed at Garforth Colliery as an engineer, had a fine record as a member of Garforth Church choir. He joined the choir when a lad, and was a member for 40 years. Being a great musician, he was a member of the old Garforth Brass Band, of which his father was conductor. Deceased leaves a widow and a family of two sons and four daughters (the youngest 10) to mourn his loss. The funeral took place at Garforth Church on Tuesday afternoon, and the service which was attended by the choir, was conducted by the Rector (Rev. T. E. R. Wilford) and the curate (Rev. J. W. Mason). There was a large gathering at the funeral, among those present being Mr Dent and other officials at Garforth Colliery, and the officials of the West Riding Engineers's Association, of which Mr Teale had been a member for nearly forty years.

GREAT PRESTON

THE SCHOOL.—At Great Preston School last month there were 170 children on the register, and the average attendance was 155, the percentage being 91.17 against 78.84 for March last year.

NEGLECTING TO EDUCATE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday James Brealey, miner, of Great Preston, was summoned by Mr H. W. Powell, Clerk to the Garforth Education Committee, for not sending his two children to school. The wife appeared. It was stated that one of the children had only attended the school 36 times out of a possible 87, and the other 103 times out of a possible 127. Orders to send the children to school were made. The magistrates also made an order in the case of Elizabeth Binsley, widow, of Great Preston, who was also summoned for not sending her child to school. The child had only been present on 57 occasions out of a possible 127.

HALTON

THE SCHOOLS.—In the Templenewsam Schools last month there were 576 children on the registers. The percentages of attendance were as follows:—Halton mixed, 88.26 against 85.57 for March last year; Halton Infants, 86.61 and 72.99; Colton, 89.08 and 89.76.

IN DARKNESS.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Walter P. Wood, carting agent, of Halton, was summoned for being in charge of a vehicle without a light. P.C. Robinson stated that when on the Leeds and Selby Road, Halton, about 11.40 p.m. on Friday, April 10th, he saw the defendant leading a horse and cart, on which there was no light. The defendant said that it had only just gone out. Wood was fined 1s. and costs.

LANGUAGE IN THE HOME.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday George Albert Richmond, miners, of Halton, were summoned for using abusive language at Halton on Saturday, October 4th. P.C. Taylor stated that when on duty at Halton he heard a disturbance in the village, and upon going to the scene found the defendants in their houses shouting and making use of bad language. The doors of the houses were open. The defendants were fined 5s. and costs.

DRAMATIC PERFORMANCE.—In aid of the New Guinea Mission two performances of "The Prisoner of Zenda," by Anthony Hope, were given on Wednesday in the Parochial Hall, Halton, by members of the Leeds Girls' High School Dramatic Society. The evening performance was very well attended, and the audience showed a marked appreciation of the creditable manner in which the play was presented. "The Prisoner of Zenda" is so well-known that it does not require retelling. Miss R. L. Bolton sustained the roles of the King and Rudolph Rassendyll excellently, and Miss Prisoner of Zenda," by Anthony Hope, were given on Wednesday in the Parochial Hall, Halton, by members of the Leeds Girls' High School Dramatic Society. The evening performance was very well attended, and the audience showed a marked appreciation of the creditable manner in which the play was presented. "The Prisoner of Zenda" is so well-known that it does not require retelling. Miss R. L. Bolton sustained the roles of the King and Rudolph Rassendyll excellently, and Miss McLaren made a capital Duke Michael. The parts of Col. Sapt and Fritz von Tarlenheim were well presented by Misses Nixon and Aspey, while great credit was due to Miss G. Brotherton, as Bertram Bertrand. Miss Christie was capital as the Mayor of Strelsau, and Miss Elsie Dewhirst was warmly applauded for her acting as the Princess Flavia. The other parts were well sustained, the characters being:—Captain Fritsch, Miss H. Battle; Detchard, Miss K. Hentiens, Miss H. Battle; Detchard, Miss K. A. Bacon; Marshall Strakencz, Miss E. M. Bruce; Lorenz Teppich, Chancellor of Ruritania, Miss M. Dixon; Lord Topham, the English Ambassador, Miss M. C. Pearson; Ludwig, Miss F. G. Foster; Toni, Miss M. C. Pearson; Josef, Miss E. L. Bolton; Antonette de Mauban, Miss M. Ward; Frau Teppich, wife of Franz Teppich, Miss M. Fletcher; lady-in-waiting, Miss M. Rimmington; and pages, Misses M. Lee and H. Lee. Miss Fenner and Miss B. Lee and H. Lee.

DRINK.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Fred Baker and George Hilton, miners, of Kippax, were summoned for having been drunk and disorderly on the Preston Road, Great Preston, on Saturday, April 4th. The officer said the defendants used very bad language. As the defendants did not put in an appearance they were each fined 7s. 6d. and costs.

STRIKE NO EXCUSE FOR STEALING.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday four miners, William Varley, William Pickersgill, Joseph Varley, and Joseph Varley, of Kippax, were summoned for being in possession of a sodden tree, valued at 5s. Evidence was given by George William Slater, gamekeeper to Mr J. Bland, of Kippax Park, and Mr Hey said that about 3.30 p.m. on April 8th he was coming home from the direction of Kippax when he met four men with the tree, which was about six yards in length. He stopped the men, who admitted that they had got it from the estate. Asked by the Chairman to account for their action, one of the defendants said they had no fire and no coal, and they had seen the tree lying about. They were out walking and did not think they were doing wrong. The Chairman said if they were on strike it did not excuse them in the least. He asked them if they had started work and was told that they would do so the following day. Each defendant was ordered to pay a fine of 5s. and costs and the value of the tree.

LEDSHAM

At the Ledsham School last month the percentage of attendance was 89.70 against 88 for March last year.

MICKLEFIELD

On the registers at Micklefield Schools last month there were the names of 257 children in the mixed school the percentage of attendance was 90.95 against 92.38 in March last year, and at the Infants' School 86.11 and 87.29.

DRINK.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday William Hird, joiner, of Micklefield, was charged with having been drunk and disorderly in Barwick Lane, Garforth, on Saturday, April 11th. When seen by P.C. Jackson he refused to give his name and address and had to be locked up. He was fined 5s. and costs.

MOOR ALLERTON

VESTRY MEETING AT MOOR ALLERTON.—The Vicar (the Rev. Godwin Birchenough) presided over the annual vestry meeting at Moor Allerton Church. The accounts showed a balance in hand of £31 6s. 6d. The Vicar nominated Mr Herbert Ambler as his warden, and Mr James Hudson was elected people's warden. It was decided to increase the number of sidesmen from six to eight, and Messrs Fletcher, Hird, Hornor, Jessop, Kitchen, Milner, Pearson, and Richardson were elected to hold office. It was decided to appeal to the congregation for funds to erect a memorial to the late Mr Bower Brooke, senior trustee of the living and vicar's warden, who was killed in the hunting field last month. A lengthy discussion took place as to the possibility of mitigating the difficulty caused by the fact that so many of the pews were appropriated, and ultimately it was resolved that on and after January 1st all seats should be free five minutes before the service began.

METHLEY

Charles Harrison (40), farmer, Folly Fold, Lofthouse Gate, who was kicked in the stomach by a horse in a stable, died at the Wakefield Clayton Hospital on Friday night.

GOLDEN WEDDING.—Mr and Mrs Jas Hartley, of Methley, celebrated their golden wedding on Tuesday. They were married at Methley Church, and have lived in the village practically the whole of their married life. They have seven children living, and 30 grandchildren. Mr Hartley is 75 and Mrs Hartley 74.

MIDDLETON

FOUND IN A POND.—An inquest was held at the Middleton Institute, on Friday, on Walter Shivell (48), slater, of William's Yard, Hunslet, whose body was found by Alfred Cook, of 7, Rothesay Mount, in Cowper's Spring Middleton. Margaret Mossey Gorman, who had been living with Shivell, said he left home on the evening of Wednesday, March 25th, to go to Holroyd's Mill, where he worked, but she went to look for him and could not find him. Shivell had been in failing health since Christmas, and attributed this to an accident some years ago when he fell off a building. He said he when he fell off a building. He said he when he fell off a building. He said he

ROTHWELL URBAN COUNCIL.

The annual meeting of the Rothwell Urban District Council was held at the Council Offices, Rothwell, on Monday night—Mr J. Hirst (Chairman) presiding. There were also present were Messrs. G. W. Blakey (vice-chairman), S. R. Chadwick, T. P. Wade, J. Armitage, T. Kirkby, S. Dobson, T. Ellis, J. Cordon, J. Horner, R. McCullough, W. Lunn, W. Wade, W. Speaker, and W. Robinson, with the Clerk (Mr W. Dodgson), the medical officer (Dr. H. Stevenson), the sanitary inspector (Mr. E. J. Moorhouse), the health visitor (Miss Stowell), and the surveyor (Mr J. Southward).

CHAIRMANSHIP.

The first business was the election of the Chairman, and it was moved by Mr Chadwick that Mr Hirst be re-elected. Most members would agree, he said, that Mr Hirst had conducted the business very impartially. In introduced the business very impartially. In introduced the business very impartially. In introduced

CHAPTER IX.

He came slowly downstairs, and looked full into Peter's face.

"Here's the parasol," he said, "and I am much obliged to you, Mr. Colthurst."

"I am very much obliged to you," said Peter.

"Your name, I understand, is Mr. Peter Colthurst?"

"Certainly," said Peter. "How did you find out?"

"Never mind how I found out. I am glad to meet you. Was your father with you at tea to-day? Was my old friend Paul present?"

"You surely did not know my father?"

"Not precisely; and yet in a measure I knew him. I was more vexed than I can say, Was Paul Colthurst at tea to-day? But of course he was."

"Yes, sir."

"And you live, my dear young girl?"

"We live at Connop Grange, in Surrey."

"Indeed, thank you. It's a pleasure to meet you. And this is Miss Lennox's parasol?"

Peter murmured something, and ran down the steps. "What awful people live in your house, Miss Ransome," he said, as he gave Pamela her sunshade.

"I suppose you expect that sort of thing," said Miss Ransome, in her gentle voice. "It is always said over the case with P.G.'s."

"I like P.G.'s all the same," remarked Pamela.

"It is quite impossible, Pam," said young Colthurst, looking at her, "that you could have admired those terrible people who were having tea in the same room with us to-day."

"No, I can't say I liked them; but never mind. As Miss Ransome says, there must be nice paying guests and nasty ones; it's all in the day's walk."

"What a funny little darling you are," said Peter. "I believe, under any circumstances, you would make the best of things."

They kept on for a short distance. Paul Colthurst was silent. After a time, he slipped behind with Miss Ransome.

"Patrick," he said, "who were those people who came into the room when we were having tea?"

"I didn't want you to meet them, of course," said Miss Patricia, raising her intensely anxious eyes to his face. "They were the Oswalds."

"What! The Oswalds, from South Africa?"

"Yes."

Paul uttered a quick sigh. "Patricia," he said, after a pause, "whatever happens you must get out of that house."

"I don't think I can," said Miss Patricia.

"I like Mrs. Luck, and she wants my money. The very little I can pay is a help to her, and so one else would take my room."

"It must be a room that does not suit you in-in, then, Patricia. Oh, the whole thing is impossible; you can't remain there. I must get you other rooms. It will give me the greatest pleasure, the greatest delight, to do so."

At this moment the young people stopped. They had reached a corner where the road spread itself to the right and left of them. People were hurrying by. The traffic at this hour was terribly congested. The noise was continually stopping it. The entire street seemed at a standstill.

"I am glad we live in the country," said Pamela, and she pressed close to Peter's side as she spoke. He looked at her, his eyes shining brightly. She forgot all his entire world. She was dearer to him than she could ever have believed possible. When she was there she forgot Paul and everyone else on earth. She seemed to feel the influence of his love. It was like magic surrounding her—it glorified the whole atmosphere.

"Peter," she said, "you will never ask me to live in London!"

"Never, darling," he answered, and he spoke with firmness. "I will take some beautiful place in the country."

He glanced back as he spoke towards his father. Paul was holding up his hand to indicate that he wished to approach. Presently, the four were seated therein. Then Paul spoke to Miss Patricia.

"We must arrange now what day you come and stay with us."

When he said these words, Pamela ceased to listen to Peter's soft tones. She turned and faced the lady.

"Indeed, you must come," she said, in her sweet voice.

"We shall so love to have you. And now that we know for our very own selves that P.G.'s haven't the very best time in the whole world, we won't leave one stone unturned to give you a good time when you are with us—no, not one stone. When will you come?"

Miss Patricia's eyes were fixed on Peter. At the three who surrounded her, Peter was the one to whom her heart went out. But he said nothing. An uncomfortable impulse oppressed her. She bent forward, and laid her thin hand on the young man's knee.

"Shall I come?" she said.

"Why, of course," he replied, starting and looking at her in some surprise.

She coloured faintly. She knew at a glance that to him it was a matter of indifference whether she came or not. Her quick intuition darted through her mind. She had been asked—oh! a long time ago, by the mother of this boy, to give him up. She had given him up, driven to do so by force of circumstances; and now she was nothing to him, nothing at all. It was better for both of them, better for the Colthursts that she did not visit Connop Grange.

A wild desire to make herself essential to Peter caused her to say in a low tone:

"I will accept your invitation, Paul, and you yourself must choose the day."

"Any day, but let it be soon," said Pamela.

"But your mother, my dear child," said Miss Patricia.

"I know all mother's plans," answered the girl, "and we've heaps and heaps of rooms. Will you come—say, to-morrow, Patricia?"

"Yes, come to-morrow, Patricia," said Colthurst.

"I will," she replied.

After this, they drove for an hour and more in the Park, and then Paul Colthurst saw them off at Victoria and drove back herself in the taxi-cab to No. 10, Jones-street, Russell-square.

What a long, delightful, fascinating evening she had had! She wished upstairs past the drawing-room floor where sounds and signs of merriment were distinctly heard. The Perkinses had, of course, arrived.

Miss Patricia was the proud possession of the Oswalds, and mounted up and up until she reached her attic. If Miss Patricia's attic was cold and miserable in winter, it was intolerably hot in summer. It faced west, and the sun seemed to bake the roof, and to beat fiercely into the little chamber. But at that moment Miss Patricia Ransome was indifferent to heat, indifferent to so physical discomfort. To-morrow she was going away. She was to have a whole week with the one she loved best on earth. She felt that for Peter she could die. She had the kindest of regards for Paul, but she stood on an altogether different pedestal. She was in danger, too. But that fact only excited her. There were, she knew well, rocks ahead. The Oswalds—it would be absolutely impossible to keep the Oswalds from knowing that the Colthursts had been taken of tea with her in the little salon that afternoon. To get Colthurst's address would be an easy matter. Mrs. Oswald would persecute Colthurst, and Colthurst was the last sort of man to stand that kind of persecution; but there was nothing in all the world that would make Oswald guess Peter's true birth. Until he discovered that, nothing else was of much consequence.

"He will do his utmost, there is no doubt; but I spoke in the marriage, but he won't succeed," thought Miss Ransome. "It is well that I at least know all. Paul Colthurst and I know everything. Oh, yes, Peter, you shall marry that sweet girl whom you love, and who is worthy of you, and some day you shall be the owner of Connop Grange and Brabazon Hall, and all the other great properties which were left to your father—to your supposed father—by his great friend. Peter, a long, long time ago."

There came a tap at Miss Patricia's door. She opened it. Hattie Luck stood outside.

"May I come in?" she asked.

"Certainly, dear," said Miss Patricia.

Hattie looked tired.

"Whew!" she said. "How hot this room is! It really isn't right of mother to take people's money and put you in a room like this. I don't call it fair."

"Please don't grumble, Hattie. I don't mind sleeping here. It's quite a nice little room in the spring and the late autumn. It's only in winter and the middle of summer that somehow I should like it different. But we can't have everything, and you let me have it cheap, dear."

"Cheap!" said Hattie, in a voice of scorn. "We ought not to charge you a halfpenny for it. It's nothing better than a box-room, and mother actually makes you pay her a shilling a day for living in this room, in addition to your meals; and, dear Miss Patricia, you eat about as much as would feed a cat or a crow. I call it horrid. Sometimes I wish—oh! I don't know what I wish."

"You're a good little thing, Hattie, and you mustn't fret about me. I am interested in you and your mother, and I want your venture to pay."

"It doesn't ever pay," said poor Miss Hattie. "We get such horrid people here. If we could afford to do things in a better style we might have a chance; but in a house of this sort there's no hope. You see for yourself the kind of guests we have. With the exception of you, Miss Patricia, and one of the Marshalls, there are no people in this house fit to be seen, and I think that the Perkinses have come, things are really past enduring."

"I wish you could get a change," said Miss Patricia. "There is in my power you should be going into the country to-morrow instead of me."

"Oh dear!" said Miss Hattie, her eyes brightening. "Are you really going away to-morrow?"

"Yes, I am going for a week to those friends who had tea with me this afternoon."

"How lovely! Were they nice?" said Miss Hattie. "I took a peep at them as they were sitting round the table, and I really don't know what I admired the most. That elderly gentleman—oh! if we had a man like that in the house, wouldn't we be proud, and work the house, wouldn't we be proud, and work the house, wouldn't we be proud, and work

OULTON AND WOODLESFORD AFFAIRS.

QUESTION OF A RECREATION GROUND.

HOUSING—DANGER AT WOODLESFORD STATION.

The annual meeting of the Oulton and Woodlesford Parish Council was held at the Harold Hall, Oulton on Tuesday night—Mr W. Poole (Chairman) presiding. Other members present were Mr R. Wood Higgins, Mr H. Parkin, Mr W. Smith Mr T. Hurdiss, Mr T. H. Myton, and Mr J. Owen with the Clerk (Mr W. Cowper).

In answer to Mr Myton, the Clerk said all the book rolls for the allotments had been paid, and all the allotments had been taken.

On the motion of Mr Higgins, seconded by Mr Owen, Mr Parkin was elected as chairman for the ensuing year.

In returning thanks, Mr Parkin said he hoped he would be able to fulfil the necessary duties to the satisfaction of all.

A vote of thanks to the retiring chairman (Mr W. Poole) was accorded on the motion of Mr Myton, seconded by Mr Smith.

Mr Poole returned thanks, and said what he had done he had tried to do to the best of his ability and for the welfare of the ratepayers.

Mr R. Wood Higgins and Mr Wode were re-elected overseers.

Mr Higgins, in responding, said so far as he was concerned the election was unique. Mr Wade had been overseer for twelve years, but he had acted in the capacity for thirty years. During that time one had seen wonderful changes in Oulton and Woodlesford, but none so great as at the present time. Before very long the two villages would have a large number of inhabitants. He had always endeavoured to keep the rates down as much as possible, and now they were reduced by twopence in the £1. As overseers, he and Mr Wade had a great responsibility, but they were fortunate in having an excellent assistant overseer in Mr A. Sharpe, who had more work than his predecessor. The estimates of income and expenditure were presented, which showed that from the poor rate of 2s. 8d. in the £1 £3,316 1s. 4d. would be gathered in, while the special expenses rate of 6d. in the £1 would yield £547 5s. 9d.

Mr W. Smith was re-elected vice-chairman.

It was resolved that the sanitary rate collector's salary be £20.

A reply from the Clerk of the Hunslet Rural District Council respecting the letter forwarded by the Parish Council in regard to the subpoena in Alma Street, Woodlesford, was read, stating that the medical officer had inspected the ashpits, and only a few unimportant defects had been noted.

Mr Myton said it was a funny thing that the medical officer came round twice in order to make certain.

A letter was also read respecting the Webster Charity, stating that payment cannot be made to a child forming a skilled trade. The execution of indenture of apprenticeship is necessary to enable a child to receive help from the charity.

It was resolved that the Clerk apply for a copy of the scheme regulating the charity.

A letter was read from the Local Government Board in answer to the one sent by the Clerk, asking for permission to adopt the Public Improvement Act of 1860 for the provision of a recreation ground. The letter stated that it was necessary to adopt the Act, it must be adopted by the parish meeting. The Parish Council had the power under section 8 of the Local Government Act to provide such a ground without any such adoption, and also to borrow a loan. The letter also asked for a number of particulars, including a copy of the resolution of the Parish Council respecting the question, a copy of the consent of the parish meeting, a map copy of the consent of the parish meeting, a map of the parish showing the position of the ground, a plan of the ground on a larger scale showing how it is to be laid out, a plan showing what buildings would be erected, and an estimate to show how the amount of the loan is made up.

After some discussion a resolution was moved by Mr Myton that the agent of Stocking Field, Woodlesford (Mr R. Rhodes), be approached respecting the loaning of the ground.

Mr Owen seconded the resolution.

An amendment was moved by Mr Smith that the matter be postponed sine die.

Mr W. Poole seconded.

On a vote being taken three voted for the amendment and three for the resolution, the Chairman declining to vote.

Mr Myton said if the Chairman would not vote he would demand a poll of the ratepayers on the subject.

The Chairman said under the circumstances, and to help matters, he would vote for the resolution.

It was resolved that the Chairman, Mr R. Wood Higgins and Mr Owen approach the Council.

Mr Parkin asked if they could not, of they got the land, let the children play on it without going to the trouble of draining and levelling it, so long as they kept the fences in order. If they were to drain and level the ground it would mean a considerable expense.

Mr Higgins said that they would be liable for any accident that might happen to children in the adjoining quarry.

The matter was then dropped.

The housing problem was the next subject on the agenda, but owing to the steps which have been taken by the District Council and by Messrs. Briggs, Mr Myton withdrew the matter.

The following memorial, proposed by Mr Myton, and seconded by Mr Higgins, was unanimously passed, and is to be forwarded to the Midland Railway Co.:—"Taking into consideration the steadily increasing traffic at your station at Woodlesford, both as regards passenger and goods, the Parish Council of Oulton-with-Woodlesford present this memorial asking that your careful consideration may be given to the necessity of erecting either a bridge or subway at the level crossing, as a safeguard against the lives of the numerous passengers daily crossing. They also point out the inconvenience caused to passengers by the "up" platform being of insufficient length, making it necessary for the greater part of the trains to draw up a second time before they can discharge all the passengers. The Council wish at the same to express their appreciation of the very careful attention paid at this dangerous crossing by the station-master and his staff, as, but for their vigilence, many serious accidents would have occurred. The Council trust that the matter shall have your most careful attention."

N.E.R. GUIDE.—The N.E.R. Co. have just issued their guide to hotels, lodgings, etc., in the towns and villages on their system, and it should prove very handy to holiday-makers. The Guide, which extends to 250 pages, is excellently printed, and besides the information referred to, it contains many interesting facts relative to travelling, fares, etc., as well as an excellent map of the North-East of England.

CROSSGATES AND SEACROFT LIBERAL ASSOCIATION.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of Crossgates and Seacroft Liberal Association was held on Friday evening in the Wesleyan Schoolroom, Crossgates, and there was a fair attendance. Mr W. G. Smithson, the retiring President, was in the chair.

The Hon. Sec. (Mr A. Vollans), read the annual report, in which he stated that during the summer of 1913 some of them attended the fete at the residence of Mr Martin Harvey, President of the Barkston Ash Liberal Association, and of the Barkston Ash Liberal Association, and some were fortunate in being able to attend the garden party at Mr and Mrs Denbitch's, Whingate, on Saturday, 2 September last, and also, more recently, the splendid reception given by the prospective candidate, Mr E. H. Foster, at the Leeds Liberal Club. The secretary, at the request of the Executive Committee, sent a letter conveying a resolution of confidence, passed at a meeting held in the Wesleyan Schoolroom, and, in reply, received a communication from the Secretary of the Prime Minister, expressing thanks for the resolution.

"We regret," he said, "the absence from the Leeds City Council of Mr Walter Thompson, who has so mentally fought the battle of Liberalism at the last two elections. Our hope is in Mr Thompson allowing himself to be brought forward next November, and at the third time of asking finding himself at the top of the poll. In Mr Foster, our Parliamentary candidate, we undoubtedly have a man of good personality, tact, and common-sense, and whom we feel confident, if elected, would represent the electors irrespective of party or creed. Mr Foster, we understand, has made rapid strides in his campaign, and we are confident at the next General Election, even though our Tory friends will relish a diversion of forces, we shall, by united effort, place him in the House of Commons."

The hon. treasurer (Mr Walter Thompson) reported a good balance in hand, the membership had increased, and all things considered the outlook for Liberalism in the district was very good.

A hearty vote of thanks, on the call of Mr Sutcliffe, seconded by Mr Drake, was accorded the Hon. Sec. (Mr Vollans) for his excellent report and services during the past year.

Officers were appointed as follows:—President, Mr Walter Thompson; vice-presidents, Messrs G. W. Beaumont, C. Cousill, F. Harrop, J. Jenkinson, F. Avison, W. W. Popplewell, F. W. Sutcliffe, J. J. Dewhirst, H. Johnson, J. Rhodes, W. G. Smithson, Job Day, and Brownhill; hon. sec., Mr A. Vollans, Woodland Villas, Swarcliffe; committee, Messrs A. J. Wood, G. A. Drake, A. Scurr, E. C. White, J. Pickersgill, F. R. Carlton, A. Withy E. V. Steele, and Gordon; representative to Barkston Ash Executive, Mr W. Thompson, and Mr A. Vollans; representative on General Council, Messrs Smithson, Avison, Popplewell, Stott, Carlton, Vollans, Wallace, C. Cowell, Wood, Steele, and Withy; delegate to North Leeds Liberal 1,000, Messrs F. W. Sutcliffe, W. G. Smithson, G. A. Drake, and A. Vollans; representatives on North Leeds Executive, Mr Walter Thompson and Mr Fred Hartop.

Mr F. W. Sutcliffe proposed a vote of thanks to the officials for their services during the past year, and this was seconded by Mr W. Popplewell, and carried. Mr W. G. Smithson responded on behalf of the officials.

KIPPAX COUNCIL ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of Kippax Council was held on Monday evening—Mr S. R. Silverwood presiding. The other members present were Mr John Cripwell, Mr W. A. Dickinson, Mr J. Hewitt, Mr J. W. Mackenzie, Mr R. Johnson, Mr F. Whateley, and Mr D. Mackintosh.

It was reported that the deputation which was appointed by the parish meeting to interview Mr Bland anent a recreation field had not had an opportunity to do so. A letter had been received from Mr Forbes respecting the proposed interview, and the deputation is to meet Mr Forbes and consider the matter as soon as convenient.

The Council was in receipt of a communication respecting a field of arable land for use as a playing field. This would require to be sown down to grass, but as this field was not thought suitable for the purpose the Council did not consider it advisable to do anything in regard to the field in Gibson Lane.

Mr J. Cripwell, Mr J. W. Mackenzie, and Mr W. A. Dickinson were appointed the overseers for the ensuing year.

The advisability of placing gas lamps on the Common and at the back of Beldercliffe Terrace as recommended by the parish meeting was discussed, and it was agreed to appoint a committee to view the sites and report to a future Council meeting.

Complaint was made anent the practice of tipping nightsoil in Sandy Gate Lane. This was stated to be a perfect nuisance, and constituted a danger to the many children who frequent this lane. It was agreed to write the inspector in relation to this matter.

The question of the carting of privy ashes through the streets at night was considered. Mr MacKenzie: Is there not a contract fixing the time at which this business should be done?

Mr Cripwell: 10 o'clock in the morning is the latest hour, and no night soil is supposed to be removed after.

It was agreed to notify the authorities in relation to it.

The Council had under consideration the question of better light for the village. The introduction of gas, which was stated to be a much better illuminant than coal gas, was discussed. This gas would give a 40 candle-power light and burn 10½ hours for a penny.

The fireplace in one of the cottages in Blue Anchor Yard belonging to the Feather's Charity was in need of repair, and the old people, it was thought, preferred that marble jambs and nickel-plated and enamelled fire ranges should be substituted for the present old ones. The necessary repairs are to be attended to, but the latter change was not considered essential.

SELBY PATRIOTIC LEAGUE.—The annual meeting of the Selby Habitation of the Primrose League was held at the Conservative Club on Wednesday night. Ethel Lady Beaumont, of Carlton Towers, was re-elected Ruling Councillor, and Mrs Dundas Duncombe President. Mr Edward G. Whittaker, who met with a good reception, said that the Barkston Ash Division had a representative in Mr Lairs Fox that they could be proud of, and he believed it would be many years before the Division would change its Member. Our Empire, bound together by brotherly ties, would be able to stand against the world, and if by most all work so that the Empire would be kept together, no part being lost, either Ireland or any other portion. (Applause).

A Roundhay Man's Affairs

UNHAPPY DOMESTIC STORY.

In the Leeds Bankruptcy Court yesterday Henry John Palethorpe, grocer, of 7, Greek Street, Leeds, living at "Cuckoostone," Lidgett Park, Roundhay, was up for examination. His statement of affairs showed his deficiency to be £207, and the debtor said his failure was owing to "loss of income from profession since 1906, and alimony to wife under deed of separation."

He is sixty-two years of age, and commenced practising as a solicitor in Leeds in 1884. In 1906 he executed a deed of separation from his wife, providing an allowance of £100 a year by monthly payments, but after 1908 he made the payments, he said, out of his capital, his income not being sufficient. His capital was now exhausted, and he filed his petition after his wife had taken out two writs against him.

In reply to Mr H. C. Benning, the Official Receiver, the debtor stated that he had fully secured creditors for £1,405. Under the will of his father, who died in 1903, he was entitled to a fourteenth share of an estate of the value of about £12,000, subject to the life interest of the widow, his step-mother. In 1908, he sold his interest under the will for about £30.

The Registrar thought it would have been possible to obtain more than that from a reversionary society.

Mr A. Thorpe (for the debtor) said the debtor's share was subject to the life interest of the stepmother, who was eight or nine years his junior, and likely to outlive him.

The Official Receiver: I suggest that you deliberately transferred your interest under the will to defeat your wife's claim.

The debtor denied it. He further stated that in 1912 he sold to his two housekeepers the household furniture at "Cuckoostone" for £20, to pay the wages he owed them. He had two housekeepers; one could not stay without the other, because, he supposed, it was "too close."

Further, in 1911, he transferred the equity in his dwellinghouse and two other houses adjoining, which were mortgaged for £1,200, to two half-sisters living at Blackpool, on account of their share under his father's will, of which he was a trustee. His income in 1911 and 1912 did not exceed £50. He further stated that after 1906, when the deed of separation was executed, his business fell off in consequence of statements made about him by his wife.

Mr Bowling suggested that there should be an adjournment.

The Registrar: Yes, I think there is a good deal that requires investigation.

Mr C. E. Wynne (appearing for the wife of the debtor) asked leave to put a few questions at this stage. He said: You attribute the decline in your practice to remarks which your wife made about you?

The Debtor: Partly to that, and partly to the Finance Act.

She has denied on oath that she has ever spoken about you?—I dare say she has.

I am going to suggest that there is a very good reason outside that, and it is your drinking habits. That is why we have had this exhibition from you to-day. If your wife had said these things, you had the right to stop the payments under the deed of separation?—But I did not find it out.

Have you ever raised it as a defence for not paying her?—No.

Mr Warren said he did not propose to go into other statements by the debtor until Mr Bowling had made his further inquiries.

The examination was adjourned to June 16th.

COLD IN THE HEAD.

Nearly always a common cold in the head is part of an epidemic catarrh, but seldom is it to be regarded as simple congestion. It is in the great majority of cases the result of microbic infection. This consideration affects treatment, and explains the fact that the condition is a self-limited one. In most cases it will terminate as speedily, if let alone, as if attacked with the most heroic measures, says the Family Doctor. The use of remedial agents should be restricted to those cases where the symptoms cause marked inconvenience or distress. A weak solution of carbolic acid in water in the form of spray—1 in 100—or in petroleum used in the atomiser, is the best routine treatment. Where great fulness and sneezing are experienced, an inhalation of Friar's balsam with a few drops of eucalyptus, or of each in 50 of boiling water, may be used.

Presentation at Sherburn.

A POLICE OFFICER'S TESTIMONIAL.

On Wednesday evening at the Red Bear Hotel, Sherburn, Police Inspector Jno. Fleeman, who recently retired on pension after 26 years' service, was presented with an illuminated address, a cheque, barometer, and a pair of Morley hosiers from his many friends in the Upper Barkston Ash Police Division.

In making the presentation the Chairman (Rev. Benj. Hemsworth, M.A., J.P., of Monk Fryston Hall), paid a high compliment to Inspector Fleeman. He said that all must agree that he was a splendid and efficient officer. He was a man with an enormous amount of tact and, although he had disagreeable duties to perform, he could always do them in a very nice way. He had gained the respect of all the magistrates, and he was sure that no officer—and he had come in contact with a large number—was more highly respected. He wished the inspector happiness, long life, and prosperity.

Mr Fleeman, in reply, thanked Mr Hemsworth for his kind remarks, and also those who had so kindly subscribed towards the testimonial.

During the evening an excellent smoking concert was held, and it was thoroughly enjoyed, the following contributing to a splendid programme: Mr Varley (baritone), Mr Sawyer (humorist), Mr Stanley (conjurer), Mr Harry Gill (bass), Dr. Oglesby, and Mr Webster (Sherburn).

Mr Sawyer was repeatedly encored for his various humorous songs and patter, which were excellent in every way. Mr Harry Newby, who has a beautiful tenor voice, sang "For you alone" and "Love, could I only tell thee?" in very talking style, whilst Mr Stanley (conjurer) was especially smart in his several tricks, which completely mystified the company.

Mr Harry Gill (bass), the popular Sherburn singer, sang "The skipper" and "The mighty deep" admirably, whilst Dr. Oglesby gave a humorous recitation in his usual droll style. Mr Harold Harrison (Leeds) was an excellent pianist.

Mr Claude Kemp proposed a vote of thanks to the Rev. B. Hemsworth for so kindly presiding, which was passed. The vote of "The Hon. Sec. and collectors of the Fund" was replied to by Mr Wyman and Mr A. B. Holgreaves.

Much of the success of the testimonial and pleasant evening was due to the excellent way Mr Wyman, hon. secretary, had carried out his duties.

THE SCHOOLS.—Saxton School had the lowest percentage of attendance last month of any school in Sherburn district, but it was an improvement on last year's figures. The percentage was 85.01 against 71.97, while the figures for Barkston R.C. were 99.77 and 89.47.

WESLEYAN MINISTER DEAD.—During the early hours of Tuesday morning the death occurred, at South Milford, of the Rev. Samuel Mikes, the second Wesleyan Methodist minister in the Selby circuit. He came to the circuit three years ago, and had accepted an invitation to remain a third had accepted an invitation to remain a fourth year. A short time ago he lost his wife, her death proving a severe shock. Deceased, who was in his 68th year, entered the ministry in 1871, after spending three years at Heaclingley College. His first circuit was at Petersfield, then Hants. In his ministry his circuits have included Market Weighton, Northallerton, Skipton, Wolsingham, Pickering, Tadcaster, Epworth, Hexham, and Kendal. In 1911 he was appointed second minister in the Selby Circuit, and resided at South Milford, where his was greatly respected.

SUSPICIOUS CHARACTERS.—On Wednesday at Selby Robert Furness (21), James Furnese (18), and John Mullaney (18), newsvendors, of Leeds, were charged with loitering at Monk Fryston, on Monday night. Prisoners were acting in a suspicious manner at Mr Pettinger's farm, and were arrested when discovered ran away, and were arrested by the police on the highroad crouching behind a hedge. Various tools were found on the first two prisoners. In reply to the charge, prisoners said they were on their way to Hull destination of joining a ship. Superintendent Stafford sentenced to fourteen days in prison, James Furness to seven days, and Mullaney, who said he had respectable parents, was discharged to them.

PARAGUAY'S "SPIDER LACE."

Missionaries in Paraguay more than 200 years ago taught the native Indians how to make lace by hand. Since that day, says an exchange, the art has greatly developed, and in certain of the towns lace-making is the chief occupation. Almost all the women, many children, and not a few men are engaged in this industry. A curious fact will, perhaps, be that the Paraguayan laces is that the designs were borrowed from the strange webs woven by the semi-tropical spider that abound in that country. Accordingly, this lace is by the natives called nanduti, which means "spider web."

"SNOOKS" OR "SEVENOAKS."

There is perhaps no more fascinating branch of etymology than that which is concerned with the origins and derivations of names, whether of places or of people. There is no study that is so fruitful in interesting surprises; and one can imagine that even the resentful bearers of hideous and outrageous patronymics may sometimes be almost reconciled to their affliction when they learn from what respectable and unopprobrious originals their hated appellations have descended. To demonstrate to a "Mr. Snooks," for example, that his ridiculous surname is a mere contraction of "Sevenoaks," or "Mr. Mullins" to learn that he has a right to claim descent from the ancient and aristocratic family of De Moleyns.

RAIN TREES.

Columbia boasts of an unusual tree named the "rain tree," which is about 50ft. high when at maturity, and about 3ft. in diameter at the base. It absorbs an immense quantity of moisture from the atmosphere, which it concentrates and subsequently sends forth from its leaves and branches in a shower, in some instances so abundantly that the ground in its vicinity is converted into a quagmire. It possesses this curious property in its greatest degree in the summer, precisely when the rivers are at their lowest and water most scarce.

ANTIQUITY OF THE GREYHOUND.

Greyhounds are said to be the oldest family of dogs in the world. They figure on Egyptian frescoes of the early Pharaohs, were used for coursing by the Greeks, and a fine Antonine sculpture in the British Museum of two greyhounds fondling each other proves that they were appreciated by the Romans. They were favourites with almost all our English Kings, from Canute to Charles I., and King John repeatedly took greyhounds instead of money in payment for the exquisite instead of money in payment for the penalties he inflicted. Until modern times they were aristocratic dogs, which only "gentlemen" were privileged to keep.

How Indians Made Arrow-Heads.

The old Indian art of making flint arrow-heads was not so difficult as is usually imagined—white men are making "old and genuine" Indian arrow-heads now for commercial purposes and by the old Indian methods. Flint is not chipped with stone or with metal, but with water. When an Indian wished to make an arrow-head, he held a piece of flint in a fire until it was very hot and then allowed a drop of water to drip from the end of a stick upon the spot to be chipped away. The sudden cooling made the flint chip off immediately. Some cunning is, of course, necessary in the shaping of the arrow-head, but the old Indian method is the best that has been found.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT JOTTINGS.

In many places in the district people are not as careful as they might be in regard to infectious diseases, and the result is sometimes heavy loss in life and means. The medical officer of Rothwell district has a striking note on this matter. He says:—

There appears to be some irresistible attraction to some people in the knowledge that there is a case of infectious disease in the house of a neighbour. The motive which induces them to visit the infected house may be a most commendable one, but I sometimes think when I come across instances where people have deliberately gone into houses in which it was known there was a case, say, of scarlet fever, and even into the room which the patient was occupying, that it would not be a bad thing to make such behaviour a penal offence.

It will, therefore, be seen that the medical profession adopt a very serious view on this question.

Whooping-cough is prevalent in Crossgates and other districts, and the remarks of the medical officer of Rothwell on this ailment are of special interest to parents. He says:—

In outbreaks of measles and whooping-cough a health visitor might do much useful work in advising people as to the danger of allowing children in an infective state to freely intermingle with others. This is one of the reasons why these two diseases often become so wide-spread, as the idea seems to be pretty general that the cause being simply one of whooping-cough or measles is perfect justification for abandoning all ideas of isolation and in many cases, of ordinary care, the folly of which belief is seen in the high mortality rate which these diseases leave in their train.

Careless parents are frequently to blame for the spread of measles and whooping-cough, and they do not realise the mischief they are doing.

The agitation for cheaper railway fares is not confined to Schools, where the residents have met with a rebuff from the N.E.R. Co. It seems very unfair that Crossgates and Garforth should have travelling facilities which others villages do not enjoy, and apparently the good folks of Collingham are determined, if at all possible, to secure for themselves cheaper fares to Leeds. As there is only a small population at this village, it is not unlikely the N.E.R. Co. will treat them in precisely the same way as they treated Scholes' folks. Boston Spa residents, to whom an improved train service has been granted to Thorparch, are anxiously awaiting the result of the Collingham agitation, and if it succeeds they will undoubtedly put in a claim for consideration.

Several years ago the Education Committees of Garforth and Rothwell districts discussed the desirability of building schools for children under five years of age, and at the time I wrote against the admission of these infants to the schools. The medical officer of Rothwell supports my views, and states in his report just issued:—

Children under the legal school age are better at home, and, in fact, I much regret that the legal age for commencing school is not six rather than five years. I am strongly of opinion that children under six years, and far healthier running wild at home. The brain of a child of such tender years is immature, and is not meant to be taxed by problems of any kind, and further, I am not quite sure that some of the cases of so-called "school fever" issued by school authorities are not due to too much mental worry children on the date their inspection back to strain exerted by a too early attendance at school.

Parents should be wise and send babies to school when it is supposed to be a nursery.

I understand that children residing in Temple-newsam and Austhorpe have been turned out of Manston Schools because there is no room for them, and infants under five years in Crossgates have been asked to remain at home until they reach the legal age for school attendance. Crossgates is in Leeds, and under the City Education Authority, while the other places are in the West Riding, and the decision of the City Temperance Society was unexpected. The Temperance schools are not full, and the children residing in that area can go to either Halton or Colton. It is possible that some day, if Leeds manages its globule-up Templenewsam, the City Education Authority will build a school in a central position to serve both Whitkirk and Crossgates.

Templenewsam "fathers" are in an easy-going lot. They permitted the seats in the recreation field at Halton, which the squire gave to them for practically nothing, to be torn up and carried away without adopting measures to catch the thieves, and they have permitted people to turn horses and cattle into the ground without instituting proceedings. At their last meeting a complaint was made about people obtaining grass food for their cattle by putting them into the field, and they decided to issue a warning to the offenders. A prosecution would have done a jolly lot more good. It is really amazing how some people regard public property; they think they can do as they like with it; and it is high time they were taught otherwise.

After an experiment of two or three years Garforth Urban Council have returned to common-sense methods in connection with committee work. Separate committees have been formed, and these will report to the Council, and the ratepayers will thus have an opportunity of obtaining some information regarding the work of their representatives. Under the old system the Council were the committees, and they reported to themselves, and no one was given a chance of understanding the merits of a question.

Barwick-in-Elmet has annexed the City of Leeds! At an inquest at Lazenby-on-the-ancient home of the Gascoignes—the other evening one of the witnesses stated that his address was "Crossgates." "In what township is it?" inquired the Deputy Coroner, "It's in the City of Leeds," said a police officer. "It's nothing to do with the City of Leeds," said the Coroner, "but it must be in some township." "It was in Barwick before it was annexed," explained the officer. And down Barwick went on the paper! Surely it should have been the "township of Leeds." Is this another slight to the City Fathers?

Garforth Urban Council have, as I expected, again elected Mr J. W. Dobson to the chairmanship, and I believe he has better qualifications for the position than any other member. While having his own opinions, he conducts the business with impartiality, he has experience and ability and he has admirable tact. The Council are to be congratulated on their choice.

Judging by the voting on various questions, it would appear that the Council is not divided into two parties, and the minority of three is in an absolutely powerless position, but they will not be heedless members. That's certainly

With the contention put forward by Mr Sykes at the meeting of Tadcaster District Council as to the making of footpaths there will no doubt be general agreement, but the capital cost probably deters the County Council from adopting the system advocated by him on the main roads. Tar-macadam, it has been conclusively proved, is cheaper in the long run than ash paths, which have to be repaired year after year, whereas paths made of the other material last for years. Mr Sykes is a member of the County Council, and he should bring his persuasive powers to bear on his colleagues, with a view to better footpaths being provided.

The question of the private streets at Garforth was considered "in committee" at a meeting, and I understand that a resolution to accept a tender for making-up two of the streets was rejected. This is a serious matter, and one Councillor has gone so far as to threaten to resign his seat on the Council to the Local Government Board. Seeing the scheme for making-up the streets has not been definitely abandoned, I refrain from making comments, but there is no doubt the Council will get into trouble if something is not done.

Water supplies are required for Barwick-in-Elmet, Scholes, Old Micklefield, Sherburn, and other places, and it is proposed to spend a tidy sum at South Milford on an extension, so the District Council have appointed a committee to consider the whole question. The Kiddal scheme, which would have been carried out a couple of years since had the authorities been "cute enough, is too costly for Barwick and Scholes to undertake, but if two or three other parishes were to join with them the scheme could be carried out at reasonable cost, and a supply of excellent water could be provided at a price which no one would cavil at. All the preliminary expenses of the scheme have been paid for by Leeds Corporation, and all that would have to be done would be to put down pumping machinery, lay mains, and construct a reservoir.

If the committee do not favour the Kiddal scheme as a district proposition, they will have to find another source or sources of supply. Scholes people have been clamouring for water for a long time, albeit some residents say they don't want it, while in Old Micklefield it was stated there is no water, and Sherburn has been starved there for years. Both places are trying to get a supply for several years. Both Micklefield, Sherburn, and South Milford must have their requirements investigated, too, and the Council will call in an expert to advise them. The committee is a representative one, and it is hoped that they will be able to frame a scheme that will meet the needs of all the villages requiring water.

Despite all the agitation that has gone on about the overcrowding of chapels at the West Riding Asylums, numerous Boards of Guardians, including that at Tadcaster, have entered a protest against the rapid increase of public money for their purposes. The Asylums Board, which is both independent of the County Council, and also of the Guardians, are powerless to act, and they do not seem overanxious for the unfortunate people who are housed in the asylums. The putting up of five buildings in connection with the treatment of lunatics seems to me a waste of money, because it adds nothing to their comfort and happiness.

WEDDING.—The wedding took place at Selby Abbey, on Tuesday, of Mr W. H. Pilgrim, of West Butterwick, and Miss Emily Anson, second daughter of the late Mr T. G. Anson, of Hambleton, and Mrs Anson, of Elmhow Farm, Selby. The Rev. C. Illingworth (formerly curate in the Abbey) officiated. The bride, who was prettily attired in soft cream lace, was given away by her brother, Mr J. G. Anson. The bridesmaids was Miss Jennie Anson (sister of the bride), and the best man Mr F. Pilgrim (brother of the bridegroom). A reception was held at Elthole Farm, and during the afternoon Mr and Mrs Pilgrim left for Whitby for the honeymoon. A large number of handsome presents were received.

PRETTY MARRIAGE AT BILBROUGH

MEMBERS OF WELL-KNOWN FAMILIES UNITED.

CUNDALL—MYERS.

Much interest was displayed on Wednesday at Bilbrough in the pretty wedding of Miss Mary Gladys Myers, eldest daughter of Mr and Mrs Frank Myers, of Grange Farm, Bilbrough, and Mr John Edwin Cundall, fourth son of Mr Joseph Cundall, Holmlea, Appleton Roebuck. The bride wore a draped dress of the softest ivory charmeuse with a panel effect in the draperies, and a corsage of fine shadow lace over pink radium silk, finished with a swathe belt of the satin, into which was tucked a spray of orange blossom. Her only ornament was a necklace of pearls, the gift of the bridegroom, and she carried a lovely bouquet of Madonna Lilies, also the gift of the bridegroom. The veil worn by the bride was that which her mother wore on the occasion of her wedding. The bridesmaids were Miss Mildred Myers and Miss Mabel Myers (sisters of the bride), and Miss Frances Cundall (sister of the bridegroom). They wore dresses of ivory satin, with tunics of cream lace and sashes of yellow satin, and white straw hats trimmed with tulle and yellow satin rosettes. Each wore a gold brooch, the gift of the bridegroom, and carried a bouquet of narcissi and ferns.

The service, which was choral, was conducted by the Rev. H. M. Rowland (rector), assisted by the Rev. J. Raimes, vicar of Monk Bretton, Barnsley (cousin of the bridegroom). Mrs Rowland was at the organ. The hymns during the service were "Love divine, all love excelling" and "O perfect love." The bridegroom was accompanied by Mr Wm. Cundall (his brother) as best man. The bride, who is very popular in the district, was given away by her father. As the bride and bridegroom left the church Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" was played, and they were greeted with showers of confetti, and the merry pealing of the church bells.

Afterwards a reception was held in the grounds of Bilbrough Hall, kindly lent for the occasion by Mr Guy Fairfax, and it was largely attended.

During the evening Mr and Mrs Cundall left for Edinburgh for their honeymoon. The bride's travelling dress was a navy blue costume with a fancy silk collar and navy crepe-de-chene blouse, with hat of navy blue, trimmed with ostrich feathers.

Mrs Myers, mother of the bride, wore a black silk dress, with corsage of cream lace, and a white toque, trimmed with a black ostrich plume.

Mrs Cundall, mother of the bridegroom, wore a dress of black satin, with red velvet trimmings, and her hat was of black, trimmed with deep red roses, which corresponded with the effective colouring of the trimmings on the dress. The presents were:—

Police Inspector Daniel, who is leaving the district, will be succeeded at Wetherby by Sergeant Hodgson, of Goole.

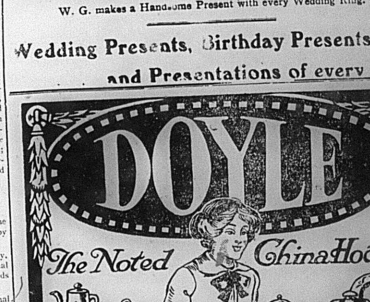
Mr W. H Smith, of Linton Hills, Wetherby, has passed the examination for the National Diploma in Agriculture. He attended Leeds University.

FOOTBALL.—On Saturday afternoon the final for the Daughter Shield was played between South Milford and Wetherby footballers at Tadcaster. The game was well contested, but Milford secured the only goal of the match and won.

ANGLING.—The run on flounders and eels at Tadcaster continues. One angler had a dozen flounders up to 2oz. and several eels on Saturday, and a number of fishers had passable catches over the week-end. Another angler landed a bream dread of 6lb.

The final meeting of the Aberford Brotherhood for the session was held in the Parish Room on Sunday, and there was a good attendance to hear the Rev. H. Edgar Wall, organising secretary to the Central Diocesan Society.

ABERFORD CHORAL SOCIETY.—At York Musical Festival on Tuesday Aberford Choral Society gained a first prize and cup in group class in conjunction with Monk Fryston and Hillam, and a second prize in the open competition; and third in the large village choir competition. Mr Morris also gained the medal given to the conductor of the first group class.



OFFENCES.—Samuel Wilson Armstrong, Army contractor, York, was at Selby on Monday fined 1s. and costs for causing a trap to be driven without a rear red light at Cawood on April 7th. Henry Terry, insurance agent, Selby, was fined 1s. and costs, and Frank Willson, insurance agent, Selby, who did not appear, 2s. and costs for riding a bicycle on the footpath at Cawood on April 18th.

SELBY CONSTABULARY WHIST DRIVE.—The last whist drive of the season, held in the new hall of the Conservative Club, on Tuesday night brought together a large assembly. The monthly prize winners were:—Ladies—1, Mrs Kilburn, 672; 2, Mrs Pickering, 659; 3, Mrs Rockett, 649; sealed, Mrs H. Foster, 612; consolation, Mrs Wetherell, 587. Gentlemen—1, Mr G. G. Beasley, 690; 2, Mr W. S. Bostock, 686; 3, Mr E. B. Jackson, 643; sealed, Mr H. Bradfield, 605; consolation, Mr J. Sanderson, 580. The prize-winners for the year were:—Ladies—1, Mrs Kilburn, 2; Mrs Jackson; sealed, Miss Riley; consolation, Miss M. Perkins. Gentlemen—1, Mr Field; 2, Mr W. S. Bostock; sealed, Mr J. Wetherby; Mr Sanderson. Mr Stones, the retiring secretary, were handed round during the interval. Mr R. Lodge officiated as M.C.

SERIOUS CHARGE—Stanley Tatmus (19), of no fixed abode, and George Scales (18), of Thorner, Wakefield, were at Leeds on Thursday, charged with stealing a bicycle each from some farm buildings at North Deighton, near Wetherby. At four o'clock in the morning the farmer was awakened and looked out of the window to see two youths with bicycles, but he did not recognise them, nor did he miss them until some hours later. The same night prisoners left the bicycles in a garage at Wakefield. Scales, who hitherto had borne an extremely good character, was bound over in the sum of £10 to be of good behaviour for 12 months, but Titmus, who was bound over for a similar offence on April 3rd last year, was sent to gaol for one month.

POLICE PROMOTIONS.—Inspector Daniel, of Wetherby, has been promoted to the rank of superintendent, and took up his new duties at Saddleworth on May 1st. Inspector Daniel during his stay at Wetherby—he went to the town on January 1st, 1910—was exceedingly popular with every class of resident, and his departure is a matter of general regret, though naturally he has been the recipient of many congratulations on his success. Mr Daniel joined the force in 1890, and was first stationed at Pudsey, where he remained for a year and a half. This was followed by three years' service at Otley, from which he was transferred to Wibsey, where he succeeded the present Supt. Colley. Here he was promoted to the rank of sergeant, and after 3½ years at Wibsey he was again moved, this time to Skipton, where he spent 12½ years. He left Skipton on being promoted to inspector and went to Wetherby as successor to Inspector Copley, who was made superintendent and transferred to Skipton. Supt. Colley is now retiring, and Supt. Vaughan leaves Saddleworth to fill the vacancy at Skipton, while Mr Daniel takes up the duties at Saddleworth.

THE FLOWER GARDEN

HARDY ANNUALS.

There is still time to sow many varieties of hardy annuals. The exceptions are those which require a prolonged season of growth before commencing to bloom. The earliest sowings may now be thinned out. This task should be attended to whilst the seedlings are quite small. If delayed, and they grow until they commence to crowd each other, "drawing" is almost certain to follow. Vacant places may be filled with those thinned out if required. Some varieties transplant badly and should be discarded in favour of those with branching, fibrous roots. Straight rooted kinds like poppies, mignonette, etc., never transplant well.

ROSES

All necessary pruning should now be completed. From this date onward the trees will require regular attention. Weak shoots should be rubbed out. Mulch the soil around the base of the trees with manure if not already done. Keep a sharp look-out for greenfly, and syringe with insecticide as soon as any are observed. Rose mildew is a terrible pest. It rolls itself up in the young leaves and devours both leaf and flower bud. Hand-picking is the only safe remedy. Old established rose trees will benefit greatly from an occasional watering with liquid manure. In town gardens syringing with clear water daily is beneficial.

MIGNONETTE

It is often said that mignonette is more difficult to grow now than formerly. This is correct so far as the Machet and other large flowered forms are concerned. The old common mignonette will grow as freely now as ever it did. Unfortunately it is almost worthless as compared to the improved forms mentioned above. The large varieties should be sown about four seeds in a three-inch pot and pull in a cold frame to germinate. Harden off when about two inches high, and plant out where intended to flower. A firm soil containing a fair amount of lime is most suitable. Light soils should be made firm before planting.
